SEVEN DIE IN FLOOD

Cloudburst Hits Wenatchee

Three Injured, Ten Missing; Large Hotel Hurled Across Street

Disastrous Wreck Prevented as Girl Halts Train on Great Northern

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WENATCHEE (Wash.) Sept. 5.—Seven known dead, three injured and ten unaccounted for, was the toll taken when, without warning, a cloudburst swept down Springwater Canyon and flooded the South Wenatchee Great Northern Railway terminal at 4:15 o'clock this afternoon.

The rushing torrent smashed ten houses to kindling wood and the Springwater Hotel, a three-story frame structure, was hurled sixty feet across the main street by the force of the flood.

At 9 o'clock this evening, 150 rescue workers, headed by doctors, firemen and police officials, were making frantic efforts to recover the missing. It is thought that at least eight bodies were in the wreckage.

Miss L. M. Lovegrove, a clerk in the round house at the terminal probably averted a wreck when she notified the station to stop the Great Northern eastbound passenger train No. 4 just as the water swept a mass of tangled beams over the tracks. The train was stopped barely in time to avoid a seemingly certain crash.

While groups of laborers huddled together in silence under the red glare of torches this evening, they were anxiously awaiting the recovery of missing wives or children. Meanwhile, the workers were making every effort to recover the bodies which are thought to be under the wreckage and water. At a late hour this afternoon, a sheet of water was still sweeping over the terminal yards, and into the Columbia River.

AVIATION FIELD CHOSEN

PHOENIX, Sept. 5.—Announcement was made today that selection of a 160-acre commercial aviation field has been made by a committee of commercial bodies. Submission for ratification will be presented to the City Tuesday.

CUT IN GAS PRICE NOW UNANIMOUS

All Large Dealers Selling at 16 1-2 Cents as Standard Meets Reduction

Following the lead of the Pan American and other large gasoline distributing companies, the Standard Oil Company yesterday reduced the price of gasoline in Los Angeles, Long Beach and the surrounding vicinity to 16 1-2 cents a gallon to meet a competitive cut of 2 cents.

The reduction was started by the Pan American company Friday morning, following the announcement of a customary winter reduction in eastern prices. The Union, Shell and Richfield organizations followed during the day with cuts to meet the competition, and the Standard announced its reduction in price yesterday morning, effective at once.

The price of 16 1-2 cents is now unanimous throughout Los Angeles and the near-by territory, all of the large distributors having cut their prices. The reduction is effective only in Los Angeles and small surrounding towns, however, and there is no apparent chance that it will become State-wide at present.

Governor Not Generous With Commutations

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 5.—Gov. Richardson has been frugal in granting commutations and reprieves to murderers sentenced to be hanged, according to figures announced today by the executive office. During his term the Governor has granted but three reprieves and commuted the sentence of but one slayer, a youth under 18 years of age, who could not be hanged under the State law.

The record of four of Richardson's immediate predecessors follows: Gov. Pardee, nine reprieves and two commutations; Gov. Gillette, twelve reprieves and four commutations; Gov. Johnson, twenty-seven reprieves and ten commutations, and Gov. Stephens, nineteen reprieves and twelve commutations.

STATE JOINS IN JUBILEE

Throngs Lured to Bay City

Dazzling Splendor Greets Eye at California's Birthday Party

Richly Gowned Queen Opens Colorful Grand Ball at Civic Auditorium

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—California began the celebration of her seventy-fifth year of Statehood today with a dazzling splendor that rightly deserved the name of Diamond Jubilee.

San Francisco expected visitors and tried to prepare for them, but even the wildest hopes of the committee members failed to forecast the swarm of people who poured into this city today from every direction. It seemed as if the whole State of California arose spontaneously and journeyed to San Francisco with the fixed determination to give California a birthday party that would be remembered until the end of time.

The day's activities were brought to a climax with the grand opening ball in the Civil Auditorium. For sheer size and magnificence, no social event ever staged in San Francisco has equaled this one. Beauty was laid on with a reckless and prodigal hand that left the beholder speechless and wondering, "can such things be?" California, home of the most colorful civilization yet nourished in America, scored again.

REGAL SPLENDOR

The festivities opened with a truly regal splendor. The gracious "Queen California," clothed in gorgeous robes of state, was wildly acclaimed as she appeared for the coronation. Miss Agnes Pottage, she who had led the field in the queen contest, was this beauteous sovereign.

In her train were the richly caparisoned figures of the court, and as they grouped themselves against the black velvet draperies of the huge stage they seemed a Max-

RADIO SHOW THRILLS FANS

Marvelous Devices of Science Attract Interest of Huge Crowd at Opening

The siren song of radio was answered yesterday as a record-breaking first day crowd, estimated in excess of 10,000, formed a steady procession, beginning at 1 p.m., to witness the opening of the third annual National Radio Exposition at the Ambassador Auditorium.

Noted radio experts and showmen from all portions of the country, who are here to attend the exposition, declared the Radio Trades Associations of Southern California, sponsors of the affair, have gone far beyond expectation and have hung a new star in radio show history. The display, its size, requiring an annex for exhibition, was acclaimed the most practical of its national predecessors, even eclipsing the New York and Chicago shows in beauty and ranking second to them only in size.

WOOD OPENS SHOW

The exposition was officially opened when Will C. Wood, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, stepped before the microphone in the Ambassador Theater shortly after 1 p.m. and delivered an address on the future of radio, predicting the quarter to which radio science will turn before many years.

Radio is shorn of its mystery at the exposition. Specially constructed cabinets encased in glass are on exhibition everywhere throughout the auditorium and some hundred factory heads, technicians and sources of valuable radio information, were on hand to explain everything that has been devised in the science of voice transmission and reception.

The management was not disappointed in its anticipation that unusual interest would be attracted by the scores of new inventions, novel devices and highly sensitive wonders brought here for initial introduction to the public. Many of these instruments were built especially for the Los Angeles exposition. Instruments which offer entirely new possibilities in tone reproduction, delicate tuning devices and scores of other creations are on display.

CONTINUOUS PROGRAM

Through the co-operation of local broadcasting stations continuous performances, featuring many radio celebrities, were put on alternately on three stages located in various parts of the auditorium. Portions of these programs are to be broadcast simultaneously every evening from 10 to 11 p.m. over KHJ, The Times' station, and two other stations.

The 40,000 square feet of floor space at the auditorium has been taken over by 165 firms. Plans for the exposition made arrangements for 140 booths but with the rush of dealers from all over Southern California and portions of Arizona for space to display the numerous perfections brought out recently, an annex to the auditorium had to be requisitioned and places made for a total of 175 booths. Despite this rush, Waldo T. Tupper, managing director of the exposition, has created a beautiful uniformity throughout the auditorium.

A description of each display is an impossible task but among the unusual features which attracted attention the following might be cited:

All day yesterday until the exposition closed at 11 p.m. spectators were crowded about the Telepix-Times booth to witness the actual transmission and reproduction of photographs wired across the continent. Telepix is owned and operated by the Pacific and Atlantic Photos, Inc., and The Times holds exclusive reproduction rights in Southern California.

FORD NAMED IN SUIT OVER BUYING PLAN

Plaintiff Asserts Weekly Purchase Idea Stolen by Auto Company

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The Ford Motor Company is charged with the "piracy" of a sales plan, under which hundreds of thousands of automobiles have been marketed, in a suit for accounting filed today in the New York County Clerk's office. The action is brought by Edward G. Moore, who asks for an injunction restraining the Ford company and its agents from further use of the Ford weekly purchase plan" and for "a just and full accounting of the profits received by the defendant from the publication and use of the plan."

The complaint sets out that Mr. Moore devised a new and valuable plan for promoting the sale of automobiles. This plan, according to the complaint, he described generally in a letter dated October 14, 1922, which was addressed to Henry Ford at Detroit, Mich., and a copy of which is set out in the complaint.

Subsequently Moore states he sent details of the plan to the Ford Motor Company. In April, 1923, the Ford company, he states, put its weekly payment plan into operation, but now declines to acknowledge that it resulted from Moore's suggestion.

ARMY'S AIR STUDENTS IN WAR TESTS

New Flyers Will Finish Course With Three Days of Battle Maneuvers

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Sept. 5. Relying solely on aerial photographic maps for the first time in its history, the Second Division at Fort Sam Houston will stage battle maneuvers involving attack by and on artillery for three days beginning on the 8th inst. Kelly Field advanced flying school students will man all planes used in the combat movements.

Supported by Kelly Field observation and pursuit ships, the provisional battalion of the Second Field Artillery Brigade will move into offensive position in the Salado Creek sector on the morning of the 8th inst. "Enemy" observation machines will inform their own batteries of the action.

Using aerial photos as battle sector maps, and without any other surveys of the situation, the battalion on the following day will advance to a new position.

The three-day problem marks the "finishing" test for the Kelly Field advanced flying class which graduates the 15th inst.

TWO KILLED IN OIL STILL EXPLOSION

Three Others Near Death from Burns Received in Salt Lake City Fire

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 5.—Two men are dead and three probably fatally burned in a fire which started an explosion this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the high-pressure still of the Utah Oil Refining Company in the northwest part of the city. Loss is estimated at $800,000.

The dead are: Kelly Arnold and Frank Storm. P. M. Etchell, Otto Larson and Otto Burdick were injured.

The bodies of Arnold and Storm were taken from the ruins of the still room, where also the three injured were found by firemen and rescued. All three are in a critical condition this evening and their deaths are expected.

The fire made rapid headway toward the battery of storage tanks and toward a train of filled tanks on a near-by siding. The wind aided firemen, however, and the tanks were saved. At times while the firemen were battling with the heat and flames, it appeared that the entire plant, which covers two blocks, would go. Immense volumes of smoke at times swooping to the ground and enveloping the buildings, made the work of the fire department difficult, and the intense heat rendered fighting hazardous.

The plant was damaged badly by fire three years ago, when two employees lost their lives.

SOUTHWEST STOCK RATE HELD FAIR

Interstate Commerce Body Informed Complaints Made by Breeders Baseless

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—A recommendation that live-stock rates between points in territory served by western and mountain-Pacific groups of carriers, including Illinois and Wisconsin, be found not unreasonable, was made to the Interstate Commerce Commission today by Examiner William A. Disque. His report held that the rates now charged are below the actual cost of service by the railroads.

The examiner also recommended dismissal of complaints against present rates on live-stock in several southwestern districts on the ground that they are not unreasonable. The complaints were made by the American National Live-Stock Association and others against the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, and southwestern carriers in general.

Specifically, the complaints charged that rates on cattle, hogs, sheep and goats from points in Oklahoma and Texas to Oklahoma City were unreasonable, as were rates on stock cattle from Oklahoma and Texas points to Missouri River cities and points in Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska. Rates on cattle from Texas to Kansas points were protested as unjustly discriminatory and in violation of the long and short-haul provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, while rates on live-stock from points in Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota and part of Illinois to Cleveland, O., were asserted unreasonable and unduly prejudicial.

LAST HOPE FOR SAFETY OF HAWAII FLYERS WANES

Search Fails to Find Signalers; Officers Think Plane Sank at Once on Descending

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept, 5.—With no encouraging news from the huge fleet of navy vessels and aircraft scouring the waters of the Pacific for a trace of the missing PN-9 No. 1 plane and its occupants, naval officials today were almost bereft of hope as the fifth day since the disappearance of the flyers on their courageous attempt to make a non-stop flight to the Hawaiian Islands was brought to a close.

The high soaring of hopes experienced today when one of the searching vessels reported seeing signal flashes from the locality in which it is thought the plane, if intact, is drifting, were dashed today as hours of search in that region failed to bring a sign of the missing seaplane.

The aircraft carrier Langley, with a whole squadron of planes and a flotilla of eighteen destroyers from the battle fleet, reached the search area north of Oahu Island shortly after noon today and materially increased the force of twenty naval vessels conscripted for the hunt.

ORDERS ISSUED

Capt. Stanford E. Moses, chief in command of the Hawaiian flight project, was uncommunicative today as he waited anxiously at flight headquarters for reports from the searchers. Little activity marked the day. The following general orders were issued to the searchers by Commander Moses:

"Commander subdivision No. 9 assume command scouting line. Retire to westward and form scouting line to cover entire width of Kauai Island. Repeat Kauai Channel search. Retire scouting line to southwest assuming drift of plane is five knots. Report time of expected arrival in Kauai Channel."

Recommendations were made today that the Langley start search westward of Kauai Island. While en route to the zone of search around Oahu the Langley was able to plot the area already swept by the searching vessels as completely as its knowledge of the area would permit.

Navy radio officers were of the opinion today that the PN-9 No. 1 must have been severely damaged when it struck the water Tuesday, sinking immediately. Their belief is based on the fact that if the plane had remained afloat after it struck the water it could have sent out an S.O.S. call.

BASIS FOR HOPE

The officers declared that even had the use of the trailing antenna wire been lost, the flyers should have been able to use its kite balloon and antenna wire equipment. They also pointed out that, in the event of a shortage of gasoline for the operation of the electric generator for the wireless transmitter on the plane, sufficient power for a five-watt tube to send a message 200 miles could be obtained from a small storage battery which was taken by the airmen.

The flight officials base their hopes for the safety of the flyers and their plane on what is almost a conviction with them that the PN-9 No. 1, like its sister ships, had the structural strength to make a forced landing in even fairly heavy seas without serious damage.

Lieut. A. P. Snody, commanding the PN-9 No. 3, today stated that he is almost positive that although the PN-9 No. 1 may have sunk by this time, it stayed on the surface of the water long after it was forced down.

"The plane carried more than twenty gasoline tanks, which, when well plugged, are almost impossible to submerge. It is my belief that these tankers would have kept the plane afloat even though the ship were badly damaged when forced to land.

"When the PN-9 No. 3, my plane, was forced to land on Monday, it was not the least bit damaged, in spite of the fact it was

NAVY CRY IS 'CARRY ON'

Dirigible's Dead Held Martyrs

Support of Nation Asked to Continue Activities at Lakehurst Field

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CALDWELL (O.) Sept. 5.—"Carry on," was the tenor of the official statement of the board of investigation into the wreck of the Navy dirigible, Shenandoah, issued today by Capt. George Washington Steele, Jr., commandant of the Lakehurst (N. J.) Navy air station.

"The Navy Department will need the support of the country and the press to carry on at Lakehurst," said the statement. "Lieutenant-Commander Lansdowne and his officers and men gave their lives for the cause. Let the country give its support to the Navy Department and their sacrifice may not be in vain." The battle with elements early Thursday morning which left the once-proud "daughter of the stars" broken and scattered over the terrain of the Allegheny foothills and which brought death to fourteen members of the gallant crew was declared by Capt. Steele as constituting "an epic in the annals of aviation."

"I am sure that everything was done that could have been done by officers and crew. That she met disaster, I believe, was no fault of her construction, or of her operators," he declared.

The issuance of the statement marked only the slightest pause in the inquiry being conducted along two separate lines by the Navy Department. Capt. Steele and Commander J. H. Klein and their fellow-officials immediately took up their work again. Rear-Admiral C. W. Dyson, inspector-general of the Navy Department and chief of the Bureau of Engineering, was making an investigation simultaneously, but separately. He will report directly to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur. His special observation is to be concentrated on possible weakness in the construction materials of the wrecked dirigible.

It was definitely established in the investigation made today that the airship buckled amidships by the force of the gale and broke into two sections, one section free-ballooning over a hazardous and circuitous course to a hillside resting-place, twelve miles away; the other settling more immediately to the earth. Further breaking up of the portion which dropped more directly to the ground was caused by the contact it could not avoid

MITCHELL HURLS DEFIANCE

Flying Colonel Denounces War and Navy Departments in Aftermath of Air Tragedies

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Sept. 5.—Declaring defiance of the War Department, Col. William Mitchell today renewed his attacks on the Air Service and then departed by airplane for some tarpon fishing at Aransas Pass.

His statement charged recent air accidents to the management of the Air Service in blunt language, and as Mitchell packed his fishing tackle he said he expected to be arrested for his remarks. He then climbed into his plane and hopped off for the coast.

Col. Mitchell arrived at the gulf in excellent humor, and when friends sought to discuss aerial matters he replied:

"How are the fish biting?"

He spent the afternoon preparing for a fishing trip Sunday morning and refused further to comment on his statement in denunciation of the practices and systems obtaining in the administration of national air services by the War and Navy departments.

BITTER DENUNCIATION

In commenting on the fatal wreck of the Shenandoah and the failure of the Hawaiian flight with its possible loss of life, Col. Mitchell said:

"These accidents are the direct result of the incompetency, criminal negligence and almost treasonable administration of national defense by these two departments."

Col. Mitchell's views were set forth in a written statement covering seventeen typewritten pages, filled with biting sarcasm and criticism of their conduct of aviation.

"As far as aviation is concerned, the conduct of these departments has been so disgusting in the last few years as to make any self-respecting officer ashamed of the clothes he wears," Mitchell continued. "Were it not for the great patriotism of our air officers and their hope for a change in conditions sooner or later, I doubt if a real man would remain with the colors under existing conditions."

In reply to the statement by Secretary of the Navy Wilbur that the Hawaiian flight proves the value of the Atlantic and Pacific as America's bulwarks against air invasion from a foreign power, Col. Mitchell points out that such an invasion from Asia would be made by way of Alaska, where the water to be crossed is little wider than the English Channel.

The route from Europe, he said, is over the course followed by the round-the-world flyers, to Iceland, Greenland and North America, should a country become powerful enough to undertake the operation.

"What has the wreck of the Shenandoah to do with the possibility or impossibility of an air invasion from overseas?" Mitchell asked. "What business has the

BOASTS ANCIENT SCHOOL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ABBEVILLE (S. C.) Sept. 5.—Abbeville boasts one of the oldest industrial schools in the country, the De La Howe State School. It was founded on a bequest made in 1797 by Dr. Jean De la Howe, a Frenchman, who came to this country in colonial days and identified himself with a Huguenot settlement in South Carolina.

NAVY RESPECTS RODGERS NAME

Enviable Record Started by Commodore in 1798

Ended Reign of Terror in Barbary States

Administered Sound Beating to British Vessel

Mr. Bassett, local attorney, Naval Reserve man, magazine writer and formerly with the Associated Press, has written the following story exclusively for "The Times."

BY WILBUR BASSETT

Rodgers has, from the earliest days of American history, been a prominent Navy name. Commander John Rodgers of our day carries on the name and traditions of Commodore John Rodgers, his distinguished ancestor, whose service began in 1798. Since that day the Navy has always had one or several prominent officers from this distinguished family.

The father of the great commodore was Col. John Rodgers, born in Scotland about 1726. At the outbreak of the Revolution he was conducting a tavern on the Philadelphia-Baltimore Post Road. He was an ardent patriot, raised a militia company immediately after the battle of Bunker Hill, and became its captain. Later he moved to the lower Susquehanna Ferry, where he kept the old stone tavern which is still standing, and operated the ferry across the river. This village later was named Havre de Grace, and the tradition in the Rodgers family is that it was so named by Lafayette in honor of the French port of the same name. The Rodgers family has had its seat there ever since.

Commodore John Rodgers was born near there in 1773, and at a tender age was apprenticed to Capt. Benjamin Folger of the trading ship Maryland. So rapid was his development as a seaman that he obtained the command in 1793, before he was 20 years of age, of a fine ship in the European trade.

When the celebrated frigates Constitution, United States and Constellation were built as the foundation of a new Navy, President Adams, hearing good reports of the young merchant captain, appointed him in 1798 a lieutenant of the Navy. Rodgers was then 25 years of age, and had already had years of experience in actual command.

Every schoolboy knows how Rodgers succeeded in 1805, by force and diplomacy, in obtaining treaties from Tripoli and from Tunis, terminating the reign of terror and blackmail which the Barbary states had imposed upon the world. It was Commodore Rodgers who, in the frigate President, overhauled the British twenty-gun sloop-of-war "Little Belt," on May 17, 1811, at a time when we were nominally at peace with England. The sound beating which he gave this ship was a matter of delight to Americans of the day, but very awkward for the State Department. It is believed that Rodgers wished to avenge the uncalled-for attack upon the Chesapeake and the interference with American ships by British ships. The song of the day had it:

"On Thursday morn we saw a sail,
Well armed with gun and swivel;
Says Rodgers, 'We'll chase and hail,
And see if she'll be civil.'"

At the end of the war with Tripoli Commodore Rodgers continued to be the leading officer of the Navy in active service, commanding fleets at sea, important shore stations and navy bureaus. During the war of 1812 he cruised in the President and without a major ship engagement took twenty-three prizes and contributed largely to the distress of the enemy and the diversion of his forces. When British sailors and marines landed near Baltimore, Rodgers engaged them gallantly with bluejackets, a service which the grateful city always remembered.

SONS IN CIVIL WAR

Commodore Rodgers continued in active service until his death in 1838, and by reason of his many years as head of the Navy he was one of the most widely known public men of his day.

Two of the Commodore's sons, Rear-Admiral John Rodgers and Col. Robert S. Rodgers, served with distinction during the Civil War, as did two of his sons-in-law, Gen. Montgomery C. Meigs and Col. J. N. Macomb, and two grandsons, Maj. John Rodgers Meigs and Lieut. Frederick Rodgers, and two nephews, Commander C. R. P. Rodgers and Commander G. W. Rodgers. Maj. Meigs was chief engineer of the Army of the Shenandoah, and was killed near Harrisonburg in Virginia in 1864. Commander G. W. Rodgers was killed on board the Catskill in an attack on Fort Sumter in August, 1863.

Rear-Admiral John Rodgers often was spoken of as one of the "crack" seamen of the Navy. He was born in 1812 and it was he who in 1871 landed the first American armed force in Asia. These were sailors and marines from the Asiatic fleet, who destroyed the forts at the mouth of the Salee River in Korea.

Other distinguished officers of this family are Rear-Admiral Frederick Rodgers, a grandson of the Commodore; Rear-Admiral John A. Rodgers and Admiral William L. Rodgers, a son of Admiral John Rodgers.

Continuing thus from the days when our nation was in its cradle, the Rodgers family has maintained its fine old home at Havre de Grace in Maryland, and there has never been a time when the navy was without some ranking officer of that name.

Los Angeles Men

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6.—Londoners are taking to more color in their clothing for business wear. Many men who used to dress very somberly now wear browns, grays and tans in high colors—even their scarfs are brighter, and there is a tendency toward soft colored shirts. Pleated bosoms return and with them the starched, colored collar. Patterns bright but smaller—stripes, checks, plaids.

Tangled Remains of Monster of Air

These photographs received yesterday give a clear idea of the terrific buffeting suffered by the dirigible Shenandoah when she was wrecked in the air early Thursday. The pictures were transmitted over teleph one wires to San Francisco by the telephoto process.

NAVY AIR CRY IS "CARRY ON"

with high treetops. Some of these smaller fragments were lodged in the branches of the trees that covered the slopes.

Capt. Steele's statement, the first formal pronouncement by any naval official concerning the wreck, said:

"The cause of the disaster is very apparently due to the effect of forces which the airship was unable to withstand. I have sailed with Capt. Lansdowne, and I know how careful a navigator he was. This storm, whose approach was not heralded, came suddenly upon the ship and flanked it upon three sides. The opposing winds from the fourth side were so strong that, despite full speed on the engines, the ship was unable to drive her way clear before the storm closed in and engulfed it.

"The survivors tell of the wonderful battle with the elements waged by the captain and crew of the ship, and I am sure that everything was done which could have been done by the officers and crew. The wonderful skill and presence of mind of Lieutenant-Commander Rosendahl, and Lieut. Mayer, Lieut. Anderson, Col. Hall, and the others who brought the forward end of the ship safely to earth, will constitute an epic in the annals of aviation."

LAST RETURNS

There was an enforced reaction today to the vandalism that has pervaded the region of the disaster since early Thursday morning. Pressure of public opinion, the pleas of the officials carried by the press and the presence of Department of Justice officials working under orders from Washington, caused souvenir-takers to return their loot to the investigators today.

The much sought-for barograph was returned, as were parts of the seven separate logs of the ill-starred ship. Valves measuring three feet across, binoculars belonging to officers, graph charts, clothing and papers were returned. Still there were thousands of pieces of aluminum framework and dozens of instruments scattered throughout the counties surrounding the scene of disaster and from wherever sightseers have returned.

In them, or in their taking, may have been lost an important story that the Navy Department should know, the investigators said, as they continually expressed their regret at the hysteria of the crowd.

The last of the survivors of the wreck left Caldwell today for Lakehurst to join their comrades who left two days previously for their home port. During the morning the last of the bodies of the victims were en route either to the keeping of their families, or to Arlington to lie among the honored dead in the National Cemetery.

SERVICES PLANNED FOR DIRIGIBLE DEAD

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

LAKEHURST (N. J.) Sept. 5.—Flags remained at half-staff throughout Ocean county today while plans were made for memorial services to be held for the officers and men who lost their lives when the dirigible Shenandoah broke into three sections in the air above Ohio Thursday morning.

Commander F. R. McCord said that most of the officers of the naval air station planned to be present at Arlington Cemetery when the services for the dead take place, probably on Tuesday. At the same hour, memorial services will be held within the hangar in the section where the Shenandoah was housed during her stay in Lakehurst.

Chaplain Commander Frank R. Kranz will be in charge of the services and the naval air station band will take part. Choirs from several churches in the vicinity will be asked to sing.

THREE BODIES TAKEN TO ARLINGTON CEMETERY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The bodies of Lieutenant-Commander Zachary Lansdowne and Lieuts. J. D. Lawrence and E. R. Shepherd, killed in the Shenandoah disaster, arrived by train today from Ohio and were taken under naval escort to Arlington to await burial.

The body of Lieutenant-Commander Hancock will arrive tomorrow.

A joint funeral for all four will be held at Arlington Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

Full military honors will be rendered at the funeral, which will be in the presence of Secretary Wilbur, Assistant Secretary Robinson and ranking officers of the Navy. Burial will be in the Dewey division, near the section allotted to the dead of the World War. Close by lie victims of other aviation disasters, including Commander Louis H. Maxfield, who was chief of the naval air contingent sent to England to bring back the ZR-2, who was killed in the wreck of that craft in August, 1921.

DRIVER WHO INJURED WOMAN SENT TO JAIL

Fred Heegel, 200 1-2 West Fifty-fifth street, was sentenced to ninety days in the City Jail yesterday by Police Judge Bullock on a charge of reckless driving. Heegel was charged with injuring Mrs. Josephine Graham, 137 West Fifty-fifth street, on July 13, last, while driving his automobile.

NEW DEFIANCE BY MITCHELL

Navy over the mountains, anyway? Their mission is not only out in the water, but under the water, out of sight and away from land."

Charging that, in attempts to prevent the development of aviation into an independent branch, handled and directed by aeronautical experts, those in charge of affairs have gone to the utmost lengths to carry their point, Mitchell declared that all aviation policy, schemes and systems are controlled and directed by nonflyers who know practically nothing about it.

"Both departments maintain public propaganda agencies which are supposed to publish to the people truthful facts about national defense," Mitchell declared, charging that the airmen are "bluffed and bulldozed so that they dare not tell the truth in a majority of cases, knowing that if they do, they will be deprived of their future career and sent to the most out-of-the-way places."

Mitchell declared that the accident to the Shenandoah and the Hawaiian flight ships is "due to incompetence in the Navy Department, and the criminal negligence in ordering the trip." He reviewed several accidents of the past, declaring that the loss of life in them was due largely to obsolete and improper ships and equipment.

REVIEWS TEST

In asking what the Army and Navy has done to show that existing obsolete systems should continue, Mitchell comments on the Pacific Fleet maneuvers the Hawaiian flight, and the MacMillan arctic expedition.

If the maneuvers showed anything conclusively, it was favorable to aircraft, Mitchell declared, pointing out that the 1921 airplane bombardment tests showed what could be done.

"What would the $50,000,000 to $80,000,000 spent on the Pacific maneuvers have meant if applied to the development of airplanes and submarines?" he asked.

Terming the Hawaiian flight planes "good for nothing, big, lumbering flying boats," he criticised the methods used in providing for the safety of the flight, declaring that destroyers, capable of a speed more than two-thirds as fast as the planes, should have steamed full speed in the direction of the course, thereby keeping in sight of the flyers all the time. With gasoline supply exhausted, the plane probably was caught in a sudden gust and disappeared beneath the waves, Mitchell said, leaving no trace of the disaster. Even though successful, the flight would have meant nothing from either military, or commercial standpoint, he declared.

Mitchell contradicted statements that the Shenandoah, was a modern airship, completely equipped, and properly constructed, and declared she was an experimental ship built in this country and was about 50 per cent overweight. Her whole structure was badly strained, he said, when the giant ship broke away from her mooring-mast last spring, tearing out the nose of the craft and otherwise damaging it.

He also declared the decrease in the number of valves in the gas bags, made to save the expensive helium gas, made the ship more dangerous to the crew.

"Her survivors are muzzled by the Navy Department, which is depending on a whitewash board," he declared. "The impressions allowed to get out shake the faith of the people in airship transportation and hinders its commercial development."

AVIATOR REPLIES TO MITCHELL CHARGES

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Lieutenant-Commander James H. Strong, commander of the naval seaplane PB-1, issued the following statement today in reply to Col. William Mitchell's charges relating to the Army and Navy air services:

"The flight (the San Francisco-Honolulu nonstop project) was perfectly planned. Any one of the three planes could make it. The PN-9 No. 1 already had made a twenty-eight and one-half hour flight, which is sufficient to reach Honolulu. We can't say what went wrong with the PN-9 No. 1. The engines and planes are far superior to any we have ever had. Plane guard vessels were not too far apart for radio compass work or for safety.

"Naval aviation has developed remarkably in the past few years, and along progressive, far-sighted lines. Attempts such as this, which require maximum performance, assist to a great degree in developing aircraft and engines."

Similar comments were made by Lieut. Allan Snody, commander of the PN-9 No. 3, which was forced down and towed back after making 300 miles of the Hawaiian flight.

MITCHELL FACING OFFICIAL ACTION

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Officials of the War and Navy departments admitted astonishment over the statement made by Col. William Mitchell, former chief of the Army Air Service, charging them with stupidity, incompetence and criminal negligence and with direct responsibility for the disaster to the Navy dirigible Shenandoah in Ohio Thursday morning.

Although incensed at this latest attack, neither Cabinet officials nor ranking officers of the Air Service, would discuss his unreserved assertions.

SHREVEPORT FIRE LEVELS NINE BLOCKS

Half Million in Damage Results from Mysterious Shut-off of Water

SHREVEPORT (La.) Sept. 5.—Shortly after a mysterious series of breaks in city water mains, a disastrous fire swept nine residential blocks here today, destroying the homes of more than 1000 people and doing damage estimated to exceed $500,000. City officials were unable to account for three serious breaks in the water mains which fed the fire area and stated only that the mains had to be repaired before the city firemen were able to check the spread of the fire.

Two persons were injured seriously during the "bucket-brigade" fire fighting which was waged when it was seen that the city water system was unable to deliver water. Several others received slight injuries.

The burned area included three blocks of residences of well-to-do families and six blocks of the poorer section of the city, the latter housing negroes for the most part. More than 150 structures were burned completely and others were damaged in various degrees.

Origin of the fire was traced to the home of O. Childress, a barber, and fire fighters found themselves almost helpless when the lack of water was discovered. A heavy night wind fanned the flames and put to naught the efforts of the hurriedly formed "bucket brigades." For five hours while crews of men toiled on the mysteriously broken water mains, the city lay at the mercy of the fire. Then, when almost nine blocks had been burned over, the mains were repaired and fire apparatus made short work of holding the blaze in check.

Wild scenes occurred in the destroyed area as the fire was gaining headway. Families stood their ground, fighting fiercely to protect their homes until were forced to flee for their lives, carrying what household articles they could, with them. Residents of the unaffected areas of the city gathered on hills overlooking the scene to watch the conflagration.

Local Fireman and Girl Hurt in Auto Crash

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Sept. 5.—W. J. Cammack of 1708 West Fifty-first street, a fireman in the Los Angeles fire department, and Miss Evelyn Keiner of 1750 West Twenty-second street, Los Angeles, were badly hurt when two automobiles crashed in a head-on collision at Pismo Beach tonight.

Miss Keiner is suffering from a possible fractured skull, a broken arm, broken leg and severe cuts. Cammack also was badly cut and is said to be in a serious condition. Both were taken to Pacific Hospital here.

The car in which Cammack and Miss Keiner were riding ran into a machine driven by J. O. Lawrence of 712 Rudolph street, Watts. In the car also were Mrs. Lawrence; her father, W. J. Davis, and her 6-year-old son. Although badly shaken up, none of the Lawrence party was seriously hurt.

Commissioner to Testify in Railroad Case

George B. McGinty, secretary and executive officer of the United States Interstate Commerce Commission, is in the city to appear as a witness for the State in the trial of H. D. Hibbs and T. D. Hennessy for the asserted railroad swindle, scheduled to open in the Superior Court on Tuesday, he stated last night.

Mr. McGinty could not reveal the nature of the testimony he will give, but it is thought that it will be of an expert nature dealing with the status of certain railroads which the defendants are asserted to have represented as involved in the merger for the investment in which many prominent local men and women were to cash in on a 10-to-1 basis.

Most books on paper-making say that paper was first made from pulp wood in 1840 and came into general use in 1860. Some scientists, however, claim that paper was made from pulp wood as early as 1800.

radio station, attracted much attention and comment.

A remarkable instrument developed by the Western Electric Company to take the place of the human larynx, permitting persons who have lost their voices to speak again, was the subject of much comment. Representatives of the company said that the instrument was evolved following the World War and has been donated to many veterans who lost their power of speech during overseas service.

The Los Angeles police department is demonstrating the important part radio is to play in crime detection in the near future and the Navy, represented by the Eleventh Naval District, has installed depth-finding machines, sound detectors and other devices indispensable to the work at sea.

BROADCAST TO PLANES

An unusual experiment was carried on yesterday between 4 and 5 p.m., by the Radio Corporation of America in broadcasting from its station KRCA, installed on the exposition floor, to United States Army airplanes flying over the city. The planes, carrying broadcasting equipment as well, returned messages to the receiving set in the company's booth. These tests are to be given daily from 4 to 5 p.m., and listeners-in can pick up the conversations.

The exposition will continue daily at 2:30 p.m. Ot 1 p.m. each day free programs are put on in the Ambassador Theater and the audience is given complimentary tickets to the exposition.

GERMAN BANKS HALT SICHEL FIRM CREDIT

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—The Sichel concern, known as the "smaller Stinnes" has been refused a credit of $1,500,000 by the German banks pending an investigation of the financial status of the concern, which has led to reports in Berlin that the Sichel concern is in difficulties and threatened with the same disintegration as the Stinnes kingdom. Sichel, a firm 100 years of age, developed into a tremendous concern, during the war inflation days. The concern dealt in iron construction, bridges, railroad equipment and machines.

Smart "Gruens"

And every one a fine timepiece.

Famous watches, these "Gruens," and justly so. In no other watch can you find just such smart models. In no other watch will you see such artistry in case and dial decoration, and few watches indeed bear such an excellent reputation as timekeepers.

The three wrist watches illustrated are among the most popular of the medium priced models. They are exactly the size shown, and are wonderfully attractive examples of the modern watchmakers' art.

The complete "Gruen" line of both ladies' and men's watches are carried by this store. Prices start at $25 and range upward to almost any amount one would care to invest.

And back of every watch stands the Geo. D. Davidson Co. Service Department—your assurance of continuing satisfaction.

A wonderful White Gold filled model that, with all the "Gruen" virtues, retails at the modest price of $35. A very great value.

$50

This true rectangular is made of White Gold filled stock, smartly engraved and closely timed. One of the most popular "Gruens" and well worth $50.

$65

A dainty model of 14-k. Solid White Gold, with a Grecian design smartly inlaid in hard black enamel. A watch of unmistakable class. Priced most reasonably at $65.

FOURTH RAISED IN QUAKE FUND

State Gives $279,255 to Aid Santa Barbara

Major Portion Donated by Southland Cities

Friday's Receipts Heavy as Plea Brings Cash

Virtually 25.4 per cent of the $1,100,000 goal in the Santa Barbara emergency relief fund has been raised, according to a report received by Campaign Manager Morris of the Chamber of Commerce from Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, chairman of the Santa Barbara relief committee yesterday.

The report stated that the total amount received by his committee up to Friday night was $279,255. According to the records in Manager Morris's office, $202,252 has come from Southern California, the city of Los Angeles having contributed $122,839 of the sum, Los Angeles county outside the city, $26,942 and the rest of the southern part of the State, outside Los Angeles county, $52,471. The total of $149,781 contributed by Los Angeles city and county leaves $269,819 still to be raised here before the quota of $419,600 is reached.

Dr. Pritchett's report stated that in response to the recent appeal sent out by his committee, urging all who have made pledges to send in the money as soon as possible, receipts amounting to $41,822 had come in on Friday. The appeal was transmitted to the people of Southern California by Manager Morris.

Of Friday's receipts all but $12,950 came from Southern California, Los Angeles contributing $28,288; San Diego, $1379; Sierra Madre, $424; Riverside, $926, and Hemet, $854. The Los Angeles amount consisted of $25,258 forwarded by the Chamber of Commerce and individual contributions of $25 and $5, respectively, by Kate E. Rust and L. B. Wilson. Of the amount contributed by Northern California, Dr. Pritchett's report said, San Francisco sent $10,000; Monterey, $4402; Carmel, $415; Berkeley, $2, and Santa Cruz, $854.

Up to noon yesterday Mr. Morris stated that the Chamber of Commerce had received checks from employees of the Frick-Martin Company to the amount of $165, and $7500 from the Southern Pacific, which contributed a similar amount to the San Francisco fund.

FEDERAL BUILDING OFFICES TO CLOSE

Practically all of the offices in the Federal Building will be closed all day tomorrow for Labor Day, a national holiday. On Tuesday morning the calendars in all three of the United States District Courts will be called by Judge James and Henning. Judge James will call his own calendar as well as Judge McCormick's. The latter is in Europe, and will conduct court here October 26, next. No cases are set for trial for Tuesday, but a narcotic case will go before a jury in Judge James's court Thursday.

SANTA BARBARA FUND

The Times will receive, acknowledge by publication and deliver to the authorized agents of the California Development Association any sums sent to this paper as contributions to the $1,100,000 fund to be raised by the association for emergency and charitable work in stricken Santa Barbara.

The Times itself started the fund with a donation of $10,000 and takes this occasion to urge all loyal Californians, individuals, organizations, companies, etc., to give to the extent of their abilities. The need is urgent. Santa Barbara has pluckily refused eastern help in the belief that California will take care of her own. Let her be not disappointed!

Contributions may be made through any bank or newspaper, the Chamber of Commerce or the California Development Association, Garland Building, Los Angeles. If sent to The Times, checks should be made payable to the Santa Barbara Fund.

PIONEER REALTOR PASSES

Elden P. Bryan, in Real Estate Business Here Many Years, Dies at Age of 74

Elden P. Bryan, 74 years of age, one of the pioneer real estate men of Los Angeles, who came to the city from Texas in 1886, died early yesterday morning at his home, 41 Westmoreland Place. Funeral services will be conducted at the residence Tuesday at 2 p.m. Interment will be private.

Mr. Bryan was born in Cass county, Tex., March 30, 1851. For a number of years he was a resident of Dallas and from there he moved to Los Angeles. Mr. Bryan entered the real estate business as a pioneer here and continued in it until his death. Among the 100 subdivisions it is estimated he promoted was the Westmoreland tract.

Since he first entered business here Mr. Bryan has been regarded as one of the leading real estate men of the city and has found a wide acquaintance of friends both in his business and social activities. He was a member of the Los Angeles Realty Board, the California Club and the Los Angeles Country Club. He leaves a sister, Mrs. Sally Moore of Dallas; a daughter, Mrs. E. Avery Newton of this city, and a grand-daughter, Miss June Bryan Bradford of Alhambra.

At the funeral members of the realty board who will act as active pallbearers are Charles G. Andrews, C. C. C. Tatum, W. W. Mines, William M. McCoy, H. H. Cotton and Thomas P. Cooper.

The honorary pallbearers are W. D. Woolwine, Wesley Clark, F. W. Braun, Ross Campbell, Dr. W. E. Waddell, H. Jevne, J. A. Jevne, George Peck, Benton Van Nuys, P. H. O'Neill, Robert Marsh, James Anderson, George J. Denis, W. M. Garland, James E. Page, J. H. Miles, J. O. Koepfli, W. J. Washburn, Frank R. Strong, M. M. PETITIONING FEES SOUGHT

Efficiency Director Recommends Applicants be Compelled to Pay for Filing Papers

The large and increasing number of petitions of all kinds filed with the City Council was set forth yesterday in a report to the City Council by City Efficiency Director Knox, showing that during the fiscal year which ended on June 30, last, 8600 petitions were filed. It was estimated by the Efficiency Director that 20 per cent of the time of the employees of City Clerk Dominguez's office was taken up in the handling of these petitions.

The investigation by the Efficiency Director was made at the suggestion of Councilman Hall to determine whether or not the expense of this petition work could be placed on the petitioners so as to relieve the general taxpayers of it.

FEE RECOMMENDED

The report of the Efficiency Director recommended that a fee of $25 be charged for each petition for a special zoning or set-back permit, although the average cost of handling these petitions is $35 each.

The Efficiency Director said that as a considerable portion of this departmental expense is for services rendered the general public, a fee of $25 for each petition would cover the expense incurred for services rendered which would directly benefit the petitioners. There were 706 zoning and set-back petitions filed during the last fiscal year.

A fee of $10 plus 25 cents per lot for handling applications for approval of subdivision maps was also recommended by the Efficiency Director to cover the actual departmental expense in handling these petitions and maps, as the petitioner would directly benefit by the approval of his subdivision map through the sale of the lots in the subdivisions.

INCLUDED IN COST

The city now collects fees for handling street improvement and ornamental lighting petitions, which are included in the cost of the improvements, and a fee of $600 is now required with each application filed for a franchise.

SEEKS FORD AIR TERMINUS HERE

Mail, Passenger, Express Service Planned

Inventor of Stout Planes in Visit to City

Confers With Local Men on Depot Possibilities

Investigating the possibilities of Los Angeles as a western terminus for a gigantic aerial mail, passenger and express service, William B. Stout, head of Henry Ford's aviation interests, and vice-president of the Stout Airplane Corporation, is in the city for a few days. He is the designer and builder of the Stout all-metal planes, which are being used by the Ford Airlines and which probably will be seen in use on Pacific Coast air routes in the near future.

Mr. Stout has been in consultation with Byron L. Graves and other officials of the Western Air Express, Inc., the local organization backed by many of the city's most prominent business men, which is bidding for the air mail contract between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City and Los Angeles and San Francisco. Bids for the contracts on these routes will be opened in Washington this month.

SPEED PRODUCTION

The Stout all-metal monoplane has been backed by Henry Ford after lengthy investigation and production of the fast planes is being speeded up at the Detroit factory. At present, according to Mr. Stout, the factory is building a plane every two weeks. Within a very short time the production will be one plane a week and he expects within a few months to be turning out a plane every day or so.

These planes, as fast as they are completed, are being put in service on lines radiating from Detroit and carrying everything from Ford executives to Ford spare parts between the main factory and its branches throughout the country.

OUTPUT LARGE

Mr. Ford expects to have fifty of the planes in service early next year and at the present rate of production the Stout factory soon will be building more commercial planes than any factory in the world.

Mr. Stout will remain in Southern California for a few days and then will return to Detroit by way of San Francisco, carrying with him complete information as to the possibilities of operating out of here. The Western Air Express, Inc., expects to use both the Stout type of plane and also the Douglas, which is built in Santa Monica.

NEW PIANO PLAYED BY DONAHUE

Invention of J. H. Hammond Operated by Fourth Pedal Given Hearing

The first recital by Lester Donahue on the new piano invented by John Hays Hammond, Jr., in Gloucester, Mass., is of unusual interest to Los Angeles. Mr. Donahue is an internationally known pianist, who grew up and was educated in this city, being a pupil of Mr. Thilo Becker. He has been working with the inventor of this new instrument, which is said to have the sustained quality of a pipe organ, for the better part of a year.

Quoting from the New York Times, Mr. Hammond explained that his purpose in perfecting the new piano had been to give the player control over the notes after the keys had been struck. By the use of reflectors set inside the instrument and controlled by a fourth pedal, it has been possible to build up a tremendous sonority and the tones might be allowed to escape with any degree of subtlety.

To overcome the limitations of the piano, Mr. Hammond covered the entire top of a sound-proof case with parallel revolving slats, which can be opened or closed at the will of the player by the extra pedal. Since the case is sound-proof the tone can be built up within the piano, and then permitted to escape at will. The reflectors can return to the sounding board a large degree of energy imparted to the strings by the musician. There is no change in the appearance of the piano, with the exception of a deeper case, nor is the notation of the music different.

A well-known musician, who heard Mr. Donahue play the instrument at Gloucester, enumerated the added qualities as follows: The increased sonority; its capability of maintaining as a straight dynamic line the effect of undying tone; the differentiation of melodic passages from accompanimental passages; the ability to open the reflectors with the dying of tone to obtain a level tone; the power to change the quality of the upper harmonics after the keys have been struck, obtaining remarkable tone-color changes.

Mr. Donahue will introduce the Hammond piano in New York, in Boston with Koussevitsky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and probably in Philadelphia under the direction of Stokowsky, who has spent a week at the Hammond home this summer investigating the new invention. His mother and aunt, who are well known in Los Angeles, have also been visiting at the home of the inventor this summer, and are now on their way home. The effect of the instrument is said to be especially good in the Rachmaninoff concerto for piano and orchestra, a number which Mr. Donahue played here several seasons ago.

WIFE PLAYS SAMARITAN TO AID RIVAL

Gives Husband Restaurant to Employ Girl With Whom He Had Affair

A remarkable situation was revealed yesterday when Mrs. Hilda C. Waibel appeared before Judge Hanby to obtain a divorce from Carl Waibel. Mrs. Waibel told the court that after she had learned of an affair between her husband and Miss Edna Sears, she had purchased a restaurant for him, and instructed him to give the girl work in it.

Miss Sears was in court to corroborate the wife's story.

Mrs. Waibel related that she had first met Miss Sears when the latter came to her to ask for a certain picture that belonged to Waibel.

" 'Why do you want it?' I asked her," Mrs. Waibel testified. "Then she brought a child to me and said, 'this is the reason.' "

As she completed her story, Mrs. Waibel broke into tears. Miss Sears was called.

"I work for Mr. Waibel in Mrs. Waibel's restaurant on East First street," she said. "I supported the baby as long as I could by myself, and then I went to Mrs. Waibel, and she got this work for me in the restaurant."

At this Judge Hanby called the wife back to the stand to explain the situation.

"Well, my husband was broke and out of work, so I bought the restaurant for him to run for me, hoping it would make a man out of him," she related. "Then when I found out about Miss Sears's terrible trouble, I gave her a position as a waitress, so as to help her all I could."

Judge Hanby granted the divorce and the two women left the courtroom together, in tears.

SPIRITUALISTIC ATTACK DENIED

Police Chief Heath Replies to Order's Protest

Declares Expose Used for Schooling Detectives

Demonstration Not Aimed at Association

In a letter yesterday replying to the protest of Fred E. Stivers, president of the California State Spiritualists' Association, 1401 South Berendo street, over the expose of spiritualistic methods and "fake mediums" conducted last Thursday by the police, Chief of Police Heath denied that a personal attack against Stivers or his organization was intended, declaring it was done to acquaint detectives with methods used to prey on the credulity of the public by the dishonest of the profession.

The protest was levelled at Chief Heath over the demonstrations given by Clifford Trotter of Santa Fe Springs. In his letter Stivers is said to have asserted the ability of the spiritualists to read "sealed ballots" and asked that Trotter be forced to appear before them at a public meeting.

In reply, Chief Heath said that the department accepted the service of any person volunteering "educational work or offering to explain any trick or device which may be used in mystifying the unwary or gullible."

"We do not claim that all spiritualists are dishonest," Chief Heath said, "nor do we believe that Mr. Trotter makes any such claims. We do find that there are persons who pretend to have occult powers and who insist that they can communicate with the world beyond, but whose proofs are inadequate and methods somewhat doubtful. If any citizen can show us how to detect any form of fraud, we are glad to have such assistance.

"You certainly cannot assume that in referring to 'fake mediums' Clifford Trotter or any member of our department was making a personal attack on you or your organization. There is no cause for indignation on your part, and if members of your association are really able to read sealed ballots, due to occult powers or special gifts not granted to ordinary individuals, you should be proud indeed, and easily able to demonstrate the fact to any persons who have been skeptical," Chief Heath concluded.

Los Angeles Opera Company Second Season

In order that the performances which will be given this season by the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association at the Philharmonic Auditorium, will have that brilliance and verve characteristic of the Metropolitan and other opera houses of the world's capitols, every detail has been carefully considered by the management. The question of scenery, always an important one, has been stressed, and the scenic investiture will reveal new beauties and new possibilities. Colorful and massive, modern and lavish, these sets have been in preparation since last February, from blue prints and drawings furnished by the Metropolitan Operahouse.

The ballet of more than sixty girls has been training for months under the master eye of Ernest Belcher, and elaborate ballets will be a feature of Lakme, Aida, Rigoletto and Carmen.

The chorus has reached new heights of excellence under the direction of William Tyroler, famous chorus director, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera House. Ninety per cent of its personnel has had the benefit of last year's opera experience. Artists have been selected to make the week's performances the most brilliant in our operatic history. Rosa Raisa is internationally known as one of the world's greatest sopranos, Charles Hackett is famous in Europe and America alike, as one of the great tenors of the day, as is Lappas. Vincente Ballester and Giocomo Rimini are premiere baritones of the Metropolitan and Chicago operas, respectively. Alice Gentle is one of the great Carmens of all time, and her portrayal of the role of La Navarraise is outstanding. Kathryn Meisle was the contralto sensation of last year's Chicago opera season. Coutreil, Defrere, distinguished artists, will add their presence to this company.

Minor roles will be sung this year by some of our finest resident artists, including Marjorie Dodge, Flora Myers Engle, Margaret Messer-Morris, Mme. Sprotte, and other roles by those in the chorus who have shown exceptional ability.

Guiding all this great personnel and brilliant operatic material, is the master hand of Richard Hageman who, although a young man, is a veteran of years of opera abroad and in this country. For six years he was leading conductor of the Royal Opera in Amsterdam. For thirteen years, a remarkable record, he was conductor at the Metropolitan Operahouse, New York, the greatest operahouse in the world. For two years he was conductor at the Chicago Opera, and five years at Ravinia Park. "With a man of his genius and experience at the helm, opera will have an entirely new impetus and meaning," says Merle Armitage, general manager.

The Philharmonic Auditorium, according to Hageman, is an ideal place for opera, with its splendid seating arrangement and its perfect acoustics. The orchestra will be composed of the first chair men of the Philharmonic Orchestra, which is a guarantee of its excellence. Although the season of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association is one which should be a milestone in the musical history of Los Angeles.

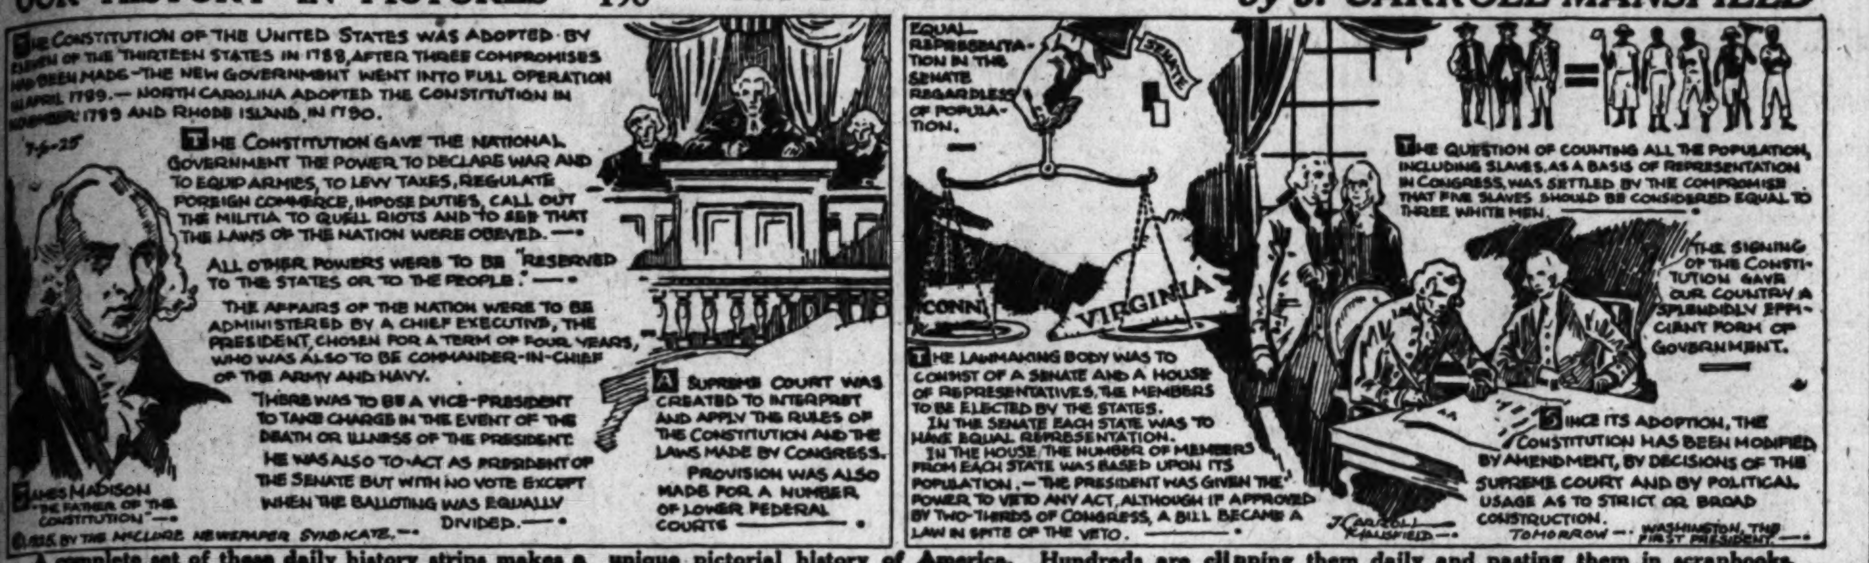
OUR HISTORY IN PICTURES 198 The Constitution—1788. by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD



The Constitution of the United States was adopted by eleven of the thirteen states in 1788, after three compromises had been made—the new government went into full operation in April 1789.— North Carolina adopted the constitution in November 1789 and Rhode Island in 1790.
9-6-25
The Constitution gave the national government the power to declare war and to equip armies, to levy taxes, regulate foreign commerce, impose duties, call out the militia to quell riots and to see that the laws of the nation were obeyed.—
All other powers were to be "reserved to the states or to the people."—
The affairs of the nation were to be administered by a chief executive, the President, chosen for a term of four years, who was also to be commander-in-chief of the army and navy.
There was to be a Vice-President to take charge in the event of the death or illness of the President.
He was also to act as President of the Senate but with no vote except when the balloting was equally divided.—
James Madison "The Father of the Constitution"—
©1925, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.—
A Supreme Court was created to interpret and apply the rules of the Constitution and the laws made by Congress. Provision was also made for a number of lower Federal courts—
Equal representation in the Senate regardless of population.—
Senate
Conn
Virginia
The lawmaking body was to consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives, the members to be elected by the states. In the Senate each state was to have equal representation. In the House the number of members from each state was based upon its population.—The President was given the power to veto any act, although if approved by two-thirds of Congress, a bill became a law in spite of the veto.—
The question of counting all the population, including slaves, as a basis of representation in Congress, was settled by the compromise that five slaves should be considered equal to three white men.
The signing of the Constitution gave our country a splendidly efficient form of government.
Since its adoption, the Constitution has been modified by amendment, by decisions of the Supreme Court and by political usage as to strict or broad construction.

QUIZ IN DEATH OF RICH INDIAN

utopsy Ordered as Friend Tells of Liquor Gift

m Declared Given Him by Asserted Enemies

ystery Demise Follows in Wake of Party

y a "Times" Staff Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Sept. 5.—Revelation that Emory Roe, 27-year-old wealthy Oklahoma Indian, drank liquor given him by supposed enemies two days before his mysterious death here Thursday, led Captain of Detectives Worley today to request an autopsy and inquest into the death. Coroner [illegible] informed Capt. Worley the autopsy will be conducted Monday.

The clew in the mysterious death was given Capt. Worley by a friend of the Indian, whose name is being withheld by police at the man's request. The informant fears for his own safety, it was said.

According to the man's story, he and Roe attended a party in Laguna Beach. Among those present were men known by the informant, he said, as enemies of himself and Roe.

When the asserted enemies offered Roe and his friend liquor, the informant stated, he refused fearing the consequences, and urged Roe to do likewise. Roe took a drink of it, the informant said, and so far as he knew did not drink any more that evening.

The next day in Long Beach Roe became ill and was removed to the Community Hospital, where he died. Indications at that time, the physicians said, were that the man was suffering from acute alcoholism.

Roe is one of a colony of wealthy Indians who came to Long Beach after discovery of oil on their allotments in Oklahoma had made them rich over night. He lived at [illegible] Termino avenue. The body is being held at the Comer Undertaking Company.

VENICE CITY OFFICIAL FOR ANNEXATION

Only Salvation Lies in Joining Los Angeles, Says Clerk Thomas H. Hanna

Seven years of service as City Clerk during four municipal administrations has convinced Thomas H. Hanna, City Clerk of Venice, that the annexation of Venice to Los Angeles is the bay city's only salvation, according to a statement issued by him yesterday.

"Many unfortunate and adverse circumstances and conditions have created a sentiment against our city in its financial and social circles and business world, tending to create low property valuations and an unsatisfactory condition generally, as is well known to all our people," he stated. "As a logical conclusion I am forced to believe, irrespective of any personal issue, that to consolidate with Los Angeles is our only hope of recovering from these past misfortunes that hold us in political, social and business bondage."

Such a consolidation, he added, would recoup Venice's losses and increase the value of Venice property, as well as preventing its beaches from falling into the hands of private owners.

Japan Consul to be Feted on Eve of Leaving

Honoring K. Wakasugi, Japanese Consul to Los Angeles, a banquet is to be given at the City Club on the 11th inst., the eve of his departure for Japan to confer with Japanese diplomatic leaders over a high diplomatic post which he has been offered.

Members of the Consular Corps took the lead in arranging the farewell dinner to their colleague, who has represented Japan in Southern California for two years. Other organizations which will participate are the Council of International Relations, Japanese Association, Japanese Central Association, Japanese Chamber of Commerce, Japanese Society of Southern California, the City Club and the Pan-Pacific Union.

CONTRACTS LET IN SEWER WORK

First Awards in $25,000,000 Metropolitan System

Completion of Project in Two Years Expected

New District Formed to Join in Project

Award of approximately $25,000 in contracts yesterday marked the start of work on Los Angeles county's new metropolitan sewer system, a network of trunk-line sewers connecting with an ocean outfall. The huge program will cost, when completed, nearly $25,000,000, for which more than $10,000,000 already has been voted.

In County Sanitation District No. 2, Ivan J. Bukvic was awarded the contract for laying lines beneath the Union Pacific Railroad crossing on Telegraph Road, while in district No. 1, Lawrence Massa received the contract for construction of a trunk-line sewer through the city of Maywood, costing $17,669. These two jobs mark the first actual work on the system, which was designed less than two years ago by County Sanitation Engineer A. K. Warren. In both instances work was undertaken at this time so that new paving jobs would not later be torn up.

Two years ago the State Legislature passed a law making it possible for communities to join in the construction of trunk-line sewers having a common outfall into the ocean at White's Point. Districts in the southern part of Los Angeles county already have voted bonds for the work, while in the eastern and northern portion, district No. 7 is being formed to include eighteen communities of the San Gabriel Valley.

With action now under way in letting of contracts, it was predicted yesterday that actual construction would be rushed and that the entire system could be built within eighteen months or two years. Practically all of Los Angeles county then will be thoroughly equipped with a means of sewage disposal.

LIEUTENANT GUILTY IN SUBMARINE GROUNDING

COMMANDER OF S-19 LOSES FIVE NUMBERS IN RANK DUE TO MISHAP

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Lieut. Charles F. Martin has been found guilty of negligence as commanding officer of the submarine S-19, which went aground off Chatham, Mass., January 12, last and sentenced to the loss of five numbers in rank, under a decision approved today by Secretary Wilbur.

Lieutenant-Commander Stuart E. Bray, commanding officer of the submarine S-48, which went aground during a storm off Portsmouth, N. H., January 29, was acquitted of charges of negligence, and of failure to obey orders. Mr. Wilbur disapproved the finding on the second of these charges, but the disapproval has no practical punitive effect.

Lieut. Alexander S. Edward, officer of the deck of the S-19, was found guilty of culpable inefficiency in performance of duty and of violation of orders in not reporting a change of course to his superior officer, and was sentenced to the loss of twenty-five numbers.

PROBATION REVOCATION TO COME UP

First Case Under Federal Law Will be Heard Here on October 26

The first case of revocation of the Federal probation law, in the matter of Albert Shaw, 20-year-old youth, who pleaded guilty of violating the Dyer Act, was set for hearing yesterday before Federal Judge McCormick on October 26, next.

U. S. Dist.-Atty. McNabb and Agent-in-Charge Wheeler of the Department of Justice yesterday brought before Federal Judge James a request to revoke probation granted Shaw, they having assembled evidence disproving certain of his statements to the court, according to their report.

Young Shaw, in July, pleaded guilty before Judge McCormick to driving a small stolen automobile from Garnerville, Nev., a mining camp, to Hueneme.

Shaw told the court he was sold the car in Gardnerville by a man named "Bell," who called him from bed at 3 a.m., and took all his money, $15, for the car. He drove to Hueneme without food, he said, receiving gasoline and oil on the route from kind-hearted persons. Judge McCormick sentenced Shaw to a year and a day, and granted him probation, at the same time, directing the Department of Justice to prosecute a search for Bell.

The investigation proved, according to the officers, that no such man as Bell existed. Thereupon Shaw was brought up from San Diego, and was taken before Judge James. The latter stated he did not care to act on his colleague's case, and the matter was continued until Judge McCormick's return.

Leading Figure in Mercantile Business Dies

Thomas A. Kindred, for forty years a prominent figure in Pacific Coast mercantile circles and formerly a department head for Meier & Frank of Portland, Or., died yesterday at his home at 1214 Sixth street, Santa Monica. Mr. Kindred was 67 years of age and had lived in Santa Monica since his retirement four years ago. His illness was of four years' standing.

He leaves a widow, two daughters, Mrs. Edna M. Jordan and Mrs. W. H. Brewster of Santa Monica, and a son, John J. Kindred of Portland. Mrs. Brewster is the wife of the Los Angeles freight traffic representative of the Missouri Pacific and the International Great Northern railroads.

Mr. Kindred's body will be sent today to Portland for burial.

Art Treasures of ex-Kaiser to Go at Auction

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Daily Express says that the art treasures of the palace on the Island of Corfu, owned by William Hohenzollern when he was Emperor of Germany, are to be sold at auction by the Greek government, which acquired the property during the war.

The articles to be sold include hundreds of pictures, statues and intimate relics of the ex-Kaiser and his family as well as the late Empress Elizabeth of Austria, who built and furnished the palace.

The sale will begin late this month and will last several weeks.

Man Hangs Self as Wife Pleads to be 'Released'

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Apparently in fulfillment of his wife's plea that he "release her" that she might indulge her infatuation for another man, Charles J. Stratton committed suicide by hanging.

His body was found this morning in a bedroom of his brother's home, where Mrs. Stratton had left her 15-month-old baby, Betty Jane, before leaving supposedly for Eldon, Mo., where the object of her infatuation, a married man, is said to live.

THIEVES GET LIQUOR STOCK

Thieves entered the drug store operated by A. J. Rosenhouse at 6500 Santa Monica Boulevard Friday night by climbing over an open transom and carried off fifty-three pints of whisky, a report made to Hollywood police yesterday stated.

FLOOD SWEEPS TEXAS COTTON

About 15,000 Acres of Farm Land Inundated

Crews of 2000 Men Fight Raging Waters

Residents of Mexican Town Flee to Hills

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

EL PASO, Sept. 5.—Flood water from the Rio Grande this afternoon was inundating cotton fields in the vicinity of San Elizario, Socorro, Fabens and Tornillo on the American side and around Guadalupe on the Mexican side of the river, but had done no damage so far to these valley towns.

The crest of the high water is around Tornillo this afternoon. This town is about forty miles from El Paso.

Valiant efforts of about 2000 men, county employees, farm hands and reclamation workmen in building dykes and reinforcing the levees, working day and night for three days now, saved thousands of acres of lower valley cotton. The workmen, however, were unable to keep the river in its course and here and there dykes broke out and levees gave way, flooding approximately 15,000 acres of farm land.

Engineers were successful in distributing this water and by opening up drainage ditches, throwing up temporary levees and doing some blasting, have been able to scatter the water on an irrigation basis. The rapidity of the flood water was thus checked, and the fields given a hard soaking, which was not needed, but which was far better than having portions of the fields washed away and parts of the crops completely destroyed. If drainage work is effective, within three or four days a considerable amount of cotton will be spared.

RESIDENTS FLEE

Residents of the Mexican town of Guadalupe, with a population of 4000, have deserted that place, fleeing to the hills, but so far damage there has been slight, due to the distribution of waters by engineers and laborers. Crews of Mexicans worked on the Mexican side, while Americans labored on this side.

At a critical period last night, Mexicans under Valentine Onate, Federal inspector for the American government in the Guadalupe cotton fields, crossed to the American side and re-enforced the Americans. Later crews from this side re-enforced Onate's men. Big trucks are carrying men from one danger zone to another. Plantation owners, engineers and Mexican laborers are working side by side with shovels, teams and scrapers while Red Cross workers and women are providing shelter for families driven from small houses on the farms and feeding the workmen.

Inspector Onate threw his shoulder out of place using a shovel and James Haggard, another fighter, was badly cut on the legs when a dyke broke away and forced him into a barb-wire fence.

George Curry, international boundary commissioner, was on the scene today in a motor boat owned by the government. The small craft was chugging away and has been used to transport workers and to carry out families. This is the same boat in which Curry attempted to navigate the Rio Grande from El Paso to Brownsville two years ago. It had gone only a few miles when it upset and the crew barely escaped.

AGREEMENT MAINTAINED

Curry is seeing that an agreement with Mexico is maintained. That agreement is to let the head gate at Tornillo remain open. He anticipates no trouble from that source as the Mexicans, since the flood hit El Paso, have shown a disposition to co-operate with the Americans.

Reclamation officials estimate that 15,000 acres, mostly in cotton, are under water, but not necessarily ruined.

In the suburban additions to El Paso, Collingsworth, Pasadena, Alameda Acres and Ascarate, where 600 families were made homeless by the flood earlier in the week, city and county officials are making drainage plans to prevent a health menace.

These homeless have been taken care of by the Salvation Army, Red Cross and the city, largely through relief funds raised by El Paso newspapers.

HOLLYWOOD RESIDENT JAILED IN LIQUOR RAID

Edward L. Anderson, 47 years of age, 5921 Chula Vista Way, was arrested yesterday morning by Hollywood police officers on a warrant charging him with violating the Wright Act. Police under Sergt. Gruey raided the house occupied by Anderson Friday, and in the upper part reported they found a thirty-gallon liquor still, twenty gallons of whisky and a large quantity of corn mash in crocks. Anderson, at that time, declared that he leased the upper floor to another man. The arrest was made by Officers Campbell and Donlan of the Hollywood vice squad.

GYRO CLUBS OF STATE TO MEET HERE

Officers Will be Chosen in Forming District of International Body

Two hundred representatives of California Gyro clubs will gather at the Clark next Saturday and Sunday, the 12th and 13th insts., to organize the California District of Gyro International by electing officers. The meeting will be the first annual convention of the district, formation of which recently was authorized by the national organization, which is composed of sixty-two clubs.

Growth of the Gyro Clubs in California has been remarkably rapid since the inception of the Los Angeles Gyro Club, the first on the Coast, in November, 1924, according to Harry Silke, Jr., convention chairman and secretary of the local club. In December, 1924, the Long Beach Gyro Club was installed; in February, 1925, the San Francisco club completed its organization, and in October of this year, a San Diego Gyro Club will be functioning. Organization of a Pasadena club also is being completed, Mr. Silke said.

The convention will be attended by official delegates from the San Francisco, Long Beach and Los Angeles clubs and by representatives of the San Diego and Pasadena groups. Election of officers will be the principal business of the opening session Saturday morning. At noon, a typical Gyro luncheon is scheduled, with many fun stunts offered by the various clubs. Saturday evening, the first annual banquet and ball will take place at the Clark.

NEW PLANE BOTH FLIES AND SAILS

English Airmen Soon Will Test All-Metal Craft as "Eyes" of Fleet

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—An airplane, which is both a flying and a sailing ship, has just been completed for the British government and soon will be handed over to the Royal Air Force for trials, it was learned today. Special masts and sails of light material, more than 1000 square feet in all, will enable the airplane quickly to be converted into a trim sailing ship should its two 450-horsepower Napier engines fail to work and force it to descend.

The plane is expected to reduce materially the dangers of long flights over large bodies of water, and if proven successful should encourage numerous attempts to fly to the United States. Experts describe the flying boat as "very remarkable." It was designed by Dr. Rohrbach, a German engineer. Wood, wires and fabric have not been used, and the original idea is to develop the planes for open-sea reconnaissance work with the fleet. The plane is a four-seater and the whole structure is protected by a special process against the corrosive action of the sea.

Another advantage derived from the all-duralumin structure is that mechanics can walk to all parts of the plane without fear of damaging it and even while it is resting on the water, mechanics can stand on the wings and make repairs. Likewise the engines can be reached when the boat is in flight. If the tests prove satisfactory the planes, it is said, will be used as "eyes" of the British navy.

Filipinos Will Vie Tonight in Oratory Finals

Six native Filipinos will be featured in a final oratorical contest this evening in the auditorium of the Y.M.C.A., 715 South Hope street, to which the public is invited. Prizes will be awarded those adjudged most proficient, and a musical program is to be offered. Lewis A. Pier, sponsor of the Filipino Christian Fellowship, is in charge.

Preliminary tryouts were conducted last Sunday evening in the chapel of the Good Will Industries, 342 North Main street, and the following contestants were selected for the finals: Dionisio Gonzalo, "Lights and Shades;" Gregorio Diaz, "Philippines for the Filipinos;" Eligio Concepcion, "National Aspiration;" Nazario O. Confessor, "Liberty;" Raymundo E. Agcaoili, "The Jone's Law;" Primo E. Quevedo, "The Truth."

All are students in schools and colleges here, and have been in this country one to five years.

The musical numbers will be given by Daniel Mangabat, native violinist, and Mrs. A. F. Hasse. The entertainment is free.

Wash Away Pounds of Fat Double Chins and Years of Age with La-Mar Reducing Soap

Shrinks the Skin as it Dissolves the Fat

The new discovery, La-Mar reducing soap, brings quick and amazing results. No dieting, no exercising, nothing to take internally. Reduce any part of the body at will without affecting any other part. La-Mar acts like magic on double chin, big abdomen, ugly, shapeless ankles, wrists and arms, large hips or breasts, or on superfluous fat on any part of the body or all over it. It is easy and pleasant to use and absolutely harmless—cleansing, cooling, soothing and effective. La-Mar reducing soap is sold on a money-back guarantee at all good drug and department stores, or direct to you by prepaid parcel post if your dealer cannot supply you. Price 50c a cake or three cakes for $1.00; one to three cakes usually accomplish its purpose. You'll be surprised at results.

READY TO FIGHT OVER COLORADO

Upper Basin League Nearly Prepared for Fray

Organization Aim Declared Protection of Rights

Amicable Settlement With Lower States Asked

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DENVER, Sept. 5.—Organizing to protect the interests of the upper basin of the Colorado River, the Colorado River League, composed of governors and other State officials, mayors, chambers of commerce, business institutions and leading citizens throughout Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico, which has been in the process of formation for the last two months, now nearly has completed its organization, according to an announcement made in the Denver Commercial, official organ of the Denver Chamber of Commerce, and will soon be in a position to take active steps in the defense of the rights of the upper Colorado River valley.

The announcement follows the governors' conference here last Saturday, as a result of which the governors of Wyoming and Utah promised to co-operate with Gov. Morley in preventing infringement of the rights of the upper basin States.

LONG CAMPAIGN

It is the outgrowth of two months' work by the Denver Chamber of Commerce, particularly through the efforts of Dr. Fuller Swift, who traveled by auto 3000 miles, visiting the sister States in the upper basin, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming, and laying the plan before the State officials, mayors and chambers of commerce. Everywhere he went, he said, he found a widespread interest in the compact and a general expression of willingness to co-operate in the formation of the league.

The result of Dr. Swift's mission was laid before Senator Delph Carpenter, Colorado Water Commissioner, who advised Gov. Morley to call the conference, which met here last week and which assured Colorado of the co-operation of the other States in the upper basin.

The Colorado River League, according to the Denver Chamber of Commerce, the founder, is an "emergency organization, incorporated not for pecuniary benefit, with a directorate of ten men and one vice-president from each of the four States co-operating."

THREE OBJECTS

It has, it is stated, three objects: (1) To promote the ratification and approval of the Colorado River compact by all the States of the Colorado River basin and by the Congress; (2) to bring about, as a measure of self-defense, in view of the uncertainty of interstate laws as to interstate streams, concerted opposition on the part of the States which have ratified the compact to any and all Federal assistance, including reclamation work, power permits and flood control in behalf of proposed appropriation projects or flood-control projects to which appropriation rights would or might be claimed, in or for the benefit of the nonratifying States, pending the period of their failure to ratify, and (3) to seek to bring about by friendly conferences between the upper and lower basin States, and by other amicable measures, a better understanding and a more definite and fair consideration of the mutual interests of all the said States, looking to satisfactory settlement of the long-standing controversy over the equitable distribution of the waters of the Colorado River, and thereupon to Federal aid in development.

There are no fees for membership in the league. It will depend for funds upon voluntary contributions.

PREPARE OPENING OF Y.W.C.A. HEALTH CLASS

Miss Ella Stevers, director of physical education at the health center of the Y.W.C.A., 941 South Figueroa street, yesterday announced the opening of the gymnasium and swimming classes on the 24th inst. Registration for these classes begins on the 14th inst. Miss Stevers and her six assistants are prepared to take care of the ever-increasing number of women, girls and children who annually attend the health center.

Night Session to Settle Fight on Child's Custody

So bitter and long-continued has been the litigation for the custody of 7-year-old Drashna Hansard, that Judge Gates yesterday announced he would hold a night session of court next Tuesday in an effort to get the matter disposed of.

Her parents, Mrs. Mayme Hansard and Theodore Hansard, and a crowd of witnesses, have been in Judge Gates's court two days telling their complicated story of plot and counter-plot. Meantime the girl has played in the corridors and become one of the characters in the Courthouse.

Each parent charges the other with moral unfitness to be custodian of the child, and each has accused the other of kidnaping her. Pending decision she is in the care of the court, living with a neutral party.

CAR OF CHILD'S KIDNAPER FOUND

pe of Finding Girl Alive Dwindling Fast

EW YORK, Sept. 5.—Harrison, 20-year-old son of Dix W., New York lawyer, living in clair, was held tonight at po- headquarters in Montclair, J., by Chief of Police Reilly and detectives, for questioning connection with the Mary Daly case. A large crowd assembled in front of the po- station when the fact became but dispersed peacefully.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

EW YORK, Sept. 5.—The car in the kidnaping of Mary 6 years of age, was found a mile and a half from her in Montclair, N. J. anxious for his little one's fate, was in the ranks of the searching party. The child's mother continued prostrated in the Daly home at Montclair, N. J.

Chief Reilly disclosed that he is convinced that the kidnaping of the child was the result of a plot to obtain ransom from Joseph A. Bower, vice-president of the New York Trust Company. It was from the lawn of the Bower home that Mary was kidnaped while at play. The chief said that he thought the real object of the abductor was Dorothy Coates, Mr. Bower's 7-year-old niece, who had been visiting the family.

In addition he also announced that a thorough rechecking of the crime had brought to light important facts.

NEGRO TRACED

One of the first to be questioned anew was James Hanlon, proprietor of a garage and taxi stand in Verona, two miles from Montclair. Pierce worked for Hanlon at a taxicab shack, two blocks from the Daly home. They found that Pierce had worked for Hanlon up to the time of his disappearance.

Hanlon told them that at noon on Thursday, the day before the crime, he had received a telephone call from a woman for a machine to take her for a shopping tour. Hanlon said that he had business downtown himself and decided to make the trip himself. He told the detectives that he instructed Pierce to stay in the garage and take notes of all calls that came in.

The negro was specially instructed to stay in the shop and not to make any trips himself. Hanlon was gone about forty-five minutes and when he came back, Pierce and a new touring car were missing. Hanlon said he gave no thought to the circumstance, as he thought his assistance might have answered some particularly urgent call.

SECOND AUTOPSY

A second autopsy was performed today on the body of Pierce. When his body, with a bullet wound through the back of the head, was found on the bank of Peckham Creek, the police announced that he had been killed at 11 a.m. Friday, only two hours before Mary was kidnapped. Today they fixed the time of his death at between 3 and 4 o'clock on Friday morning.

They were unable to fill in the gap between the time Pierce took the car out of the garage and the time of his death. Nor were they able to pick up any clew as to what the slayer had done after disposing of his victim.

In making public these facts, the police also disclosed that a direct threat of death to Mary had been made by the man who telephoned to Mrs. Bower on the evening of the kidnaping. Mrs. Bower was called to the telephone and a man said that if $4000 were placed in a midtown Manhattan bank that night the girl would be returned unharmed. Although they were still inclined to attribute the telephone call to a crank, the police said that the telephone caller had closed his brief talk with this sentence: "If the money is not deposited, the little girl will be killed by daybreak." Mrs. Bower said today that the man seemed very self-possessed when he first began to talk. When, however, she only expressed natural concern, rather than the excitement that a mother might be expected to show in the circumstances, he seemed to become excited.

DR. SKEEL FUNERAL TUESDAY

Surgeon Who Succumbed Friday, Nationally Known Man of Los Angeles

Funeral services for Dr. Roland E. Skeel, nationally known surgeon of Los Angeles who passed away at the Covina Hospital Friday morning, will be conducted Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Church of the Flowers, Forest Lawn, Glendale.

Dr. Skeel had been disposed for some weeks prior to his death. His condition took a turn for the worse about a week ago, heart complications developing following a general toxic condition. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Alva P. Skeel, and a daughter, Mrs. H. V. Lee of San Diego. A brother, Dr. A. J. Skeel, lives in Cleveland.

Dr. Skeel received his degree of doctor of medicine from the University of Michigan in 1890, and later received his master's degrees in arts and science from his alma mater and Ohio Wesleyan University. He was eight years dean of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Cleveland, professor of gynecology at the same university and assistant clinical professor of gynecology at Western Reserve University. He was a fellow of the American Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists and Abdominal Surgeons, member of the American Medical Association, and president of the American Institute of Surgeons. He served as a medical officer in the World War from 1917 to 1919, holding the rank of major with the Fourteenth Engineers. He was a member of the local University, Athletic and Uplifters' clubs.

Dr. Brougher Given Leave of Half Year

Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, yesterday was granted six months' leave of absence for the purpose of delivering inspirational addresses throughout the country at churches of the Northern Baptist Convention.

The call to Dr. Brougher to go on the six-months' tour came from the Missionary Board of Co-operation, which met recently in New York. The request was presented to the congregation of Dr. Brougher's church by Dr. W. H. Bowler, executive secretary of the board, who made a trip here for that purpose. He was accompanied by Dr. John Earl, editor of The Baptist of Chicago.

The leave of absence was granted on the condition that a preacher qualified to fill his place can be found. If this condition is met, Dr. Brougher will start on his tour November 1.

CLUB WOMAN'S BURIAL TUESDAY

Prolonged Illness Fatal to Mrs. M. B. Flagg

Was Head of Hostess Group to State Federation

Known Also in Defense Work During World War

Funeral services will be conducted Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock from the W. A. Brown chapel, 1335 South Flower street, for Mrs. Mollie Bloom Flagg, widely known club woman of California, who died yesterday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rose B. Alexander, 1045 West Sixty-seventh street, following a prolonged illness.

Mrs. Flagg was born in Portland, Or., in 1887, and came to San Jose when 3 years of age, with her parents.

She was educated in the public schools of San Jose and was a graduate of Stanford University.

For a number of years she and her husband, J. Perry Flagg, resided in Lancaster and also in the San Joaquin Valley. As president of the San Joaquin Valley Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Flagg was at the head of the hostess group which invited 1500 women of the State federation to be their guests for a pageant given in the Yosemite during 1922.

The deceased organized the Lancaster Woman's Club and during later years had held important chairmanships in State and Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Flagg was the newly elected president of the southern section, California League of Woman Voters. She was given this office May 1, last, and intended to devote all of her energy to the work of this organization.

During the World War she was chairman of the woman's committee to the State and National Council of Defense.

Burial will be in Inglewood Park Cemetery.

DROUGHT IN EAST DIMS CROP HOPES

More Heat and Continued Lack of Rains Creating Havoc in Corn Belt

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—What had promised to be a banner crop year in the Middle West is being seriously darkened by severe and long-continued through which is shriveling corn, drying up pastures, streams and wells and making the soil too hard for fall plowing.

The Fox River Valley in Illinois, the heart of the corn belt, schools are closing, wells have run dry and crops are literally burning as they stand.

At Aurora the temperature passed the 97-deg. mark before noon.

Other Illinois cities reported similar record-breakers. Quincy and Centralia recorded maximum temperatures of 102, while the mercury climbed to 101 in Rockford. At Harrisburg, it was 106.

A foretaste of the long-awaited showers has come to parts of North Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin. More than a month of aridity, was broken in Fargo, N. D., by a quarter-inch rainfall. Rain at St. Paul lowered the temperature from 92 to 70 deg.

Most of Iowa, except at points touched by local storms, remains a seething furnace, with temperatures hovering around the 100 mark. Slight showers in Des Moines only increased the humidity.

No immediate relief seems to be in sight for Kansas, which has been cloudless since August 20.

The mercury in Chicago climbed to 94 deg. shortly after noon.

Another heat death was added to those recorded in St. Louis and one death, said to be superinduced by the heat, was reported in Paris, Ill.

Following a proclamation by Gov. McLeod of South Carolina, residents of that State will fast and pray tomorrow for a break in the drought that has wrought havoc with vegetation and caused great suffering among the inhabitants of every section.

ASSAILANT BEATEN OFF BY WOMAN

Intruder Finds Her Alone in Home and Tries to Drag Her Into Bedroom

Breaking into her home by cutting the screen on the bedroom window, a well-dressed man last night seized Mrs. Josephine Fred, 3550 Eleventh avenue, as she was seated at her piano and attempted to drag her into a bedroom.

Mrs. Fred put up a fierce struggle and after several minutes of scuffling broke from the man and ran into the street, screaming. Several neighbors ran to her aid and saw her assailant run north on Eleventh avenue and jump into an automobile.

The young woman was alone in the home at the time the man entered her home. She was not aware of his presence, she said, until he seized her from behind. Her assailant she described as a well-dressed man of about 25 years of age and weighing about 170 pounds. He had a small mustache, she said.

Hubbard Hazeltine, the American sculptor who specializes in animals, has received a commission to model all the prize-winning horses in Great Britain for a London museum.

WED SIXTY YEARS, PAIR CELEBRATE

Group of Thirty Relatives Attend Anniversary Fete of Pioneers Here

Surrounded by a group of thirty relatives, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Eade of 1806 North Wilton Place, last night celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. He is 85 and she is 77 years of age.

It was seventy years ago, just five years after Statehood, that Eade made the journey to California, traveling by boat from the east coast to the Isthmus of Panama, marching across and getting another boat on the Pacific side which carried him to California. Since that time he has made thirteen trips between the east and west coasts, two by water and the others overland.

On one of the overland trips, ten years after his first arrival in California, Eade stopped off at Galena, Ill. There he married and soon started with his bride on the long return trip to California.

Miss Lucille Eade of Hollywood, a grandchild, returned from a European trip just in time to attend the anniversary celebration. She made the trip on the steamship Majestic, one of the largest ships afloat, just as her grandfather first came to America from Cornwall, Eng., as a lad of 9 years on what was reputed to be the smallest ocean-going vessel plying between England and America.

Y.W.C.A. Envoy Leaving Today for China Post

Miss Mildred Owen of Warren, O., who was recently chosen by the local Y.W.C.A. as their representative in China, is sailing today from Seattle on the President Madison.

Mildred Owen.

Miss Owen is a graduate of the national training school for Y.W.C.A. secretaries in New York City, where she specialized in the work with the Girl Reserves. She will do this same work with Chinese girls. She goes direct to Shanghai and from there her later destination will be determined.

Miss Owen was entertained by the Blue Triangle Club of the Y.W.C.A. at a luncheon in their club rooms in Spring street before her departure for Seattle.

EIGHT FLOORS OF COMPLETE HOME FURNISHINGS

Wouldn't You Gladly Pay $3 a Year for It?

Wouldn't you gladly pay $3 a year—less than a cent a day—for the convenience and other advantages of a Thompson Concealed Lawn Sprinkling System?

Less than a cent a day to be rid of the bother of sprinkling with a hose—to be able to water your lawn as easily as you turn on a faucet—to insure uniform sprinkling and velvety green grass.

Of course, what you pay for a Thompson System depends largely on the size of the lawn. But if the system lasted only 15 years, the average home-owner wouldn't pay more than a cent a day for all that it means to him.

As to just how long it will last, no one really knows because none of these systems has ever worn out in service. We recently saw Thompson Sprinkler Heads that had been in on the job 12 years and looked good for at least 12 years more.

Send for this free booklet

It gives complete details

Actually, of course, a Thompson System costs you nothing. More than that—it pays you a profit in the savings it effects. It entirely eliminates the annual outlay for hose, which alone more than offsets the yearly cost. It reduces the water bill by cutting the waste. And it frequently means big savings in labor hire.

There is scarcely a residence lawn too small to be improved by the installation of a Thompson System. The smaller the lawn, the lower the cost—the larger the lawn, the greater the savings. Many Thompson Systems are installed with as few as a dozen sprinkler heads—others with as many as 1000 to 1500 heads.

A plumbing supply jobbing house in Vancouver, B. C. writes: "For some months past we have been looking into the matter of lawn sprinkling equipment, with a view to handling the best we could find. As a result of our investigations, we are convinced that Thompson equipment is far superior in every way to anything we have seen."

More and more building contractors and home-development concerns are installing Thompson Systems every week in the lawns of homes built for sale. They find a sprinkling system one of the important items that helps to sell the property—and the lack of it often a decided disadvantage.

Write or phone for descriptive booklet. It gives full details, and tells all about the Thompson Free-Plan Service. We prepare plans for any Thompson installation without charge. Just send us: Sketch of area to be sprinkled; exact dimensions of each grass plot; location and size of water meter; location and size of supply line; water pressure.

Thompson Concealed Lawn Sprinkling Systems are sold by plumbing and sprinkling contractors, hardware dealers, landscape architects, etc. If your dealer can't supply you, write or telephone us.

ACCIDENT VICTIM SEEKS LOST FRIEND

Word of the whereabouts of Mike Shay is requested in a letter received by The Times from Mrs. A. Dickson, 1729 Sixth street, Berkeley. She writes on behalf of a Mr. Stone, friend of Shay. Stone is in the Alameda County Hospital, San Leandro, suffering from effects of an accident and in need of friendly aid and especially wants to hear from Mr. Shay, she said. Shay was last heard of in Los Angeles.

STATE'S FIESTA DRAWS THRONGS

Felicitations from London Flashed on Screen

Big Ben's Chimes Heard at Bay City Jubilee

Carnival Spirit Rampant Through Joy Zone

field Parrish painting come to life.

At a signal from the queen the grand march began and the dance floor was soon flooded with gayly clad revelers. All of the dancers were in costume, and they had gone to every corner of the earth for inspiration. Color ran riot over the assemblage.

Seated in private boxes around the dance floor was a brilliant circle of diplomatic and society figures. Representatives of twenty-two foreign countries were there to convey the respects of their governments to California upon her seventy-fifth birthday. Society leaders, high officers from the armed forces of the United States on land and sea, celebrities in many lines, stars of stage and screen, lent their presence to the opening ball.

LIGHTS PLAY ON FLOOR

The auditorium was decorated with figured draperies, carrying out the color of the Diamond Jubilee in a hundred subtle ways. At no point were the red, yellow and green actually placed together, and yet one constantly felt their presence. Four stalwart pillars supported the proscenium arch of the stage, and the central point in the decorative scheme was the huge chandelier, from which a stream of multicolored lights played upon the dancing throng beneath.

Impressive ceremonies formally opened the ball. Through the magic of electricity Mayor Rolph received and responded to felicitations from the Lord Mayor of London. A clever device enabled these messages to be flashed upon a screen, to the wonderment of the crowd. Marvel piled upon marvel as this 7400-mile cable brought to San Francisco the sound of the chimes of the famous "Big-Ben" in the tower of the Parliament buildings in London. The formal address of dedication for the Diamond Jubilee was made by former Senator James D. Phelan.

Outside the Auditorium myriad lights were converting the Civic Center into a veritable fairyland of color. It seemed, indeed, "The Dwelling Place of Light."

CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT

Taking the eye before everything else was "El Arco De Brillantes," the crowning achievement of D'Arcy Ryan, lighting wizard, whose work is known around the world. This arch, set with 75,000 gleaming jewels, stands at the entrance to the Civic Center, and as the lights play upon it, the whole structure seems alive with radiance.

Flood lights throw the dome of the City Hall into high relief against the velvet of a California evening sky, and all of the buildings in the Civic Center are similarly brought into prominence by flood-lighting effects. Tonight there was a band concert and a display of fireworks to precede the first turning on of all the lights.

While beauty, society and officialdom danced at the opening ball, there was more informal entertainment for visiting thousands on the Joy Zone, set up by the steamship executive committee on a mile and a half of San Francisco's famous embarcadero.

Here the carnival spirit was rampant, and 1000 varied attractions served to divert the visitor. Activities at the joy zone had their fountain head in the "Danza," which is to be a nightly feature throughout the celebration. The old ferry postoffice has been remodeled into a dancing pavilion, and one of the finest orchestras in the city supplies the music. The nightly dances are held under the patronage of a group of society women, headed by Mrs. Hoyt Lesher, Mrs. James Rolph, Jr., and Mrs. J. J. Tynan.

The joy zone, whose formal title is the "Embarcadero Fiestagrande," was opened this afternoon with ceremonies in front of the building in which the danza is held. The principal speaker of the occasion was Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, who was introduced by the newly appointed head of the State Harbor Commission.

SPECIAL FEATURES

The joy zone will be open every day and night during the celebration. It is designed to furnish recreation to those who are unable to get into the more formal events on the Jubilee program, and to furnish continuous entertainment to fill the gaps in the regular program. Its whole manner is informal, and some of the spectacular features will include special band concerts, fireworks displays, carnival processions and "the feast of the lanterns," to be staged by the decorated boats of San Francisco's fishing fleet.

The first parade of the Diamond Jubilee was held this morning. This parade moved up Market street to call attention to the automobile races at Tanforan tomorrow afternoon. In the line of march were Barney Oldfield, Harry Hartz, Eddie Hearne and many other famous racing drivers. There also was an exhibit of various primitive methods of conveyance that traced the history of transportation from the time that California was voted into the union until the present day.

General Ballot Called to Solve Canadian Issues

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

RICHMOND HILL (Ont.) Sept. 5.—Dissolution of the fourteenth Canadian Parliament was announced by Premier King in an address to his constituents here today. The date of the resultant general elections is understood to be October 29, next.

The Premier gave four reasons which he considers make an appeal to the electorate necessary—problems of transportation, income, taxation and the question of the Senate. These can be handled only by a House of Commons with a fresh mandate from the country, the Premier said, and by a government supported by a substantial majority in the House.

HOLIDAY FETES ARRANGED

Public Offices and Stores Will Be Closed While Populace Picnics and Vies in Sport

Labor Day will be observed in Los Angeles and throughout Southern California tomorrow with picnics, speechmaking and many varied programs.

Federal, State, county and city offices will be closed, as well as the main library and all branch libraries. The large downtown stores and many business establishments in the outlying sections of the city also will observe the holiday.

At Selig Zoo an elaborate Labor Day program will start at 10 o'clock in the morning and continue until night. A. H. Mitcheson, president of the general Labor Day committee, will open the formal program at 2 o'clock.

Robert M. Clark, former president of the California Bar Association, will be among the principal speakers. Others who will address the assemblage are Luis N. Morones, president of the Mexican Federation of Labor and Secretary of Labor and Commerce in President Calles's Cabinet, and Stanley B. Wilson.

A program of sports, dancing band concerts will follow the addresses.

At Long Beach, Mayor Cryer of Los Angeles will be the chief speaker at a picnic and get together assembly.

The Labor Day celebration in Pasadena will be held at Brookside Park in the Arroyo Seco. A baseball game will be the feature of this celebration which will be in the form of a picnic. Band concerts and speeches will follow the ball game. The baseball contest has been called for 10:30 a.m. In the afternoon a program including field events and water sports will be conducted. The evening program will feature dancing and band concerts. Joshua B. Dale of Vallejo will be the principal speaker.

The Pana, Ill., association will hold its midsummer picnic at Exposition Park.

Los Angeles to be Mayorless on Wednesday

Acting Mayor Workman will leave Los Angeles by train Tuesday evening for San Francisco, where he will take part with Mayor Cryer in Wednesday's California Diamond Jubilee parade, and will return to Los Angeles so as to assume his duties as Acting Mayor on Thursday morning.

Los Angeles will therefore be Mayorless next Wednesday, but as this is Admission Day and the City Hall and all city offices will be closed there will be no official business for the acting Mayor to transact. Should an extreme emergency arise the acting Mayor could return to the city from San Francisco in a few hours by airplane.

There will be no session of the City Council tomorrow, Tuesday or Wednesday, as Monday and Wednesday are holidays, and there will not be a quorum of the Councilmen in the city on Tuesday. Councilmen Hall, Criswell and Colden took advantage of the holidays to make an inspection trip of the Owens River Valley Aqueduct, and others of the Councilmen will be absent from the city.

OLD MAN'S SKELETON DUG UP BY WORKMAN

Buried four feet under the ground, a complete skeleton was unearthed late Friday on the site of the old Ascot Speedway by a laborer digging a sewer runway, according to a report made to the police yesterday. The skeleton was found by Gregoria Lucenna, 216 East Eighty-second street, in front of 813 East Seventy-eighth street, where a Chinese had formerly been located. According to Detective Lieutenants Dryden and Condaffer, who investigated the discovery, the skeleton was evidently that of an old man and had been in the ground for more than five years. The Coroner was notified and the bones later were removed to the H. McCormick undertaking company, 4100 Central avenue. Small boys who flocked to the scene of the discovery yesterday shattered the skull when they dropped it on the rocks. Detectives stated there were no marks which could identify the skeleton nor were there any marks to indicate a death of violence.

IRON MANUFACTURER SUED FOR DIVORCE

Michael Ferentzy, iron manufacturer, was sued for divorce yesterday by his wife, Anna Ferentzy, who charged cruelty. She said her husband's plant is worth $50,000. Ferentzy, his wife complained, has been paying lavish attentions to May Hodges since August 1, last. She charged, among other things, that he bought Miss Hodges a fur coat and allowed her to drive a car he had bought as a birthday present for his wife.

HALTS CAR FOR KISSES, PAYS FINES

Motorist Who Delayed Police Chief by Spooning Finds it Expensive

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BURLINGTON (Vt.) Sept. 5.—John W. Lane of Newtonville, Mass., while traveling in Vermont found that kisses were worth $12.50 each. Lane, driving his car, accompanied by a woman, stopped in the middle of a hill in the city of Winooski. Behind him happened along Charlie Barber, police Chief, who was forced to stop behind the Lane car. Again further down the hill the Lane car held up the Winooski officer and then sped through the city at a forty-mile clip, unaware that the car in the rear bore the city's police Chief.

A mile outside of the city, Lane was ordered to stop by the officer, and in City Court, when asked why he stopped on the hill, told the court that he wanted to kiss his girl. He advanced the same excuse for the second stop, whereupon the judge declared: "It'll cost you $12.50 a kiss." Lane paid his fine and was released.

ARIZONA WILL HAVE FOUR NEW RESORTS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, Sept. 5.—The Arizona Hotel and Transportation Company, a new organization in which the McArthur brothers of this city are prominent, plans construction of four tourist resorts, at a gross cost of $1,200,000. Near Phoenix is to be the central establishment, to be built on the style of a Mexican hacienda, with a golf course and polo grounds. This is to be open winters, the operating force transferred of summers to a log-built lodge near Flagstaff, while hunting lodges will be established at Pine, in Northern Tonto Basin, near the Natural Bridge, and in the White Mountains.

STATE LAUDED BY PRESIDENT

Coolidge Message Marks Opening of Fair

Annual Event Addresed by Gov. Richardson

Capital City Plays Host to Jubilee Envoys

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 5. — With the city garbed in holiday attire and under sunny skies, the seventy-first annual California State Fair opened today to continue until Sunday, the 13th inst.

Shortly after the gates were opened at 10 o'clock, Gov. Richardson appeared at the grounds to welcome 200 editors from all parts of the State, who came to participate in the Press Association Day program. The Governor acted as toastmaster at a luncheon given the editors at noon.

JUBILEE FEATURES

Early today a delegation of officials and citizens of San Francisco arrived to take part in the Diamond Jubilee features of the day.

The delegation was headed by Clay Miller, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

Today, also was children's day at the exposition, and thousands of youngsters, admitted free, thronged the grounds and did things up brown. A freckled-face contest proved a big hit with the kiddies.

One of the big events of the afternoon program was the receipt by Gov. Richardson of a message from President Coolidge, congratulating California on its seventy-fifth anniversary, delivered by Thomas P. Henry and Ernest N. Smith, officials of the American Automobile Association. Henry and Smith carried the President's message across the continent by auto, arriving here this morning.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The President's message follows:

Lynn, Mass., Aug. 13.—

My dear Gov. Richardson:

On the occasion of the opening of the celebration in honor of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the admittance of the State of California to the Union, I wish to send my congratulations to the government and people of the empire State of the Pacific-West.

The history of California has been one long romance of human adventure and achievement from the earliest beginning of the settlement by white men in this continent. Indeed, one cannot but wonder if any other like community has had so appealing and fascinating an historical story. The State stands today as one of the foremost strongholds of Occidental civilization and culture fronting the world's greatest ocean. Its past, its present, and its manifestly assured future, justify every confidence that it will maintain that distinguished rank hereafter.

Most sincerely yours,
[Signed]
CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Tonight an elaborate pageant, depicting outstanding periods of California history was present under the direction of J. N. Reid of the Chamber of Commerce.

Keep your childern off the streets.

Do not let them play with any child or adult who is not entirely well.

Keep sick persons who do not belong in your family out of your house.

Make sure that hands are thoroughly washed before eating.

If a child or adult in your family appears to be sick or complains of not feeling well immediately separate that person from the rest of the family, and allow no visitors to enter the house.

SATURDAY FREE OF PARALYSIS CASES

No new cases of infantile paralysis were reported in Los Angeles yesterday, according to an official statement issued by City Health Officer George Parrish. The official record at the City Health Department shows that the number of cases reported daily last week was as follows: Sunday, none; Monday, none; Tuesday, none; Wednesday, five; Thursday, three, Friday, none, and Saturday, none.

The official total for the preceding week was seven, one less than was reported on the two days last week when eight cases were quarantined. The total for the month to date is eight cases, and the total for the year to date is 175 cases. The official total for last month was fifty-one cases, thirteen less than were reported the previous month.

Se Han Perdido las Esperanzas de Rescate

SAN FRANCISCO, Septiembre 5. Los funcionarios del ministerio de Marina habían perdido hoy casi toda esperanza de poder salvar a los tripulantes del PN-9 No. 1, que cayeron al agua hace cinco días, casi al terminar la travesía entre este puerto y las islas Hawai.

Hoy se había reanimado la esperanza, debido a que uno de los barcos exploradores avisó que había visto señales luminosas que procedían de la región por donde debería andar flotando el hidroplano, si estuviera intacto. Pero el pesimismo volvió a reinar cuando, después de haber explorado por dicha región, no se encontró nada.

Los Estados Unidos Exigirán Firmemente el Pago de las Deudas de Guerra

NUEVA YORK, Septiembre 5.—Después de siete años de escaramuzas diplomáticas para retardar el pago de los empréstitos de guerra hechos por los Estados Unidos, se ve ya la perspectiva de que comiencen los pagos en serio. Joseph Caillaux, el brillante ministro de Hacienda francés va a venir encabezando una delegación de peritos franceses para discutir en firme, en Washington, el problema de la consolidación de la deuda de su país. Italia, Rumanía, y otros países van a responder a las demandas de la administración norteamericana, que les ha significado que suspendan las evasivas y comparezcan ante la ventanilla del cajero cobrador. De Washington nos viene el informe de que el gobierno espera que todos nuestros deudores lleguen a arreglos definitivos para el pago de sus deudas, antes de que el congreso abra sus sesiones.

Terrible Incendio en Shreveport

SHREVEPORT (Louisiana) Septiembre 5.—Poco después de una serie de misteriosas rupturas en las cañerías de agua de la ciudad, arrasó hoy un desastroso incendio nueve de las manzanas de residencias de esta población, dejando sin hogar a más de mil personas, y causando daños materiales que se estiman en más de $500,000. Las autoridades de la ciudad no han podido explicarse cómo se produjeron tres graves rupturas en las cañerías de agua que surtían de este líquido al área damnificada, y se limitan a decir que dichas cañerías tuvieron que ser reparadas antes de que los bomberos pudieran contener el avance de las llamas.

Se Ordena la Autopsia de un Indio Muerto Sospechosamente

El capitán de detectives Worley, de la policía de Long Beach, ordenó que se practicara la autopsia de Emory Roe, rico indio de Oklahoma, de 27 años de edad, y que se abriera una encuesta para determinar la causa de su muerte, pues ha habido revelaciones de que este individuo bebió licor que le dieron supuestos enemigos suyos, dos días antes de su misteriosa muerte.

La revelación le fué hecha al capitán Worley por un amigo del indio, cuyo nombre se mantiene en reserva, por desearlo así el informante, pues cree éste que de dárselo a conocer, le vendría peligro de muerte.

Grandes Muchedumbres en la Exposición del Radio

La tercera exposición anual nacional de Radio abrió sus puertas ayer tarde en el auditorio del hotel Ambassador. 265 son las casas de Sudcalifornia y Arizona que han enviado exhibiciones al citado certamen, consistentes en nuevos descubrimientos y nuevo equipo radiotelegráfico y radiotelefónico, que por primera vez se ponen a la vista del público. Hay innumerables aparatos ingeniosísimos, que ponen de manifiesto los grandes pasos que ha dado la ciencia y la industria del radio.

Mucho antes de que se abrieran las puertas del pequeño teatro, aguardaba ya una gran multitud, que formaba largas filas en los corredores del hotel Ambassador, y esperaba tener oportunidad de presencia las ceremonias de apertura.

Es ya General la Rebaja de Precio de la Gasolina

Siguiendo el ejemplo de la Panamericana y de otras grandes compañías distribuidoras de gasolina, la Standard Oil Company redujo ayer el precio de este líquido en Los Angeles, Long Beach y las poblaciones de los aledaños, a dieciséis y medio centavos el galón. Tuvo que responder de ese modo a la baja de dos centavos iniciada por sus competidores.

Spiritualists Pick Angeleno for President

Officers for the ensuing year were elected yesterday afternoon by the California State Spiritualists' Association in the thirtieth annual convention in Symphony Hall, 232 South Hill street.

Those elected were Fred E. Stivers, Los Angeles, president; Mary C. Vlasek, Los Angeles, first vice-president; Frank Brown, Oakland, second vice-president; Idella McFarline, secretary, and Frank Mickley, treasurer.

The directors elected include Rufus Fisk of San Jose; Agnes Secord, Alameda; H. P. Courtney, Los Angeles, and L. L. Cannon of San Diego.

Fred E. Stivers was elected delegate to the national convention at Milwaukee, October 20 to 28, inclusive. Harold P. Courtney will act as alternate.

The convention will close tonight with the installation of the newly elected officers by H. C. W. Johnson, past president of the organization.

The 1926 convention will be conducted in Oakland during the first week of September.

HYLAN ECLIPSED BY SMITH FIGHT

Governor and Hearst Hold Center of Arena

Republicans See Victory in Democratic Split

Struggle for City Control Bitterest in History

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5. — The choice of a Mayor of Greater New York City for the next four years has now become purely incidental to the determination whether Gov. Smith, with Tammany at his back, or William Randolph Hearst, with his newspaper following, is to dominate the Democratic party in the dominating corner of the Empire State.

With Gov. Smith and Hearst both violently erupting their opinions of each other and holding up to public view the seamy side of recent political history, the one in daily speeches in the city, the other through his journals, the public almost has lost sight of the candidates for the Democratic nomination—State Senator James J. Walker, indorsed by Smith and Tammany, and Mayor Hylan, who seeks a third term under the Hearst banner.

The hardest boiled, most cynical viewers of political contests and machinations have never before witnessed the like of crimination and recrimination, like Pelion on Ossa piled in this bitterest and most desperate of struggles for control of a city and can only wonder to what state it is likely to reduce the Democratic party.

THREE OTHER CANDIDATES

No longer are the enrolled Democrats so much concerned as to whether their Mayor is to be Walker or Hylan as they are whether Smith or Hearst is to be the power behind the throne. If Hylan is renominated the Governor of the State will be repudiated by his own party in his home town—than which no political repudiation can be more humiliating—and the Tammany Tiger will be made to bite the dust in his first fight since Charles F. Murphy died and the Tammany leadership passed to Al Smith and George Olvaney. If Walker is nominated the Governor will be vindicated and given a handsome indorsement of his leadership at home to add to other evidences of popularity while Hearst will be impressively repudiated by the party in which he generally manages to keep at least one foot.

So, with the Democrats of this town at this juncture it has come down to a question of whether you are for Al or for Hearst. If you are for Al you will vote for Al's candidate—Walker—and if you are for Hearst you will vote for Hearst's candidate—Hylan.

If the public has almost lost sight of the Democratic candidates it is likewise true that it scarcely has had time between the onslaughts of Gov. Smith and Hearst upon each other and the daily bringing forth of more Democratic dirty linen to wash—it scarcely has had time to notice that there are three candidates for the Republican nomination— Frank D. Waterman, the millionaire manufacturer of fountain pens who was indorsed by the Republican organization, and William M. Bennett and John J. Lyons, each of whom is challenging organization leadership.

The Republican contest, however, is merely a sideshow to the main performance under the Democratic big top. The Republicans are virtually marking time until it is seen whether their opponent, emerging from the primary balloting the 15th inst., is Senator Walker or Mayor Hylan. And in the current period of uncertainty as to the outcome of the Democratic contest the Republican candidates and managers are playing safe by attributing the authorship of the sad conditions from which they would rescue the city impartially to Hearst, Hylan and Tammany. They are all guilty, say the Republicans, and the only sure cure for the city's ills is to turn the Democrats out and put in Republicans.

"Go it Smith, Go it Hearst," is the tenor of the enthusiastic cries heard arising from the Republican sidelines. How on earth there can be anything more than a tuft of fur left in the Democratic ring after this fracas, Charles D. Hilles, Republican National Committeeman; Sam D. Koenig, New York county chairman, and other G.O.P. leaders cannot imagine.

Hylan, with Tammany support, was re-elected four years ago by the largest plurality on record, but with internecine war in the Democratic tribe the Republicans think the story will be far different this time. They are certain that if Hylan should be renominated he would be slaughtered by Tammany and that if Walker should win the Hearst crowd would bolt, making it simply "pie" for the Republican candidate.

STAKE IS LARGE

Whoever wins the game will control the city's expenditures of $400,000,000 a year, a budget many times larger than that of any State in the Union and only a little less than one-seventh of what the nation annually spends. Sustenance and rich pickings for the pay-roll politicians here.

No less interesting are the ultimate stakes for which Gov. Smith and Hearst and the Republican leaders are playing. The Governor, there is no doubt, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1928, if not for Senator next year. Likewise, it is not doubted that if Hearst triumphs in this contest his ambition to rule from the White House will flower anew, and that he might take it into his head to try for the Senate next year in order to gain a stepping stone to higher preferment. That was what he was believed generally to have had in view in 1922, when he sought the Democratic nomination for either Governor of New York or Senator and was so brutally thrust aside by Smith, who took the nomination for Governor when he didn't want it, just to keep Hearst from getting it and then served an ultimatum that he would not run on the same ticket with Hearst for Senator. Once again Hearst's perennial ambition was thwarted.

EASING BURDEN OF STATE TAXES

Banker Points Out Benefits of Community System

California Slices Federal Death Taxes in Half

In Florida Whole Estate is Subject to Levy

Favorable aspects of tax systems are now among the most highly prized assets of our States, it is pointed out in the American Bankers' Association Journal in connection with an article on how California, which has never had a State income tax, cuts State and Federal death taxes nearly in half by the "community property" system. L. H. Roseberry, vice-president Security Trust and Savings Bank, Los Angeles, author of the article, says that a recent amendment to the tax law enables future residents of the State to take advantage of it. Reference is made to a former article by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Dewey, voicing the need for death tax reform and citing a hypothetical case involving California inheritance taxes which might have been levied in 1920. Since that time the laws have been changed, Mr. Roseberry declares, so that the figures then given do not correctly represent the present situation. He says:

"Ever since its admission California has had the 'community property' system. Eight other States have a similar system. 'Community property' is property accumulated by married persons during their marriage, except that which is acquired by gift, bequest or inheritance. Approximately 65 per cent of all property in the State is 'community property.' Such property in California enjoys the most favorable position in regard to death taxes, both State and Federal, of any State in the Union (excepting possibly the eight other States having a similar property system) including States boasting of no inheritance tax whatever. The California 'community property' system is recognized for the purpose of levying Federal estate taxes, and only one-half of it is now so taxed, while in Florida the whole estate of a decedent is subject to the Federal levy.

HOW THE LAW WORKS

"California's law expressly provides that upon the death of either husband or wife, testate, only one-half of their net 'community property' shall be subject to inheritance taxes. The same exemption applies upon the death of the husband, intestate, while the whole net 'community property' is totally exempt from all State inheritance taxation upon the death of the wife, intestate. The Federal estate tax law now follows precisely the California law in this respect.

AN ILLUSTRATION

"As the result of an amendment made to the California inheritance tax law by the 1925 Legislature, this immunity from State inheritance taxes likewise now extends to 'community property' of nonresident married persons, who hereafter take up their legal residence in the State. This puts 'community property' in a more favorable position regarding death taxes than exists in any other State in the Union, with the possible exception of the other community property States. This extension of the exemption will add 15 per cent to property in the State coming under this definition, which means that approximately 80 per cent of all property probated in California will enjoy the lightest death taxes in America.

"To illustrate, the following example of a man survived by a wife and two minor children is computed, the estate consisting of 'community property' all left by will to the wife and children. One-half of such property would go under the law to the wife without any death taxes, and the other half only would be subject to both State inheritance and Federal estate taxes.

"As a subject of comparison, take a State which has no inheritance tax, such as Florida. If the comparison were made with the States which impose inheritance taxes, but do not have the 'community property' system, the advantage in favor of California would be even more striking.

Estate of $100,000	Total Tax
California	None
Noninheritance-tax State	$500
Advantage in favor of California	500
Estate of $200,000
California	995
Noninheritance-tax State	3,000
Advantage in favor of California	2,005
Estate of $400,000
California	5,780
Noninheritance-tax, State	13,000
Advantage in favor of California	7,220
Estate of $10,000,000
California	1,249,155
Noninheritance-tax State	2,543,500
Advantage in favor of California	1,294,345

"If the two children were adults, the California tax would be increased only $280 in each case."

WET SUPPLY SOURCE OF HANFORD RAIDED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HANFORD, Sept. 5.—Sheriff Himes thinks he and a posse yesterday found the source and stopped the supply of liquor which has been finding its way into this city at the George Mack ranch, southwest of and close to Hanford. They found forty gallons of what appears to be jackass brandy of a very vile character. The still in which the liquor had been made was moved away a few hours before the raid, so it is presumed the owner thought a raid was coming. Carl Johnson, 25 years of age, was taken to jail on a charge of possession of the liquor.

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

The Superior Oil Company yesterday began hauling material for its wildcat well in Belvedere Gardens which is to start actual drilling not later than the 18th inst., according to officials of the company. The well will be located at Third street and Pasadena avenue.

The Superior has completed one of the most intensive leasing campaigns in the history of California. Over 2000 town lots have been signed up in five community leases, which oil men declare is a most remarkable achievement in leasing. It is understood that 800 of these lots are in a single lease.

The difficulty in town-lot operations has always rested in getting a large number of owners to agree on a single plan of development. As a rule every lot owner wants a well on his own lot, and is unwilling to enter an arrangement whereby his lot becomes a part of a large lease, on which he gets only a part of the royalty. Usually the problem is complicated by promoters who dangle before the eyes of the lot owner the vision of a great well in his backyard, pouring thousands of dollars a day into his pocket.

This well-known characteristic of a town-lot area has been the deterring factor which has caused other operators to shy from Belvedere Gardens, although geologists are almost unanimous in the opinion that the district presents every possibility as an oil field.

Rejuvenate Wonder Well

The Marine Corporation, whose No. 7 well at Signal Hill has been the greatest producing well in the greatest oil field in the country, is preparing to put its record-breaking producer back on production. The well has produced nearly 2,500,000 barrels of oil, and when it went off production about two weeks ago, was still doing 2500 barrels a day, two years after completion.

At present the well is being cleaned out with cable tools, and indications are that when it resumes production, it will not show much of a decline under its old rate of output.

Set Surface Pipe

The Petroleum Securities Company has set surface casing at 600 feet in its wildcat well, the Narbonne No. 1, south of the Torrance field, on the north line of the Palos Verdes Hills. The well was spudded in early last week, and made good progress, but the surface formations were so soft that there was considerable danger of caving, and to prevent this complication, the Pan American decided to set the surface string, although as a rule this is generally set at between 800 and 1200 feet.

McAdoo Starts Well

W. G. McAdoo, Jr., son of the former Secretary of the Treasury, is preparing to start a well in the Newhall district. Work has been started on a derrick, which is partially completed. The project is located on acreage owned by the Republic Petroleum Corporation.

McAdoo has been interested in oil operations for several years. He put down one well at Wheeler Ridge near the Standard Oil Company's holdings, and reported encouraging showings at various depths, but after standing idle for nearly a year, the well was abandoned a few weeks ago. He also was interested in a well at Signal Hill.

Hold Oil Classes

Courses for oil men will again be given this year at the University of California extension division. A class in petroleum field technology or refining, as the students voice a preference, will be given Wednesday, the 16th inst., from 6 to 8 in Room 4, Woodbury Building. Siegfried Fischer, formerly of the Colorado School of Mines, who has given these courses here for the last few years, will again conduct these classes.

Another course in lubrication, with a student option for the subject of fractional distillation, will meet that same day and place from 8 to 10 in the evening. Further information will be given at 815 South Hill street.

SURPLUS GAS CAUSE OF CUT

Price Reduction Laid to Huge Stocks and Continued Heavy Production as Consumption Drops

BY CARL P. MILLER

The recent sharp reduction in the price of gasoline, which became universal throughout Los Angeles, Long Beach and surrounding territories yesterday when Standard Oil was the last to fall in line and meet the cut inaugurated by Pan American the day previous, was brought about through the failure on the part of the industry to reduce surplus stocks of this product at a time when the gasoline consumption period is at its height. California is favored by being a locality where more petroleum is produced than is required to supply the current demand. The surplus is either stored or shipped to eastern markets.

The coming winter season is one of minimum consumption of gasoline, and during that season lower prices usually exist in the Eastern States. This year the lower prices in eastern markets have been brought about earlier than usual due to the heavy movement of petroleum and refined products from California fields.

COAST OIL FACTOR

There are no territorial lines restricting the movement of oil, and consequently, like water, it finds its own level by draining a surplus from the higher points to the lower, and stabilizes supply and demand. An excess or deficiency on the Pacific Coast has a direct bearing on prices in the Atlantic States. This was illustrated during the years 1923 and 1924 when the three new fields in the Los Angeles Basin were flooding California with crude, resulting in approximately 95,000,000 barrels being shipped through the Panama Canal and refined at Atlantic ports.

Stocks of gasoline and tops in California, during the same period, increased from 3,000,000 barrels to more than 20,000,000 barrels, but it was not until recently that shipments of this commodity to Atlantic ports were in sufficient quantities to directly influence prices in that section. California refiners became tired of the burden of carrying huge stocks and evidently decided to reduce them by heavy shipments to eastern markets, especially since the reduction in output of California crude has failed to materialize and deeper sands lend fear of overproduction for months to come.

SHIPMENTS EAST

Since the first of the year more than 7,000,000 barrels of gasoline have been shipped from California fields into the eastern markets and present shipments are close to 2,000,000 barrels a month, and still stocks in storage failed to show a material decrease. It is evident that this situation, arising at a time when consumption is at its peak, with the usual decreasing demand in the East during the fall and winter months, has commanded the attention of the refiners of this section and was instrumental in bringing about the sharp reduction in this territory.

The Bureau of Mines reports that during July, production of gasoline in California was 152,641,553 gallons, an increase of 7,819,528 gallons, or 5.4 per cent, over the previous month. Stocks of gasoline decreased 28,577,136 gallons during the month, but total storage on the last day of July was still at the enormous figure of 387,355,469 gallons.

EFFECT OF CUT

Just what effect the reduction in the price of gasoline will have on the earnings of the refiners and distributing companies is of much concern to the investors in the stocks of these companies. The reduction of 2 cents in the price of gasoline from 18½ to 16½ cents means a reduction of 2 cents in the net profit to the refinery, because the cost of manufacturing, delivering and distributing stations, retail costs and State tax remain unchanged, and the difference between the sum of all these costs and the sale price represents the margin of profit.

E. L. Doheny, head of the Pan American interests, in a statement discussing the reasons underlying the Pan American's price reduction and the effect it would have on the industry, said:

"The reduction of 2 cents may mean, with some refineries and with some grades of oil, a sacrifice of nearly 100 per cent of the profit. With the best appointed refinery and the most economical grade of crude oil secured at the present market price, it means a sacrifice of more than 50 per cent of the profit."

Prepare Guide to Aid Bankers in Investments

Arch W. Anderson, vice-president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, left yesterday for Atlantic City, where, as a delegate to the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association, beginning on the 28th ist., he will play an important part in the preparation of a report which savings bank executives may use as a reference book in the matter of investments for the funds of savings banks throughout the nation.

The project is being handled by the committee on investments of the savings banks division of the association. All members of the committee have contributed their ideas to a report which will be considered on the floors the first morning of the convention. Mr. Anderson will lead and have charge of the discussion.

If the report is adopted by the convention after the discussion it will be issued by the association in booklet form and be regarded as authoritative on the subject, and will contain a complete classification of all investments suitable for savings banks funds. The report covers real estate mortgage loans, utility bonds, industrial bonds, railroad bonds, bankers' acceptances and commercial paper.

DEFICIT IN RESERVES OF CLEARING BANKS

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The actual condition of clearinghouse banks and trust companies for the week shows a deficit in reserve of $18,517,270. This is a decrease in reserve of $18,897,810 compared with last week when excess reserve of $380,540 was reported.

UTILITY EARNINGS SHOW GAIN

Operating Revenue of Steam Railroads Less Than Year Ago; Increase Made in Income of Telephone and Telegraph Companies in State

Public utilities, under the supervision of the Railroad Commission, numbering 1819, earned a grand total of $892,935,989.76 during the calendar year of 1924, as against $890,351,740.52 for the year 1923, according to the annual report of the department of finance and accounts, filed with the Railroad Commission by W. C. Fankhauser, head of that department.

These figures include the total earnings of utilities which operate outside the State, as well as in California, the amount allocated to California business being $498,123,521.99. The increase in operating revenue on all business of these utilities amounts to $2,584,249.24. Operating expenses of the utilities increased during 1924, $15,276,895.86, being $653,725,786.28 in 1924, as against $638,448,890.42 in 1923.

Owing largely to the decrease in the net operative revenue of steam railroads, the net operating revenue of the utilities decreased $12,692,646.62, the total net revenue being $239,210,203.48, as against $251,902,850.10 in 1923, and $215,268,092.98 in 1922.

The earnings of steam railroads, for entire systems, both inside and outside California, for 1924, were $452,332,555.03, and net operating expenses $331,259,110.93, leaving a net operating revenue of $121,073,444.10, as compared with net operating revenues of $139,199,652.21 for 1923, and $118,743,543.39 for 1922.

Steam railroads operating within the State of California have allocated the sum of $176,800,370.68 of their revenues to California business in 1924, as against $132,960,471.14 operating expenses, allocated to California. The net operating revenues for California business in 1924 is given at $43,839,899.54 as compared with $54,056,119.80 for 1923, and $46,722,508.57 for 1922.

Telephone and telegraph companies reported operating revenues of $176,213,310.25, as compared with $168,507,819.75 for 1922, an increase of $7,705,490.50. These figures include the entire system earnings, but the report of the Western Union Telegraph Company, showing a total revenue of $112,861,555.25, allocated to California $7,502,182. The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company with total operating revenues of $44,140,217.17, allocated $30,319,307 to California. Operating expenses allocated to California are not available to the commission at this time.

LOW DEATH PER CENT ON RAIL LINES

Fatalities for 1924 Given as 149 Out of 931,000,000 Passengers Carried

A person is much safer today on a passenger train than he is on the streets of any of the large cities of the United States or even in his home, according to S. T. Bledsoe, general counsel of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway system, who, in a statement, shows that out of the 931,000,000 passengers carried by the railroads in 1924, only 149 were killed.

This was equivalent to transporting over eight times the population of the entire United States, or one passenger killed out of each 6,000,000 riding on the trains.

On the other hand the automobiles were responsible in 1924 for enormous death list on streets and highways. The following cities had the greatest number of deaths from automobile accidents:

Philadelphia, one killed out of each 7400.
New York, one out of each 7100.
Boston, one out of each 5900.
Chicago, one out of each 5400.
St. Louis, one out of each 4500.
Pittsburgh, one out of each 4300.
Cleveland, one out of each 4200.
Detroit, one out of each 3700.
Los Angeles, one out of each 3100.

Commenting upon these figures, he says:

"Los Angeles' mortality accident rate is the result, to some extent, of the 100,000 tourists and visitors constantly within its limits, many of whom drive their own automobiles, and a substantial number of whom are not familiar with traffic problems and dangers of city driving.

"The above cities are not the horrible examples of automobile accidents, but are intended to present a reasonably fair reflection of average conditions.

"It is the constant, continuous and persistent effort of the officers and employees of the railroads to make passenger traffic safe."

REDLANDS DECEMBER WEDDING ANNOUNCED

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

REDLANDS, Sept. 5.—One of the surprise weddings of the season was that of Jennie Maye Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Howard, and Frank Frye, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexis E. Frye, both socially prominent. It was announced they had been married since December 20, last. Mr. Frye is a senior at Stanford and is the son of the author of the geography used as a text-book in countries all over the world. Miss Howard is a charming young woman and the daughter of one of the largest orange growers here.

MANY PLANES TO AID IN AIR FIELD OPENING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TUCSON, Sept. 5.—Fifty airplanes are expected here November 1, next, at the time of the dedication of the Tucson aviation field. Capt. Walter Bender and Lieut. Douglas of Fort Bliss, El Paso, members of the Twelfth Aero Squadron, have conferred with the local committee and are helping in the preparation of a program of air events, this in company with Maj. Reynolds of Fort Bliss.

SUPPLY MONEY AT LOWER RATE

Land Banks to Furnish More Financing for Farms

Plan to Borrow from Public by Sale of Bonds

Funds Available Are Greater Than Ever Before

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

COLORADO SPRINGS (Colo.) Sept. 5.—At the closing session of the seventh annual convention of the American Association of Joint Stock Land Banks, a program was formulated which the delegates from fifty-six Joint Stock Land Banks anticipate will increase by several hundreds of millions of dollars the supply of money which will be available for farm requirements at lower interest rates. Representatives of the United States government, which is closely studying the agricultural credit situation, gave counsel as to the best ways and means of amplifying the amount of money which each year may be loaned to responsible farmers.

Under the plan, the Joint Stock Land Banks expect to borrow money from the public through the sale of wholly tax-exempt bonds at 4½ per cent. This money in turn will be loaned by them at 5½ per cent. Both interest rates represent a concession of ½ of 1 per cent under present prevailing levels.

Robert A. Cooper, farm loan commissioner, told the delegates that "for the first time in the history of the United States there is now an abundance of money obtainable for any farmer who has productive land, a reasonable knowledge of his business, and a reputation for paying his debts." This condition, which he attributed in large measure to the successful operation of the Federal farm loan system and supplementary institutions, was believed by him to insure "prosperity for the farmer—a kind of prosperity he never has known before—and a degree of prosperity which will be limited only by his ability to use with advantage the money he obtains."

According to Dr. David Friday, unofficial governmental adviser on agricultural problems, the supply of loanable funds is now ample and will continue so. "There is every likelihood that the supply of capital will flow to the investment market in a comparatively steady stream during the next three or four years," he said. "Nothing but a continuous demand for capital can keep interest rates at their present level and any slackening of demand will send interest rates down and bond prices up."

In his concluding address, Guy Huston, president of the association, said, "We can look for gradual increase in purchases by Europe of American grains and meats. This obviously will be a boon to the American farmers." His recent tour of Europe, he declared, has led him "to believe that we are on the eve of an era that will extend for ten years or more of the greatest prosperity the world has ever known." The country that will profit most, he said, is America.

Nevada Ships Wild Horses as Chicken Feed

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RENO, Sept. 5.—Horses have become so valueless in Nevada and Northeastern California that hundreds of wild steeds are being shipped to the poultry farms at Petaluma, Cal., and converted into chicken feed. Supervisor George W. Lyons of the Modoc National Forest, states thousands of wild horses are ranging the hills, and more than 500 have been shipped to Petaluma this year.

The horseflesh makes ideal chicken feed and is in demand with poultry raisers. Before the advent of the automobile the wild horses were trapped and domesticated for use on the farms and range. Now they are increasing rapidly and eating food needed for cattle and sheep.

ALL MARKETS CLOSE MONDAY

Financial and commodity markets of the United States will join with business firms in observing Labor Day next Monday. Consequently with the New York Stock Exchange, New York Curb, Chicago Board of Trade, Los Angeles Stock Exchange and all other markets closed, The Times will not publish its usual full quotations and market reviews on Tuesday morning.

While the Los Angeles Stock Exchange will remain closed Tuesday and Wednesday, Eastern markets will resume business on Tuesday, and quotations and market reviews will be resumed in The Times Wednesday morning.

PROSPERITY AHEAD FOR CATTLEMEN

Six Good Years in Sight for Industry, Authority Tells Bankers

Asserting there are six years of prosperity ahead of the cattle industry—one of the last of agricultural divisions of industry to recover—Dr. David Friday, an unofficial government authority on agricultural questions, in an address before the seventh annual convention of the American Association of Joint Stock Land Banks in Colorado Springs last week, explained that there would be a shortage of hogs this year, thus increasing the market for beef and giving cattle growers a good market.

He advised the cattlemen to hold their cattle during September and October in anticipation of a stronger market in November and December. Dr. Friday said that "the farmers who fed 60,000,000 city folks fifteen years ago must feed 82,000,000 today." The restoration of agricultural prices to a parity with others without recourse to special legislation or political nostrums, he declared, "has reduced much amateur economic theorizing to a state of intellectual rubbish."

"There are today fewer farms and fewer persons engaged in farming than there were fifteen years ago, yet our urban population has continued to grow rapidly since the beginning of this century. There were 45,000,000 people living in cities and towns in 1900, and there are over 80,000,000 today. By 1930 there will be 90,000,000 in these village and urban communities to be fed by the farmers of this nation.

"It is clear, then, that the demand for agricultural products is on the increase now, as it was in those seventeen years which succeeded the revival of prices and of business in 1896. It is clear, too, that unless the supply of agricultural products increases in an unusual manner, their prices will hold the advance which they have made."

SHOP OF LOCOMOTIVE INVENTOR EXHIBITED

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The workshop of James Watt, inventor of the locomotive, is now being exhibited at Science Museum in the exact way it was found on the inventor's death in 1819. Only the walls of the room are missing. Watt had the habit of locking himself in his workshop for days at a time, having a food tray left at the door.

EUROPEAN RAILROAD BEING ELECTRIFIED

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MADRID, Sept. 5.—Work has been commenced on the electrification of the Spanish branch of the international railroad linking Spain and France over the Aix route. Twenty miles south of Aix will be the new international station which is to be built nearly a mile high in the mountains. The station will cost $500,000.

STOCK PRICES REACTIONARY

Declines of Week Originated With Bear Traders

High Industrial Specialties Are Hardest Hit

Oils Up in Face of Another Gasoline Reduction

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Stock prices underwent a sharp reaction this week in selling originating with bear traders. Although some uneasiness was felt over the possible adverse economic effect of a prolonged suspension of anthracite mining, there was nothing in the week's news to bring about the decline which was generally interpreted as a correction of a weakened technical condition from speculative excesses of the past few weeks.

News and trade developments of the week were largely constructive in character. They included the lowering of call money rates and the retention of the 3 1-2 per cent discount rate by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, reports of expanding steel mill operations, raising of the Frisco common dividend from $5 to $7 annually, and the announcement that Class-I carriers had earned nearly $100,000,000 in net railway operating income in July, an increase of over $25,000,000 above the month before.

MACK TRUCK UP

High-priced industrial specialties were the hardest hit in the waves of selling which swept over the market in the early part of the week. Such issues as American Can, General Electric, Mack Trucks, Sears Roebuck, General Railway, Signal and White Motors were hammered 10 to 40 points below their recent record highs. Standard Industrials and rails also fell back in sympathy, but the declines were moderate and some of the losses were recovered, at least in part, in the closing days of the week.

Oils held up well in the face of another reduction, the fifth in the last two months, in the price of gasoline by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Steels also offered stubborn resistance to pressure although the development of complications in the proposed merger of the Trumbull, Otis and Midland steel products companies had a temporarily depressing effect. Motors moved to opposite directions, but reports of record-breaking sales by some of the larger companies were a sustaining influence on the general list.

RAIL ORDERS GROW

Heavy profit taking contributed to the reactionary in a number of the public utilities. Equipments developed in strength when the general market was declining in apparent anticipation of large railroad orders this month, but they were unable to maintain their gains. Coppers, sugars and chemicals presented few points of interest.

Some of the low-priced rails were helped by the announcement that the administration proposed to amend the Esch-Cummins law by forcing railroad consolidations within a period of seven years.

SHEEP SHEARERS TO STAGE FAIR CONTEST

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 5.—The California Wool Growers' Association is sponsoring a sheep shearing contest at the California State Fair on Wednesday, the 9th inst., in which awards will be made. The association desires to demonstrate the relative merits of machine shearing and hand shearing, and most important of all, to show the correct way to shear a sheep. The elimination of second cuts is a very important consideration. The judges of the contest will be Fred A. Ellinwood of Red Bluff, Prof. J. F. Wilson, of the University of California, and L. M. Olson of Marysville.

ROAD GETS GIANT CRANE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PRESCOTT, Sept. 5.—A fifty-ton wrecking crane has been brought here from San Bernardino, for use on the Ash Fork-Phoenix line, a smaller crane having been inadequate in handling the heavy equipment now used on the local road.

Electric Heating of Steel Making Furnaces Increasing—Omaha Steel Works Finds Process More Efficient and Quality of Output of Higher Grade.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

[Copyright, 1925, New York Evening Post, Inc.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Now that some of the leading units in the steel industry, operating plants around Pittsburgh and Youngstown, are considering the installation of electrically heated furnaces new plants to be constructed, the success of the new method becomes apparent.

Actual use of electricity in the foundry of the Omaha Steel Works, says an article in the Electrical World, has not only improved the quality of the castings produced but has materially improved the load factor and power factor for the customer, making the foundry more profitable for both the owner and the company supplying the energy.

Complete process of manufacture of steel is accomplished in the furnace itself. Operating with two shifts a day, it is capable of turning out five three-ton heats, or fifteen tons for the working period.

A large proportion of the output of the Omaha Steel Works is railroad material, and therefore must meet the stringent specification of the railway companies, who are known to be very exacting in their demands. Analysis of a sample picked at random satisfied such specifications by a wide margin, being given a tensile strength rating of 90,225 pounds to the square inch, against 65,000 pounds set forth in the requirements.

Under this method of heating steel castings may be produced from a composition consisting of 97 per cent scrap. The composition is made up in charges of six to eight tons, placed in the furnace, the door of which is sealed by the usual sand method, and the current turned on. The furnace and its charger are then brought up to a temperature of 1600 deg. Fahrenheit, and kept at that heat for two hours. After twelve hours, the current is shut off, cooled to 800 deg. and the charge withdrawn to cool by air.

The present energy consumption of the furnace is approximately 300 kilowatt hours per ton of metal annealed. With increased production and more constant operation, however, this consumption will, it is expected, drop to 200 kilowatt hours.

Since installation, the production of the foundry has materially improved, and plans are under way for expansion to almost three times its former capacity. Naturally this will mean an increase of considerable proportions in the power load of the company furnishing the energy.

SOURCE OF POWER

The power used is supplied by the Nebraska Power Company, a subsidiary of the American Power and Light Company. Prior to the installation of the furnace this company could note the fluctuations in current caused by the operation of the arc furnace. With the increased load incident to the annealing furnace, however, the fluctuations are less pronounced.

The tension of the line incidentally has been raised and this has materially improved the foundry company's entire load. The power company, aside from the Omaha Steel Works, numbers many other large users of industrial power among its consumers.

BOND QUOTATIONS

Undertone Firm

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Under the restrictive influence of an approaching holiday, the bond market turned extremely dull today, although prices maintained a firm tone. Traders showed no disposition to press offerings and as a moderate volume of buying took place in anticipation of better retail demand after Labor Day price advances easily out-numbered the declines.

Interest in foreign obligations was drawn again to the German 7s which scaled a new peak at 98 3-4. No news developments have appeared to account for the strength of these bonds, which has been shared by other well secured European issues. Activity continued unabated in the Mexican group.

The domestic list was devoid of interesting features, with changes largely confined to fractional limits. Several points of strength developed, however, including St. Paul junior liens, Norfolk and Western convertibles 6s, Florida Western and Northern 7s, Virginia Carolina Chemical 7 1-2s and Sinclair Oil 6s.

Pending a definite announcement by the United States Treasury of its plans for September financing, buyers have withheld from the Liberty Bond list. Prices of the government obligations today remained virtually motionless.

Following are yesterday's high, low and closing prices on bonds on the New York Stock Exchange and the total sales of each bond. These quotations are received over Associated Press wires, and to expedite transmission the closing price is omitted when same as the low, and both low and close are omitted when they are same as the high.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BONDS

(Dollars and Thirty-seconds of Dollars)

Total sales of bonds yesterday were $9,172,000, compared with $8,782,000 previous day and $3,-613,000 a year ago.

NEW YORK CURB

Razor Shares Feature

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The market on the curb exchange displayed considerable activity for a half-holiday at this season. Pronounced strength appeared in some of the recent favorites in the industrial group, with most importance attached to the further advance of a point in Gillette Safety Razor, which moved to a new high mark at 92. Motor issues were in increased demand. Durant rose 1 1-4 points to 14, and Stutz opened up a fraction, selling at 13 5-8 and then reacted to 12. Public utility shares continued to follow an even course with trading generally in small volume. United Light and Power followed Friday's improvement with a further gain of about 4 1-2 points, selling to 138.

With the exception of a sharp break in Prairie Oil, which sold from 50 1-2 to 49, the market in oil shares held fairly steady around yesterday's closing quotations. Continental Oil was a late feature, advancing almost 3 points on heavy trading.

Following are the closing quotations on the New York Curb Market, furnished by Logan & Bryan, members of the New York Stock Exchange, 630 South Spring Street:

TERRITORY WOOL MOVING

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—Considerable territory wool has moved on the basis of 1.28@1.33 clean for fine combings; 1.25 for fine French combings; 1.15 for half-blood; 1.00@1.02 for three-eighths blood, and 90@95 for quarter-blood combings wool in the grease. Demand is more active in the fine and half-blood kinds. Fleece wools had a limited outlet.

ACCESSORY OUTLOOK GOOD

Outlook for the automobile accessory and equipment manufacturers for the remaining months of this year is favorable, according to a study of conditions in this industry by the Standard Daily Trade Service. Following one of the best second quarters in its history, it is stated, the automobile parts manufacturers have experienced a satisfactory volume of business since the beginning of the current quarter. Sales are below the peak of April and May, but the total for July was slightly in excess of June and substantially ahead of July last year.

"With operations at the principal motor-car producing plants again on the up-grade," says the study, "it is probable that August sales will show a further moderate gain. Current evidence indicates that total third quarter business will surpass that for the corresponding period of any proceding year excepting, possibly 1923, and fall sales throughout the season will also be unusually heavy.

"Without question, any trade operating at an 83 per cent of capacity rate is experiencing a heavy volume of busines. Competant authorities estimate that the steel industry is at normal when operating at around 60 to 65 per cent of capacity. On that basis the parts and accessories operations during the opening half of 1925, when the industry operated at 83 per cent of capacity, were well above normal."

Even more important than the increase in sales, it is stated, is the fact that profits of the leading companies for the first half of this year show substantial improvement compared with the corresponding period of last year. Of the sixteen largest companies, which have thus far reported their earnings for the half year, only three failed to show larger net earnings this year than last.

In the case of eight well established producing companies, net profits of the six months exceeded those for the same period of 1924 by about 90 per cent. Only for the fact that several companies deducted heavy plant expansion expenses even greater increases would doubtless have been shown.

The following table shows earnings reported by the principal companies for the first half of 1925 and for the corresponding period of last year:

ORANGES

The market on good stock, medium sizes Valencias was higher this week. Aside from this, the market showed little change over a week ago. Sales continue in excess of shipments, thereby reducing the supply of Valencias, rolling and on track unsold, to a low figure. With light shipments, that are assured for the balance of the season, a continued upward trend of the market is looked for on good stock, desirable sizes.

Considerable business is reported on Valencias from private sale markets. Prices are being maintained at about the same level as those in the auctions.

Shipments the past week totaled 410 cars, an increase of ten cars over the previous week. For the corresponding week last season, a total of 665 cars were shipped.

LEMONS

The market on California lemons is strong and higher. The supply of fruit in all markets is light.

The quantity of lemons in storage approximates 400 cars. This is the lightest supply on record for years, with the exception of the 1922 season. Pickings for September are expected to run around 400 cars, and with the exception of the 1923 season, are the lightest in years.

F.o.b. California quotations on extra-choice stock are on a basis of $7 to $7.50 a box.

There are on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days in all United States ports approximately 135 cars of foreign lemons. In 1924 for the corresponding period there were twenty-eight cars; 1923, 172 cars, and 1922, sixty-nine cars.

MARCH FIELD URGED AS COAST AIR CENTER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 5.—Instruction to recommend March Field to the War Department as the center of all flying activities in Southern California was given to delegates to the annual convention of reserve officers elected last night at San Bernardino. Election of delegates occurred at the first meeting of the season of Riverside and San Bernardino county reserve officers. The convention will be held in Los Angeles.

Lieut. Charles Vaughn, aviation expert, speaking at the meeting, declared that March Field is the most perfect flying field in the United States. Resolution to take action regarding the Riverside field was taken when it was learned that Clover Field in Santa Monica is to be closed. When Clover Field is no more, March Field will be the only government flying field between San Francisco and San Diego

STOCKS RENEW PRICE ADVANCE

Trading Unusually Brisk at Week-End Session

Moderate Gains Registered in Motor Group

Harvester Up to High Level of Five Years

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Exceptionally heavy trading for preholiday session characterized today's brief session of the stock market, which continued the recovery begun on Thursday. Total sales were well in excess of 500,000 shares, despite the absence of many large traders.

Low-priced motors were again prominent in the upturn. Heavy buying of Pierce-Arrow common sent that stock up over 3 points to a new high record at 43 3-8, while the preferred recorded an even larger gain, and crossed 92 to a new peak. Dodge Brothers' A was bid up over a point to 28, where it was still 3 points under the year's high. Nash Motors jumped nearly 8 points on two scales. Other motors moved within rather narrow and irregular limits.

UTILITIES GAIN

Public utilities also presented several points of strength. International Telephone was bid up to nearly 4 points to 127 5-8, Radio Corporation closed more than 2 points higher at 57 and gains of a point or more were recorded by Brooklyn-Edison, Electric Power Light certificates, Montana Power, Philadelphia Company, Third-avenue Railway and Manhattan Guaranteed certificates broke through to new high levels for the year.

International Harvester was bid up nearly 5 points to 129 1-2, the highest price in five years. Certainteed Products responded to reports of heavily increased earnings by advancing over 2 points to a new high for the year at 56. Other conspicuous industrial strong spots were Atlantic Gulf and West Indies common and preferred, Coca Cola, Dupont, Fleischmann, General Baking, General Electric, Postum Cereal and Westinghouse Air Brake, all up 1 1-2 to 6 points.

RAILS ATTRACT

In the rail group, low and middle-priced carriers attracted the largest speculative following. St. Paul issues were again taken in large blocks, the common touching 9 1-2 and the preferred 17 1-4, overnight gains of about a point each. Gulf, Mobile and Northern common and preferred attained new peak prices at 36 1-8 and 109 1-4, respectively. Pittsburgh and West Virginia common, which is expected to benefit through increased shipments of bituminous coal, showed a net gain of 1 3-8 at 76 1-2.

Foreign exchanges moved irregularly higher. Demand sterling climbed to nearly 484 3-4, and French francs held steady just below 469 cents. Norwegian kroner rallied about 12 points to around 21.47 cents, but Danish kroner fell back nearly 20 points to 25.08 cents.

MARKET FLASHES

CATTLE—Approximately 1000 less cattle arrived this week than last, but the fairly liberal run the previous weeks found packers fairly well supplied. Trading on the whole was moderately active, with common and medium kinds of steers and cows predominating. The better kinds of steers and good cows and heifers sold readily at about steady prices, while the in-between kinds, mostly common and low medium grades, declined generally 15@25c. A two-car string of 1284-pound California steers topped for the week at 8.00, while two cars of 1195-pound weights made 7.80, with 7.75 being paid for two cars of medium 1088-pound northern steers. The bulk of steers were common and low medium California grassers that cleared from 6.25@7.40, a few making 7.50 and 7.60. Very common kinds sold downward to 5.00, with canners and cutters lower. Several lots of steers for feeder purposes cleared from 4.50@5.75.

A short load of 879-pound Utah heifers topped for the week at 6.40, while a load of 1057-pound Idaho cows topped for their kind at 6.15. The price spread of 4.25@5.85 took in the bulk of fat cows and heifers, most load lots clearing from 4.85@5.65, although several loads sold upward to 6.00. Canners and cutters held steady, most canners clearing from 2.00@2.60, with thin, shelly kinds downward to 1.50, while cutters were most numerous from 3.00@3.60. Bulls ruled firm, the general run of bolognas cashing from 4.25@5.00, with thin canner kinds as low as 2.50, while most beef bulls sold around 5.25, although a few choice kinds sold higher.

CALVES—The week's supply of 2200 calves, mostly southwesterns, coupled with liberal runs the previous weeks, proved more than the trade could handle, and prices suffered accordingly. Trading was a slow, draggy process throughout the week and several loads were sold to outside interests. Values closed unevenly 50@1.00 lower than a week ago, with the bulk of 200 to 290-pound southwesterns cleaning from 7.50@8.50, while common kinds and heavies were fairly numerous from 5.00@7.00. A small lot of good 160-pound Texas vealers turned for 10.00, while good and choice 140 to 220-pound California vealers sold around 11.00. A small lot of 408-pound calves went out for baby beef feeding at 6.75.

HOGS—Small receipts for the week, coupled with only fair demand, resulted in a drop of 15@25c from the week's high time. The practical top for the week was 15.35, paid Monday for 187-pound butchers, while the closing top was 15.15, paid for 193-pound weights. About half of the week's supply arrived on Monday and the bulk cleared from 15.00@15.25, while mixed offerings and light lights, including several loads of desirable weight Californas sold downward to 14.60, with a few common light lights at 14.25. Packing sows were scarce, the bulk selling from 12.00@12.50, although a few smooth, light weight kinds made 13.00. Demand for feeder pigs was not as insistent as has been the case the past few weeks, and offerings moved rather slowly. A load of 116-pound California feeders made 15.00, while several lots of 43 to 90-pound weights realized 16.00.

SHEEP—The week's offerings in this division consisted of two decks of medium 104-pound wethers at 8.40. A firm undertone exists in the lamb market, due to the recent advances on the middle western markets, and in the general opinion of the trade, good and choice lambs are quotable from 13.00@14.00, with common to choice ewes from 5.00@7.00.

Outside Markets

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Hogs, receipts 2000; uneven, mostly 10@15c lower than Friday's average; few desirable strong weight butchers and light weight little changed; underweight, 15@25c off; bulkbetter 140 to 210-pound averages, 12.50@13.10; practical top, 13.10; one double deck sorted 200-pound averages, 13.25; 225 to 310-pound butchers, 12.25@12.85; packing sows, mostly 10.50@10.75; sorted 120 to 130-pound killing pigs, 12.50@12.75; shippers, 2000; estimated holdover, 8000; heavy weight hogs, 11.90@12.85; medium, 12.40@13.10; light, 11.20@13.10; light lights, 11.10@13.00; packing hogs, 10.15@11.00; slaughter pigs, 11.75@12.75.

Cattle, receipts 500; compared with week ago, good to choice fed steers scaling 1300 pounds, upward and heavy, well-conditioned western grassers steady; supply weighty fed steers scarcest of season; other grades matured steers and most grade yearlings and medium weights, 50@75c lower; spots more on yearlings; western grass run at about 22,000; largest since 1923; glutted supply of plain qualified grass and warmed offerings practically cleaned up as week closed; closed extreme top matured steers, 16.10; best yearlings, 15.10; moderate supply weighty western grassers, 9.50@10.00 to shippers; heavy Colorados and Wyomings upward to 11.00; bulk range offerings to killers, 6.50@7.50; she stock around 25c lower; spots more on good to choice weighty cows; bulls scarce, 15@25c higher; vealers mostly 50c up. News of Spring Street

Bancitaly Corporation, the only active feature of the short session of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday, moved up sharply on news of the proposed increase in dividend rate as planned by A. P. Giannini, and closed at 237, a net gain of 3 points over Friday's close. The stock opened at 238.

The oil group was irregular with a few advances. United Oil sold fairly active, closing at 53 1-8, fractionally higher. Julian preferred and common sold firm at 6 1-4 and 3 1-2, respectively. Union of California sold steady at 33 1-2 and Union Associates closed firm at 32 3-4. U. S. Royalties added 1 point to 16. Marine Corporation sold at 1.58, 2 points lower.

Los Angeles Investment traded steady at 5.59. Southern California Edison added 1-4 and closed at 123 1-4. Edison 7 per cent and 6 per cent preferred sold steady at 109 1-4 and 96 1-4, respectively. San Francisco Gold added another 1-2 to a new high at 31. Prince Consolidated was firm at 38.

Acceptable for Warrants

In connection with the offering of 6 1-2 per cent interest-bearing option warrants, which is being made to stockholders and bondholders having the right to become stockholders, the Associated Gas and Electric Company announced yesterday that the 6 1-2 per cent secured convertible gold bonds, due 1954, will be accepted in payment for option warrants on the basis of $1000 bond for thirty option warrants, $35 paid.

This is equivalent to $105 flat for the bonds, the same price at which they are callable, plus accrued interest. Holders of these bonds who do not elect to make such an exchange are entitled to rights to buy eleven option warrants at $35 paid.

Holders of 6 1-2 per cent debentures, Manila series "A," are entitled to rights to buy six option warrants. Holders of the 6 1-2 per cent debentures, Manila series "B" and "C," are entitled to rights to buy five option warrants. The 6 1-2 per cent Manila debentures, however, will not be accepted in payment for option warrants.

Adds Motor Bus Line

The Eagle Rock bus line, which will be placed in operation by the Los Angeles Railway Company on the 8th inst., will be the eleventh motor coach line of the company. The new line extends from the terminal of the street car line in Eagle Rock, over Townsend avenue from Colorado Boulevard to Oak Grove Drive, looping via Oak Grove Trail, Vincent avenue and Yosemite Drive, and on Colorado Boulevard from Townsend to El Modeno avenue, looping around Holbrook street and Lauristinus avenue.

Service will be provided from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. at a 5-cent fare with transfers to and from street cars north of Avenue 45. The new line is routed through the well-developed business and residential district of the community.

SHIPPING REVISION ASKED

Concentration of Government's Activities in One Department Urged at Conference

Concentration of all marine and shipping activities of the government in one department, with its chief occupying a position in the Cabinet, was urged yesterday as a prime requisite at a conference of Southern California shipping experts, manufacturers and business men. The recommendation was made at a round-table discussion of the policy to be pursued in disposing of the government's merchant marine with a maximum benefit to the nation and its trade.

The conference was called by representatives of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, a committee of which is touring the nation in order to obtain the opinion of business leaders and shipping men in regard to the best plan to be pursued in the withdrawal of the government from the shipping business.

The data thus gathered will be incorporated in a single report to be presented to the National Chamber in October. This report will become the basis of the recommendations to be made to Congress by the National Chamber in regard to the government merchant marine.

OPINION UNDIVIDED

Retention of the Shipping Board, with equalized regional representation, also seemed to be favored by the majority of the Southern California leaders present at the conference. There was no disagreement on the need for the government's withdrawal from the shipping business and a suggestion that the coastwise laws be extended to include the Philippines also won some favor. Such an act would bar ships of foreign registry from trade to these islands.

C. W. Lonsdale, a director of the National Chamber, opened the conference yesterday with the declaration that there is no division of opinion among the nation's leaders on the national merchant marine.

"The government must get out of the shipping business," he declared. "There is absolutely no argument about that. But if the government is going to get out we the National Chamber will recommend to Congress a policy for the disposal of the government ships based on these general findings. must have a business-like merchant marine policy."

The disposal of government ships is only one phase of the general question, he stated. Retention of the trade markets already developed through the use of the government vessels and the further development of these markets and the existing ship lines are two other questions of equal importance which must be settled.

OTHER QUESTIONS

Other questions to be considered, he stated, are means for increasing the patronage of American freight and passenger vessels, regulation of railroad ownership of vessels, government aid to shipping, regulation of the Shipping Board's powers and many kindred questions.

Among those present at the conference besides Mr. Lonsdale and J. Howland Gardner of the National Chamber, were President Pridham of the local chamber; S. L. Kreider, A. C. Hardison, president of the California Farm Bureau Federation; Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank; R. J. Chandler, vice-president and general manager of the Los Angeles Steamship Company; Fred L. Baker, Gerald Fitzgerald, R. H. Lacy, Gen. Lansing H. Beach, Frank C. Mortimer, John A. Burton, B. Houssels, Samuel Hornstein, O. B. Kibble, H. P. Anewalt, J. T. Saunders, Sam Y. Knight, R. W. Proudfoot, J. L. Coates, J. H. Tooney of New Mexico; M. C. Hunison, a harbor engineer; J. F. Kinney, C. H. Matson, H. S. McKee, Jr., and Arthur Brent.

Wheat Option for December at Low Level

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—December wheat sold down to 1.49½, and all deliveries were at a new low on the present downturn, as the result of free selling by scattered longs, who were evening-up for over the holiday, and pressure from houses that usually act for a leading local operator. Buying under 1.50 was of a good class and stop orders were not large. The finish was on a strong rally, with net losses of ⅝@1⅛c, with September at 1.51@1.51¼, December at 1.50⅝@1.50¾ and May at 1.54⅝@1.54¾. Corn showed independent strength, with September ⅝c lower and deferred deliveries ⅝@⅞c higher. September finished at 97¼@97½, December at 86⅛@86 and May 89⅝@89¾. Oats were unchanged to ⅛c lower and rye off 1¼@1⅜c.

Considering the news and the heavy pressure, net losses in wheat for the week were not large, 2⅝@3c.

Rye was 2⅝@3¼c lower as compared with the previous week. Coarse grains, however, were stronger, with corn 3⅝@4⅛c and oats ⅛@⅜c higher. Lard finished 15c higher to 12½c lower, with ribs 10@22½c and bellies 10@50c lower.

Bearish sentiment predominated in wheat and there was a general expectation of a sharp decline on Tuesday, as the result of large receipts in the Northwest and prospects for a good increase in the visible, as Minneapolis and Duluth stocks gained 1,831,000 bushels for the week. The buying of December under 1.50 was of a better class than the selling, with offerings absorbed on resting orders, and there was some buying that was regarded as short covering by leading eastern shorts. With a holiday ahead, many of the local element evened-up at the last.

There was little encouragement in the foreign demand for wheat, with sales of 300,000 bushels in all positions, including some hard winter from Montreal. Liverpool closed ⅜d lower. Winnipeg was off ⅝@⅞c for the day, with some buying of futures by exporters. Minneapolis showed more strength than Chicago and was ⅝c lower, with some selling of December there against purchases here.

While the weather map showed rains in parts of the Northwest and Iowa, and the forecast was for unsettled and cooler over the holiday, there was aggressive buying of the deferred deliveries of corn by strong commission houses. There was a sharp dip at one time, but the close was well toward the top. There was a material increase in the complaints of damage to the new crop, which came from a wider territory than heretofore. Scattered longs sold September.

Bulk of the trade in oats was in spreading between the various deliveries, with the market influenced largely by the action of the other grains. The seaboard reported 100,000 bushels sold for export.

Foreigners were credited with buying rye futures, but trade in the aggregate was not large and prices declined in sympathy with wheat.

Trade in provisions was limited and the market easily influenced. Commission houses were on the selling side and the finish was 5@10c lower on lard, with ribs unchanged to 2½c lower and bellies unchanged to 5c lower. Packing hogs at Chicago for the season to date is 3,088,000, against 3,779,000 last year.

Italian Held as Riff Gun-running Inquiry Begins

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ROME, Sept. 5.—Arrested on a charge of smuggling emigrants, Sig. La Penta, a Neapolitan, is being held pending an investigation of documents found in his possession implicating prominent Italians and high personages in other countries in internationally financed gun-running into the Riff.

One document shows that a boat leaving Amsterdam contained 30,000 rifles and 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition, which was destined for Abd-El Krim's army.

HARBOR ZONING PLANS BREWING

Engineer Nicholson Ready to Submit Ideas

Systematic Segregation of Industries Aim

Board of Commissioners Will Decide Question

A zoning plan for Los Angeles Harbor, whereby the various trades and industries will be segregated in portions of the port best suited to their needs, has been completed by Harbor Engineer George F. Nicholson, and is ready for submission to the Board of Harbor Commissioners, it was announced yesterday.

Mr. Nicholson has worked out the plan from the standpoint of fire hazards, accessibility, storage and transportation, according to the needs and nature of the various trades.

In the segregation of the various industries, the present terminals, by Mr. Nicholson's plan, would not be affected, locating only new development under the zoning system.

Oil terminals and loading stations hereafter would be segregated in the Outer Harbor area and along the government breakwater, as their location there would confine fire hazards to that immediate area.

The lumber industry would be located on Terminal Island, along the east side of the main channel and along the upper reaches of the East Basin. This will cause little change in the present locations.

The freight and general cargo business of the port would be handled by terminals on each side of the main channel, beginning at Twenty-second street on the south and running up channel to the Wilmington district.

The upper Wilmington district would be given over to passenger terminals, as providing better transportation facilities.

The manufacturing districts would be confined to Terminal Island and in a new area skirting the West Basin, while railroad classification yards would also occupy these areas as well as the outskirts of the Wilmington district.

The fishing industry would remain in the Fish Harbor area, where there is also room for the expected expansion of the harbor's fisheries.

Mr. Nicholson will also submit plans for taking over the option held by the city on the Southern Pacific properties along the west side of the main channel and their subsequent development, as requested by the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce.

WHALING SHIPS OFF FOR SOUTHERN WATERS

The whaling season south of here was opened formally yesterday by the departure of two of the "killer" boats, the Norrona II and the Hanka from here for Magdalena Bay, Lower California. They will be joined at Ensenada by the whaling tanker Balboa, and will be followed in a few days by the killer Columbus and the motorship Mexico, the reducing plant for the fleet. All are owned by the Mexican Whaling Corporation, a Norwegian concern, and all except the tanker have passed idle season and been reconditioned here, after their highly successful initial whaling season off Lower California last winter.

It is understood the fleet obtained 290 whales off Mexico last year, which, reduced to whale oil and the like, brought them enough money to pay up all outstanding indebtedness on their vessels, and divide $120,000 surplus among stockholders and crew.

Blue whales are said to predominate in Mexican west coast waters, with an occasional fin, California gray or sperm whale. The season is expected to last seven to nine months, after which the fleet is scheduled to return here again for reconditioning and supplies.

Another fleet operated in part by Los Angeles interests, which likewise was credited with a prosperous season off Cape San Lucas last year, followed the whales north to the Bering Sea this summer. Vessels of that fleet are expected here shortly, whence they will fit out for the Mexican season.

Among the passenger ships arriving over the week-end will be the Finland, City of Panama and the President Adams. The Finland is due this afternoon from San Francisco, en route to Havana and New York with several hundred passengers and several thousand tons of Pacific Coast freight. The motorship City of Panama is bound from Panama, en route to San Francisco. She will arrive today and disembark several passengers here and drop 2000 bags of sugar, 40,000 feet of hardwood lumber, turpentine and other Central American cargo. The President Adams is due tomorrow morning from New York and Havana on her sixth voyage around the world for the Dollar Line. She has aboard thirty-two passengers for Los Angeles, sixteen for San Francisco, one for Japan and six en route around the world. More than a score of Los Angeles persons will take passage on the vessel from here to the Orient or beyond, sustaining Los Angeles' position as the origin of more passengers for this service than any other port except New York.

Effective with the sailing of the McCormick passenger and freight carrier Rose City from here on the 24th inst., the liner's schedule of arrival and departure will be changed so the vessel will arrive here every other Wednesday at 5 p.m. and sail for San Francisco and Portland the next afternoon. The liner has been arriving every other Thursday and remaining in port until Saturday afternoons. Under the new schedule, passengers departing here Thursday afternoons will arrive in San Francisco Saturday morning.

Checks for fees and tonnage tax must be paid immediately upon entering ships from foreign ports, and must be certified, according to instructions issued by L. H. Schwaebe, collector of customs for the local district. Heretofore some leeway has been accorded brokers and shipping agents in the hour of making the remittance, and personal checks occasionally have been accepted from reputable brokers as a convenience to the latter.

Invitations are being extended for a banquet to Charles H. Spear, new port manager, to be given at the Biltmore at 6:30 p.m. the 17th inst., by "The Business Interests of Los Angeles Harbor," said to include all shipping and kindred business houses in the port district. Reservations are expected for more plates than ever laid locally for a maritime gathering. F. A. Hooper, Los Angeles representative of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company is general chairman, with a dozen committees assisting, chairmen of which are as follows: Gerald FitzGerald, banquet; J. H. Joyce, entertainment; Capt. Paul D. Chandler, intercoastal steamships; Sam L. Kreider, foreign and offshore steamships; Ralph Chandler, coastwise steamships; D. P. Fleming, harbor shipping; Frank Curran, lumber industry; J. C. MacQuiddy, oil industry; E. A. Mills, stevedoring; H. P. Anewalt, railroads; Capt. S. S. Sandberg, harbor industries and fisheries; H. H. Elder, custom house brokers; G. F. Nicholson, harbor construction; L. R. Atkinson, cotton exchange; Alex Myers, motor transportation, and J. H. Booge, banking.

Manuel L. Ayulo, consul at Los Angeles for Peru, has booked passage on the Panama Mail liner Ecuador for the 24th inst., en route home on a six months' trip of business and pleasure. One of his missions is said to be of an industrial nature, meaning much new trade between this port and his country.

News of Ships and Sailings at Pacific Ports

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Today was one of the busiest days of the year along the water front, twenty-six steamers being scheduled to sail from this port for various ports of the world. The total net tonnage of the twenty-six steamers was 48,925 tons, which was said by officials of the marine department of the Chamber of Commerce to be one of the heaviest days of the recent past as far as sailings were concerned.

The Panama Mail steamer Corinto sailed today for Cristobal and way ports with a good sized passenger list and a capacity cargo of general freight.

The Dollar liner President Taft, sailed from this port today for Far East ports with a capacity passenger list and a heavy cargo.

With 240 passengers, a capacity list, the Matson steamer Maui is due to arrive here Tuesday from Honolulu. Most of the passengers on the Maui are tourists returning from summer vacations spent in the Hawaiian Islands.

SEATTLE, Sept. 5.—The Pacific Northwest faces one of the biggest export seasons in its history, L. L. Bates, general freight agent for the Blue Star Line, asserted here today.

"Advance bookings indicate refrigerator ships will be taxed to the limit," he said. "The apple crop this year, while estimated below normal, will nevertheless be exported in larger quantities than in the past. This also applies to the salmon pack."

Four Blue Star Line refrigerator ships have already been booked, Bates said. Their arrivals were listed as follows: Royal Star, October 13; Albion Star, November 10; Tuscan Star, December 8; Trojan Star, January 5, and the return of the Royal Star, February 2.

TACOMA, Sept. 5.—With a large cargo of Gulf freight for discharge here, the steamship F. J. Luckenbach is due tonight. She is scheduled to load large quantities of shingles, oriental freight, canned goods and general merchandise for the return voyage.

The steamship Floridian, the first vessel in this port on the new schedule of the American-Hawaiian Line, will take a record cargo from here when she docks tomorrow to discharge approximately 400 tons of inward freight from the east coast. She is to load 3100 tons of cargo, which includes over 8000 doors, shingles, canned goods, tallow and general merchandise.

In with Nelson freight from California, the steam schooner Jacox sailed four hours after her arrival, for Seattle, Everett and Mukilteo. The Jacox made a direct run to this port and will return next week to load outward cargo.

Freight offerings from the east coast feature the cargo of the steamship Willfaro, which arrived at noon today. She is to take lumber in addition to general cargo for the return trip.

Her cargo of lumber for delivery to North Atlantic ports nearly stored, the steamship Horace Luckenbach is expected to clear late tonight for the return voyage.

With 1100 tons of cargo from this port, the steamship Emma Alexander steamed to Seattle at 6 o'clock this morning, from where she is due to sail for the south at midnight tonight.

Carrying a full load of lumber, the steamship Dorothy Wintermote sailed direct to Los Angeles tonight.

PORTLAND, Sept. 5.—Three shipments of barley will leave Portland next week for European ports. The French Line steamer Georgic will arrive Tuesday to discharge 300 tons of steel rails and miscellaneous freight from continental ports. It will take out 300 tons of barley.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's motorship Loch Katrine will arrive tomorrow to load 2000 tons of barley, some canned goods and miscellaneous freight.

The Harrison Direct Line steamer Craftsman is expected Tuesday to load 350 tons of barley, a quantity of miscellaneous freight and canned berries.

The Admiral Peary of the Pacific Steamship Company's coastwise fleet, docked late last night from California ports with miscellaneous freight for discharge. It will leave the river southbound tomorrow.

Sailing date of the refrigerator steamer Narenta of the Royal Mail fleet has been set for November 5. It will be followed by the Nebraska, December 5, and the Nictheroy, January 5. All three steamers will take full cargoes of apples to United Kingdom ports.

The steamer West Jessup of the Columbia Pacific Shipping Company's trans-Pacific fleet, took bunker oil this afternoon and will sail tomorrow for Manila and South China ports. Lumber and miscellaneous freight constitute its cargo.

ASTORIA (Or.) Sept. 5.—The steamer West Coyote, after loading 500 tons of flour for the Orient at the local terminals, shifted today to Portland for further cargo.

The steamer Annette Rolph loaded 100 tons of flour and feed at the local terminals today before sailing for California.

The Columbia Pacific steamer Bennesdiful is due at the terminals tomorrow to load 100,000 feet of lumber for the United Kingdom.

Elks Announce Westlake Park Jubilee Program

Officials of Los Angeles Lodge No. 99, B. P. O. Elks yesterday announced the program for their celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of California's Statehood Wednesday afternoon and evening at Westlake Park.

Former Senator Louis H. Roseberry will speak on "What California Means to the Union," and Sylvester L. Weaver will speak of "A New Civic Asset." Joseph J. Ford will present a bear flag to the Elks' Lodge and Exalted Ruler Fred A. Pierce of No. 99, B.P.O.E., will formally accept it.

NEW YORK GANGSTER BRUTALLY MURDERED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5. — New York gangsters wrote another page of their record in the gray light of dawn today. In front of a house at 338 East Eighty-first street, a closed automobile, soaked in gasoline burned to a skeleton. When firemen put out the flames they found sitting bolt upright in the coach with his hands tied behind him, the charred body of a man later identified as Morris Grossman, 29 years of age, of 144 Pitt street. Four bullets were in his body. Grossman, a gangster, was known over the East Side as Mike Clancy. A detective recognized the face, which, at first, seemed burned almost beyond any chance of identification.

BASEBALL INTEREST WANING

While the future of professional baseball depends on the back-lot player, the interest in the sport is said to be on the wane. The sale of baseball equipment has fallen off 35 per cent within the last few years, and the sale of golf balls, tennis rackets and other recreational material has boomed tremendously.

POLICE FIND DRUG CACHE IN SATCHEL

Narcotics Worth $20,000 Taken in Rooming-House Raid by Officers

Morphine and cocaine valued at approximately $20,000 were confiscated by the police narcotic detail under Sergt. Littlejohn last night in a raid on a rooming-house at Central and Vernon avenues. The seizure followed the arrest three days ago of Henry Sharp, known as "Henry the Chink," who, police say, has headed one of the largest narcotic peddling gangs in the city.

Working on information supplied them by a young woman who was arrested at the time Sharp was taken in custody in his home at 214 North Lake avenue, the police last night located a black satchel in which was found nearly twenty ounces of narcotics. The occupant of the room in which the drugs were found could not be located.

Earlier in the day Officers Southard, Chitwood, Yoakum and Caddel went to a farm near Bakersfield and after searching through two hay stacks located two ounces of narcotics. The farm is owned by a Chinese farmer. He denied any knowledge of the drugs.

According to the officers, Sharp, an ex-convict, has been operating on an extensive scale in the city for the past several months, disposing of as much as thirty ounces a week. Harry Reed and Earnest Burnett, said to be confederates of Sharp, are also under arrest. The woman who was taken in custody at the time Sharp was arrested was released after being questioned.

DAWES TO BE GREETED BY LEGION

Rousing Reception for Vice-President Proposed by Veterans

American Legion members plan to give Vice-President Dawes a rousing reception when he arrives in Los Angeles the 11th inst., according to Charles L. Bogue, commander of the Los Angeles Interpost Council of the Legion.

The American Legion took the lead in planning the reception, according to Commander Bogue, when the Vice-President requested that it and the Chamber of Commerce take charge of the visit. Vice-President Dawes asked that no banuet be tendered him, but that a large auditorium be obtained for an evening address.

American Legion members and officials, a special delegation of the "40 and 8," society of which the distinguished visitor is a member, and the crack military band of the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry will be at the station for the reception.

The evening program will be in Olympic Auditorium, with Henry M. Robinson as chairman and Commander Bogue and R. W. Pridham, president of the Chamber of Commerce, as vice-chairman. A special reception committee of 700 leading members of the community will occupy reserved seats near the platform and admission to other seats will be free.

THREE DEAD IN ARREST FIGHT

Officers Slain by Madman With Superior's Gun

Sheriff, Seriously Wounded, Turns Gun on Slayer

Beach Resident Grabs Pistol During Scuffle

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Undersheriff R. H. Rountree of Santa Cruz was killed, shot twice in the abdomen, and Sheriff Howard V. Trafton fatally wounded when the two officers this afternoon attempted to arrest Paul Woodside, believed to have been insane. Woodside, with a shotgun, stood off construction workers who were attempting to build a road in front of his cabin ten miles from Santa Cruz.

The officers struggled with Woodside, who, in the scuffle, pulled a gun from Trafton's pocket and did the shooting. Trafton later wrested the gun from Woodside and shot him through the head. Woodside died an hour later. Sheriff Trafton died late tonight.

BOUGHT LAND

Some months ago Woodside bought four acres of land near a beach, where a real estate company is engaged in a development project known as Sea Cliff. He frequently had complained that the workers were ruining a beach where the treasures of Capt. Kidd were buried and today he came forth with a shotgun and drove the road builders away.

A call was sent for Sheriff Trafton, who responded immediately and went direct to Woodside's cabin, accompanied by Undersheriff Rountree. Trafton entered the cabin and found Woodside sitting at the opposite side of the room with a shotgun slung across his knees.

The Sheriff sat down in a chair and said, "you may kill me if you want, but if you do, 100 men will be out here to string you up."

Trafton then attempted to reason with Woodside and smooth his anger. At a moment when he caught Woodside off his guard, the Sheriff leaped upon him and took his shotgun.

STRUGGLE STARTS

Rountree then dashed into the cabin and both officers struggled with the prisoner, who showed superhuman strength. They succeeded in getting one handcuff upon him, when Woodside grabbed a gun from Trafton's pocket.

Firing twice point blank at Rountree, who died instantly, Woodside then turned the gun on Sheriff Trafton and shot him twice just below the heart. Although desperately wounded, the Sheriff was able to get the gun away from Woodside and shot him in the head.

Both officers had held their positions as Sheriff and undersheriff for twenty-six years. They were regarded as among the most capable officers in the district. Rountree leaves a widow, a son, and one daughter. Rountree was very active in the Native Sons' organization and was preparing to come to San Francisco to participate in the Diamond Jubilee celebration.

Angeleno Hurt in Auto Accident Near Vancouver

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Sept. 5.—A. Cornero of Los Angeles was seriously cut about the face and body in an automobile accident on the Pacific Highway about twenty miles south of this city last night. An unidentified passenger in Cornero's machine also was slightly injured. The accident occurred when the California car collided with a truck driven by a Vancouver Chinese. Cornero was able to proceed later with a damaged automobile.

EASTERN MAN CUTS THIRD SET OF TEETH

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BROCKTON (Mass.) Sept. 5.—David J. Clifford, 71 years of age, is sprouting a third set of teeth and already has one tooth to prove it. Mr. Clifford lost his front uppers some years ago. A few days ago, he felt several sharp pains in his upper jaw and today is proudly showing an ivory white bicuspid.

r Puts Up Great Battle Over First Nine

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OAKMONT COUNTRY CLUB, PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Sept. 5.—Robert T. Jones, Jr., nta's beloved golfer, successfully defended his title of national amateur champion at Oakmont course today. He defeated his 20-year-old protege, Watts Gunn, also of Atlanta, 8 and 7, in the final match of the national tournament that started last Monday and has been in progress all week. The match and tournament ended on the twenty-ninth hole.

The first nine holes of today's gave the champion the only competition he has faced during the entire tournament. Gunn, dent, was out to beat his r and that first half of the round was a splendid battle. The players were even up at th. At the thirteenth hole, Jones swung into his real game and tossed a salvo of at his opponent that would broken any golfer's heart. there to the finish of the the result was never in

At the eighteenth Jones was 4 up at the twenty-seventh the had a lead of six holes. wide margin Jones added twenty-eighth and then closed the tournament by winning the twenty-ninth. It was all over.

The retention of the title, which he won last year at Merion, the Atlanta golfer one of greatest American-born golfers. This tournament was his from last Monday morning, when he played his first shot in the qualifying round. During the week he defeated William Reekie, of Montclair, N. J.; Clarence Wolff, Hills; George Von Elm, Los Angeles, and finally the boy, Gunn, whom he taught the fine points

The closest match the little had throughout the tournament was with Wolff, whom he beat 6 and 5, on the thirty-six hole. Added to these accomplishments was his qualifying score of strokes behind Roland the medalist. It has been a week of gravy and soft for the champion.

The anticipated drama of today's drew one of the largest that has ever witnessed an tournament. It was estimated that more than 5000 spectators followed the players over the sun-baked Oakmont

GROWL OF THE GOLDEN BEAR HEARD AGAIN

Andy Smith's University of California football players have one more week of inactivity and then comes the big opening day of practice on the 15th inst. The Bears are reported tougher than ever and there seems to be little chance of their being bumped off this season. In the photo below top are shown Niswander, guard; Bart Cock, tackle; Scoop Carlson, quarterback; Jimmy Dixon, halfback. Inset is of Coach Smith. [P. & A. Photos.]

RICH MEN'S SONS PLAY VALET TO GRUFF STARS OF GRIDIRON

STORY OF A GRADUATE MANAGER
The Truth About College Football Finance
CHAPTER VIII
Honors for Rich Men's Sons

[Copyright, 1925, by the North American Newspaper Alliance]

It isn't uncommon in American colleges to see a millionaire's son working as a valet for some plebeian lad, who in turn puts in his summer valeting a team of mules.

There's an "Alice in Wonderland" tale for you! But it's true. Here's how it comes about:

Don't think for a minute that a rich man's son, who may happen to be spindle-legged and flat-chested, is in any way understocked in the prevailing ambition to make a noise in college which will echo out in the world. The old days of vague "cultural" ambitions are passing; undergraduates now have a degree of sophistication which would astonish their elders, and they all know that the best means of making the world look their way is to shove into the spotlight of college athletics—one way or another.

Before showing just where the ambitious, but perhaps anaemic,

FEBVRE TO PLAY GUARD

Has It That U.S.C. Halfback Slated for Line Berth on Howard Jones's 1925 Eleven

BY BRAVEN DYER

Mr. Feg Murray, the well-known cartoonist, says—Believe it the latest football rumor at U.S.C. has it that Henry will play guard this season. ACCEPTS RUTH'S APOLOGY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Manager Miller Huggins has accepted the apology of Babe Ruth. He listened today to the Babe's promises to behave himself but when the meeting was over it was announced that Ruth would not play against the Athletics Sunday afternoon and that the $5000 fine would not be lifted. Shortly before game time today the Babe and his manager held a brief meeting. The penitent one seemed so sincere in his plea that Huggins decided to give him another chance, but the Babe's future with the Yankees it was intimated, hinges entirely upon his future conduct.

Ruth will leave with the team tomorrow night for Boston, where the Yankees meet the Red Sox in a double-header Monday. It has not been decided definitely whether he will play that day. Huggins said he will take no action until game time.

FRENCH NETMEN DEFEAT ANZACS AS RALLY FAILS

Borotra and La Coste Stop Desperate Australian Attack in Time to Win, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 1-6, 10-8

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Fighting off a desperate rally of their opponents the fifth set that carried the Australians from 2-5 to 5, Rene La Coste and Jean Borotra of France defeated Gerald Patterson and John B. Hawkes in the Davis Cup interzone doubles match at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, today, and put their country in a strong position to reach the challenge round. Six thousand spectators witnessed the defeat of the great team from the Antipodes in one of the most enthralling finishes that a gallery ever sat through in the international play.

RENE LA COSTE

Five times the French team stood at match point and each time the Australians, boldly staking everything on their speed and power thwarted them until the eighteenth game of the final set. Borotra, whose sensational work stood out conspicuously almost throughout the match, rose to magnificent heights in this game and his smashing kill, followed by a lightning placement off service, enabled the Gallic pair to break through Hawkes for the set and the match. The score was 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 1-6, 10-8. Two hours and twenty-two minutes of actual play were required before the decision was reached.

BOROTRA HERO

Borotra was the hero of the day in more than one way. In the third game of the fourth set the popular French ace was struck squarely in the temple by a murderous volley smash from Patterson's racket and was knocked flat on the ground. For two minutes he lay stretched out motionless, while players and officials rushed to him and the spectators waited in concern. Hardly more than six feet separated the two players across the net when Patterson

Helen Wills Meets Champ of Bay City

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—More than one hundred matches were played today in five of the ten events scheduled for the California State tennis championship tournament that began at the Berkeley Tennis Club, and in all of them the winners were about as expected. None of the seeded playrs was eliminated in the first and second rounds. The tournament will be continued until the 13th inst annd the star attraction for tomorrow will be Helen Wills, national champion. She will take the court at 2 o'clock against Johanna Gunzburger, San Francisco city champion.

The first matches today began at 8:30 o'clock with the juniors going into action, and in the afternoon the men took the courts. During the morning play the first round was completed in the girls' national hard court championship and in this event two visiting girls eliminated two others from out of the San Francisco Bay region. Ella Wilcox of Santa Clara defeated Mary Taylor of Los Angeles, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5, and Muriel James of Altadena won from Betty Work of Pacific Grove, 6-0, 6-4. The other entrants in the event were from this vicinity.

Elmer Griffin, second seeded player in the men's singles and champion of Oregon, defeated Tom Stowe of the University of California tennis team after the Oregon champion dropped the first set. However, the second and third were taken in short order, the match score being 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

EXPERTS SEE ROSY YEAR FOR COACH ANDY SMITH

Loss of but Two Men and Abundance of Splendid Material Give Bright Hue to Bruin Outlook

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BERKELEY, Sept. 5.—That Mr. Andrew L. Smith, coach of the University of California football team, is destined to pilot the Bears to their sixth consecutive undefeated grid season this fall is the prediction of pigskin experts of this region. "Andy," as he is better known to the tanbark public, is blessed with the best material possible and there seems to be little or no reason why the Bears shouldn't be a whole lot better than they were last year—which ought to be good enough to stave off the grim specter of defeat.

With a squad of veterans, thoroughly grounded in the fundamentals of the game as it is playerd at California, it is probable that Andy will "open up" right at the start of the season with the spectacular brand of football for which he is noted. Not since the graduation of the famous "wonder teams" has Andy been able to "open up" right off the reel, but the opportunity is ripe for just such an occurrence this season.

HAD TO REBUILD

Last year the Blue and Gold coach was faced with the task of building an entirely new team. With the exception of two or three letter men, all his veterans of the previous season had graduated. He had lots of green material, and from this green material he was forced to build an eleven that would perpetuate California's victorious football traditions.

Slowly these new men were trained in the Smith system of football. They were thoroughly grounded in the fundamentals of the game. They were given nothing but straight football for the first month or so. Nothing but straight football was used in their early season games. By the time of the U.S.C. contest they appeared to be thoroughly versed in the rudiments, and in the successive contests Andy opened up with a few of his spectacular plays. The Stanford game gave spectators plenty of opportunity to observe some of Andy's tricks, but it was not until the Pennsylvania contest that the 1924 California aggregation began to resemble a real Andy Smith football team. In that battle they sent the Quakers, whose goal line had not been crossed in the East, home with a 14-to-0 licking, and gave the spectators the best demonstration of Andy Smith football since the days of Brick Muller.

LOSES ONLY TWO

With the exception of Babe Horrell and Gordon White, every man of this first-string eleven will be back in action when practice opens on the 15th inst. Thoroughly trained in the basic principles of the game, and with a wonderful record for the past season, they will not have to spend day after day in preliminary work, but can be trained from the start in intricate and spectacular plays, for which Andy is famous.

FOSTER TO REMAIN AS GRID COACH

Sid to Coach Manual Arts Elevens; Kienholz Not Yet Signed

Amid the turmoil of conflicting reports and looming through the confusing mists of rumor, stands the silent but rock-ribbed fact that Coach Sid Foster, who has piloted many Manual Arts High Shool teams to championships, will be head football coach at the Toiler institution again during the coming season. Any new coaches coming to Manual will work with him.

Vice-Principal C. P. Fonda yesterday stated that efforts are being made to sign Eddie Kienholz, former Long Beach and last year, Santa Clara College coach. "We want Kienholz," Fonda stated, "but Coach Foster will still be a football coach at Manual Arts. Kienholz has not yet been signed, however."

It has been reported that Foster would henceforth be only head of the gymnasium department, but successful Sid will nevertheless retain his standing as grid mentor. Whoever the other coach is, he will work with Foster—not alone.

FIVE IN ROW FOR TIGERS

Vernon Youngsters Have Two Big Innings and Nab Another Game from Senators, 7 to 5

BY ROBERT RAY

As the young mother said while preparing the baby's bottle, "Youth will be served." Buddy Ryan's so-so Senators from Sacramento found out that the foregoing statement was no applesauce when they fell before Ruben Ellis's youthful Tigers for the fifth straight time yesterday at Washington Park. The score was 7 to 5.

The Bengals had two big innings, the fourth and fifth, in which they landed on Spec Shea for all seven of their runs. Despite the socking efforts of Merwin Shea, Spec's catching brother, those seven runs proved enough to win for the Tigers. It also clinched the series for the home guards.

M. Shea, who is being looked over by Scout Hank Gowdy of the New York Giants, had another good day at the plate, socking out a double and two singles in four times at bat. Shea drove in a couple of runs and scored two himself, so his bespectacled brother can't blame him because the game was lost.

Pat O'Shea, young Bengal infielder recently picked up from the local semipro ranks, once more distinguished himself by getting a double that scored three men and put the Tigers back in the ball game in the fourth. Evar Swanson kept up his hitting streak, getting two hits out of three trips to the plate. Tommy Oliver and Jack Warner also hit well for the Tigers, the former getting two safeties and the latter three.

The umpiring was not too good, but only one player, Paddy Siglin, was chased to the clubhouse. Paddy was kicked out of the pastime in the seventh for protesting a low third strike called by Umpire Schmidt. It wasn't what Siglin said so much as what he did that riled Schmidt. Paddy got

PIRATES TASTE BAD LUCK AS PENNANT FLUTTERS NEAR

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Pittsburgh, while taking a close game from the St. Louis Cardinals today, 6 to 5, and maintaining its eight-game advantage over the New York Giants who won from Philadelphia, 14 to 10, suffered a two-fold blow that could conceivably impede the runaways the Pirates recently have been staging.

The loss, possibly for some time, of Johnny Rawlings and Eddie Moore, the inspired work of both has been outstanding in the Pirates' spurt, gives the leaders their first taste of bad luck this season.

The standing:

Pittsburgh	81	47	.633
New York	76	58	.567

The day saw the ninth successive defeat of the Philadelphia Athletics, the Yankees shutting them out, 3 to 0. Washington ran its lead to seven games when the Senators nosed out the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 6, in a whipping finish.

The standing:

Pirates Make It Two Out of Three Over Cards; Giants Bump Phils as Reds and Cubs Split Two

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Sept. 5.—The Pirates made it two out of three from St. Louis by winning today's game, 6 to 5. The game was a costly one for the league leaders. Moore was injured in the first in fielding Thevenow's single and forced to retire. In the sixth, Johnny Rawlings, the main cog in the Pirates' recent spurt, was hurt sliding into second and was carried from the field.

Fresco Thompson, Kansas City recruit, replaced Rawlings. Manager McKechnie was ordered from the coaching lines as was Carey, but the latter was later permitted to bat for Meadows. Score:

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—The Giants concluded their series with the Phillies by winning today's game, 14 to 10. The hitting was free on both sides and the fielding poor, six errors being charged to the Giants. Virgil Barnes started in the box for the Giants, but was knocked out in the first inning, Dean going the rest of the distance. Philadelphia used four twirlers. Kelley hit his eighteenth homer of the year. Williams, Hawkes and Wrightstone also hit for the circuit. The score:

CUBS-REDS DIVIDE

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Cincinnati broke even in a double-header with Chicago today by winning the second game, 4 to 1, after being shut out, 6 to 0, in the first game.

Dick Keen weakened in the eighth inning of the last game, and the visitors pounded his offerings to all corners of the lot in the ninth inning and won easily. Freigau's home run in the first inning saved the Cubs from a shutout.

Kaufman's pitching and some timely hitting by the Cubs were responsible for the downfall of the Reds in the first game. Scores:

SEMIPRO GAMES ON TAP

Hot Series Battles Feature Today's Games on Southern California Diamonds

Secretary Harry E. Defty of the Greater Southern California Baseball Association announced a heavy schedule of semipro games on local diamonds for today. Some hot clashes are expected in the various loops when several teams meet in series games. The semipro season has been a peach and the closing games of the summer season are developing some fast and close struggles.

Palms and the Eastman Tigers will meet on the Palms diamond today to play off the odd game of their three-game series. Each club has won a game so a slam-bang two hours is expected when the rivals get together. Several other series that tend to give the fans high-blood pressure are also on tap. Mike Goslin, Jr., will take his hard-hitting Azusa nine to Pasadena to play the equally hard-hitting Eagles. This is the second game of their series and will be staged at Tournament Park. Henderson will take his Midway Gas team to Taft today and then take on the Pacific Oil on Monday.

It was also announced that all games of the Southern California Postal League had been postponed. The schedule will be resumed at a date to be given out later.

Today's Schedule.

Fresno Japanese vs. Los Angeles White Sox at White Sox Park.
Montebello vs. San Bernardino Centrals at San Bernardino.
Midway Gas vs. Taft at Taft.
Scully Grove vs. Santa Monica Merchants at Santa Monica.
Los Angeles Panthers vs. Maravilla Park at Maravilla Park.
Eastman Tigers vs. Palms at Palms.
Azusa vs. Pasadena Eagles at Tournament Park.
Pacific Fruit vs. Home Gardens at Home Gardens.
Tucson Brew vs. Monterey Park.
Howitzer Company vs. Belvedere Gardens at Belvedere Gardens.
Los Angeles Giants vs. Watts Monarchs at Watts.
American Railway Express vs. Watts Merchants at Watts.

MAY BE WORLD CHAMPIONS

Who can tell? At any rate these Pittsburgh Pirates shown below seem very certain of winning the National League pennant and at least getting a chance at the baseball's highest title. The five Bucs lined up are the speediest quintet on one club in the majors. They are Grantham, Cuyler, Moore, Bigbee and Carey, all expert base snatchers. In the inset is Earl Smith, former Giant catcher, who is now having the last laugh at Jawn McGraw's expense. McGraw turned Smith loose, but with the Pirates this year he had proved one of Pittsburgh's hardest hitters as well as a sterling backstop.

BALLS ARE CHANGED TO AID HURLER

Some of Liveliness is Taken from Sphere by Manufacturers

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BY IRVING VAUGHN

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Has some of the distance been eliminated from the official baseballs of the American and National leagues?

John McGraw

John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, stated recently that he knew positively that the makers had altered the ball with the idea of helping the pitchers. As proof of his assertion the Giant leader pointed to the unusual number of tight, low-score games, but recent games indicate as many big innings as before, and nobody has come forth with an official statement as to whether the pill is the same old "jack rabbit" or whether it has been slowed down.

About the only people who really can answer truthfully are the actual makers of the ball, and they seem in no mood to enlighten anybody. They can remain silent and still sell their product, because their contract provides only that a ball must be a certain weight and size. What goes into it and how it goes is for them to say.

Since McGraw made his assertion there has been a story in circulation to the effect that one alteration made in the ball involves the cover. One of the many recent changes in construction made by the manufacturers—and it was these changes that gave the pill its added life—was the gluing of the leather cover to the body of the pill.

Whether the addition of glue would tend to give a ball greater carry is a thing that could be determined only by very exacting tests, but one thing is a cinch, and that is that a glued cover places a certain handicap on the pitchers, at least on some of them. A glued cover is practically rigid, whereas a cover held on only by stitches could be stretched a bit by a hurler with a strong pair of hands, and by stretching it was possible to raise a seam and thus get a better break on a pitched ball because of the uneven resistance in flight.

Now the baseballs are said to be coming out minus the glue between yarn and cover, and it may be that other changes, such as looser winding of the yarn and thicker leather, may follow.

A month or so ago members of an American League team, playing at Philadelphia, waxed curious about the make-up of the balls and opened one. They found that instead of the usual black rubber layer around the cork center, was a layer of red rubber. This may not have made any difference in the carry of the ball, but the players who made the discovery reported it as a matter of interest. It so happens that the Philadelphia club in the junior major and the baseball factory are owned by practically the same people.

It seems reasonably certain that in view of the sufferings of the pitchers this season, the two majors may have to take some action this coming winter. By mutual action they can force the ball makers to turn out a product that will strike a happy medium. Unless such a step is taken there won't be any worth-while hurlers in a few years, because no kid is going to take up slabbing as a profession when the best he can look forward to is getting "beaned" by a line drive.

John Honus (Hans) Wagner, famous shortstop of the Pittsburgh Pirates in years gone by, is a candidate for Sheriff on the Republican and Labor tickets. Since his retirement from baseball, Wagner has conducted a sporting-goods store in Pittsburgh.

PICK~UPS

BY RAY

MR. SHINE SCOTT, high-powered trainer of the Vernon Tigers, has a few reasons to broadcast to the world as to why some hitters are not hitting as they should.

"Rube" Ellis

While baseball critics all over these United States are raving about the lively ball, which they claim is the cause of expanded batting averages, Shine's discourse is interesting because he takes the "con" side of the hitting argument.

One thing that Shine wouldn't allow on a ball club if he were boss would be lengthy bats.

"If yah got a long bat," reasons Shine, "it's a cinch dat yah'll reach way out aftah wide ones. Nevah was no good hittahs dat reached at bad balls. Anothah thing about those long wagon-tongues is dat dey has all got little handles. Yah can't get a good grip on 'em.

"One of de real requisites of hittin' is gettin' a good grip on the bat. If yah got a good grip on the bat, yah can drive de ball wifout taking a wild swing. Jes meet de ball and if yah got a good grip, de ball will drive.

"NEVAH did care much about dose batters what swing dey're heads off at the ball. Dey's some good hittahs dat can swing dey're heads off, but dey're not frequent. To swing youh head off and not look foolish at de plate, yah got to have a keen eye and perfect co-ordination of de muscles. Everybody ain't built dat way.

"Anothah detriment to battin'," goes on Shine, "is de weekly battin' averages printed in the papahs. Battah gets to wonderin' how much he'5s a-hittin' and he can't do his best up at de plate.

"Still, yah can't blame de playahs for playin' to dey're battin' averages, cause dat's de standard of dey're salary. When a ownah signs a playah, de fust ting he asks is 'How much did he hit?' Dey don't ask about how many runs he drove in or is he a good team man, but 'how much did he hit?'

"It ain't right," moans Shine, "but what yah goin' to do about it?"

Shine has been trainer for the Vernon Tigers ever since they were organized to fill up in the Coast League some seventeen years ago. During that time Shine has seen players go and players come, but Shine sticks right on—chasing aches and pains out of the Tiger clubhouse.

"After you is in baseball so long," says Shine, "yah can lose a game and fohget about it aftah yah get out of de pahk. But everybody likes to win, and Ah don't believe dey's a tougher spot dan de clubhouse of de losing team."

MILLER HUGGINS is now having the last laugh at the expense of one George Herman Ruth, who is now having a few downs after a number of ups in the baseball world.

Babe Ruth

When the Bambino was slugging out home runs with such frequency that he was the greatest drawing card in the national pastime, he acted just as he pleased.

Babe never did care much for his boss, and several times, when the Yanks were traveling and Ruth was on one of his sprees, his fellow-players were forced to lock Huggins in a drawing-room to keep the big fellow from carrying out a desire to throw Miller off the train. Huggins couldn't suspend Ruth in those days because Babe was too much of a popular player and drawing card.

Now things are different. Babe evidently thought he could lead the same life, but now Huggins has given the Bambino something to worry about.

Yes, indeed, Huggins is having the last laugh. And didn't some one once say something about he who laughs last laughing best?

THE writer has often wondered what John McGraw would do if he had a fellow like Ruth on his club. Jawn stands for no monkey-business from his players, but what would he do with the Bambino if he were hitting homers as he did when he was going strongest?

McGraw would probably have had to sit back just as Huggins did, because you don't get drawing cards like Ruth every day, and it's the money that the magnates are after.

ATLANTA IN BIG SERIES WITH PELS

Southern Association's Flag Hinges on Result of Games This Week

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ATLANTA, Sept. 5.—One of the most exciting pennant races ever waged in the Southern Association is expected to be decided at the local park this week when the contending New Orleans Pels come here for a four-game series, starting Wednesday with Bert Niehoff's Atlanta Bears.

Bert Niehoff

Each club has only three more games to play after the crucial series, so any margin gained this week may prove enough to win the pennant.

There is a double reason for both the Bears and Pels wanting to win, for the club that captures the gonfalon also gets the right to meet the Fort Worth Panthers, Texas League winners, in the "Dixie Series." Getting into the "Dixie Series" means more money for the players, and it is a well-known fact that there are few ball players in the business that wouldn't add a little fight and pep to their work if it meant extra cash of the realm.

New Orleans, due to consistent pitching, went out and took a big lead early in the season, but the Bears kept on fighting under Neihoff until now they are perched on top by a scant margin. Several former Coast Leaguers are on the Atlanta club, included among them being the following: Rod Murphy, Joe Jenkins, "Wheezer" Dell, Jim Bagby, Red Smith and Manager Niehoff.

If Niehoff wins the flag, and most everyone in Atlanta believes he will, it will be his second Southern Association pennant in three years. Niehoff piloted the Mobile club to victory two years ago. It will be Atlanta's first pennant for more than ten years. Niehoff has already been signed to manage the Bears in 1926.

DUFFY LEWIS QUITS; HANNAH NEW MANAGER OF PORTLAND

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 5.—George (Duffy) Lewis, manager and part owner of the Portland Club of the Pacific Coast League, announced his resignation today as manager, following a conference with President Thomas L. Turner. The cause of the resignation was a row Lewis had yesterday with Third Baseman Harry Riconda. Lewis said he would retain his stock in the club and would remain with the team. He said he would do some scouting for the team next year and assist in the business management. Harry Hannah was made manager.

Pittsburgh and Washington Clu Have Major League Pennants Practically Clinched

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 5.—It will be the old story of versus youth again in this fall's world series which will Bucky Harris's Washington Senators battling to defend championship title against the slashing, dashing Pitts Pirates, who have stopped the New York Giants' run of consecutive National League penants.

Although neither the Pira the Senators have yet matically made certain of the nants in the National and can leagues, they are so far that they are generally the gonfalons.

The Buccaneers are holding a nine-game lead over the Giants and going strong. Nothing but a miracle could win for the Giant crew, and it is generally agreed that miracles aren't being performed every day. Ever since that crucial series with the Giants at the Polo Grounds, the Pirates have rapidly pulling away from McGraw's henchmen.

Philadelphia's slump has it possible for the world pions to leave the Macks lurch. Since that last trip Louis, when the Browns them four in a row, Athletics been couple whoops whooping patient. Vance Wins Twentieth in Opener, But Boston Takes Second, 4 to 3

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—Brooklyn and Boston divided a double-header today, the Robins taking the opener, 5 to 3, and dropping the second, 4 to 3. Dazzy Vance registered his twentieth victory of the season in the first game. He fanned nine batters, increasing his string of strikeouts for the season to 198.

With none out in the ninth of the second game, Bob Smith's single drove Marriott home with the winning run. Scores:

Browns Even With White Sox in 10-8 Slugfest

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The champion Senators marched nearer their second straight world series today by taking a see-saw game from Boston, 7 to 6, for their seventh consecutive win. Washington now has a seven-game lead over the runner-up, the Athletics, losing today to the Yankees.

Win Ballou, recently acquired from Chattanooga of the Southern Association, received credit for the victory, relieving Ruether in the eighth with the score tied. In two trips to the plate he bagged a single. Twice the Senators knotted the count after Boston had scored two runs in the first and second innings. Wingfield, Red Sox hurler, poled a homer in the second with a man on base.

An unusual play featured the fifth inning when, with one out and the bases loaded with Red Sox, Flagstead hit a liner, which glanced off Ruether's glove into the hands of Harris, who completed a double play at second. Score:

DREYFUSS TO RETIRE, IS RUMOR

Pirate Owner to Sell to Fred Clarke After World Series, Says Report

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 5.—Reports are current here in baseball and sporting circles that Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh National Baseball Club, in the event of the Pirates winning the pennant this season, will retire from baseball, selling controlling interest in his club to a syndicate headed by Fred Clarke, who is now acting assistant to Dreyfuss.

For some time it has been known that the ambition of President Dreyfuss was to win another National League pennant, that once that ambition was realized, he would retire from the game.

While Dreyfuss has never said that he would retire from baseball, he stated at the time Clarke was engaged as his assistant that "he was getting old and needed some one who understood the business to aid him."

Clarke on several occasions, had frankly stated that he would like to purchase the Pittsburgh club. That he can secure the capital is well known here. Whether Dreyfuss will quit this year is, however, not known for a certainty but the reports are that he will.

Angels Divide With Sud Gang

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SEATTLE, Sept. 5.—Seattle and Los Angeles split a double-header here today, the Angels taking the first game, 18 to 2, and the Indians winning the second, 6 to 1. Los Angeles took the lead in the first game by scoring nine runs in the second and four in the third. The Indians made their runs in the fifth and seventh. Beck, Grimes and Hood smashed out home runs.

Ramsey's fine pitching helped the Indians considerably in winning the second game. McCabe knocked out a homer, and T. Baldwin hit out a three-bagger. Score:

YOUNG TIGERS TAKE ANOTHER

down on his knees at the plate, meaning that he'd have had to have been in that position for the ball to have passed him in strike territory.

The Senators got off in front by scoring three runs in the fourth inning. McLoughlin opened the round with a single to center, but was forced at second by Davis, O'Shea making a good play to get his man. Davis stole second because nobody got over to cover the bag in time, Danning's throw being perfect. M. Shea then drove Davis home by lacing out a safety to center. Cunningham hit to Warner who threw to O'Shea to start what looked like an easy double play. However, O'Shea stepped off the bag before getting the ball in his hurry to throw to first. Umpire Teck called Shea safe at second, and he was right, but was way off when he called Cunningham safe at first, for O'Shea's throw beat Billy by a couple of feet. Both runners scored on Backer's single to center after Brown had walked to fill the sacks. Bryan retired E. Shea and Kopp to end the inning.

Walbeck singled to open the Vernon half of the inning, but Wolfer fouled to M. Shea. Walbeck was safe at second and McDowell at first when McLoughlin fumbled the latter's roller. Oliver popped to M. Shea, but Swanson walked, filling the bases. Then came O'Shea with his double to left center, cleaning the sacks and tying the score.

The Sacs got another run in the fifth when McLoughlin was hit by a pitched ball, stole second and went to third when O'Shea failed to cover on another perfect throw by Danning. M. Shea's second hit brought McLoughlin over the plate.

The youthful Tigers once more came right back with a rally, chasing in four runs in the home half of the fifth. Bryan reached second when Brown dropped his long fly for a starter, but Warner and Walbeck were both easy outs. Wolfer and McDowell followed with doubles and that put two runs over. Oliver's single to center scored McDowell, and Tommy went to second on the throw-in. Swanson beat out a slow roller to McLoughlin, Oliver scoring from second, while Davis held the ball. O'Shea lofted to Brown for the third out.

Sacramento collected its final run in the eighth when M. Shea doubled and scored when Cunningham's roller bounced over McDowell for a single. Brown sacrificed Cunningham to second, but Billy died at the half-way station when O'Shea and Wolfer made sensational catches of drives by Backer and Watson, the latter batting for E. Shea.

Wally Canfield, Carroll's younger brother, who is also a southpaw, blanked the Tigers in the eighth.

Bryan set the Solons down in one-two-three order in the ninth to close the contest.

Ike Danning, young Vernon catcher, had to retire in the ninth when a foul tip split one of his best fingers. Rod Whitney finished the game behind the log.

Two today, with the opener scheduled for 1:30.

Indian Manager Retains American League Batting Lead; Hornsby Hitting at .399 Clip

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Youth is teaming it with age today for the 1925 batting championship of the American League. Al Simmons, colorful star with the Athletics, is the youngster battling the grizzled veterans, Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, with another veteran, Harry Heilmann, showing up just around the corner.

Tris Speaker

Speaker, leader of the Indians, returned to the game after a long lay-off, appearing at bat just once during the week, and added one point to his average, giving him a mark of .391. Simmons is tied with Cobb, Detroit pilot, for second-place honors, with .378 each. Simmons, however, has played in 123 games to 101 for Cobb. Harry Rice of the Browns, is the third with .374, with Heilmann fourth with .373. The figures are based on games of Wednesday.

Other leading batters: Wingo, Detroit, .362; Sisler, St. Louis, .360; Lamar, Philadelphia, .353; Collins, Chicago, .347.

Hazen Cuyler of the Pirates went on a batting spree that carried him to a fourth-place berth, for an average of .355. Harper of Philadelphia, also is hitting at this figure, but he has not participated in as many games. Cuyler has been doing some timely hitting for the Pirates and his base running has been an outstanding feature in the Pirates' attack. He has registered 130 runs, and was hooked up with Max Carey, a teammate, for the base-stealing honor. Each has thirty.

Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Cardinals, who continues to top the National list, increased his average by five points, and is leading with .399. Jimmy Bottomley, also of St. Louis, with .376, with Jack Fournier of the Dodgers, third, with .360.

COLLEGE TAKES IN $5,000,000

Gross receipts from athletic contests at Ohio State University during the 1924-1925 season reached the record sum of $421,860.30. Football yielded the greatest gross revenue of $327,768.60. Basketball and football were the only sports to pay their own way.

BEES DOWNED BY OAKS IN EXCITING TUSSLE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

OAKLAND, Sept. 5.—Oakland downed the Bees in an exciting contest today, 8 to 7, and took the lead in the series, three games to two. The Bees battered Krause from the mound in the first canto, scoring four times, and grabbed three more at the expense of Harris. Foster, who relieved Harris, pitched shutout ball for the remainder of the game. Ponder, with a four-run lead, weakened in the later innings and gave way to Stroud and Hulvey. Score:

Buckeye Routed by Tigers in Fourth Inning

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

CLEVELAND, Sept. 5.—Ty Cobb's tearing Tigers made it nine straight victories when they trounced the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 4, here today. The veteran George Dauss, on the mound for Detroit, held the Indians in check until the ninth when he grew wild and allowed the locals to chase over three runs.

Buckeye was the starting hurler for Cleveland, but he retired in the fourth after the Tigers had nicked him for four hits. Buckeye's wildness also added to his troubles. Score:

SENIORS TRIP SOPHS IN BEAR GRID BRAWL

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BERKELEY, Sept. 5.—Opening the preliminary football season at the University of California, the Seniors defeated the Sophs, 27 to 6, in the first game of the interclass series this afternoon in the California Memorial stadium. The game was a mediocre contest replete with fumbles and poor playing on the part of both teams. The Seniors led at half time, 14 to 4.

Ford

"It Certainly is a Smart-looking Car"

That's what everyone has to say who has seen the latest Ford cars.

That such attractive motor cars could be offered without the slightest increase in prices, seemed incredible to a public long familiar with Ford values.

Yet enthusiasm for the smart new appearance can never supersede the fact that it is the quality of materials and workmanship that has made the Ford the world's leading automobile value. New beauty has not crowded out traditional Ford reliability.

In every part of the Ford car quality is being steadily improved. And the high standard set is maintained uniformly by ceaseless testing, inspections and checks.

The very volume of Ford output demands absolute accuracy of every working part. The steady flow of production is dependent upon parts fitting together perfectly; inaccuracies would interrupt and delay assembly. And to this precision must be largely credited the uniformly fine performance and freedom from trouble of all Ford cars.

In these latest Ford cars, the longer, lower lines of the chassis and all-steel bodies, the increased roominess, the greater riding comfort and the many convenient new features are advantages which are widely welcomed.

Closed cars now shown in color are unusually pleasing; new and finer upholstery gives an artistic harmony to the cars. Bright nickeled radiators feature the closed cars and nickeled headlamp rims are on all types. The fenders are larger and longer, and the running boards are wider.

Comfort is increased by the cars' lower center of gravity, by the low, deep, wide seats, by the added foot room, and by many other refinements that contribute to your ease, convenience and safety.

Here is the ideal car for a woman's personal use—good-looking, trustworthy, easy to handle and inexpensive to maintain. Here, too, is a practical car for any family—that every member of the family can enjoy.

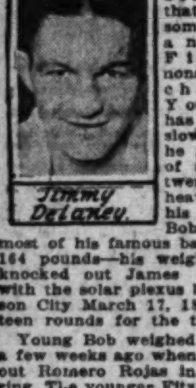
Young Bob Fitzsimmons, Son of Famous Fighter, in Local Debut at Vernon Tuesday

MEETS JIMMY DELANEY IN TEN-ROUND BATTLE

Offspring of Former World Champ Aiming at Title Now Held by William Harrison Dempsey

Young Bob Fitzsimmons—only son of the lanky Cornishman Ruby Rob—is here to box Jimmy Delaney at Vernon Tuesday night. It is his first appearance on the West Coast—scene of his famous father's first American triumph. Mention of that name—Bob Fitzsimmons—cuts back into the memories of yesterday for Fitz, as he was called, is one of the few immortals of prize-ring history.



Jimmy Delaney.

For years the world has wondered over and watched the development of Young Bob. Did this boy's great fighting dad leave him the birthright that would some day make another Fitzsimmons world champion? Young Bob has come along slowly. Today he is 29 years of age. He is twenty pounds heavier than his father. Old Bob fought most of his famous battles around 164 pounds—his weight when he knocked out James J. Corbett with the solar plexus blow at Carson City March 17, 1897, in fourteen rounds for the title.

Young Bob weighed around 185 a few weeks ago when he knocked out Romero Rojas in a Jersey ring. The younger Fitz has stopped his last eight opponents. Thus this boy seems to have found himself—his power to punch at an age when most ring men are waning.

His late start is an exact duplicate of his father's career. Old Fitz dubbed around Australia for ten years as a fighter before he developed a knockout punch. The father was 29 years of age, when Jack Dempsey, the nonpareil, stood between him and the middleweight title.

Today Young Bob, at 29, finds another Jack Dempsey standing between him and the heavyweight title. There never was a more complete parallel up to this point—even to names and age. Old Bob knocked out the nonpareil in 1891, on January 14, at New Orleans, in thirteen rounds.

Fitz was nearly 35 years of age when he beat Jim Corbett for the world's heavyweight championship. He was a few days over 37 when Jim Jeffries took the title from him—knocked him out in eleven rounds at Coney Island June 9, 1889. Fitz was past 40 when Jeff stopped him the second time.

He stopped Peter Maher, Tom Sharkey, Gus Rublin—and others. What a terrific puncher the old Cornishman was to stop men of the caliber of Dempsey, Corbett and Sharkey. Old Fitz began his ring career in 1880. He finished it in 1914. That's a period of thirty-four years. And he didn't find his punch until he was 29 years of age.

Maybe they broke the mould when they made old Ruby Robert. And maybe they didn't. Will Young Bob follow the career of his illustrious dad to the heavyweight title?

Erne, the 4-year-old chestnut gelding by White Eagle-Cascatel, has been purchased by Mrs. Payne Whitney at a price reported to be $15,000. Erne was formerly owned by King George of England.

CALIFORNIA SCHEDULES TEN BOUTS

Bruins Meet Cardinal and Huskie Boxers in College Boxing Meets

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Sept. 5.—Boxing at the University of California should receive its share of glory this season with a schedule of ten boxing meets, including two with Stanford, for the coming year.

California will meet its ancient rival, the Cardinals, in the squared arena for the first time in three years. One meet will take place at Berkeley and the other at Palo Alto. Washington University has also received a place on the Bear boxing schedule for two meets. The California fighters will come in for their share of trips this season when they meet the Huskies and also Davis Farm, Southern Branch of California, and possibly Oregon, in two meets.

Coach "Stan" Jones, who has been managing the destinies of the Bruin boxers for the past four years, is already lining up his men for the interclass contests which will soon be waged. Capt. Bob Tobey and several veterans will again wear the padded gloves, and are helping Coach Jones instruct the newer aspirants.

MANY SPORTS EVENTS SCHEDULED AT RESORT

Although most of the athletes comprising the little summer athletic colony at Lake Arrowhead have returned to college halls there will be a number of sports events at the lake during the remainder of the month.

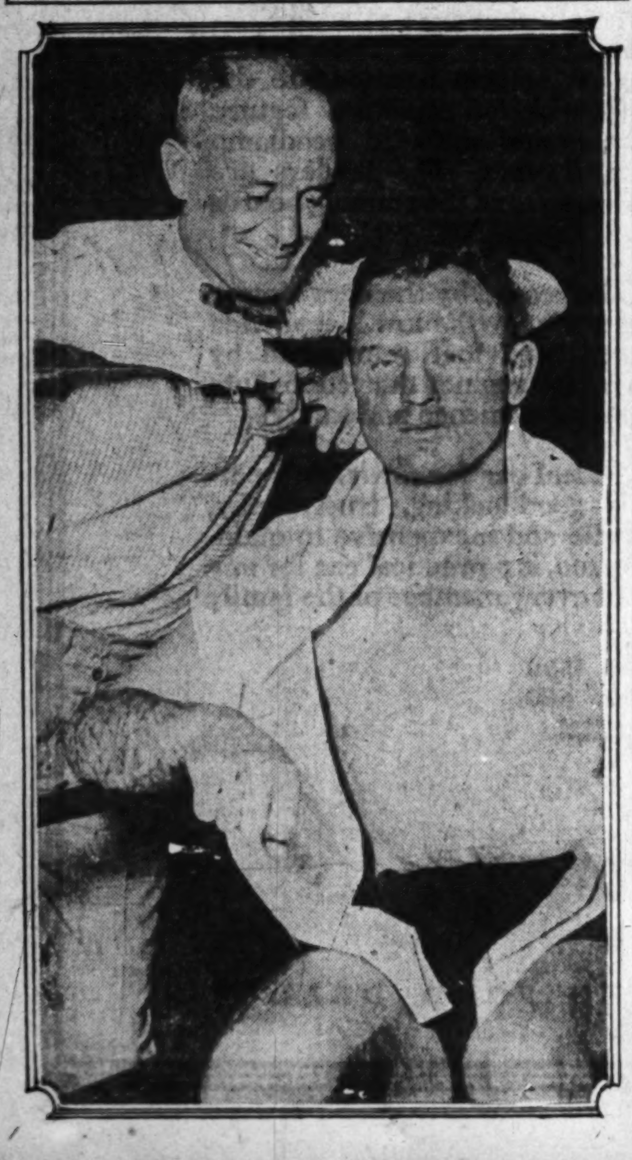
The annual pool tournament will be held on the 16th inst. and the annual horseshoe tournament on 23rd inst., as well as an outdoor carnival and an autumn festival.

THREE GRIDMEN WITH MACKS

There are three former football players with the Philadelphia Athletics. Walter French, the old West Point star, now a utility outfielder, and Gordon Cochrane, catcher, were a pair of backs good enough for any team in the country, and George Berry, substitute catcher, is the old Lafayette star end who was graduated from the Easton College last June.

200 COACHES AT SCHOOL

Two hundred coaches from the Middle West and East have registered for Knute Rockne's coaching school, which began at Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind.



AS GOOD AS HIS DAD?

That's what local fight fans want to know. Young Bob Fitzsimmons, son of famous Ruby Bob, meets Jimmy Delaney in the ten-round main event at Vernon Tuesday night. He is shown here with his manager, Hugh Gartland. Gartland had Firpo when he first came to this country and plans to bring the Wild Bull to Los Angeles this winter.

Here you see Big Benny, flanked on either side by Small Sammy and Small Sidney. Benny is regarded with favor, because he knew when to quit, because he retired for his mother's sake, and because he didn't try to keep his title and yet not fight, as the so-called heavyweight champion is doing.

Jimmy Goodrich, winner of the lightweight elimination tournament, is the champion in the eyes of the New York Boxing Commission, and perhaps a few other people also regard him as such. But is he a real successor to Benny Leonard, Freddie Welsh, Willie Ritchie, Ad Wolgast, Battling Nelson, Joe Gans, Frank Erne, Kid Lavigne and Jack McAuliffe? Answer: he is not.

Who, then, is the man to wear the jeweled derby left vacant by the abdication of Yaphank Benny? Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill.; Sid Terris, of New York's East Side; Solly Seeman, also of New York, and Luis Vicentini, of Chile, appear to be the logical contenders. Mandell and Terris have beaten many good lightweights this year, and Seeman has a decision over Mandell. Vicentini is back, ready for business more dangerous than ever. Which one of these four horsemen will fill Benny Leonard's shoes?

Sid Terris, that flashy will-o'-the-wisp, is improving with every start. But he is a gymnasium-trained boxer, and it seems that, all other things being equal, the boxer who grows up in, or at least spends a lot of time in, a smaller town or the country has the advantage. That's why I favor Sammy Mandell, or this tough wildcat from Nebraska, Ace Hudkins, who lost a close decision to Terris.

SALT-WATER FISHING REPORTED VERY POOR

Salt-water fishing has shown little or no improvement in the last week, according to the B. H. Dyas Company. Mackerel are being caught, a few halibut and some bass of a fair size from boats from Redondo and Santa Monica. No yellowtail have shown in the Bay District waters.

A first-hand report was received from Capistrano declaring that albacore fishing was at a standstill. Only a few yellowtail are being caught. There is a fair run of skipjacks.

Some pretty good mackerel and cod fishing is being had just off the lighthouse at San Pedro. The old-timers are of the opinion that yellowtail fishing should start in a week or not at all for this season.

FRESNO JAPANESE PLAY SERIES HERE

The Los Angeles Japanese diamonds will entertain the Japanese from Fresno in a two-game series today and Monday, Labor Day.

The Los Angeles boys have recently made a journey to Fresno where they played a series of games. The Los Angeles series should prove interesting and no doubt a big following will witness the games.

BOXING NOTES

Gotta hand it to Joe Schlocker. He is the hardest worker at the Manhattan and fairly burns up his energy. Joe is in great shape just now, and declares he will make many of the best of 'em around here dance to his music before the moon bobs up many times more.

Al Grunan is just a-hankering for a rematch with Dutch Crozier. Al has been getting busy lately at the Manhattan with pulleys and punching bag, and is gradually getting back into that shape that made him a many times winner around Vernon. Al claims that if he can get Crozier into the ring with him again that Dutch will not be able to disturb one hair of his patent-leather mop.

Joe Levy, the popular promoter and boxing manager, left Los Angeles for New York last Thursday night in the interests of Jack Root's Olympic Club. While in Gotham, Joe will endeavor to drum up some high-class fistic talent for Root's shows this fall. If Levy doesn't grab some darbs, many local fans will be very much surprised.

Knute Hansen, the promising heavyweight that has been scuffing the floor of the Manhattan lately, has been drawing a great deal of attention to himself. He has shown a clear noodle in steering clear of Dempsey as a sparring partner. Declares that he thinks pretty well of the head that he now carries on his shoulders, and isn't hurting to have it changed. Knute is the champion of Sweden, but claims it doesn't buy him much. Manager and Trainer Jerry McCarthy is firmly of the belief that Knute is the best heavy prospect he has seen in this neck of the timber in some time.

The boys at the Manhattan are putting one over on Ed Warner. It runs something like this—When Ed wins a fight, his dog follows him, but when he loses, he follows Fido. Ed has not been having a dog's life of it lately.

Georgie Marks and George Levine blew into town last Friday, after finding where the pavement ends in New York. Big Bill Tate slashed in with them. One of Gotham's leading boxing critics freely declares that Marks hung it all over Genaro when the lads met at Red Banks, N. J., about a month ago. It sure do take a mighty good bantam to make Georgie cry "uncle" these days.

SENCIO CHALLENGES FIDEL

Sensational Filipino Flyweight Wants Crack at Championship; Gave Villa Tough Fight

On July 14 Pancho Villa, world's flyweight champion, died at San Francisco. On August 21 Sencio Moldez, flyweight champion of the Orient, arrived in the United States. On August 22 Fidel La Barba, schoolboy phenom of Los Angeles, defeated Frankie Genaro and inherited the American flyweight title. On August 24 Frank A. Churchill issued a challenge to La Barba, the new champion, on behalf of Sencio Moldez.

That's the chronological sequence of important events pertaining to the flyweight division.

SENCIO MOLDEZ

Sencio Moldez is a Filipino, like Pancho Villa. He was born in Tacloban, Leyte, Philippine Islands, and is 21 years of age. Like Pancho, he established a sensational record in the Philippine Islands, frequently taking on opponents who scaled ten pounds heavier than himself.

The most important battle of Sencio's career was staged at Manila on May 2 of this year. He met Pancho Villa in a fifteen-round bout for the world flyweight championship. Villa received the decision, but little Sencio made such a sensational showing in this battle that Frank Churchill immediately cabled his partner in Manila, Stewart Tait, to put Sencio under contract and send him to the United States.

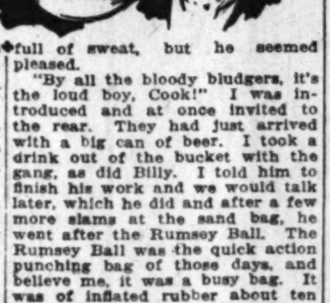
Pancho Villa, on his return to the United States, told Churchill that Sencio was the best prospect in the Philippines, and a great little boxer.

The death of Pancho Villa hastened the departure of Sencio from the Philippines, and the little Filipino has been burdened with the important task of regaining the flyweight title, which is not the easiest task in the world.

The flyweights who stand between Sencio Moldez and world honors are of considerably higher caliber than those who stood between Pancho Villa and the title, and the task confronting little Sencio is correspondingly more difficult.

If he succeeds, he will be the second Filipino to win a world championship, and the only living Filipino to hold one.

MEGAPHONE COOK'S FIGHT YARNS



One of my past experiences came vividly to my mind as I read Tommy Ryan's encounters with Mysterious Billy Smith.

In 1898 I stopped over in Cleveland, O., on my way to visit some relatives who lived in Akron, thirty-three miles south.

I went to the United States Hotel for the occasion and as I stepped into the bar room after signing the hotel register, I spied a familiar figure. Making myself conspicuous, I was soon hailed.

"Hello Cookie, and now what?" came from this person.

It was none other than Billy Lavine, brother of the very illustrious Kid Lavine.

After the usual exchanges I learned that he was pulling off a fight two nights hence between Young Peter Jackson and Mysterious Billy Smith.

I had never met the black boy Jackson, but had heard a great deal concerning his ability. But Smith I knew very well; had met him upon many an occasion and had helped empty many a schooner with him, for beer was his chosen beverage then.

After some more talk, and I had received an invitation to the mauling match, I wanted to know where I could meet Smith.

TRAINING IN THEATER

I was told he was training at the Old Montpelier Theater in Frankfort street.

The next day I went down to visit the very mysterious one, and found the old place quite dark, but after gaining entrance I discerned at the far end of the building an old stage and I groped my way down to the front as the big boy was knocking the tar out of a big canvas bag filled with sand.

I made myself known by one big yell, and out from the sides appeared two or three Apollos of the prize ring as tough in looks as in person. Smith stopped and looked at me, but could not make me out. I climbed onto the stage and offered him my hand.

The gloved hand he gave me was soaking wet. His shoes were full of sweat, but he seemed pleased.

"By all the bloody bludgers, it's the loud boy, Cook!" I was introduced and at once invited to the rear. They had just arrived with a big can of beer. I took a drink out of the bucket with the gang, as did Billy. I told him to finish his work and we would talk later, which he did and after a few more slams at the sand bag, he went after the Rumsey Ball. The Rumsey Ball was the quick action punching bag of those days, and believe me, it was a busy bag. It was of inflated rubber about ten inches in diameter and eighteen long, attached from the ceiling to the bag by a rope and from the bag to the floor with a strong, heavy rubber cord and could be adjusted to any height. That bag would fight you back. Afterward came the ceiling inflated ball.

The bad boy worked at the Rumsey a while.

NOT MUCH DETAIL

I may as well state here that in many of the training camps then, there was not so much detail. Seldom was the trainer watching with a watch, but judgment of time was usually left to the worker until it came to boxing, which we had next.

Eight rounds of good, real slugging and a rub down. All was over, and we had our confab, and as I looked out over the old theater, I went back a good many years to a time my father dragged me out of the hole when it was one of the toughest in the universe.

The fight was held in the Academy of Music, one of Cleveland's old theaters, and a big house was expected, which proved to be the truth, and it was a full house.

Something happened regarding the referee and Lavine was a little worried. Tom Jenkins, at that time the best of all weight wrestlers, was to officiate, but Jackson's colored manager did not like him and I could see for some reason Lavine wanted him bad.

After Smith left and we were alone, Lavine asked me if I would referee the fight and to settle all matters I accepted.

MORGAN AND WALLACH ON ROOT'S BILL

Clever Featherweights to Mingle at Auditorium Wednesday Night

Tod Morgan, the kid who ran Kid Kaplan off the Pacific Coast, steps ten rounds against Harry Wallach, the Brooklyn southpaw, in the second half of the double main event at the $750,000 Olympic Auditorium next Wednesday night.

Billy Bonillas, "the terror of the sticks," and Sammy Shack, of New York, have it out in the other half of the wind-up, but—

This yarn has to do with Bert Morgan Pilkington, for that's Tod Morgan's real name.

Young Morgan hasn't lost a fight during the past two and a half years, and he's waged 40 fistic wars in that time. But four boys have held him even during that period, and each later receipted for a "shellacking."

Tod Morgan and his father-manager, Fred Morgan Pilkington, would walk backwards from here to Meridan, Conn., for a "shot" at Champion Kaplan's "button."

Young Mr. Morgan is adjudged by such a splendid general as Jack Kearns as being the best featherweight in the world today. The "dapper doctor" will tell you that he is today much more surer that Morgan will shortly become the featherweight title-holder than he was of guiding Jack Dempsey to the heavyweight title when he first picked up the Manassa Mauler in 1917.

Louis Kaplan came to California last spring, chosing three boys that Morgan would have little trouble polishing off in a single night. They were Bud Ridley, Johnny Farr and Ernie Goozeman.

The wily "Scotty" Montieth steers Kaplan around. Like faithful hounds, Manager "Pop" Morgan and his fighting son camped on the trail of Montieth and Kaplan. Things finally became so hot that Montieth picked up his entire stable, bag and baggage, and returned to dear old New York. The Montieth outfit didn't care to have anything to do with the Morgans.

In addition to the double wind-up Wednesday night, Manager Jack Root is offering two other bouts, a semi-final betwixt Hayden Phythian, the erstwhile University of Southern California football star, and Dick Dundee, a newcomer from El Paso, Tex. They are middleweights, and are to go six rounds.

Sailor Carter and Roy Harper, welterweights, block and sock in the four-round curtain raiser. Harper is a stablemate of Tod Morgan's, and is to make his debut here.

Lightweights Organized at Venice School

Venice High School will have a 110-pound football team for the first time during the coming semester. For years the small boys have petitioned for an eleven, but only since last season have their numbers grown to such an extent that a team was possible.

Facilities have been provided for the adequate care of the "lighter-than-air" squad. Jake Bassler, coach of the smaller basketeers last year, will most likely handle the tiny pigskinners. Nothing is known concerning the chances for a strong 110-pound machine, it being expected that the biggest portion of the team will be made up of green material.

ROYALTY LIKE SPORTS

Among the monarchs who are experienced yachtsmen are the kings of England, Spain, Italy, Denmark and the Shah of Persia.

OPPONENT FOR DEMPSEY FETED

Fat La Rue, who boxes two rounds or less with Jack Dempsey at San Francisco tomorrow, was the guest of honor at a banquet given in the Bay City recently. While the feed was in progress La Rue was presented with a card, sent up from below. "Offering you my services" was the message it bore. The signature was that of a prominent San Francisco undertaker. Al G. Waddell tells the story.

BRONSON TO BOX WATERS FOR CROWN

Amateur Feather Title of Coast at Stake When Boys Mix at Bay City

Jimmy Bronson, the Santa Monica Athletic Club featherweight who has shown such remarkable progress the last few months in bouts at Los Angeles and Hollywood athletic clubs, will be given his chance to adjust an amateur crown to his pugilistic dome.

In the next S.M.A.C. card, late this month, Bronson will oppose Mike Waters, Pacific Slope amateur feather champ, of L.A.A.C. According to Doc Clancy, trainer and matchmaker of the Santa Manica club, the feathers will do 122 pounds for the title scrap.

CAULIFLOWER ALLEY NOTES

Promoter Dick Donald is losing no time over his big triple event for October 10 at Ascot Park. The enterprising Donald feels that if he can swing the card, as originally planned, he will have brought off the program par excellence in the fistic history of California. Any one of the three events smacks of high class and if they all go through as scheduled, it is generally admitted among the boxing fans that Ascot Park will be tested to its seating capacity to accommodate the vast crowd that would be present. Dick made a big hit with those that witnessed the La Barba-Genaro title tilt by the epic-scan manner the entire show was conducted, not a hitch of any kind bobbing up to marr the proceedings.

Jackie Gordon, one of the best scrappers on the eastern boxing belt, arrived in Los Angeles last Thursday. He is under the management of Phil Bernstein, who will try to get him on with Doc Snell. Bernstein with the idea in view of planting his boxing tepee in Los Angeles for some time, has sent for Harry London known as the "Crushing Cossack" and expects Harry to reach the Coast in a short time. With Gordon, Genaro and London on his staff, Phil will have a formidable trio to exploit in the Far West.

One of the big local movie firms have sent out a feeler to Elmer Leary to take the part of the Great Emancipator in a mammoth production that is soon to be filmed. According to many critics, Elmer looks more like Abraham Lincoln than any other living man today. All he needs is a little tuft under his chin and the resemblance is complete. Elmer, like the Great Emancipator, has some ideas himself in the emancipating line, for he intends to free the downtrodden pugilists of today from the pittance they are called upon to show their wares. Leave it to Elmer.

The hardest blow ever recorded at the Manhattan was dealt by Eddie Macey in a sparring bout with Frankie Garcia. Eddie planted a vicious right on Frankie's occiput and broke his ankle. Frankie had the injured member in a cast for two weeks and then used a crutch for considerable of a spell. Garcia in accounting for the injury takes pride in the fact that his ankle is the only weak spot of his anatomy. He claims that Eddie poked him in the jaw until he became muscle bound, but the work availed Macey nothing.

DOUBLES TRIALS UNFAIR

Tilden Says Matches Must Be Given Official Weight by Davis Cup Committee

BY WILLIAM T. TILDEN

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Every year the Davis Cup team selection causes a riot. Certainly no one could question the wisdom of the choice of the four players this year, but one might ask a few pertinent questions about how the team should be played.

Little Bill Johnston settled once and for all this year the questions of his superiority over Vincent Richards by defeating him twice in test matches in singles. The big howl once more comes in doubles.

The committee informs the four players that they are to meet in three doubles matches to find out the best team, presumably so that team could represent the United States in the doubles of the Davis Cup.

Vincent Richards and R. N. Williams, II, were opposed to Bill Johnston and me, and we won two out of three matches. Just prior to the third match I asked Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the Davis Cup Committee, if the third and final match would be conclusive and if the winning team would play in the Davis Cup. He sidestepped the issue by saying that the match was very important, of course, but that the committee would use its judgment and the result would not be conclusive.

I now rise to ask publicly why these trials should be held if the results mean nothing, and if the committee would not be bound to a great extent by the result. Especially, does it seem foolish to have held them and charged an admission to the public to view the matches if they had no standing when the committee knew, because I told them that I was playing with an injured arm, which I had severely strained at St. Louis two weeks previously.

It was right and proper to risk my arm if the matches meant anything, but if these trials were merly practice I should think that to endanger a member of the squad was foolhardy and extremely careless. Let us arrive at a definite basis of Davis Cup selection in the future.

Tennis is a game to play, and the man who is playing it today knows better about the present condition than those who played it in the past.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER BILL HENRY

CHEER up guys. Only ten days more to wait. The formal opening of the football season takes place just one week from Tuesday and from that time on there will be plenty of pigskin and sawdust in the columns of the newspapers just as there is in the air right now. We have no recollection of any season in Southern California where the air seemed so charged with electrifying interest in football as is the case right now. Speculation as to everybody's chances is the main conversation these days. Just think. Fixe weeks from today you will be reading in The Times how U.S.C. and Stanford clashed in the Coliseum before 90,000 people, the detail of play and all of that stuff. How much would you give to know right now what you will know five weeks from now?

The possibility of France facing America in the challenge round of the Davis Cup, which wasn't worth a whole lot on Friday, looks mighty good today. When Borotra and La Coste beat Patterson and Hawkes they did something that the experts didn't believe possible and which certainly was unexpected in view of the battle the Australians put up in the national doubles tournament. To capture the right to meet our American team for the coveted trophy would be a wonderful thing for the fiery Frenchmen and all that they have to do is to win one of their two remaining singles matches. However, beating Jim Anderson and Gerald Patterson is a large contract and the tennis on the final day should be as fine as any ever seen in Davis Cup play.

Ran into Hap O'Connor, accompanied by his celebrated chin the other day and told Hap that the San Francisco fans don't seem to think so much of Umpire Carroll. Hap says that the merry razz is a part of the game and that without the yelping of the fans the game wouldn't have any color at all. Hap ought to know as he has played the game and umpired as well. The man with the prominent inferior submaxillary says that it is a tough job to break in as an umpire in your own home town where everybody knows you and if you get 'em all, you're a hero, but if you miss one you're a bum. If they don't know you and you miss one they say "Oh, well, what do you expect of an umpire?"

California has seen a lot of good little boxers during the past few years, the vast majority of the star performers being lightweights or less. Among them are the leading contenders for the title of featherweight champion of the world, including Kid Kaplan, the title-holder, Babe Herman, who is said to have beaten him, but been robbed, Danny Kramer and several others. Tod Morgan, who boxes Harry Wallach at the Olympic Auditorium next Wednesday, is regarded by many critics as the top-notch contender of the bunch and if he beats Wallach, ought to be in line for a crack at the present champion.

Every time we read something or other in the paper about B. Rey Schauer and his illustrious star boat, Movie Star, which represented the Pacific Coast in the recent races in the East, we are reminded of the fact that this young man is a genuine local product. What sailing Schauer has done has been learned right here in Southern California and the success he has had shows that we can develop the real thing in yachtsmen out here. We remember Schauer as a very studious young man when he went to college with us, who was interested in athletics chiefly from the spectator's standpoint and it never occurred to anybody around the old school that he was going to develop into a demon yachtsman.

POLOISTS TANGLE UP TOMORROW

Reds, Whites to Battle at Hollywood Heights Club Field in Holiday Game

Encouraged by the wonderful success of the new field which was played on for the first time last Friday night, members of the Red and White teams at the Hollywood Heights Polo and Hunt Club are going to stage another match tomorrow afternoon, a Labor Day special, and judging from the speed of the game the other night tomorrow's tilt should be one of the fastest that has ever been seen in Southern California.

The new field is covered with several inches of decomposed granite and has been treated with a solution of calcium chloride, the latter being the same mixture as that used on dirt race tracks to lay the dust. The result is that the field is easy on the horses' feet, very fast and entirely dustless.

Tomorrow's game will be the first that has been played in the daytime on this field and great things are expected. Both teams were out yesterday afternoon getting used to the difference in speed, turning and resilence of the new field.

The line-up follows:

Whites		Reds
Frank Foster	1	Dr. Bock
Earl Barger	2	Don Bunch
Capt. Beckwith	3	C. R. Crawford
E.M. Muller	Back	Joe Erbst
L. S. Gillham	Sub.

P. E. SQUAD TANGLES WITH SANTA BARBARA

The Pacific Electric baseball team will journey to Santa Barbara and have a two-game series with the Merchants of that place today and Monday (Labor Day.)

The Santa Barbarans have won twenty-seven out of their last twenty-nine games played, the last two games lost having been to the Pacific Electric squad.

Manager Hill is taking up his strongest force to endeavor to stop the onrush of the northern bunch and will throw against them, Big Falconer on Sunday and his high school pitching ace, Louie Almada, on Labor Day. A large bunch of followers of the railroaders will accompany the team north.

RICH STUDENTS SERVE STARS

rich boys "head in," it will be necessary to go back a few years. Possibly the reader will recall that, in his college days, football heroes affected an ostentatious untidiness; moleskins, shoes and helmets were encrusted with mud; on and off the field, there was not exactly a studied affectation, but a calm assumption of immunity from common standards. You will recall Bull McSwatt, who got a red sweater, with a letter on it, in his first year—they could do it then—and who was reputed never to have taken it off during the rest of his college course.

WELL-GROOMED PLAYERS

Gradually there came a change. With increased competition, and with the tightening up of the business organization of football, success standards began to be built up. Coaches and graduate managers began to take up the slack here, and one of the first things they discovered was that untidiness impairs efficiency. Details, of laundry, the care of uniforms and equipment and minutiae of grooming and fitness of the players came to be more and more important.

This came at about the beginning of the "prophylactic era" in America, and no doubt it paralleled the general outside drift in this direction. At any rate, football players suddenly developed a fastidious insistence upon the utmost cleanliness of sweaters, uniforms and equipment. They no longer had to be belabored by coaches and managers. Laundry bills went sky-rocketing. The laundry charges for a big college team today would almost run a small outfit of the old days.

It meant endless work and expense to keep the prima donnas spick-and-span. Managers and coaches developed the "scrub" manager system. Here's where the rich boys come in.

Training quarters always had been frequented by eager but physically dubious young men of means, who until then had been little more than a nuisance. The graduate manager of a big eastern college was, so far as I know, the first to put them to work. First he set them to cleaning mud off the cleats of the shoes, after the men returned from practice. Gradually they were given charge of other details of uniforms and equipment.

RECOMPENSED BY A TITLE

Other colleges began to develop the scrub-manager system, the boys being amply recompensed by the title "Assistant Manager." The real effectiveness of the system was achieved when it became the custom to choose the undergraduate manager from these assistants, and to bestow upon him the much-coveted but otherwise unattainable "letter."

Presently it became customary to have on hand, at each big college, from twenty to twenty-five such "assistant managers." This meant a valet for each of the men on the first and second teams. The scrub managers, many of them no doubt boys who at home had their own valets, wait on the sidelines. Each Sancho Panza receives his own Don Quixote, and helps him undress and get under the shower, which the scrub adjusts to just the right temperature. Then he carefully scrapes all the mud off the cleats of the shoes and, if they require it, plunges them into a pail of tar oil and massages them to kid-glove softness.

This is just the beginning. There is endless detail of cleaning and polishing helmets and getting jerseys and breeks ready for the next day. As a result of all this, football squads have become as fussy as West Point cadets. A smear of dirt is anathema. Bull McSwatt, who looked as if he needed a brisk application of a curry comb, is as obsolete as the three-toed horse.

The far, shining goal of all this, for the busy scrub managers, is the undergraduate managership. That means a lot more than you might think—for reasons to be later disclosed—and even the title "assistant manager," looming up on the boys' private stationery, or blazoned in the Junior Annual, is not so insignificant as it might seem.

I have seen slender, manicured, bespectacled lads wallowing in tar oil and mud and resin, and meekly accepting curt orders to fetch and carry from big, raw-boned country boys; I have seen them meekly accept insults—almost everything short of kicks, in fact. They get a big hand for all this—they are doing it for the glory of the old school—but watching them in action, I am convinced that most of them are sustained by a cold, driving ambition—their natural heritage, perhaps.

I find I rather admire them. They know what they want and they are going after it. One way or another, they always seem to manage to get into the picture before they finish their four years.

Newby Victor Over Greer at Seaside Nets

Boys' singles featured the play yesterday in the third week of the annual Santa Monica Municipal Tennis tournament on the Wilshire Boulevard courts.

The outstanding victory of the day was that of George Newby over J. Greer, the latter being defeated in two straight sets, 6-4, 6-4. The win over Greer marked Newby's third straight since he entered the boys' competition, in which he is now a heavy favorite., Newby was eliminated from the men's singles after a stiff battle.

A. Flum of Ontario, Newby and Billie Doeg, the junior wizard of Santa Monica, are regarded as the outstanding triumvirate of the junior division of the tourney. Neither of the trio are yet in the semifinals.

In other matches yesterday, Robert Norris lost to Dworkin, 6-2, 6-0; Harold Steiner humbled Spencer Austin, 6-1, 6-2, and J. Stark was beaten by Randall Currie, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Today a large gallery is expected to take in the women's singles, mixed doubles and girls' singles. On Labor Day there will be more mixed doubles matches, girls' singles and men's doubles.

Dates for the finals in the various divisions will be announced soon by the committee in charge of the yearly net event.

SQUASH-HANDBALL DEMONS

George L. Eastman and Tom Gallery, inset, clash a week from Saturday night at the Hollywood Athletic Club for the Pacific Coast squash-handball title. Eastman is California champion, while Gallery claims the Pacific Coast title. Both are well known local sportsmen and there is much interest in the match.

SOCCERITES PRACTICE

Rival Squads Tuning Up for Opening of Season's Schedule Early Next Month

With the opening of the soccer season one month away the city league teams have started on their training seige which will carry them up to the start of the league play. With the league park closed to them for practice games because of newly planted grass the squads are limbering up on city playgrounds.

Prospects for a close league race are exceedingly bright. All teams which developed weakness in last year's race have strengthened, and at this writing it would be considered tempting providence to attempt to favor the chances of any one outfit.

During the summer the Los Angeles league has reseeded its playing field at Loyola College and Groundkeeper Wiegel reports that the field will be in excellent condition for the opening contests. The stands and bleachers have also been dressed up and painted.

Opening the coming season, which promises to break all previous attendance records, will be the meetings of the Vikings and Thistles and the Sons and Scots. Considering that these teams have reported greatly strengthened elevens, the card should prove a very attractive one

The schedule for the first eight weeks, which will be repeated three times, follows:

October 4: Vikings vs. Thistles; Scots vs. Sons.

October 11: Thistles vs. Hollywood; L.A.A.C. vs. Sons.

October 18: Vikings vs. Scots; L.A.A.C. vs. Hollywood.

October 25: Thistles vs. Sons; L.A.A.C. vs. Scots.

November 1: Vikings vs. Hollywood; Thistles vs. L.A.A.C.

November 8: Sons vs. Vikings; Hollywood vs. Scots.

November 15: Vikings vs. L.A.A.C.; Thistles vs. Scots.

November 22: Hollywood vs.

NET STAR TO ENTER OCCIDENTAL

Mary Taylor, Glendale High Sensation, Enrolls at Tiger Institution

For three years a prominent figure in junior tennis in Southern California, Miss Mary Taylor, Glendale High School student will enter Occidental College when the fall term opens. Miss holder of numerous titles throughout the South and she should be a valuable addition to Oxy's feminine tennis contingent.

MARY TAYLOR

Starting in 1923, when she was a sophomore at Glendale, Miss Taylor made the tennis team at the Dynamite institution, playing first singles. In 1924 and 1925, she held the same position. She was one of the best girl players ever seen in high school.

Last year, Miss Taylor won the singles and doubles championships in Glendale and Pasadena tournaments. She came through her events with hardly any trouble at all.

Her last year in high school was the best. She took the singles and doubles at La Jolla in July; won the junior singles and doubles at the Southern California tournament and took the same two titles in a Griffith Park tennis event. Earlier in the year, Miss Taylor played in a tourney at the Oakmont Country Club and won a mixed doubles trophy.

SEVEN REMAIN IN HANDBALL TOURNEY

With only seven players remaining in the fire department's city championship handball tournament being staged at the Hollywood engine house on Cahuenga avenue, Frank Haben, present champion, Kirby Smith and Tony Wollam are given about an equal chance to cop. John Nelson, the favorite entry from Hollywood, was eliminated Friday afternoon by Bob Lund, while Kirby Smith, a "dark horse," defeated Oscar Bour, 21-17, 21-19, in the second up-set of the day.

The tournament will be completed sometime this week and will be followed by the doubles tourney. Haben, handball champion of the department for several years, is rated one of the best in the south.

For young men who are "in conference"

JUST take a peek into the conference rooms of the big industries—here, there, everywhere.

You'll find more and more young men rubbing shoulders with the great captains of affairs. And more and more of them appreciating the gentility and satisfaction of a good cigar.

Probably nothing has done more to change the smoking tastes of young men than the Robt Burns Panatela. It has convinced them that a cigar does not necessarily have to be strong and heavy. It has shown them that by the careful selection of full Havana filler and superior workmanship, a cigar can be made so mild, so mellow that it can be smoked with steady enjoyment one after another, hour after hour, all day long.

Don't envy other young men who, entrenched behind a good cigar, radiate prosperity and consequence. You can get Robt Burns Panatelas for 10 cents wherever General Cigar Company's brands are sold.

Mescal and Burns Lead Record Field in El Caballero Invitational Golf Tourname

FAST FIELD IN CLUB PREMIERE

Mescal Cops First Day Honors With Sterling 77

Burns Coasts Home With 78 to Win Second Low Gross

Mixed Foursomes to Complete Links' Inaugural Today

BY BILL WISE

You will like El Caballero!

JOHNNIE MESCALL

Johnnie Mescal, one of the younger stars shooting under the California banner—playing well up in the vanguard of the nearly 200 golfers who played in the eighteen-hole medal tourney at El Caballero yesterday, dropped a long putt for a 77 and low-gross honors in the first leg of the three-day invitation eighteen-hole medal event that is ushering in California's newest championship course.

Neal Burns, Al Christie's golfing laugh-maker, trailed Mescal through his sensational round and fumbled a three-foot putt to share first-day medal honors in the record field that included scores of low-handicap players who found it impossible to tour Jack Tarrant's beautiful club in even figures.

The El Caballero course, fourteen miles north of Hollywood on Ventura Boulevard, is the most natural and one of the most beautiful layouts in the country. Every hole is a revelation with greens and fairways in remarkable condition.

Leaving the first tee, players found themselves driving their way well up into the San Fernando foothills, the drop down from the surrounding Coast Range of the Sierra Madre's. In point of beauty, El Caballero must rank with Ojai. Every hole is different, offering the stiffest possible test for championship golfers and also opening up to care for players whose handicap ratings range well up the scale.

ROLLING FAIRWAYS

Many fairways drop from behind natural hazards and players profit by balls played for the many direction flags that offer a true line to the hidden greens. From many greens and particularly tees, it is possible to look out over the entire course, through the San Fernando Valley, miles to the east.

Caballero greens are very true and well-played pitch shots hold. Sand traps are still very soft, but are easily avoided. The natural beauty of the course, which is a complete revelation to the Southern California golfing fraternity, was greatly responsible for the high scores yesterday. It is impossible to play good golf and stop to admire every one of the thousands of picturesque views that place Caballero in a typical single-phase orbit.

If there is a mistake in the entire layout—it might possibly be the present par rating of 72 which is going to give local golfers something to shoot at for months to come. Anything that is fair can never be a mistake, and par is fair—but mighty tough.

Many of the holes, particularly eight and fourteen are among the most beautiful in the country. Golfers who have not yet played Rex Goodcell's sporty course have a distinct treat in store. The mixed foursome tourney this afternoon should spread contestants all over the beautiful valley.

Life memberships in El Caballero are guaranteed to include a refreshing breeze that slips down through the San Fernando draw and spreads over the course twenty-four hours daily.

COON SKIN CABIN

Besides winning second low gross honors, Neal Burns contributed the real golfing thrill of the day when his tee shot from well in the shadow of the picturesque old log cabin that is a high point in the El Caballero lay-out, rolled to the lip of the cup in the eighth green. The old coon skin from which the cabin derived its name, still dangles from the front of the building. A large gallery watched Burns play for the 115-yard eighth hole and followed to count the blades of grass that held the ball from dropping into the cup for the first hole in one. There were eleven tiny stems, all of which are now in possession of Jim Knudson who plans to frame the noncompromising clump of vegetation that spoiled an otherwise perfect day.

BRALY COPS SNAKE

John Braly, one of the best golfers playing at Louis Berrien's Wilshire club corralled a five-foot gopher snake which followed him around the last nine and helped his game considerably. The appetizing and adequate buffet lunch that was served all day, completed one of the best golfing days yet recorded.

A. H. Painter, tourney manager, handled the starting tee and score board in admirable fashion and despite the fact that nearly 200 players were on the course by 2 o'clock, there was absolutely no congestion. There were a few lost balls, but the course is certainly worth it.

Everything is in readiness for the mixed foursome tourney starting at 11 o'clock today. The advance entry has been very large but because of the nature of the course, it will be possible to accommodate all who wish to start. Starting time may still be reserved by phoning the club, Owensmouth 0100. At least 100 golfers are expected to play in the eighteen-hole medal event this morning and starting times for 300 have been reserved for tomorrow, Labor Day.

Golfers, who have not yet played in the El Caballero premier, are invited to make phone reservations at once. Entrants may arrange their own twosomes of foursomes, and single players will be cared for also.

LAWSON POPULAR

H. W. Lawson, vice-president of the Southern California Golf Association, former president of the Hollywood club and now tourney chairman at El Caballero, was very much in evidence yesterday, but everything for the comfort and pleasure of the visiting golfers had been arranged beforehand.

BEWARE OF THE DOG

Boston Terrier Cops Honors

Better Luck of Manningdale

WELL on his way to a championship, Los Angeles dog fanciers are singing the praises of Better Luck of Manningdale, a Los Angeles bred and owned Boston terrier. This dog, who is owned by Mrs. E. L. Caress, an enthusiastic admirer of Bostons, has just won signal honors at the Long Beach show.

In the Long Beach exhibition last week Better Luck of Manningdale not only won in his class and scored five points, but he was also judged the best dog of both sexes in competition. This prize winner is 1 year and seven months and is a son of Rumpus, a well-known sire owned by Dr. Frank D. Crandall of Los Angeles.

Better Luck of Manningdale began his prize-winning career when quite young. He was judged the best puppy at the Ambassador show. He took winners at a previous Long Beach show and also winners in the best of breed at Santa Barbara. At the Golden Gate Kennel Club exhibition in San Francisco he was given reserve winners.

Miss Ruth Simpson, who is Mrs. Caress's sister has started a young Boston terrier on a winning path. This is a puppy named Spring Street and he won his first ribbon at the Long Beach show.

PLAN NEW BEACH CLUB

Southern Seas Association to Erect Magnificent Building at Newport Harbor

Planning to make Balboa and Newport Bay the western terminus of a yachting lane between Florida and the west coast, and to provide water sports such as the southland has never yet developed, the Southern Seas Club is arranging to construct a $550,000 clubhouse on the bay which shall include unique aquatic features contained by none other in this country.

It is planned to construct in the basement of the building a boat garage which shall connect directly with the bay, and to provide "stalls" and boat lockers in which to store motorboats, rowboats, small sailing craft and racing shells.

HOLD ROWING REGATTAS

One of the big features of the club's activities will be rowing regattas to be held on regulation courses on the bay and be open to competition by all universities, colleges and rowing clubs in the country. It will include shell and scull races.

Newport Bay is the only body of sea water near Los Angeles which can be used for that purpose, and the club itself expects to develop two or more rowing crews from among its members—one, perhaps exclusively from Los Angeles and another from the back counties near the bay.

It is stated, on authority of the officers, that special efforts will be made to maintain close relations with the Florida yacht clubs and to invite the members to cruise westward and enjoy the splendid anchorage privileges in the bay and be guests at the clubhouse.

Eastern yachtsmen are in the habit of making long cruises on board their more or less pretentious craft but they need quiet harbors in which to anchor, such as Los Angeles is not now able to furnish as the harbor space is fully occupied by commercial shipping and warships.

Orange county is to hold an election soon to provide $1,200,000 to share the expense of harbor improvement with the government, and not only is the bay to be dredged for fairways but the entrance channel is to be deepened and widened, and a breakwater built.

IN TEMPORARY QUARTERS

The club is now housed in temporary quarters in a large residence building in Balboa where club facilities are provided while the officers increase the membership roll and finance the new building. As the structure will be alongside the shore of the bay, the waterway under the building will connect directly with a deep channel over which will be constructed a bridged sidewalk for pedestrians.

All the plans have been drawn and details of construction decided upon. On the board of directors, under whose orders the development is being conducted, are:

J. P. Greely, president, Bank of Balboa, and president, Balboa Chamber of Commerce; Lew H. Wallace, president, First National Bank of Newport Beach, and treasurer City of Newport Beach; George P. Wilson, Mayor of Newport Beach and cashier, First National Bank of Newport Beach; Mrs. George W. Reed, president, Ebell Club, Newport Beach; Glen C. Wallace, realtor and chairman harbor committee, Balboa Chamber of Commerce; Charles H. Way, merchant and vice-president, First National Bank; Harry Welch, secretary Orange County Harbor Commission; T. B. Talbert, chairman Orange County Board of Supervisors and president of Talbert Oil Company; L. S. Wilkinson, harbor representative Pacific Electric and Southern Pacific railways; I. Jacobsen, furniture merchant; D. Eyman Huff, vice-president and general manager Davis-Hewes Orange and Lemon Growers' Association; L. W. Briggs, realtor and chairman house committee, Newport Harbor Yacht Club; Mrs. Martha L. Garson, capitalist; Dr. Charles H. Ervin, clubman and property holder, Ernest Grill, Jr., realtor; and James O. Stevenson, organization engineer.

Jack Dempsey Gets License to Boss Self

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5. Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, has been granted a California boxing license and recognized as his own manager by the State Athletic Commission, Rob Roy Benton, who has been acting for him, announced here today.

Benton said he thought this would serve as a precedent for the New York Boxing Commission in its settlement of the dispute involving the champion, Jack Kearns and Tex Rickard, in connection with the proposed Dempsey-Wills contest.

PORTSIDERS READY FOR DEL MONTE

California Southpaw Golfers Expect to Elect New Champ in State Title Play

Ray Palmer.

James Woods, president of the Southern California left-handers' golf association, today announced that the battle for the magnificent J. F. Sartori trophy, which is emblematic of the California State championship among southpaws, will be an unusually stubborn one this year. Woods believes that upward of fifty of the southland's best players will make the trip up to Del Monte to take part in this important event which is scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the 11th, 12th and 13th inst. Dick Carlson of the Annandale Golf Club, Neil Miller of San Gabriel, E. N. Wright and A. R. Kelly of the Pasadena Club, Anan Moore, I. L. Morrill, Jerry Kent and W. R. Dichenson of the Los Angeles Country Club, Walter Hunter and Dr. Burke of Rancho, have already forwarded their entries to Darsie L. Darsie of the Del Monte Hotel as has Ray Palmer of Santa Barbara, present Southern California southpaw champion.

LE FEBVRE MAY BE MADE GUARD

ideal man to head the "Thundering Herd," which is slated to precede the man carrying the ball, in Jones's system.

WILL NOT LIKE IT

On the other hand local fans will probably snort long and loud at the removal of LeFebvre from the backfield. Football followers here never could understand why Henry was not used more last season. When Gus Henderson allowed him to sit on the bench while the Trojans lost to California, folks moaned and groaned because the ex-Jack rabbit wasn't in there. When he did get his chance against Missouri and Syracuse LeFebvre tore off yardage as if possessed, and all the second guessers said the Trojans would have thumped the Bears had Henry been in the line-up.

There is little doubt but what LeFebvre would make a good guard, even though he has been a backfield man practically throughout his entire football career. However, there is a question as to whether he will be worth more to Jones in the line. Of course Jones will decide that himself and if he's right the "I told you so boys" will all be claiming that they always said LeFebvre should have been up in the front wall. Brice Taylor and Ted Gorrell were the regular Trojan guards last year. Both are back.

EARLE IN BACKFIELD

It looked in spring practice as if Jones's backfield would shape up with Morely Drury, Morton Kaer, LeFebvre and possibly Eddie Green in there. If Henry goes into the line, Honey Earle, an ex-guard himself, will undoubtedly be seen in the backfield, where he played last season. Even if LeFebvre stays as a ball carrier, there is a strong chance that Jones's combination may include Sarle also, especially as Eddie Green has some work to make up before he is eligible.

Although the rumor seems hard to believe—especially as LeFebvre is a senior—it has been going the rounds at U.S.C. It is not thought that Jones would make over a man for but one year's competition, but the new mentor may see in Henry just the athlete he wants to shove into an important position—that of heading the interference. LeFebvre weighs 185 pounds.

DR. PAUL HUNTER IS PLANNING COME-BACK

Players are now arriving at Del Monte for the championship. Dr. Paul M. Hunter, of Pasadena, a former title-holder, has been at Pebble Beach for six weeks getting in shape for the play. Francis Brown, of the Hawaiian Islands, has been at Del Monte the past week and is shooting splendid golf. Capt. A. Bullock-Webster, the title-holder, is expected September 5 and Chandler Egan will arrive from the Northwest shortly.

HERE'S FISH YARN ABOUT C. B. DE MILLE

This man Cecil B. De Mille doesn't limit his talent for the unusual to his motion pictures. For while on a brief vacation following the completion of his most recent production, "The Road to Yesterday," he was trolling for sword fish from his yacht, the Seaward, and hooked a big seal off San Clemente Island. The frightened animal was on the line for twelve minutes before De Mille could bring him in and release him. Seals don't compare with sword fish as fighters, according to De Mille, in spite of the fact that they are about the same size.

BRONSON TO BOX PIELA

Jimmy Bronson, Santa Monica Athletic Club featherweight, has been signed to fight Jimmy Piela at the monthly smoker of the Hollywood Athletic Club next Thursday night. Bronson gave Piela a four-round boxing lessons at the club a few months ago completely upsetting dope. He is given a slight edge to win again. Bronson has been traveling at a fast pace lately and will meet Mike Waters, featherweight champion of the Pacific Coast, at the next smoker of the Santa Monica Athletic Club. In the semi-wind-up Tony Roseta will box three rounds with Al (K.O.) Dempsey.

One of the features of the evening will be the taking of motion pictures. Al Kelly will direct the few scenes that will be taken of the fighters and the crowd. Edmunde Lowe, Bert Lytell, Eddie Gribben, Bob Agnew and Douglas MacLean will perform before the camera. The pictures will be shown at the club and at local theaters as soon as the film can be developed. Several wrestling bouts are scheduled on the card, the Hollywood Athletic Club quartet will sing and music will be furnished by the club orchestra to round out the evening's entertainment. Bob Howard is responsible for the show and a record crowd is expected when the show starts at 8 o'clock.

CHINESE CHAMPION DEL MONTE PLAY

Charlie Chung, the little Chinese golfer who last winter won the amateur championship of the Hawaiian Islands, has arrived in California and within the next couple of days will arrive in Del Monte to familiarize himself with the two courses over which the California championship will be played September 13-20.

CABALLERO OFFICIALS GREET STARS

CABALLERO CLASSIC TODAY

Mixed Foursome Tourney at Jack Tarrant's Club Welcomed by Record Field of Golf Stars

Many of the record field of local golfers who played in the eighteen-hole medal tourney at El Caballero yesterday wil be back today—with wives—maybe their own, sweethearts—absolutely their own, and friends, golfing companions for the day, and will play in the feature two-ball mixed foursome tourney that is going to help pry open one of the finest courses in the country.

Visiting golfers yesterday had their first glimpse of the club Jack Tarrant is going to make famous. The course is a wonderful creation and a credit to Billie Bell, golf architect who planned the beautiful layout.

Caballero officials under the direction of Rex Goodcell, president and H. W. Lawson, tournament chairman, have succeeded in establishing a hospitable standard that is in direct keeping with the championship course.

The advance entry for the mixed foursomes today, caused tourney officials to advance the starting time to 11 o'clock this morning and before the ink is completely dry on this page, a stellar and picturesque field will be shooting over Southern California's newest championship course.

DEL MONTE CADDIES SLEEP IN BARRACKS

In other years the Del Monte caddymaster, Charley Brown, has taken care of the boys in the upstairs section of the old Del Monte stables. This year the building in question is occupied and so the boys will be taken care of in a huge temporary barracks now being prepared for their use.

Many players will bring their favorite caddies to Del Monte and this is expected to solve the problem. Monterey, San Jose and the Monterey Peninsula will furnish many youngsters but these districts cannot begin to fill the entire need.

ORANGE COUNTY TITLE PLAY SOON

An invitation tournament for the golf championship of Orange county, the first of its kind ever staged in this vicinity, will be held over the picturesque course of the Orange County Public Golf Club, the first round to be run off the 12th inst., according to Joe Szarfinski, professional at the links.

The tournament is open to all golfers. Seventy-two holes of medal play will decide the winners of the classic. Eighteen holes will be played each week over a period of one month.

At least twenty trophies and merchandise prizes will be awarded, Szarfinski said.

All contestants will compete on a handicap basis, thirty strokes being the lowest allowed. Handicap ratings will be determined by a committee of five members, including Mason Yould, James Valentine, Elmer Preston and W. K. Parkinson. The fifth member will be selected this week.

Tennis Tourney for Net Stars Today and Tomorrow

Hi-Jinx Golf Tourney for Club Members Labor Day

Labor Day holidays presaging the end of vacationing also herald the resumption of club activities throughout the Southland and Los Serranos Country Club's card bids fair to attract a huge throng of members and guests due to many sporting events scheduled as well as cup and other prize awards to be made.

Golf interest will find its reward in a blind bogey sweepstakes which started yesterday and carried over through today, carrying three prizes, score to be between 70 and 80. Low net score for this event is due to win the handsome silver cup trophy offered by F. S. Burgess of Pasadena, an additional feature of the contest.

Qualifying rounds for the 1925 club championship cup are on. Players will be required to play 36 holes, match play commencing first Saturday in October and ending November 1st. There will be cups for winner and runner-up in championship flight as well as cups for the leads in the second flight.

Interest in today and tomorrow, Labor Day, will center about the tennis tournament which is an open event for ladies' and men's singles, the start of the club's fishing tournament, an archery exhibition, breakfast ride, driving pleasure of both men and women members and guests.

MEDLEY SCHEDULE

The Labor Day feature will be the hi-jinx golf meet, a contest between the fats and the leans insuring not only some record play, but a barrel of fun for the gallery. There is an entry fee on this event and prizes to be awarded. According to the golfing committee, teams are already well lined up and the affair easily promises to be the leading club event of the year.

PARKRIDGE WILL OPEN THIS FALL

Rushing Work on New Club That Offers Diversified Sports for Members

Three shifts of men are working twenty-four hours in order to guard and speed the growth of grass and bring the opening day that much nearer at the Parkridge Country Club at Corona.

Jock Wilson, widely known to Southland golfers by reason of his former connection with the Annandale, California and Los Angeles country clubs, is greenkeeper and is bending every energy to assure a splendid turf.

Dan Gilkey.

Parkridge will be all Cocoos Bent on tees, greens and fairways and is one of the first golf courses to be solid Bent. Cocoos Bent is the recent discovery of Dr. Lyman Carrier of the United States Department of Agriculture and U.S.G.A. green committee. A trifle of blue and red top has been planted on the fairways to hasten the growth, but, it is said, the Bent quickly will eat out all other varieties.

There are two courses at Parkridge, an eighteen-hole championship course, 6379 yards, par 74, and a nine-hole pitch and putt course, as well as a nine-hole putting green. The big course covers 289 acres, the little course, ten acres. And the grass area is seventy-five acres.

John Duncan Dunn is the golf architect and Parkridge has been termed his "masterpiece." Hutt Martin, the "pro," is resting and getting back into the game to annex a few titles for Parkridge as a "playing pro." Martin soon will announce his selection of a "resident pro."

PLENTY ON FOOTBALL

Football fans spend more than $25,000,000 each season in admissions.

YOUNGSTER WINS CLASSIC

Coronado kiddies materially swelled the record gallery that followed Allen Moser, sensational 16-year-old Wilshire youngster, around the San Diego course last Sunday, when he defeated Capt. A. Bullock-Webster, California amateur champion, 2 and 1, for the $1000 Spreckels trophy shown below.

Roush May Succeed Hendricks

SEEK CAPTAIN TO RULE REDS

Desire for Playing Boss Cause of Change

Moran's Successor Gives No Opinion on Case

Owners Have Taken No Action on Matter Yet

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—According to reports around the Cubs ball park today, Ed Roush, captain and crack center fielder of the Cincinnati Reds, will become manager of the Reds next season.

Roush confided to a friend from Milwaukee that he expected to succeed Jack Hendricks when the present season is over. Whether the fly chaser is just living in hopes or has actually been approached by the Cincinnati owners is not known.

Jack Hendricks, present manager of the team, has not been signed up for next season. That much is admitted.

The reason for the change, should there be one, is the desire to have a playing manager.

Manager Hendricks himself, when approached, had nothing to say and Roush was equally reticent.

FRENCH STARS DEFEAT ANZACS

made his shot and it looked as though Borotra had been knocked "cold." Dr. George E. Stanwix, who was acting as net umpire, hurried to the Frenchman's aid and after his head had been rubbed for a few minutes Borotra was lifted to his feet and assisted to a chair.

The Gallic star's play had been so outstandingly brilliant up to this time and he had so captivated the spectators with his dynamic style and sunny, genial nature that the gallery was almost as stunned by the blow as was Borotra himself. It looked as though the pride of France was through for the day. When Borotra got up from his chair, put on his "Blue Devil" tam o' shanter and walked on the court to play again a tremendous cheer went up from the fans. The demonstration became even more pronounced when he went over to Patterson and gave him a reassuring tap on the shoulder. The stadium was Borotra's for the asking at that moment.

FRENCH CONFIDENT

Today France now looks forward confidently to seeing its team reach the challenge round for the first time in the twenty-five years' history of the Davis Cup matches. Borotra will meet Patterson at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and La Coste will play Anderson.

The Australians, although they lost the match, won more points and more games than did the French. The total points scored by the Anzacs was 183 to 174 for the French and the former won twenty-eight games to twenty-six for their opponents. This seeming discrepancy is to be attributed to the result of the fourth set, which the Australians won by the decisive score of 6-1, the only one-sided set of the match.

Ryder Winner Low Gross at Westward Ho

G. S. Reed and Harold Ryder shot through a field of sixty members of the Westward Ho Country Club entered in the Jeffrey Cup tournament to win the low net and low gross honors, respectively, in the qualifying round played yesterday and Friday.

Reed turned in a gross score of 71 which, with his handicap of 18, gave him a 53 for the net honors. Ryder went out with a 30 but took three more strokes to come in making a total of 63 for the eighteen. Cecil Noe followed four strokes behind Ryder to qualify with a 67. There were but two others to gross under 70. They were J. D. Reddell, who had a 68, and George Kingsley, whose card totaled 69.

Huntley Gordon could not have had a word to say a month ago were he to have been spoken of as the worst of dubs but after turning in a 79 in the qualifying round yesterday he is being congratulated for his excellent showing after just one month under the wing of Larry Kelly, Westward Ho professional. The first round of match play starts today at 9 o'clock.

LAKE ARROWHEAD TO HOLD POOL TOURNEY

Along with Lake Arrowhead's various annual events, the list of which is assuming large proportions, comes the pool tournament now scheduled for the 16th inst., at the village of Lake Arrowhead.

The tournament will be run off in the one day and cup trophies will be on display at the Chamber of Commerce at the lake this week where entries are being made

STAR JAP NINE TO PLAY SERIES HERE

The Fresno Japanese, champions of California among the Japanese baseball teams, will play a series of games here, starting this afternoon against the Diamond Japs, a local team and the L. A. White Sox, in the afternoon. They will play the Diamonds again tomorrow and the White Sox will take on the Oliver Japs in the second of the double-header. All four games are scheduled for White Sox Park.

STEEDS IN TRIPLE DEAD-HEAT

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—That very rare sporting event, the triple dead-heat, occurred at the Folkestone races today and brought a huge crowd to a high pitch of excitement. The three horses dead-heated in the Stayers Handicap were Z. G. Michaelino's Rocos with F. Scott up, Captain R. E. Sassoon's Golden Book with E. Martin up and Miss L. Reynolds's Breezy Heather with T. Carey riding. Golden Book's jockey immediately objected to Rocos, and the stewards, after hearing the evidence, disqualified the latter horse. The last triple dead-heat was at Windsor in 1923. Previously to that there had, according to available records, been but one since the Ashley stakes at Lewe in 1886.

Weekly Health Talk

by Barclay L. Severns

EXTREMISTS

Most of us are extremists in our manner of living, as well as in our thinking, and our living is gaged a great deal by the way we think. This is true of all classes, from the wandering hobo to the most refined person; both socially or politically, religiously or gastronomically. Those who are constitutionally against everything and everybody; to those who accept everything as it is dished out, regardless of logical reasoning to the contrary. In other words, those who depend on some one else to do their thinking.

There are those who have been converted to a strictly raw food diet, and are personally benefited, then spend a great deal of their time endeavoring to convince every other person on earth that the raw food diet is the only diet that is absolutely correct, and the balance of the human race is all wrong. Then we find those who are of the gluttonous gourmond class with flabby jouls and the too-common extended bay window; who dump everything that is within reach into their stomach that has the appearance of food, not through ignorance, nor from lack of reasoning, but because they are abnormal. Then finally nature refuses to be further imposed upon, the vital organs cease to function, the headline reads—"One of our leading citizens suddenly expires," heart-disease being given as the cause. The heart no doubt stopped but the poisoned system through eating too much as well as improper food; drawing upon the nerve force too heavily by worry, overwork, loss of sleep brings on perverted nutrition in which daily explosions of food poisoning takes place, a continuous fermentation, and the gas in reality caused the heart to stop.

SUDDEN STOPS

I had a friend who had refrained from smoking until he had reached his twenty-first birthday, he then became an inveterate smoker for twenty-one years, then decided to stop for twenty-one years. We will not go into the subject of smoking at this writing, only to say that under such conditions it was idiotic to stop so suddenly after continuous smoking for so many years. He was sick in a few days from the reaction, and soon returned to his smoking as hard as ever. If one must smoke, for goodness sake do it in moderation, then if you decide you are better off without it (which you are, of course) you can stop with little or no ill effect.

Raw food is a fine diet for some people, under certain conditions, but it is not applicable to every one, and in most cases when a person takes up such a diet it is to the extreme of what that person has been accustomed to eating, and in a few days back he goes to the old regime as bad as ever, if not worse.

If you are a glutton do not attempt a forty-day fast, take it easy, taper down on your eating by degrees. This jumping from one extreme to the other will do more harm than good, if for no other reason than the fact that you will not stick to your resolution, you will soon break out again in the same place like the rash; and go at it again stronger than ever. Use moderation in the first place, then you will not be compelled to adopt extreme measures at any time.

EXCESSIVE USES

Nothing is conducive to health if indulged in to excess, but when one keeps in condition so that nature is able to take care of what you impose upon her, and eat as sane persons should, there is little food which will make you unnecessarily fat or thin or injure you in any manner.

One should study one's individual needs, and not become a crank, an extremist on any line; reach a conclusion as to what is best suited to your physiological idiosyncracies, then exert your will power and hew to the line that you may enjoy the God-given boon of a long life of service, success and unalloyed happiness.

MAKES ARCHERY RECORD

Dr. Paul W. Crouch of Boston, recently established a new world's record for archery at the forty-fifth annual tournament of the National Archery Association. He made 90 hits and a 626 score. The old record, 90 hits and 618 score, made by G. Phillips Bryant of Boston, had stood since 1918.

Third Week of Tennis Play on Bay Courts

Santa Monica's annual municipal tennis tournament swings into the third week of play this week-end, including Labor Day, when the ladies' singles, mixed doubles and further matches in men's singles and doubles are to be contested.

Net lights from Los Angeles and other Southland points will flock to the Bay District courts beginning today. In the ladies' division, Mrs. William Henry, Southern California champ; Doris Doeg and Marjorie Gladman, Santa Monica High School phenoms, will be seen.

Among the males who will perform for expected large galleries are Ben Gorchakoff, Dick Tobin, Paul Kerwin, Tom Bundy, Joe Giano and Joe Call. According to F. Lee Smith of the tournament committee, the tourney will last about three weeks more, the greatest majority of the battles to occur on week-ends.

MANY ANSWER CALL

The dove season, which opened the 1st inst., found one of the largest open-day crowds in the field in many years. Also the game exceptionally plentiful. By 9 o'clock on the morning of the first day, close to fifty limits had been brought into Los Angeles. All hunters still report the game plentiful and no trouble at all to bag fifteen birds. The deer season opened the 1st inst. in the High Sierras. No reports have been received as yet.

ANCIENT SPORT OF OSTRICH RIDING ON TODAY IN RODEO

The ancient sport of ostrich riding will be revived at the First Annual Capistrano Beach Rodeo, today and tomorrow.

In Africa and South America—the home of the ostrich—these birds are raced as horses are in this country. In fact, the sport has such popularity that fans "follow the birds" as Americans follow the ponies; study dope sheets and bet, too! In this country, owing to the scarcity of ostriches and the difficulty of training them, racing is only done occasionally. But since Violet Bowen and other screen stars have gone in for it as a fad, new interest in the sport is being manifested.

Lloyd Chapman of the Cawston Ostrich Farm, who will perform on some of his own birds at Capistrano Beach, says that the great difficulties encountered in training and racing ostriches makes the sport just that much more interesting. He says that his audience will be treated to some brand new stunts on Labor Day—and that so far as kick is concerned, ostriches are in the thrill-a-minute class.

Plans for the Labor Day celebration are completed. A. W. Parks, manager of the event, reports that the past week has brought in many new entries for practically every event, and he expects this rodeo at Capistrano Beach to be the best affair of its kind that he has ever managed.

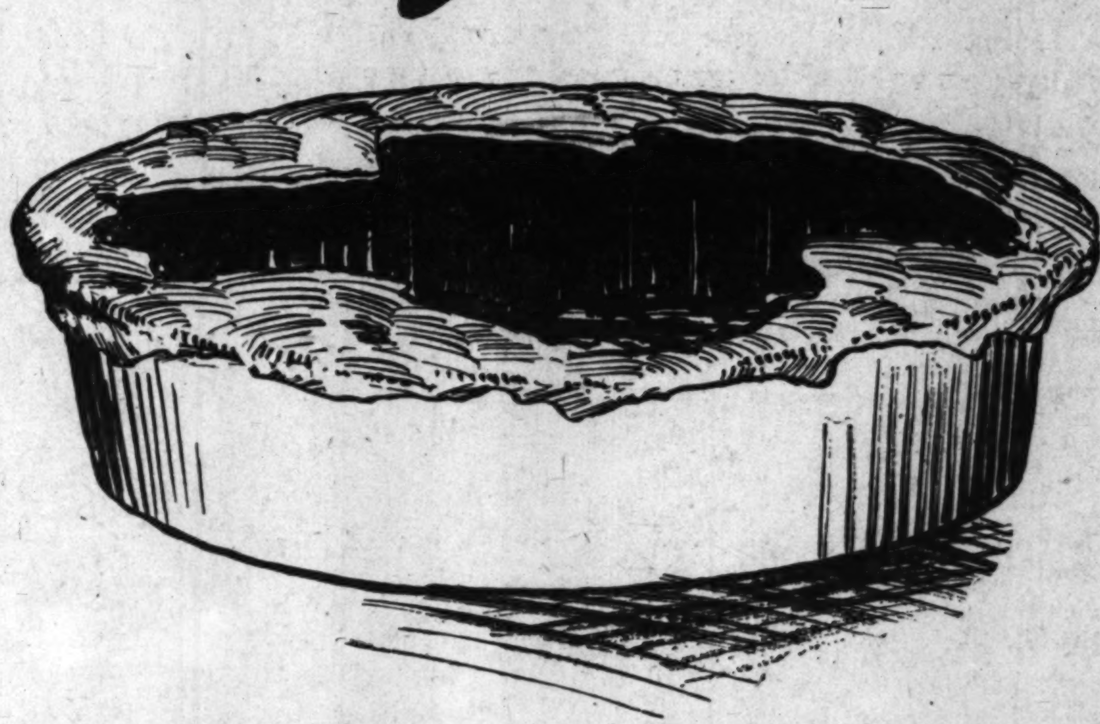
MOVIE STAR THIRD IN CLASSIC

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

PORT WASHINGTON (N. Y.) Sept. 5.—Although Rhody, Narragansett Bay yacht, in the international star-class championship, made a runaway race of the final contest of the series today, the Ace, defender of the trophy and representative of the Western Long Island Sound fleet, successfully retained the cup for another year with a total of 65 points for the five races.

Auriga, the British Columbia entry of the English Bay fleet, was able to finish no better than sixth today, but placed second in the point score with 61. Movie Star II, Southern California entry, and Rhody followed in order with 59 and 49 points respectively.

When the Meat is Out of the Pie—



Suppose the government should lock up the 200,000 homes served with the Los Angeles Sunday Times and prohibit the inhabitants thereof from spending money!

What would happen?

A recent house-to-house survey of Los Angeles—its trading habits, expenditures, purchasing power, etc.—shows that such an act would bankrupt every great store, bank, theater, restaurant and automobile agency in the city.

True, there would still be people to do business with. But after the elimination of the Sunday Times' 200,000 fathers, the Sunday Times' 200,000 mothers, and the Sunday Times' hundreds of thousands of sons, daughters, aunts, uncles and grandparents, the residuum would indeed represent what's left of a pie when the meat is gone.

But the most startling aspect of such a situation is this:

An advertiser wishing to reach this left-over market would be forced to pay to the newspaper which seeks and claims to cover it a far higher rate than it costs to reach the Sunday Times vast market of 200,000 prosperous homes.

This paradox—a high rate for the table-scraps and a low rate for the meal—may be explained as follows:

The newspaper which covers the left-over market includes in its circulation a large percentage of copies shipped far beyond Los Angeles trading radius. A still larger percentage is sold to children solely for the pictures.

The Sunday Times, on the other hand, is strictly concentrated in Southern California. Its vigorous, constructive and wholesome subject-matter automatically attracts practically all the average normal Americans.

The result of such a condition has been to give the Los Angeles Times the outstanding leadership in its field, making it one of the four or five greatest newspaper advertising mediums in the United States. Concurrently, advertisers have enjoyed an unsurpassed opportunity. By winning the Sunday Times' audience they have been able to win the entire Los Angeles market, for the relatively small number of worth-while customers not reached by The Times directly, are converted through contact with Times readers.

CANYONS ROAR AS FLOOD DAM WORK PROGRESSES

Jurymen, on Inspection Tour, See Rock Walls Gnawed Away to Receive Concrete

BY CHESTER HANSON

The rugged walls of the Pacoima and Big Santa Anita canyons are echoing these days with the blows of the pick and hammer, the clang of the shovel, the squealing of steel cables, the rattle of pneumatic drills and the explosion of giant powder —all united in a symphony of labor and science that will mark the end of devastating floods from these particular canyons.

Upon invitation of J. W. Reagan, chief engineer of the county flood control district, members of the county grand jury got a first-hand insight into the manner in which actual work on the Pacoima and Big Santa Anita dams has been progressing. The dams are being constructed under the $35,000,000 flood control bond issue.

The jurymen were hauled to the dam sites over new roads that, in many places, had to be blasted from the canyon walls; they were hauled high up the mountainsides in little cars on railroads with [illegible]-deg. grades that bring religion to the passengers more quickly than any Billy Sunday can; they were carried far out over the dam sites in cages that swung at fearfully dizzy heights suspended from thread-like steel cables stretched from mountain top to mountain top; they slid and crawled down into cavernous pits that will form the footings of the dams; they watched the county engineers testing materials that will go into the construction of the dams; they clambered on the grim rocks of the canyon walls, and then went home pop-eyed at what they had seen, heard and experienced.

CANYON RIBS SCARRED

Verily, if there is any way of bringing these floods from the mountains under control, these armies of workmen who swarm over the canyon floors like ants, or the appear like flies as they dangle from ropes high up on the dizzy cliffs laboring the while with hammer and drill—they will do it. For months, now, the work has been going on. And despite the necessarily tedious preliminary work that had to be gone through with, today at the dam sites the sides of the canyons are scarred deeply where the rock has been blasted out to receive the con-[illegible]

The Pacoima dam, being built by the [illegible] Brothers Construction Company, will cost about $1,750,000. It is located about a mile up the canyon. It will be 600 feet long at the top. It will be of the constant-angle arch type. It will be completed in about eighteen months, barring unavoidable delays. Its capacity will be 12,000 acre feet of water.

The main camp for the county flood-control engineers for both dams has been set up at the Pacoima damsite, with B. F. Jakobsen, a nationally known dam construction engineer, in immediate [illegible] quantity of water to be used in both dams.

STRENGTH TESTED

The care with which Reagan and his men are carrying on the work at these dams was indicated by the establishment at the Pacoima damsite of a field-testing laboratory in charge of Engineer [illegible]. Members of the jury were shown how samples from every carload of cement, which the county furnishes the contractor, is tested for strength. What does not come up to specifications is rejected. Also the county testers utilize the comparatively newly established fact that as the [illegible] varies in certain qualities the quantity of water to be used in it must be changed.

The general principle was demonstrated to the jurymen that the less water used, to a certain degree, the greater will be the strength of the resultant concrete. About all this work these [illegible] will go on daily, even to the matter of testing the sand used for it with regard to vegetable or other foreign matter.

An interesting fact in connection with the work on both dams is that all the stationary machinery, the concrete mixers, donkey engines and air compressors, is operated by electricity. The rock and sand are obtained on the spot. Tests have shown that the sand to be used in the concrete and the rock on and against which the dams will rest is of exceptional strength—many times stronger than any concrete which has ever been able to com-[illegible]

At the Big Santa Anita dam at Arcadia the work is being pushed with equal vigor. To reach the dam site, however, the county had to construct about two miles of mountain road. This dam, which will be constructed by the Ross Construction company, will be 225 feet high, 560 feet long at the top, fifty feet thick at the bottom and seven feet thick at the top. Its capacity will be about 1500 acre feet of water.

WATER CONTROLED

It should be remembered, however, that these dams are not constructed as storage dams but simply as flood control dams with outlet gates through which the flow of water can be controlled at will. The cost of the Big Santa Anita dams will be about $600,000. R. F. Metcalf is the engineer for the county at this dam under Jakobsen. It is estimated that it will take about nineteen months to build this dam.

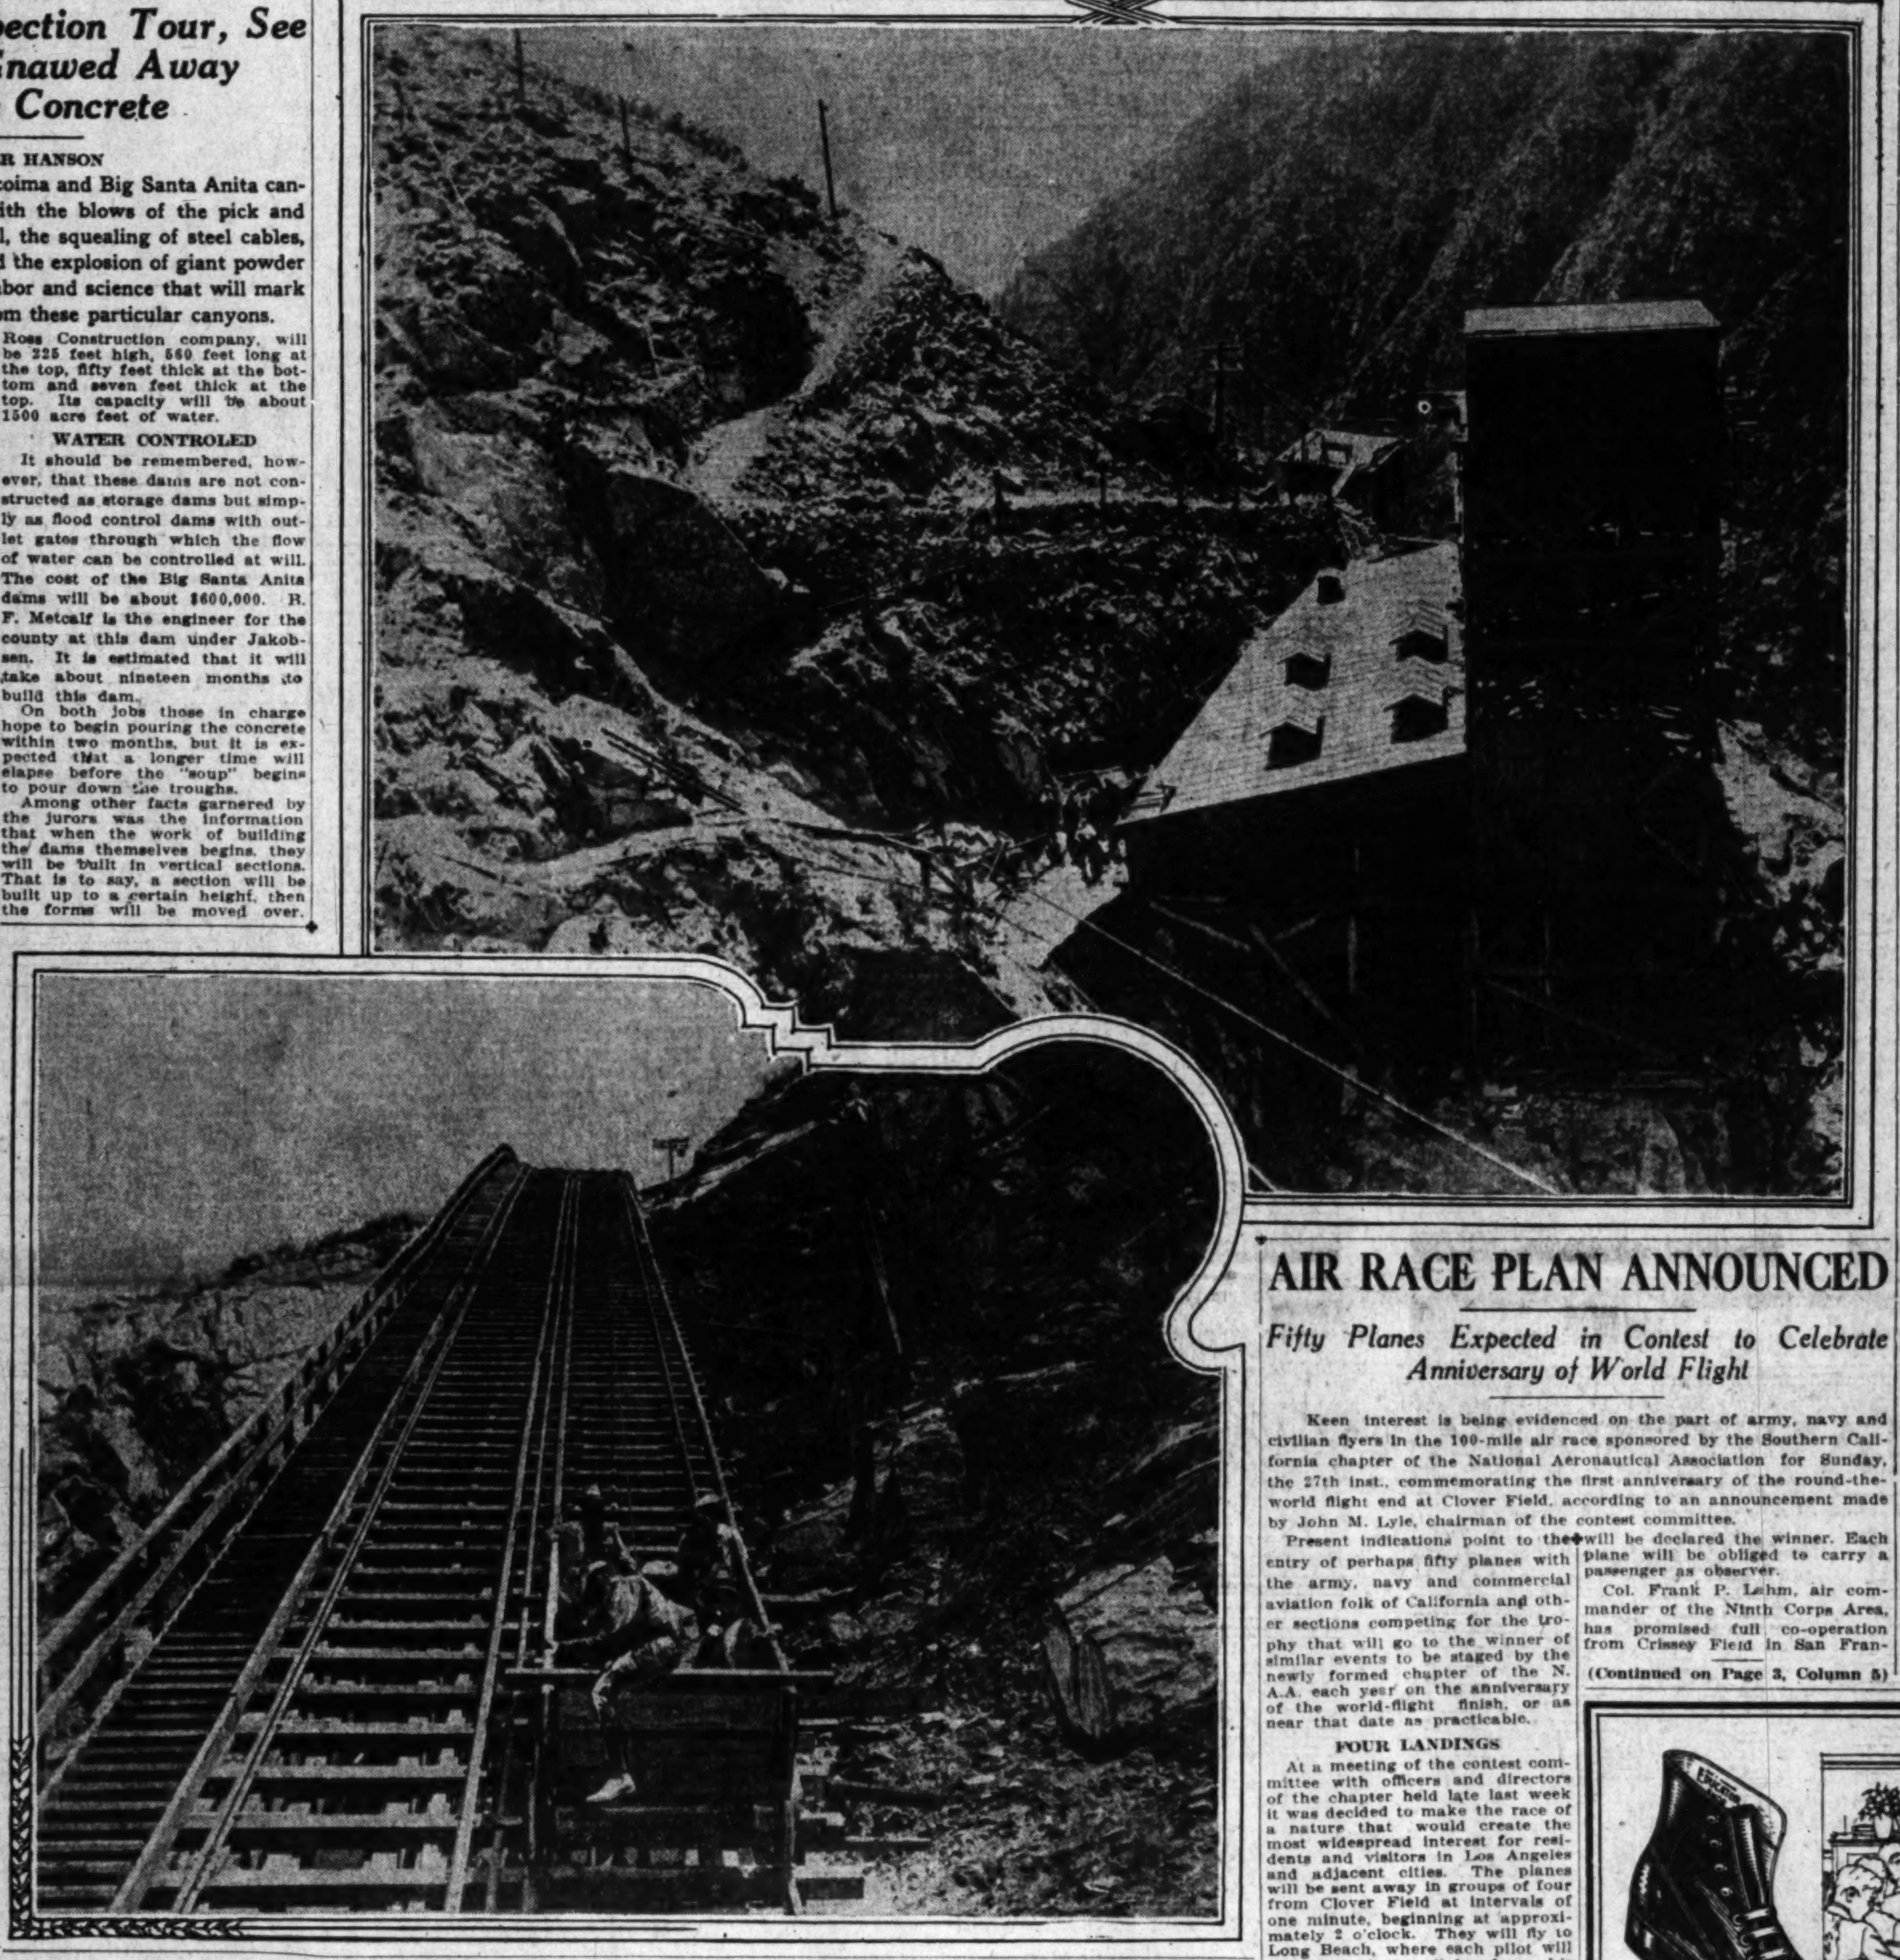
On both jobs those in charge hope to begin pouring the concrete within two months, but it is expected that a longer time will elapse before the "soup" begins to pour down the troughs.

Among other facts garnered by the jurors was the information that when the work of building the dams themselves begins, they will be built in vertical sections. That is to say, a section will be built up to a certain height, then the forms will be moved over, leaving a vacant space and another section will be poured until the opposite wall of the canyon is reached. They will then go back and put in the sections that were skipped. This method is followed in order to let the heat generated by the chemical action of the ingredients in the concrete to escape, by always keeping four walls of a section exposed. If this were not done the heat generated in such great bodies of new concrete would cause a great amount of expansion with resultant cracks.

After viewing the work thus far on both dams Foreman Taylor of the jury said he felt he expressed the sentiments of other members of the party in commending the apparently business-like way in which the work was progressing.

GETTING READY TO STORE UP OUR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA WATER SUPPLY

One of the largest flood control projects in Southern California is represented by the work at the Pacoima damsite, two views of which are shown below. The upper photograph shows the cable house and material bunker while the lower photograps shows the members of the county gran d jury being taken by Chief Flood Control Engineer J. W. Reagan to the top of the damsite on an incline railway pitched at an angle of 45 degrees and climbing 400 feet high.



AIR RACE PLAN ANNOUNCED

Fifty Planes Expected in Contest to Celebrate Anniversary of World Flight

Keen interest is being evidenced on the part of army, navy and civilian flyers in the 100-mile air race sponsored by the Southern California chapter of the National Aeronautical Association for Sunday, the 27th inst., commemorating the first anniversary of the round-the-world flight end at Clover Field, according to an announcement made by John M. Lyle, chairman of the contest committee.

Present indications point to the entry of perhaps fifty planes with the army, navy and commercial aviation folk of California and other sections competing for the trophy that will go to the winner of similar events to be staged by the newly formed chapter of the N. A.A. each year on the anniversary of the world-flight finish, or as near that date as practicable.

FOUR LANDINGS

At a meeting of the contest committee with officers and directors of the chapter held late last week it was decided to make the race of a nature that would create the most widespread interest for residents and visitors in Los Angeles and adjacent cities. The planes will be sent away in groups of four from Clover Field at intervals of one minute, beginning at approximately 2 o'clock. They will fly to Long Beach, where each pilot will be required to alight from his plane, go to a designated spot on the field and get from the Mayor of Long Beach a paper certificating his arrival, then take off for Pasadena, where the same procedure will rule, then to Griffith Park, fourth to a point in the north end of the San Fernando Valley, selection of which has not yet been made, and return to Clover Field and bring the credentials from each field visited to the judges' stand. The first pilot to do this will be declared the winner. Each plane will be obliged to carry a passenger as observer.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—In the Washington navy yard is a queer-looking apparatus.

There is a gun with an open breech and a wind machine in front of the muzzle.

With this machine the Navy is trying to find out what caused the dreadful disaster to the U. S. S. Mississippi that happened off Los Angeles Harbor—when forty-eight lives were snuffed out in a gun turret.

It is a mystery that has not been explained. If it happened because a fragment of burning powder still remained in the gun when they reloaded; well, then such an accident will never happen again.

Hereafter, in addition to blowing air through the barrel, water will be sprayed through after every shot to extinguish any spark that may remain.

THE BIG GUNS

The Washington navy yard is one of the most interesting places I have ever seen. All the big naval guns are made there.

I wonder what old Stephen Decatur or even Farragut would think if he could look down one of those huge shining pipes. Their cannon were toys in comparison.

THE GREAT DRAMA

The next big naval battle will be like a contest between two factories.

What impressed me about this great death laboratory, was that war has become a huge impersonal drama. It makes it even more relentless and horrifying.

FIGHT BY MACHNERY

They showed me through the fire-control stations.

Down where the bowels of the ship would be is something that looks like an adding machine. It is the most marvelous piece of war machinery ever devised. With it you may say the guns are aimed.

The airplane scout will radio back to the ship the position of the ships of the enemy—so distant they will not be visible over the edge of the horizon.

From his reports, word will be sent down below where this elaborate and complicated machine performs an intricate problem in higher mathematics.

THE GUNNERS!

As the result of this calculation, the gunners in the turrets above will keep a little red

CITY SLIGHTED BY DETROIT

Los Angeles' Busiest Intersection Overlooked in Comparison of Traffic Figures

The city of Detroit, boosting one of its street intersections as the busiest in America, sets forth figures that incorrectly place Los Angeles in an inferior position, it was revealed yesterday in the official publication of the Detroit Board of Commerce received at the offices of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

In its eagerness to show the asserted greater volume of traffic at the Detroit intersection, the Detroit Board of Commerce publication selected the intersection of North Broadway and Sunset Boulevard in Los Angeles as this city's busiest intersection, stating that 144,634 persons cross this intersection during the average eighteen-hour day.

"Anyone who knows the city of Los Angeles knows the absurdity of this statement," A. G. Arnoll, secretary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, declared. "The intersection of Sunset Boulevard and North Broadway, while it is a busy intersection, does not begin to approach other downtown intersections in amount of traffic."

Here are some figures compiled by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce to show how erroneous the statements of the Detroit publication are in connection with the traffic problem:

Seventh street and Broadway, recognized as the busiest intersection for all traffic in Los Angeles, was checked and it was found that 489,613 persons passed over it during an eighteen-hour day. This is more than three times the amount cited by the Detroit journal for the North Broadway and Sunset Boulevard junction.

Los Angeles' busiest intersection consists of the crossing of two streets, Seventh street and Broadway, but a picture of Detroit's busiest intersection, shown in the Detroit publication, reveals that it actually is the intersection of several streets around a central public square, the Campus Martius. At this place, the Detroit publication claims that 1,233,025 persons pass each eighteen-hour day.

Traveling Men to Fix Date for Conclave Soon

The definite dates for the convention here early in October of the Southwestern Traveling Men's Association will be set Monday at a conference between local officials of the association at temporary convention and membership headquarters, 2441 Hunter street.

This announcement was made yesterday by John J. McCourt, Los Angeles vice-president, following his return from Phoenix, Ariz., association interstate headquarters. There he conferred with Roy K. Marsh, president. Marsh instructed McCourt to meet R. H. Jones, in charge of the membership drive, and Russel Stapleton of Pasadena, to settle the conclave time.

The campaign that has been waged by the association during the last six months on behalf of lower hotel and garage rates has resulted in the acquisition of many new members, Membership Chairman Jones declared.

"With the former membership throughout Southern California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas, together with the new members that have joined up here within the last two weeks, our total roll is well over the 2000 mark," said Jones. "The drive has been going so well that we anticipate the goal of 3000 members easily will be reached by convention time."

Of course there have to be teachers and leaders and critics.
Of course there is a right way to do everything as well as A good many wrong ways. Certainly it is well to have some Body around to tell us when we have started off on the wrong
Foot and when we are singing out of tune. It is not right to Continue in error and the one who corrects us should be looked Upon as a friend. Yet it is hard not to view all such as Carpers of the very worst sort and the more we need telling
The worse we hate to be told. For when we are doing our very Darnedest in vain; when we are worn and weary with the effort
And about ready to quit—when we are the most disgusted with Ourselves and the maddest at our critics, the man who helps
Us over our hardest hurdle is the one who smiles admiringly
And says, "Gee, I think you're doing fine."

CHARITY CHEST DRIVE OUTLINED

Headquarters Opened by Local Organization

Leaders Assert Nation Will Watch Result Here

Chief Declares Needs to be Greater This Year

R.W. Pridham

Official opening of the Los Angeles Community Chest headquarters located at 911 South Grand avenue was made yesterday in preparation for the appeal to be conducted from November 9 to 18, next.

With headquarters established, and with such efficient and able men in executive posts as R. W. Pridham, president; George M. Babcock, general manager, and Oscar Lawler, general chairman, the campaign is now ready to swing into lively activity. Twelve thousand workers, under the direction of Mr. Lawler, have volunteered their aid in endeavoring to put over the greatest appeal Los Angeles has ever known.

Not only are the eyes of all Los Angeles focused on the forthcoming drive, but nation-wide interest has been aroused in the local chest because of its miraculous accomplishments during its first year of operation.

SUPPORT CERTAIN

"That Los Angeles will stand ready to support such a humanitarian cause as that for which the chest stands, is certain," declared Mr. Pridham yesterday. "The chest has given people of Los Angeles an idea of what social work really is and a concept faint perhaps, but still a concept, of some of the conditions prevailing in the community. It has produced a more efficient and adequate distribution of the responsibility of the community at large for the maintenance of the various social service agencies operating throughout the city."

Los Angeles, in its first chest appeal made the nation-breaking record of surpassing any city in the country in the amount subscribed. That this record will be surpassed in the pending appeal is indicated by the fact that the city is now acquainted with the aims, purposes and accomplishments of the organization.

MANY IN CHEST

One hundred and twenty-five welfare agencies under the wing of the chest, all of which have volunteered their participation in the approaching appeal, have been enabled to enlarge their scope of work since affiliation with the chest, and already scores of other welfare agencies are seeking to come into the organization.

To adequately meet the needs of the sick, the orphaned, the aged, the impoverished, the crippled, and all the needy people of the city, more money will have to be raised, especially with the entrance of more agencies into the chest.

LOS ANGELES OF CANADA FOUND

Victoria Claims Title in Flower Illustrated Booklet

The city of Victoria, B. C., is proud to be known as the "Los Angeles of Canada," it was revealed here yesterday by R. W. Pridham, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned to Los Angeles from an extensive motor tour of the Northwest.

Upon his arrival here, Mr. Pridham displayed an advertising folder which had been given to him in Victoria. Above a picture of a garden of blooming flowers was this inscription:

"Victoria, B. C., the Los Angeles of Canada."

"I find the people of Victoria and many other sections of the Northwest highly interested in Los Angeles," Mr. Pridham declared.

ASKS LARGE DELEGATION AT JUBILEE

Members Urged to Attend by Chamber of Commerce Secretary

All members of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce were urged yesterday, in a bulletin signed by A. G. Arnoll, secretary, to try to attend the Diamond Jubilee in San Francisco, commemorating California's admission to the Union. The celebration began yesterday and will last until the 12th inst.

Arnoll especially urged the members to be present for the celebration on Admission Day, Wednesday, the "big day," at the jubilee, when the local Chamber of Commerce float, a beautiful floral representation of a peacock, will be exhibited in the parade.

Two excursions, one by the Southern Pacific and the other by the Los Angeles Steamship Company, have been announced by officials of these two organizations to care for the great number of San Francisco-bound Angelenos who are not motoring to the northern city.

The Southern Pacific special leaves Los Angeles Tuesday evening and arrives in San Francisco the next morning. The return trip will start from San Francisco Wednesday evening.

The steamship City of Los Angeles, being sent north by the Los Angeles Steamship Company, will leave the local port at midnight tomorrow and will arrive in San Francisco on the morning of Admission Day. The ship will leave San Francisco at midnight of Admission Day.

Following the series of consolidations in Canada the Royal Bank now has resources of $720,000,000.

WORK BEGUN ON OPERA SETTING

Auditorium to be Changed Into Theater

Miles of Rope and Tons of Cable Required

Specialist Now Working With Chorus of Ninety

Nine miles of rope, 5000 yards of special jute from India and three tons of one-inch steel cable will be used in converting the new Olympic Auditorium, Eighteenth street and Grand avenue, into a 6000-seat operahouse for the presentation of the California Grand Opera Company's season October 6 to 12.

J. L. Stuart, who annually transforms the San Francisco Civic Auditorium for opera seasons, this week completed preliminary work incident to converting the Olympic Auditorium.

JUTE AIDS SOUND

By the use of jute which has 100 per cent fullness an acoustically perfect operahouse will be constructed. The jute will be hung from one-inch steel cable reaching from ceiling to floor and fitted around the balcony. Pin rails arranged on the balcony will relieve the stage of obstruction from ropes and tackle. The proscenium arch will be fifty feet wide and thirty-eight feet high.

There are sufficient individual dressing-rooms in the three basements of the new auditorium to accommodate ninety principals and more than 120 of the chorus. This vast space will be invaluable for the production of "Aida," which will be given in its entirety and which will require 400 persons for full production.

World-famous specialists in opera production have been brought together by the California Grand Opera Company for this single week of operas. Giovani Grandi of Milan's famous operahouse, La Scala, came to California expressly to paint the scenery for the company, which will be heard in Los Angeles. Grandi, is regarded as the Michaelangelo of opera.

CHORUS EXPERT HERE

Giuseppe Papi, chorus instructor, of the San Carlo Opera, Naples, the second largest in Italy, also crossed the ocean to give expert advice to this opera company. He spent this week in Los Angeles in analytical and intensive work with the chorus of ninety-five men and women.

Pericle Ansaldo of La Scala is in charge of stage direction. Pietro Cimini, conductor, Chicago Opera, will come to this city direct from Buenos Aires, where he scored a triumph in the winter season of opera at the Colon Theater.

Gaetano Merola, who has achieved national fame for his successful direction of opera on this Coast, will conduct four of the operas and Cimini two.

Principals to be heard here are Tita Schipa, Claudia Muzio, Fernand Ansseau, Rosina Torri, Elvira de Hidelgo, Ricardo Stracciari, Antonio Cortis, Marcel Journet, Marguerite D'Alvarez, Vittorio Trevisan, Cesare Formichi, Lodovico Olivero, Elinor Mario and Antonio Nicolich.

HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH MARRIED

Simply Follow Precepts of This Blissful Aged Couple

Age Instructs Youth

Mr. and Mrs. Desnoyers instruct two of their young friends, Jack Zimmerman and Margaret Bauer, how to be happy though married. Their precepts have worked out perfectly in practice. Lower picture shows Mr. and Mrs. Desnoyers in the vineyard of their San Fernando Valley homestead.

Happily wedded life will never wax old nor love grow cold if couples marry young and observe the ordinary precepts of fairness and consideration toward one another, according to Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Desnoyers of 17150 Ventura Boulevard, in the San Fernando Valley, who celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary Friday afternoon when 150 guests attended a reception from 3 to 8 o'clock.

Even after sixty years, this old couple are still in love with each other, and the husband always meets his wife at the breakfast table with a kiss and the woman always receives her man as her beau when he returns from a trip to the city.

"I guess mother and I would gladly live our sixty years of married life over again, or add sixty years to our present existence together were it possible," said Mr. Desnoyers as he fondly put an arm about the shoulders of his "best girl," who smiled up at him with the love-light undimmed in her eyes.

"Well, I guess 'yes' too," said Mrs. Desnoyers as she turned to shake hands with congratulators who pressed about the white-haired pair.

WAY TO HAPPINESS

It is all because they started right and kept to the straight path, say they; and it is also because they began life at a time when the country had good stock in their young people, say their friends.

Here are the reasons the couple give for the happiness of their long wedded life:

1. Make careful selection of your life-mate.
2. Do not conduct a long courtship, but long enough to know what you are doing and getting.
3. Marry young before you have formed individual habits which might clash later; "grow up" together.
4. Face marriage with courage and the determination to make a happy success of it.
5. Help each other all you can but let each direct his and her business or household duties.
6. Be cheerful and co-operative in family matters and be courteous and kind to each other.
7. Read papers, magazines and literature together and discuss national and domestic affairs with candor.
8. Divide your earnings; make every cent count and save enough to meet all emergencies, but don't hoard foolishly so you can't enjoy life.

All Ventura Boulevard joined in the congratulations to the old couple and those who could not stop in a moment to shake their hands, waved handkerchiefs from cars as they sped by.

FORMER SHOE MAKER

Years ago Mr. Desnoyers was a prosperous shoe manufacturer in St. Louis where he was president of the Desnoyers Shoe Company, which employed as high as 1500 persons and had branch factories in several cities. He was also, prior thereto, vice-president of the Brown Shoe Company, one of the largest in the country.

After thirty-five active years in the shoe business in St. Louis, Mr. Desnoyers disposed of his interests and came to California to live, and for the last four years has resided on Ventura Boulevard on four acres of ground which has been improved with two fine homes—one for his son and daughter-in-law—and the other, with every convenience, for himself and wife.

The small ranch is dotted with many small produce crops, with 1000 white Leghorn chickens and pens, with fruit trees of several varieties, grapes, kale for the chickens and others. Several litters of contented kittens, a dog or two and other pets share this wonderful valley home.

"Happy" is not a word sufficiently expansive to cover all the features of this Eden and Mr. Desnoyers advises his Eastern friends, of which he has many thousands through his early traveling connections and manufacturing associations, that "this is the life," and that the sooner they share in San Fernando Valley and Los Angeles city prosperity and home beauties, the better it will be for them.

FOUND YOUTH FOUNTAIN

"Mother and I thought we were about through when we reached Los Angeles a few years ago," said Mr. Desnoyers. "In fact, I retired from active business in 1902, believing I would have only a short time more to get what I could from life. But coming to California was just like entering into a new existence and here we are, nearly a quarter of a century after our 'retirement,' enjoying life more than ever and expecting to go many years more.

Mr. Desnoyers is almost 83 years of age and his wife is 79. They were married in Ottawa, Can., in 1865. Mr. Desnoyers helped settle the Civil War as a member of Battery E, First Ohio Artillery from Cleveland; he voted for Abraham Lincoln in 1864, and when the conflict was over, he went over to Ottawa and took his bride back to Cleveland.

Sid Grauman, Who Battled Hardships of Klondike Days, Declares California Pioneers Had Easier Time Than Sourdoughs in Arctic

The miners came in forty-nine
And labored through fifty-one.
Their job was a cinch compared to those Who looked on the Midnight
Sun.

While everybody's attention is drawn to the hardships of the miners who crossed the Plains in '49 in the quest for gold by California's Diamond Jubilee celebration, at least two prominent individuals in the community opine that the Forty-Niners had a pretty easy time compared to those who made the pilgrimage to the Klondike in the late nineties.

Though not belittling the exploits of California's pioneers, Sid Grauman, from personal experience as a "sourdough" in Alaska, and Charlie Chaplin, from research work for his film production, "The Gold Rush," which Grauman is presenting in his Egyptian theater, think the California gold rush a holiday compared to the Alaskan dash.

Blizzards and an average temperature of 50 deg. below zero greeted Grauman when he arrived as a youthful stowaway from his home in San Francisco to take up the gold trail across Chilkoot Pass to the Klondike. The merciless rigors of the North made it impossible ever to be comfortable indoors or out, Grauman states.

BALMY CLIMATE

The Forty-Niners found the climate of California balmy even in winter, and worked in their shirt sleeves when the cheechakoes in Alaska could not get enough clothes on to keep warm, Grauman points out.

Imported food sold for fabulous prices in Alaska, and the frozen fish diet of the Indians and Eskimos, while it allayed the pangs of hunger, was decidedly lumpy on the inside, says the theatrical magnate.

In one of the scenes depicting the privations of the Alaskan pioneers, in "The Gold Rush," Chaplin, as the hardluck prospector, driven frantic by hunger, gulps down a tallow candle and throws the audience into spasms of mirth by his efforts to eat his own shoe. Research shows, according to the producer, that the pangs of hunger often drove storm-bound prospectors to such extremes to escape the agony of starvation.

Moose meat selling for $1 a pound and corn meal mush at $2 a side dish were the only alternatives from walrus and whale blubber for the unfortunate gold seeker of Alaska.

EASIER LOT

The California pioneers had wild fruits and nuts and even wines in addition to venison and other game that abounded in the early days to make easier their lot of roughing it in the camps.

In Alaska, phlegmatic Eskimos and stolid Indians, whose only word of welcome was an unappreciated "Ugh," greeted the wayfarer seeking the gold of rainbow promise, while in California there was a sufficient number of fair senoritas to brighten life for the man seeking his fortune in the gravel of the creeks.

From his personal experiences with the prospectors, Grauman has produced a panoramic spectacle of the frozen North as a glittering prologue introduction to Chaplin's comedy-drama of the privations of the goldseekers.

REPAIR COST FORCES NEW PAVING JOB

Alhambra Fathers Decide It is Cheaper to Contract for New Surfacing

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 5.—Adopting a policy of ordering street improvement work without waiting petitions from property owners, the City Commissioners this week ordered the city engineering department to prepare plans and specifications for the paving of two streets, Stoneman avenue and Chapel street. Both are important north and south highways through the city.

The plan adopted will result in improving all streets in the city which are in need of new surfacing within the next two years it was said at the City Hall. Several additional north and south streets as well as some east and west highways should be repaved in the near future, the Commissioners declared.

Cement concrete was authorized as the material to be used in the paving of Stoneman avenue from Main street to Huntington Drive. The type of paving for Chapel street, from Alhambra Road to Valley Boulevard, was not decided.

One of the reasons advanced by the city officials for pushing the needed street work at this time was because of the excessive amount of money used to maintain the old streets. The present expenditure of from $30,000 to $40,000 to keep the streets in repair was regarded as far too high.

Oriental Rugs

We wish to call your attention to our recently enlarged Oriental rug section where rugs bearing all the mystery and beauty and charm of the age-old artistry of the Orient are shown in small and extra large sizes. Brought together under the personal selection of our representative, Mr. Harold Koumrian, from the far-distant rug-weaving districts of Persia, China and other parts, they represent the finest of Oriental rugs in point of quality and weave, texture of material, design and color. Intended for the homes of those who love beauty, who want only the unusual and the best.
Imperial Kashan Carpets
Superb rugs, size 23x13, closely woven of the finest wool so that they have a deep rich pile. Colors of turquoise blue and delicate rose are blended together in an all-over design with the wonderful skill that marks them as products of a master rug-weaver.
The size 21x12 rug has a lustrous background of soft mulberry with glowing sapphire blue woven in an interesting design.

Royal Saruk carpets
Rugs whose beauty and artistry exert a poignant appeal, these that have the deep silky pile resultant of being woven from the finest of Kashan wool. The size 21x13 is marvelous with its rich rose ground and border and design of a blue that delights the eye.
Lavere-Kirman carpets
This extra size rug—23x12½—is of tremendous beauty and luxurious quality. Beautiful shadings of blue and gold are intermingled with deep rose to produce an incomparable piece.
Mandarin rugs
Genuine Mandarin rugs from China, made by Kharagheusian, who is recognized as the producer of the finest worsted yarn Chinese rugs, are shown in glorious colors and all sizes. Mongolian Chinese rugs are present in such dimensions as 27x14, 22x14, 20x16, on down to 4x2. Truly a startling range of magnificent rugs!

NEW LANDING FIELD CHOSEN

Antelope Valley Location Designated

Will Facilitate Flights Over Mountains

Named in Honor of Airman Who Was Killed

Recognizing the importance of aviation, both for commercial purposes and passenger travel, Alpine Springs (Harold) in Antelope Valley on the Mint Canyon Boulevard has been selected as a site for a new aviation field in Los Angeles county. On a direct airway from Los Angeles to Mohave, Bakersfield and Sacramento, this new field will be the first landing place north of the Sierra Madre Mountains.

Lieut. Horace Kenyon, commanding officer at Clover Field, Santa Monica, with Lieut. Harry A. Watson of the Four Hundred and Seventy-eighth Pursuit Squadron, who has been instrumental in the enterprise, flew from Clover Field in a government plane recently and made a careful inspection of the surrounding territory, selecting an ideal location for the new flying field.

Commander Kenyon and Lieut. Watson, after flying over Alpine Springs and Palmdale, were enthusiastic over the possibilities of the new landing field in the development of aviation in Southern California.

The use of the land on which the new aviation field will be located is being donated by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cole of Long Beach. The field has been cleared and the government's regulation white circle marker has been established.

Under command of Lieut. Kenyon, six government planes will fly from Clover Field, Sunday morning, the 6th inst., arriving at the new field about 11 o'clock. Twenty-five aviation officers and their ladies will be entertained at lunch at the noon hour at Alpine Springs. Among the prominent aviation officials who are expected to accompany the flying squadron are Col. Graham from Rockfield, San Diego, and Capt. P. D. Moulton, flight surgeon of Clover Field.

Honoring the late Lieut. Hugh Denny of the Four Hundred and Seventy-eighth Pursuit Squadron, Clover Field, Santa Monica, who gave his life in the interest of aviation on July 11, 1925, when an accident happened to his plane near Clover Field, the new field will be named the Hugh Denny Aviation Field. The dedicatory services will be held at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon on the field. Mrs. Denny, widow of Lieut. Denny, will be the guest of honor.

Will Help Rebuild Historic Mission by Benefit

More Aid for Santa Barbara

TWO of the leading attractions at a benefit performance to be held shortly to asist in raising funds for the restoration of the Santa Barbara Mission are Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink (left) and Miss Marjorie Dodge. Many other celebrities will also take part.

FROM BUNNY TO SQUIRREL

Changing Rabbit Pelts to Expensive Fur One of Interesting Features at County Fair

[illegible] broiled rabbit goes well as the piece de resistance of a [illegible], one of the furry little hoppers makes a nice pet for the children; but a hare really reaches his most valuable status when he becomes a "gray squirrel" fur for a lovely woman's adornment.

That is the conclusion drawn by officials of the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona, the 22nd to 26th insts., inclusive, where the rabbit department will be featured by a display of elegant furs made from bunnies as well as prize-winning live ones of rabbitdom. The major display of furs of pelts of rabbits, it was announced yesterday, has been entered by W. A. Hannah of 1238 [illegible] street, Ontario. This display will include an imitation gray squirrel fur made from rabbits so [illegible] as to defy detection by anyone except experts, it is asserted. Many such novelties of added interest to fair visitors have poured in from entrants during the last week as fair time nears. While the workmen are busy on the Pomona Fair Grounds getting ready the big tents which will house the $1,000,000 fair, Manager C. B. Afflerbaugh, Secretary George W. [illegible] and other registration officials have been swamped with last-minute demands for exhibit space.

LEADING PAINTERS

Theodore B. Modra, himself a well-known artist, and veteran director of the art department for the county fair, yesterday announced the names of some of the prominent exhibitors in his department. These include some of the leading painters and sculptors of the West and the art pieces they have entered assure this section [illegible] interest, Modra declares.

There will be everything in the line of pictures from so-called "color paintings" and lovely landscapes in oil, water and pastel colors to sharply futuristic and cubist creations by some of the modernists. Notable among the latter will be paintings exhibited by Mrs. Rose Abdy of San Francisco. Mrs. Abdy's work, it is stated, is known to devotees of art as that of the somewhat conservative modernistic type. Her work is in water colors.

Others who will display water colors are Henri De Kruif, John [illegible] and Dana Bartlett, all of Los Angeles, Mr. Cotton being president of the Water Color Association.

Here is a partial list of exhibitors:

Oil paintings—Benjamin Chambers Brown, Pasadena; Miss Alice [illegible], Pomona; Carl Oscar Borg, [illegible] Hill Gilbert, W. A. Griffith, E. Vernon Hunter, William L. Jordan, Edward Langley, all of Los Angeles; portraits—John Hubbard Rich, Mrs. Kathryn Leighton, both of Los Angeles; pastels—Max Wicvorek of Los Angeles; sculpture—Ella Buchanan and Mary Everett of Los Angeles, Bert W. Johnson, Claremont; Harold Swartz, Glendale; Merrill Gage, Santa Monica.

BEE DEPARTMENT

In view of the fact that bees are perhaps more feared and admired by the layman than any other "live stock" that is raised in the rural districts, the fair management anticipates huge interest in the apiary department, under command of William Atchley of Upland.

One of the last counties to enter the industrial show in the big main horticulture-agriculture tent, it was announced yesterday by J. M. Paige, superintendent, was Alameda, from Northern California. Plate goods, with specialties in vegetables, apricots, grapes and other rich products of the county bordering on San Francisco Bay will be exhibited. Much interest is being taken in the coming Los Angeles county fair even in the north. California products all the way from Lassen county on the north to San Diego county on the south will be displayed.

The women's department will be another section which is better this year, it is emphasized by the management. With Mrs. F. W. Niedermeyer as superintendent, the following departments will be represented:

White embroidery, Mrs. C. B. Afflerbaugh and Mrs. E. S. Conklin; colored embroidery, Mrs. J. E. Reimers and Mrs. C. W. Guerin; lace work and knitting, Mrs. E. P. White, Mrs. W. E. Stevens; bedspreads, quilts and rugs, Mrs. Ellen Mashmeyer and Mrs. Jane Goodspeed; arts and crafts, Mrs. H. W. Pierce and Miss Grace M. Hall; antique display, Mrs. W. S. True and Mrs. W. A. McCormick; culinary, Mrs. George Belcher and Mrs. D. G. Arbuthnot; fruits and vegetables, Mrs. E. S. Ware and Mrs. Jerome Ludden.

Thus with art, bees, rabbits, fancy work and all the other "trimmings" of a truly "old-fashioned" fair, the interest of the horse races, horse show and major exhibits will be well augmented so that the fourth annual county exposition at Pomona September 22 to 26, inc., will be rounded out with interest to every comer of the expected 125,000 visitors.

SINGER WILL AID BENEFIT

Mme. Schumann-Heink Heads Galaxy of Talent to Perform for Santa Barbara Mission Fund

With Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink heading a galaxy of some of the world's leading concert and theatrical stars, a mammoth benefit performance in aid of the Santa Barbara Mission restoration fund will be given at the Olympic Auditorium on Thursday evening, the 17th inst.

This performance, decided upon by the campaign committee of the restoration fund after Mme. Schumann-Heink had wired a generous offer of assistance, will be managed by Los Angeles' widely known impresario, L. E. Behymer, who is devoting his whole time and that of his entire office force towards making this one of the outstanding successes in Southern California entertainment history.

While the roster of nationally-known entertainment talent is far from complete, several outstanding appearances have already been arranged, among the leading of which is Miss Marjorie Dodge, the celebrated soprano; Gilman Williams, recognized nationally as one of the coming baritones of the American concert stage; the entire chorus of ninety of the California Grand Opera under the direction of Alexander Bevani, the dance orchestra from the Ambassador Hotel's Cocoanut Grove, with its soloists, under the direction of Ray West.

With a view to giving everybody in Southern California an opportunity to aid in restoring the "Queen of the Missions," and at the same time enjoy an evening of regal entertainment, the campaign committee decided that despite the great array of talent on this bill, popular prices should prevail. Reserved seats, therefore, will be $1, $1.50 and $2, and a generous block of 5000 excellent seats have been set aside unreserved at 50 cents.

Through the courtesy of J. M. Danziger the Olympic Auditorium has been offered to the campaign committee with no expense and as a generous donation from him to the mission cause.

Joseph Scott, chairman of the general executive committee of the mission fund, said yesterday:

"All Californians must feel greatly indebted to Mme. Schumann-Heink, Miss Dodge, Mr. Williams, Mr. Bevani, Mr. West, Mr. Behymer, Mr. Danziger and those many others who have made it possible for us to present this great performance to the Los Angeles public and for such a worthy cause.

"Such an opportunity to hear so many great soloists, including the world's greatest contralto, at popular prices seldom presents itself, and is now only possible due to the great size and facilities of the Olympic Auditorium. A great feature of this location is the convenience to many street-car lines and generous parking places."

CLASSES BEGIN THIS WEEK

Extension Division of University Announces Wide Range of Subjects and Opening Dates

The first classes among the 400 subjects offered in University of California extension work, begin this week. Elementary economics will meet Tuesday, the 8th inst., from 7:30 to 8:30 in Room 617 Hillstreet Building. Dr. William Maxwell Burke, formerly deputy District Attorney, and now engaged in practicing law, gives this course. Dr. Burke also conducts extension classes in elementary commercial law, business investment and finance, and banking. These latter subjects will also start this week.

The elementary economics course given by the State University takes up forms of business organization, money, credit, international trade, land, factors determining wages, interests and profits and other corresponding problems.

COMMERCIAL LAW

The commercial law course is a practical study in the fundamental principles of law governing everyday business transactions. The small merchant as well as the man of large business interests, the salesman, bank employee and many others can find valuable knowledge in this course as it relates to business conditions under the California law. This class meets for the first time Tuesday, the 8th inst., at 6:30 in Room 617, Hillstreet Building.

The class in business investment and finance takes up the subjects of short term notes, bonds and securities and gives an analysis of security values. This class will meet Thursday the 10th inst., at 6:30 in Room 617, Hillstreet Building. The course in banking, which covers contracts, drafts, deposits, acceptances, notes, collateral, bonds and securities and national and State bank methods, meets Thursday the 10th inst., at 7:30 in Room 617, Hillstreet Building.

OTHER SUBJECTS

A class in advertising starts Tuesday evening the 8th inst., from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 616, Hillstreet Building. John Dolph, the instructor, is head of his own advertising company in this city and is on the editorial staff of the Coast Banker. He was co-winner of the Burroughs Trophy of 1923 and was a former lecturer at the University of Oregon.

Frank Geritz, who will instruct in woodblock cutting and printing, was formerly on the staff of the San Francisco Chronicle and has been special artist for The Times. This course starts Friday, the 12th inst., from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 615, Hillstreet Building.

A course in direct current electricity is to be given by Richard Kendall, supervisor of training at the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. This class meets Friday, the 11th inst., in Room 817, Hillstreet Building from 7 to 9 p.m. Plane trigonometry is to be taught by Guy Hilderbrand Hunt, assistant professor of applied mathematics at the University of California, Southern Branch. This class meets at the Western Electric Building, Tuesdays and Fridays from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning the 8th inst. Public speaking, given by Charles Marsh starts the 10th inst. from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 810, Pacific Finance Building.

Additional information about any of the courses given by the University will be available at 815 South Hill street.

Plan New Block in Home Gardens Business Area

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

HOME GARDENS, Sept. 5.—Another new business block is to be erected in this community.

W. A. Alexander, a realty man, has started work on the construction of a $20,000 brick building on Tweedy and Alexander avenues.

The lower floor will contain three store rooms and offices and garage, and the second story will be a community hall.

It will be completed some time in the early autumn months.

OPEN HEALTH CLASSES SOON

Heavy Registration Expected in Y.W.C.A. Work

Interesting Program for Term Announced

Recreation, Swimming and Dancing Included

The health education and recreation department of the Young Women's Christian Association begins its fall term Thursday, the 24th inst. This department is second among the Y.W.C.A.'s of the country in the number of girls and women registered in classes in systematic exercise, rhythmic work, dancing, games and swimming. With the many inquiries about the fall classes, the registration this fall should go beyond the registration of the New York City association and be first on the list.

An interesting and valuable program including all lines of exercise for health and recreation is scheduled for this term. The slogan of the department is "Exercise and Play, Learn to Swim, Acquire Grace and Poise."

GYMNASIUM CLASSES

Folk dancing and games: Beginning classes—Monday and Thursday, 2-3, 6:45-7:30, 7:30-8:15, 8:15-9; Tuesday and Friday—10-11, 5:45-6:30, 6:30-7:15. Advanced classes—Monday and Thursday, 10-11, 6-6:45; Tuesday and Friday, 2-3, 7:15-8; Children's classes—Saturday 10-11 for girls 6 to 11 years; Saturday, 11-12 for girls 12 to 16 years.

SWIMMING

The swimming pool is open daily, except Saturday and Sunday, from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. It closes Saturday at 5 p.m. This is the only pool in the city exclusively for women and girls. The water in the pool is constantly passing through a filter. It is treated with chlorine, and a vacuum sweeper is used each week. A bacteriologist is engaged to inspect and analyze the water each week, to show the sanitary condition of the water. All reports have been excellent. A medical examination is required of all using the pool. All class work in swimming is given in courses of six lessons each (some meeting once and some twice a week.) Every class meets eight times. Any six of the eight lessons may be taken. Length of the lesson, one-half hour, and one-half hour practice.

The class work is given in five grades, as follows: First grade—Simplified crawl and back stroke. Second grade—Side stroke and English overarm. Third grade—Crawl, double overarm and breast stroke. Fourth grade — Diving. Fifth grade—Life-saving and the National Red Cross examination.

A normal course is given for the young women wishing to become swimming instructors. The Y.W.-C.A. Swimming Club has been organized, and any girl, upon passing the test, may become a member.

SWIMMING SCHEDULE

Private lessons—by appointment. Class lessons: Monday and Thursday—10-10:30; 2-2:30; Tuesday and Friday—10-10:30; 2-2:30; Tuesday and Thursday—6-6:30; 7-7:30; 8-8:30. Children's classes, Saturday—9:30, 10, 10:30.

Dips (practice hours)—Women who know how to swim and those who are learning and need practice, use the pool during dip hours. The pool is always under the supervision of an instructor. Schedule: Monday—9:30-3; 5-9:30; Tuesday—9:30-3; 5-9:30; Wednesday—2-3; 5-9:30; Thursday—9:30-3; 5-9:30; Friday—9:30-3; 5-9:30; Saturday—1-5.

RHYTHMIC CLASSES

For grace, for interpretation of rhythm, for joy in expression, folk, character and interpretive dancin. Schedule: Beginning classes: Wednesday—10-11; 2-3; Wednesday—6-7; 7-8.

GAMES

For friendly team play and competition and general exercise. Volley ball, captain ball, basketball and baseball teams will be organized in the classes, and tournaments will be conducted.

RECREATION

Splash parties in the plunge; week-end house parties at Eliza Cottage at Hermosa Beach, and at Camp Estelle, two miles beyond Camp Baldy in San Antonio Canyon; hiking club—the Y.W.C.A. Hiking Club will open to new members Friday, October 9, at 7:30 p.m., 941 South Figueroa street.

Corrective and remedial gymnastics for the woman with: Backache, lame and stiff shoulders; poor posture, fatigue and little endurance; weak abdominal muscles, ptosis, indigestion, headache and constipation; fallen arches and weak, painful feet; poor circulation, a flat chest and "shortness of breath;" too little or too great weight for health and beauty; overtaut nerves, insomnia and worry; a weak heart or glandular inefficiency; very weak or paralyzed muscles, and postural lateral curvature of the spine.

The office of the department of health and recreation is open daily (except Saturday) from 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. On Saturday it is open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

AIR RACE PLAN MADE PUBLIC

cisco, Vancouver Barracks in Washington, Rockwell Field in San Diego and perhaps other more remote fields.

NO HANDICAPS

"We chose the 'round-city' itinerary," said Arnold Kruckman, first vice-president of the N.A.A. chapter, yesterday, "with five take-offs and five landings as the best means of giving all contestants a fair show in the race.

"We have decided not to have any handicaps established, although there will be all classes of planes in the race. Some will be faster than others, some can make altitude more quickly than others, but with the relatively short jumps and the necessity for each pilot to get his certification from each landing field, we believe, the race, while short, will demonstrate ability of air pilots better than taking off from Clover Field, going to a given point and returning without making a landing en route. We expect some spirited foot racing between pilots on the landing fields as well as speed in the air."

PLAN FETE AT VIADUCT DEDICATION

Colorful Parade to Mark Opening of Ninth-Street Way the 26th Inst.

A colorful parade of old Spanish caballeros mingling with modern industrial workers will mark the opening of the Ninth-street viaduct Saturday, the 26th inst. according to plans worked out this week at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce executive committee.

The date of the opening was announced yesterday by F. R. Feitshans, general chairman of the committee, of which F. L. S. Harman, assistant secretary of the chamber, is chairman of the program committee and Leslie R. Saunders is secretary.

Plans formulated by the committee call for the meeting at 1 o'clock that day, of two parades—one representing downtown Los Angeles and the other representing the industrial community on the East Side. The converging of the two parades will be the occasion for the breaking of a chain of California flowers across the viaduct.

Speeches will be made by several prominent citizens of Los Angeles, and an auto caravan then will carry participants in the ceremonies on a tour of the East Side and Central Manufacturing district where an old-fashioned California barbecue will be given at 2:30 p.m.

Mrs. George Herbert Clark, chairman of the committee on school participation, has arranged for the teachers and pupils of the vocational departments of all high schools to participate. E. E. Cox, chairman of the speakers' committee, is arranging for speeches by Mayor Cryer, President Pridham of the Chamber of Commerce, Rex Goodcell and Fred Beatty.

Long-Lived Germs

Second-hand clothing, unless it has been cleaned and disinfected, is always dangerous. Some time ago there was an auction in a house near Birmingham, and a quantity of children's clothing was disposed of. Two children for whom these garments were purchased contracted diphtheria, one dying of the disease.

Inquiries proved that the original owners of the clothing had died of diphtheria, and although this had happened fifteen years earlier, the germs had survived and remained active and dangerous.—[Exchange.

SHORT ORDER

Often a mere tip is worth a whole truckload of advice.

FALLS DOWN

Men are real clever but you never can find one who can knit his own hat.

NOT TOO CLOSE

It is well enough to have close friends, but they do not want to be so doggone close that it is impossible to borrow a nickel of them.

SMOKERS ATTENTION

There are still over 150,000,000 acres of virgin forest in the country—woods that have never known the caress of feverish flames.

NOTHING LEFT

Some enthusiasts do not leave anything behind them but their footprints and the steam roller comes along and mops them up.

THEIR MAKE-UP

A movie couple, after quarreling rather bitterly, was said to have made up very nicely when they got to the studio together the other morning. They had their make-up boxes with them.

MIGHTIEST SINEWS

Europe has become impoverished by too strict adherence to the old advice, "In time of peace prepare for war." Its new motto should be "In time of peace save money. Then if war becomes inevitable you can prepare for it quickly." And finally think more of peace and less of war.

THE MAIL MAN

The government postal service gives occupation to more than 300,000 citizens. More than half of all of Uncle Sam's official workers are in this department. It is unfortunate that this branch always shows a deficit in the cost of operation. We take a great deal of pride in the postal service, yet it is more than possible that if it were under private operation it would be more efficient and profitable.

FORGETTING NAMES

It is embarrassing to keep on forgetting the names of persons to whom we are introduced. According to memory hints, the way to fix a name in your mind is to repeat it attentively, not merely mechanically, at the time of the introduction. We remember faces because we pay attention to them; we forget names due to lack of attention when the name is pronounced. The same memory that holds the face should also hold the name.

SAVING LUMBER

Now it is possible to reduce all the sawmill waste—slabs, butts, sawdust and the like, to a cellulose pulp, which under pressure is made into perfect lumber. There are no knots, snags or weak spots. Why not put our trees through the meat-grinder in the first place and then make all the lumber we want in the form we want it? Maybe we could dispense with a lot of nails and press our doors and windows in regular sizes for domestic consumption.

JAZZY HYMN BOOKS

A New York musician has been engaged to jazz up the hymn book of one of the churches. There appears to be an impression that if the Sunday-school songs had a little more ginger in them the young folks would like them better and give them larger attention. This is a mistaken idea. What is wanted is some church music in jazz. The jazz is wearing itself out and a touch from the hymn book would help it a lot. So far as the church is concerned there is genuine love and respect for the old hymns. There are stately and splendid harmonies that will last forever. At any rate they will be commanding hearts and voices long after the jazzbos are dead. No sane person would want to mix "Hot Lips" with "Lead, Kindly Light." If jazz and the hymn book are to meet it must not be in the church.

THE AMERICAN HOME

The government inquiry into housing conditions in this country shows that the big definite gain in this country is in the direction of the individual home. The number of single houses as compared with the building of flats, duplexes and apartments is gaining steadily and rapidly and this is interpreted as a fine thing for the future of the American family. For a time the national drift was in the direction of the apartment, but now it is going back to the individual home. The cost factor is an important one. According to a survey as reported by the Lumbermen's Association the average cost of a one-family dwelling in the United States last year was $4314. Construction expense per family in apartments was $4153 and in flats or duplexes $4159. It is therefore found that at a trifling additional cost a family may have a home of its own and the advantage is appreciated.

OUR GOLDEN HARVEST

A rich harvest and a prosperous year for those engaged in husbandry in Southern California, and particularly in Los Angeles county, are fully indicated by the reports of experts as to most of the crops grown on farm or in orchard in this great agricultural empire. Strikingly significant is the remarkable fact set forth in these reports that, despite the unprecedented lack of rain which has made the past three years the driest period of that length in the history of the Southland, our crops this year are the most valuable in the annals of this, the richest county in the United States.

Scoffers at Southern California—those who have characterized it as a naturally "arid country," or as a desert in which crops could be produced only in those occasional years when there was unusual rainfall—are utterly refuted by the extraordinary showing of this year in the face of what might be deemed a natural handicap of the most serious nature. The reports of our golden harvest, in some respects the richest yet gathered in all these years of plenty, are such as to dispose permanently of that ancient calumny.

Looking at the results, both realized and indicated, what has happened here after this long period of little rain could not have happened under present tillage conditions in any of the Eastern or Middle Western States. For there drought always spells disaster, while here, with our ample preparation for the artificial application of water, there is no failure of crops, and, as witnessed by the reports for this year, there has been an actual increase in many cases.

A return of $85,000,000 to Southern California citrus-fruit growers, the highest ever received, is estimated by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce in its September field report, together with a 30 per cent increase in walnut production and a considerably larger cotton yield than that of last year, as well as bright prospects for other crops not fully harvested.

Imperial Valley, where some of the earliest crops in the State are produced, has held its own despite unfavorable weather conditions. Cantaloupe growers and shippers are well pleased with their returns. When the last melon car had rolled out of the valley it was found that the total movement, including that of casabas and honey dews, was 14,220 carloads taken from 27,559 acres, and that the gross sales had amounted to $12,000,000, giving the growers a profit of over $3,500,000. Imperial Valley also makes a fine cotton showing, and will market a goodly part of the total of 102,000 bales which the State statistician estimates as representing California's yield this year.

Aside from the unprecedented value of the citrus crop this year there is every indication of unusually large returns to the producers of deciduous fruits. For the first time in the history of the peach industry the Southland growers are being paid higher prices for their fruit than those prevailing in Northern California. The success of their friendly rivalry should greatly stimulate the industry. One of Los Angeles county's big fruit crops is that of Antelope Valley pears, which have yielded fairly well despite unfavorable conditions. There have been large and valuable crops of plums and berries, as well as other fruits, and, on the whole, the orchards of Los Angeles county and all Southern California are making a splendid showing, while general farm and dairy products are holding up well.

The farmer and orchardist of this highly favored region have developed their industries and marketed their crops by methods which prove what can be done where agricultural effort is intelligent, scientific and businesslike. These methods are not difficult to follow. They are the result of experience in this particular field, and the newcomer, if he has sufficient capital to make a good start, readily may avail himself of the fruits of that experience and profit by them. Here he will find the farmer enjoying all the comforts and most of the luxuries now deemed essential to our American standards of living. He will see a splendid system of roadways leading to markets where co-operative organizations handle the products of the soil with the utmost dispatch and economy, thus eliminating the elements of waste and loss seen in so many other agricultural regions.

Best of all, the newcomer will find in the mild climate many blessings not to be enjoyed in regions of rigorous winters, or where he may never look upon lofty mountains or stand upon the wave-washed shores of the blue sea—prospects that will invite his soul and fill it with joy and peace.

SWAPPING PEDAGOGUES

Are American universities becoming top-heavy and is the crop of efficient instructors being exhausted more rapidly than it is being produced? These are questions raised by H. L. Mencken, who discusses what he terms a "revolt among university students against the imbecility of pedagogues."

In view of some of the freak theories that occasionally appear in print as emanating from supposedly high educational sources, whether Mr. Mencken is right or wrong, it can do no harm to consider what he offers on the subject.

He asserts that there is a growing realization by a "minority of intelligent students" that American universities, and especially State universities, are becoming too large, that they are now unable to secure sufficient competent professors to fill the chairs and that "their huge bulk and immense funds make them tempting fields for politicians, both of the usual sort and the pedagogical sort." The revolt, as he sees it, is occasioned by the situation where, for instance, the student may find that the psychology professor, to whom "he is doomed to listen, is an ass," and to escape from him by transferring to another university is only "comparable to having his appendix out or getting a divorce."

He suggests that membership in one university be made membership in all, so that time spent in any one of them would receive credit in any other. Thus a student might receive his degree from any one of the universities in the chain, as is done in some European countries. He writes that "the advantage of this system would be to deliver the student of unusual intelligence from his present bondage to incompetence. As things stand now he is tied to a system that can only have the effect of knocking the enthusiasm out of him."

When we see the balderdash that is sometimes broadcast in the name of psychology, to which Mr. Mencken has made reference, we are led to believe that he is on the right track. He thinks it "excellent news" that the student has begun to tackle the job "head on" and that, while he will often lose, he will occasionally make a "brilliant killing."

FRANCE'S COLONIAL EMPIRE

That, irrespective of the outcome of the present campaign against the Riffs, the attempt of France, under the Third Republic, to establish an African empire is doomed to eventual failure, even as were the hopes of an Indian empire under Louis XV and a North American empire under Louis XIII is the opinion of Dr. Charles Sarolea of Edinburgh University, eminent historian of European imperialism, writing in the Contemporary Review.

France's colonial ambitions had their rise in the years immediately following the war of 1870. It was a time of great commercial expansion throughout all Europe, leading to a scramble for new territories and spheres of influence. England and Germany were prompted by the need of wider markets. France had the added incentive of finding in colonial activity a measure of compensation for wounded national pride.

Imperialists, sighing for further worlds to conquer, found only the "dark continent" still undivided. They did not hesitate. England secured the most favored regions, the south and east. France seized the north, west and center, leaving the Congo to Belgium.

There are said to be four factors essential to modern colonization: the initiative and daring of pioneers, the financial and military assistance of governments, the cooperation of private capital and the presence of a large body of settlers.

French adventurers and pioneers have not been wanting in Africa. Since 1870 explorers and military adventurers in a steady stream have devoted their lives to its development. Many of the famous generals of the great war—Joffre, Gallieni, Marchand, Gouraud, Mangin, Layautey—spent long years in colonial service.

The state has expended thousands of millions of francs. Railroads, highways, bridges have been built; forests have been cleared; native troops have been trained. Half a million superb African fighting men served in French trenches during the war.

But the French investor has kept his money in the traditional stocking or else has loaned it on comparatively safe governmental securities. There are no great French companies such as the British Niger Company, the South African or Rhodesian companies.

And Frenchmen have not gone to Africa to make their homes. Only about one-half of 1 per cent of a population of 50,000,000 is French. The reason is not far to seek: France has no surplus people. It used to be said that England had both colonies and colonists; Germany, colonists but no colonies; and France colonies but no colonists. Such is still the case.

Finally, France has secured the worst share of Africa—from the standpoint of a colonizing nation. There is no gold, no diamonds, no motton. Moreover, the natives in Morocco, Algeria and Tunis are more advanced than most African peoples. They are of the indomitable Berber race, whose ancestors made trouble for the Romans—the race which created the glories of the Alhambra of Granada and the Mosque of Cordova. They are warlike and not inclined for long to submit without resistance to the yoke of the invader, no matter how lightly that yoke may seem to sit. The denseness of the population is a further drawback. Colonization is usually most successful where the extermination of the subject races is most nearly complete.

LOW COST OF RIDING

Reports from various sections of the country seem to prove that the average price of gasoline to the consumer is now lower than at any time since the war. It is this that helps the ordinary motorist to bear up bravely under the raids made by the various States in the form of a gasoline tax. The low cost of rolling over our beloved country is rather attractive.

VENISON
SALMON 30¢ lb

IT ALL DEPENDS ON THE POINT OF VIEW

There's salmon in the market stalls,
  At thirty cents a pound—
As fine a fish as one could wish,
  All firm and red and sound;
And all one ever has to do
  Is go and have a look,
Then buy a bit and pay for it—
  And take it home to cook.

But folks will go to distant streams
  Where salmon may be found,
With rods and reels and lines and creels,
  And fish the clock around;
When better fish and bigger fish
  Are to be had right here,
Which indicates that human traits
  Are most uncommon queer.

The butcher sells you venison,
  And all you need to do
Is buy a slice and pay the price,
  And take it home with you.
It's good and tender venison,
  And stewed or broiled or fried—
It will delight your appetite,
  With jelly on the side.

But folks will go to woods afar
  With guns and guides and gear
And there remain in snow or rain
  To shoot the dappled deer,
And wait for days and days and days
  Until one comes in range,
For you will find that human kind
  Is most uncommon strange.

IMITATION

Dr. Eric Pritchard of London brings cheering news to those who walk the floor o' nights, stepping lightly through the toys, with infants cradled in patient arms.

Crying is all imitation, says Dr. Pritchard, who, as the medical director of the Infants' Hospital, is an authority on the younger voice of London. Then he explains that naturally a baby doesn't cry, that all his vocal powers are a result of effort to imitate that which he hears. By way of example he cites the case of a baby brought from India to England, whose voice so nearly resembled that of the whistle on the P. & O. steamboat, whereon he made the voyage, that the hotels refused to have the child as a guest. He had just been imitating the vessel's siren, that was all, and he had done pretty well.

There is going to be a hard blow to persons with babies living near firehouses and in the vicinity of railroad tracks, river boats or factories. If these babies are going to gauge their squalling by what they hear it will be well to eliminate broadcasting stations that include some of the operas.

Granddad will have to pipe down on some of those old songs, and the air should be taken out of the bathroom pipe. Yet what father or mother really wants an absolutely silent baby?

ALL DRESSED UP

In a recent divorce case the wife testified that during all the time they were married her husband bought her no raiment save a bathing suit and a pair of silk stockings. Anyhow, he wanted her to be in style.

PETTICOAT GOVERNMENT

BY THE SUBURBANITE

As near as I can judge from the trend of feminine styles, this country never will be in danger of petticoat government.

"Onward and upward" seems to be the motto of the ladies.

And wherever men are failing to hold the fort you see plenty of women ready to take their stand in the breeches.

With women gettin' more and more into politics prohibition dodgers may be mighty glad to have enforcement taken out of it.

When a few more women get into the Senate I suppose they'll erect a statue in the hall of fame to the man who invented can-openers.

As for modern women in politics, though, I don't see how, with the trainin' they've had, some of 'em can ever hope to keep the political pot boilin'.

The breeding grounds of the northern eiders are along the coasts of the Greenland islands and Ellesmere Island. The birds lay great numbers of eggs which form an important food supply for the natives. As many as 4000 eggs are frequently gathered in a few hours from one small island.

LIFE'S PURPOSE

BY ELLANORE J. PARKER

Man, born into a whirling world, comes slowly into his he joy and sorrow.

Slowly and unseen the mind of man flowers. The seeds li mant through the years of youth's unfolding, then they blosso flowers of white fragrance or the flowers of dank, evil odor.

What, cries the heart of man, have I, the atom, to do with this flowering of my mind; was I not predestined to evil, if I am evil, to good, if I fail not? And then within his inner self, that lies so deep and silent, there is a stirring, as if a bird fluttered its wings long folded. There is a gentle melancholy, even a sadness, for it is the spirit-self of man that stirs and bids him think.

Unfolded, unused, it is an unsuspected source of joy and beauty; and there it lies but dimly comprehended.

The real life of man is his inner self. The crust that life puts upon the surface is not real, it is a sham, a pretence for protection against his fellow-man. Such sanity as one's real self would not be understood; man must fool his brother or the brother will not tolerate him. His real inner heart may be a poet's, a musician's, but he fears to come forth and claim his heritage. His people are merchants, shall he disappoint them and himself? For he, the child of the age, fears poverty and isolation and so the seed dies. The beautiful gift is withered and a weed grows in the heart and distills poison instead of beauty.

A standardized age is pressing close down upon the hearts of the people. To be an individual, with courage to deny the popular ideas, is to be branded.

Shame upon an age so blind!

The seeds lie, for man's standing, deep within the tender sheathing of his brain, and he, the seeker, is sent to unfold them one by one, that they may blossom and sweeten the world for others.

Here in the garden of man's mind they lie, unknown, undreamed of, in richness and satisfaction. Awake and look within and not without for your treasures. Carry forward into whatever new sphere the soul may go to, the flowering beauties of your mind. For as a man sows so shall he reap. The petty cares grow lighter, the coveted gains of lesser import. Thieves cannot rob the owners of their treasures, for they are within them, safe and inviolate. Death approaches and softly whispers "Come, I will guide you to a new land; come and see its beauties, tasks have been hard and tears many, but you, the gardener of your soul's garden, shall see the harvest and marvel at its beauty."

Life, the spark that feeds the body, the lamp of the pilgrim, burns feebly if it is not replenished by the mind of man. The oil of endeavor is there, the seeker has but to pass into the depths within his own life and find unlimited store of treasure.

Seek and ye shall find; inward ye look and there is the reward; and none can say ye nay.

SANCHO'S PROGRESS

BY J. J. LOWMAN

Sancho Panza chugged along, his flivver missing sometimes on two and then again on three. He gave it the gas and pressed forward with fresh hope, but as he turned a corner a sign attracted his attention. It read: "Bridge closed. Detour." Bumping along the rough detour for twenty-five miles, Sancho refused to be downhearted. He was weary and his back ached, yet in the dim distance another sign loomed up. He struggled to it and read: "No parking here."

There is no doubt about Sancho being one of the original optimists. He cranked his flivver and decided to press forward. The machine also seemed to catch the infection of his cheerful nature and began to hit on all four. He was actually happy, but just then another sign smote his vision, reading: "Narrow road. One-way traffic." Sancho waited his turn and two hours later was allowed to pass. He paused when a sign told him there was a curve ahead. There appeared to be so many curves that they evidently ran out of curve signs and substituted the word "turn."

He detoured, went down hills in gear. Hours and hours passed, but his head was was unbowed, his dauntless spirit was not crushed. He speeded up to fifteen miles an hour, stopping at grade crossings while freights passed and the gates were let down. However, Sancho was making progress. He felt it in his bones.

Other signs attracted his attention. He was told to go slowly and see the next town, or go rapidly and see the interior of the town's jail. He was advised that it was ten miles to Closeville, but twenty feet farther another sign said that Closeville was eight miles away.

He saw cross-road signs, verily, he saw many. Then he climbed a high hill in low. Just a trifle of doubt clamored for attention, but Sancho shook his head, as if to fool a bee. Around the next turn he felt sure—yea, he was certain. After all, he was right. Leaving the motor running, he jumped from the flivver and wept for joy, for there before him was what he sought. His pilgrimage was over. Suspended from bright lights was the legend of cheer: "Barbecue, California Style."

Early Settler Respected

The visitor to the village was greatly interested in all that he saw. In particular he noticed that one inhabitant of the place was treated with great respect by the others.

"I observe," remarked the visitor to the local gossip, "that you all treat that gentleman with marked deference."

"Yes; he's one of our early settlers," was the reply.

"Early settlers?" asked the other. "Why, he's not more than thirty years of age."

"That may be true," answered the old man. "But he pays all his bills promptly on the first of every month."

WOMAN WINS PHOTO PRIZE

First Place Goes to Gentle Sex in "Times" Contest

Jury Praises Art Quality of "Pictures" Submitted

Southland Scenes Featured in the Awards List

Winners in The Times' Amateur Photographers' Weekly Prize Contest for the period of August 23 to 29, inclusive, follow:

First prize, $10: Miss Adelia Hawkins, 325 South Reno street, Los Angeles.

Second prize, $5: John W. Moore, 336 South Bunker Hill avenue, Los Angeles.

Prizes of $2 each: Dr. O. L. Bates, 530 North St. Andrews Place, Los Angeles; Mrs. Henry L. Curtis, Hotel Upham, Santa Barbara; Myra Baldwin, 646 Eleventh street, San Diego; R. B. Yule, 637 West Lime avenue, Monrovia; Albert Dygert, 311 Mountain View avenue, Watts; Mrs Rose Putnam, 1935 Hill Drive, Eagle Rock; E. W. Finnell, 196 Oakland avenue, Pasadena, and Miss J. C. Hutton, 123 South Vendome street, Los Angeles.

The prize-winning photographs will be reproduced on the first page of the rotogravure section, the 20th inst.

Again emphasizing the picture possibilities of the Southland, five of the ten prize-winning prints in The Times' Amateur Photographers' Weekly Prize Contest for the seven days ending August 29, last, are of scenes thereby made the more familiar through the art of the contesting cameramen and women. Of the others, a number are in the category of photographs which derive little or nothing from the setting.

The high art quality, the studious attention to composition evinced by the large majority of the prints submitted during the week is given especial praise by the award jury, which includes an artist, a photographer, and a man who combines some of the qualities of the two, but who likes to see a photograph tell something or invoke an image.

Despite the frequent printing of the contest rules, many persons persist in sending in prints that are under or oversize. The jury is not going to quarrel over inches or fractions thereof, but must emphasize the desirability of adhering rather closely to the 5 by 7 and 8 by 10 sizes. Remember that for rotogravure reproduction the prints are assembled as a stickdown and the whole photographed at once. As a result a thumbnail photo among 8 by 10s would look rather like it had wandered in among the giants.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS' WEEKLY PRIZE CONTEST

To encourage the making of more and better photographs for rotogravure reproduction The Times offers the following cash prizes weekly for photos by nonprofessionals:

$10, first prize.

$2 each for all other photographs accepted for publication.

Each contest begins Sunday and ends the following Saturday night. The winners of each will be announced in the Sunday Times one week after the close of that particular contest. All photographs received during one week will be considered as entries in the contest of that week.

All prize-winning photographs will be reproduced in the rotogravure section. The first set appears today in the rotogravure section, comprising the prize-winning photographs of August 9.

Everybody is eligible except professional photographers and employees of The Times or their relatives. There are no geographical limitations on contestants except that, other things being equal, a Southern California photograph will be given the preference.

Mail all pictures to Photo Contest Editor, The Times, Los Angeles, Cal. No entries will be accepted except by mail.

The Times cannot undertake to return any pictures submitted.

Photographs submitted in this contest should be approximately 5x7 inches or larger, printed in black and white. Write name and address and title of picture—if it has one—with a soft lead pencil on reverse of print. Don't lean on your pencil or the impression will show through. Tell where the picture was taken.

The Times reserves the right to call for and use the negative of any photograph accepted for publication. The negative will be returned to the owner after use.

As photographs are to be judged primarily for rotogravure reproduction, keep in mind that the best results in this medium are secured through the use of sharp photographs, with a good range of tone. Soft focus photographs are not generally desirable. An exception is where the picture is diffused to center attention on the part to be emphasized.

Every photograph submitted should tell a story which is so obvious or so provocative of thought that a caption or identifying line is not really necessary. Photography is an art; use it as an art.

Beverly Hills Permits Reach $907,150 Total

August building permits in Beverly Hills soared to an imposing total of $907,150, reaching the second highest record of the city's history, exceeded only by June of the present year when the summit was reached with $1,008,525. If the city had not held up a permit for sixty-four houses which are to be erected in the Speedway tract, pending the compliance of O'Neill & Sons with the zoning ordinance, the August record would have climbed higher than that of June.

One hundred and ninety-two permits were issued in August, eighty-two dwellings, eighty-two for garages, one for an apartment-house, twenty-one for repairs, three for business structures, and one an increase of an original permit for the Beverly Theater to the amount of $25,000.

August of last year the permit record was $484,791, this year's August, 1923, was $2?3,422, amount being nearly double that.

GOOD RADIO MARKET

During the first six months of 1925 Europe and Canada maintained their positions as the most important foreign market for United States radio apparatus. Shipments to Europe during the first six months of this year totaled $674,571, an increase of $429,038 over the corresponding period of last year.

THE LANCER

pointer on a disk exactly opposite a little white arrow on a disk.

In the old days, the gun-pointer was stripped to the waist and often bleeding as he trained his cannon on the enemy's water line.

In the next battle, the gun-pointer will not even look out the turret. There would be nothing to see. He will never know what he is shooting at—or why.

All he knows is that the fate of his ship—perhaps the fate of his country—depends upon his industriously chasing the little red arrow on the disk with the little white arrow on the disk.

FIRING THE BROADSIDE

He never will know when the gun is to be fired.

Up in a steel house above him stands an officer, also surrounded by disks.

Among the disks is a small button—about the size of a man's thumb. He presses this button and the ship leaps with the concussion of the broadside. And an enemy ship—out of sight beyond the curve of the horizon—feels the crash and the shock.

But the men who die as the shell strikes will not die by disks or arrows or calculating machines.

SHUT-IN HEROES

I have a peculiar horror of being shut in. Officers tell me that this is common to many sailors, also. There are men who find it impossible to work in closed turrets.

The Navy recognizes this: if, after a reasonable period, the feeling of horror still persists in a recruit, he is always taken out of the turrets and given some other station.

OLD ARMORERS!

Another thing impressed me as dramatic about the navy yard. Most of the men who are making these war engines are mild old men. Bald-headed old men. They sit there carefully guiding drills through steel—making machines that will take part, perhaps, in some terrific world drama. Making these engines and musing over their vegetables gardens at home.

WASTE!

One thing agonized me. The navy yard is piled high with expensive guns and jackets of guns—wasted—thrown away. Junked as the result of the Armament Conference.

Undoubtedly we soothed the fears of the world; but we wasted a terrible lot of money.

COLLECTION OF ART ENRICHED

Huntington Acquires Rare Old Canvases

Four English Paintings Cost More Than $1,000,000

Hang in Gallery Some Day to be Public's

[For photographs of the four canvases mentioned in this article, see Page 2 of the accompanying issue of the rotogravure section.]

Henry E. Huntington has augmented his collection of eighteenth century English paintings with four canvases, a Gainsborough, a Reynolds, a Constable and a Romney.

Although the pictures arrived several weeks ago and were hung in Mr. Huntington's home at San Marino, which some day will become a gallery open to the public, nothing has been known publicly about the matter until this time. The four paintings were purchased through Sir Joseph Duveen, and were brought here by the noted London dealer in person, who spent a few days as Mr. Huntington's guest.

The noted American collecter now has five Gainsboroughs and ten Reynoldses. The four new pictures are notable additions to the remarkable Huntington collection almost exclusively of the eighteenth and early nineteenth century school of English painters whose fidelity to detail makes their products the ever-living record of the flesh and blood and handsome dress of that period.

The American railroad builder, now retired, lives on his country place near Los Angeles in a house that is literally filled with art treasures, not only paintings, but tapestries and china of the styles popular in the day of Gainsborough, Fielding, Johnson and Swift; Burke and Washington. Near the Huntington home is the library whose rare records in time will be thrown open to the public.

The four paintings—the most notable purchase by Mr. Huntington since the "Blue Boy" was brought to Los Angeles from London—are known in art circles to have cost Mr. Huntington a handsome figure, considerably in excess of $1,000,000.

Perhaps the most interesting of the four is Thomas Gainsborough's "Professor Abel." This is a character picture of the noted old English maestro. He sits at a table writing "musick" whilst his violoncello leans against his knee. A dog (Gainsborough's own dog was the model,) rests at the music master's feet. This painting came into Sir Joseph's hands from the collection of George Jay Gould.

In Sir Joshua Reynolds's "Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire," Mr. Huntington has obtained another of the large paintings of British womanhood in the rugged days of the Georges. To inspect the paintings in his galleries, the modern eye is struck by the strong features, the large hands and feet, the latent strength of those English aristocrats; strength that they had freshly inherited from armor-wearing and lance-bearing ancestors.

The Duchess in white gown and white powdered head-dress stands against a background of rich foliage. The realism is perfect—"prick the flesh with a pin and the blood will run." The canvas is from the Earl of Spencer's collection.

The George Romney is a "Mrs. Burton," a small canvas showing only the bust of the subject. Here the commoner of painters delighted himself and posterity with a rare background of deep red.

The fourth canvas is John Constable's "View of the Stour," an excellent example of the work of the master of landscaping. Mr. Huntington for several years has owned Constable's oil sketch of this painting, done on the ground, and he always has wanted to possess the finished piece, which he never had seen. Duveen got it for him; it had been in the collection of Mr. T. Horrocks Miller of London.

PRIZE ROOM BUILT FOR FILM CLUB

Trophy Chamber to House Many Contributions from Screen Celebrities

An interesting addition to the new screen club at Lake Arrowhead is the newly installed trophy room.

Corinne Griffith

The stars and officials of the studios will decorate this room with rare trophies and unique articles they have gathered in their journeys throughout the world.

One of the interesting contributions will be a book shelf on which will repose famous volumes in miniature. The shelf itself will measure three inches in length and it is expected a dozen volumes will repose on it when it is ready for inspection.

Corinne Griffith, First National star, is the possessor of a volume of rare value. It is an exact duplicate of the book in miniature that is in the Queen's Doll House at London and was written personally by Alfred Noyes, the famous British writer.

Books such as this volume will be placed on the shelf in the trophy room. Colleen Moore will donate one of the little books—a dictionary which measures less than an inch in height and less than a sixteenth of an inch in thickness, yet containing all of the words and definitions obtainable in a large-sized volume.

This offering promises to be a decided attraction. The room is now being decorated by John Muschi, famous Swiss artist, and will be ready for contributions from the cinema celebrities within a few days.

Norman Manning, in charge of the screen club activities, claims the trophy room will be one of the show places of Southern California and should attract visitors from all parts of the country.

Are You Unlucky?

ARE you one who always draws a "deuce," when somebody else can draw an "ace?" Are you one of those investors who lose every time they take a chance? Do you belong to that great majority, who seem doomed to work hard for what little of this world's goods they do get?

Then you are the very man or woman for whom this message is meant!

We have an investment that will make your money earn the big wages you want it too—and an investment with all the chance taken out! Even if you are the unluckiest mortal on earth, you can't lose—for your principal is guaranteed against loss!

This investment is not stock, which some board of directors or other higher-ups can juggle you out of. Not units, which pay you back part of your principal and make you think you are getting dividends. Not bonds or a savings account, which pay you a measly 4, 5 or 6% while your money is earning 8% to 20% and over for somebody else.

It is land! Not vacant land with a speculative value sometime in the dim future—but rich income producing land!

And—

You Get An Insurance Policy PROTECTING EVERY DOLLAR you invest in this income-producing land!

WITH the deed to this land you receive an insurance policy issued by a responsible insurance company, approved by the State of California, guaranteeing and protecting the full purchase price of your investment at all times. Every dollar is positively insured against loss!

All improvements to make the land yield you as high as 20% and more on your investment are included in the original purchase price. And you do not have to live on the property yourself or do a minute's work. Even the marketing of the crop is done for you. All you have to do is receive the proceeds in money! And the income is for life—for you and yours!

Buy only as much of this land as you can buy—but buy it! Even if you can spare as little as $14.17 a month average for 60 months—you can well afford to do it for an income of $350.00 a year—equal to the earnings from $8750.00 cash in a 4% savings account.

Income-producing land is the very kind of investment that is responsible for nearly every financial success. And people of large means have been quick to see the value of this particular land—purchasing liberally of it.

But the investment is made luck-proof and loss-proof—is given insured safety for the particular benefit of you who have only a little to invest and cannot risk that little, however much you want it to grow larger quickly. This is an opportunity for every one—but particularly for you who are unlucky in investments.

If you are tired of gambling and always losing—if you want to invest now in something where all the chance is written out, where you cannot lose—fill out the coupon below and get the details about this unusual investment.

ENTHUSIAM GREETS SHOW

Los Angeles Center of Wide Radio Interest on Opening of Exhibition

Every receiving set within a radius of hundreds of miles last night was tuned in on Los Angeles, showing the wave of enthusiasm that has greeted the opening of the monster exhibition in the Ambassador auditorium. Phones in the tower studio were continually ringing during the evening programs, especially at the two-hour concert given direct from the station through the courtesy of the Stewart-Warner Products Service Station from 8 until 10 o'clock, and again on the Los Angeles frolic, which was also presented under the auspices of this concern which is introducing the matched-unit radio.

The feature of the evening's concert was the Stewart-Warner Trio, who joined in the debut appearance of this firm, which started a long series of broadcasts from KHJ. This ensemble of musicians opened the program with "Springtime," a beautiful waltz intermezzo by Drumm.

The widely known hospitality of the tower studio was extended to one of the most prominent artists of KGO, the powerful station located at Oakland. This was Beatrice L. Sherwood, whose lovely soprano voice was given an ovation. She sang "Shy Mignonette," by Brahe and "Homing," by De Reigo as her best numbers. She was accompanied by Lilyan Ariel, concert pianist, who has been so warmly lauded for her solo and trio work.

Welcome was also given to Edward Novis, baritone soloist of the tower studio, who made his first appearance after a lengthy vacation in the Northwest, where he visited prominent stations. On this program he sang "Bedouin Love Song," by Chadwick and the unique number, "Song of the Flea," by Moussorgsky.

Cousin Oswald's rich Scandinavian accent was added to the atmosphere of the studio. He appeared before the microphone four times in the course of the evening with his inimitable Swedish monologues.

LOST ANGELS ON AIR

The weekly fiesta of the Lost Angels, which started at 11.30 p.m. and continued until 2 o'clock in the morning, was filled with unusual entertaining and musical features. This strange tribe of the night air has attracted attention from radio fans all over the country, with queries as to how they can join the organization. The Stewart-Warner firm as sponsors added a new touch to the broadcast.

The children's hour of the evening featured the return of "Little Boy Blue," whose real name is David Durand. He has been absent from the studio for some time, and even now is appearing in one of the "Our Gang" features for a motion-picture company. With him were Marguerite Doyle, 12-year-old singer, and Jerry Aldridge, 5-year-old reader, Henrietta Poland, the "Little Forget-Me-Not of KHJ", and Doris McGill, 11-year-old singer, who came here from Duluth, Minn.

The matinee program of the Pacific States Electric Company presented Bennie Newahi, master of the ukulele, Urban Thielman, pianist; Billy Lynn, banjo, and Hazel Thomas, soprano. This group of artists gave an excellent and widely diversified group of selections.

A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of KHJ to be the guests of the Radio Show and The Times at the Ambassador theater on Monday and Thursday afternoon from 1:00 to 2:30. Interesting programs will be presented by KHJ artists and the guests will not only be admitted to the theater free of charge, but will receive a pass to the Radio Show good for the balance of the afternoon.

GOOD PROGRAM DUE

Monday at 1:00 p.m. the program to be presented at the Ambassador theater will include "Uncle Remus," Titian Trio, violin, cello and piano in ensemble and solo numbers, Mary Newkirk Bowers, soprano, Bennie Nawahi, ukulele, and an interesting talk by McClellan Reed on the "International Influence of Radio."

Thursday at 1:00 p.m., fifteen of the "Wonder Children" of KHJ will be present on the stage of the theater and will be introduced by "Uncle John." An address will be delivered by Aimee Semple McPherson and the Majestic Eight Orchestra, Arthur Mace, leader, will furnish music. At each of these entertainments, which are entirely free to the public, a color print of "Uncle John" and "Sir Richard Headrick" will be given to each guest, all of which has been made possible by the co-operation of the Third Annual Radio Show management with the Los Angeles Times.

KHJ was host yesterday to one of the prominent figures of Pacific Coast broadcasting in the person of Vincent I. Kraft, manager of station KJR, which is operated at Seattle by the Northwest Radio Service Company. He is making a tour of the Coast States, combining it as a vacation and inspection trip. He has visited practically all broadcast units here in the West, and is now on his return home. Last night he visited the radio show at the Ambassador Auditorium.

A further boost for KHJ was given by Mr. Kraft, who stated that he has found The Times station coming in with excellent clarity and volume at every point along the Coast, from Seattle to San Diego. He is traveling by motor, and uses a special portable set to check in frequently on his own station and other studios.

KHJ DISCOVERS GENIUS OF SONG

In addition to entertaining radio fans, KHJ is rather priding itself on having developed into a training school for musical comedy artists. The case in point is Hatch Graham, who for many months has been on of the big favorites at this station with his banjo and songs. Hatch, in fact, made so good over the radio that Edward D. Smith, when he was producing "Lady, Be Good" decided to steal him away, and now he is playing an important role in the musical comedy success at the Mason. He sings to his own banjo accompaniment two of the biggest hits of the show, "Fascinating Rhythm" and "I'm a Little Jazz Bird." Hatch, strangely enough, is an attorney. He gave up the practice of law first for the radio and now for the musical comedy stage.

Graham was born at Canton, Ill., in 1898, the son of William S. Graham, who won fame as the designer of farm implements for the International Harvester Company. He attended the Canton High School, Colorado Agricultural College, and finally graduated from the University of Illinois law school in 1923, having made the Sigma Nu and Gamma Eta Gamma fraternities. He was admitted to the Illinois bar in 1923, and the California bar in 1924.

Graham has been a radio fan from the first and his first attempt at broadcasting was for the benefit of friends listening in back in Illinois varsity days, when he sang old-fashioned songs, college ditties and popular melodies of the day. He began regular radio work from Station KHJ, Los Angeles, in January, 1924, and attained great popularity with Southern California enthusiasts. Kipling's "The Ladies," ("An I learned About Women From 'Er,") proved to be the most successful number Graham ever broadcast. As the result of his radio work, he became a noted entertainer with song and banjo at club entertainments and banquets, and this finally led to his engagement for "Lady, Be Good."

The first iron bridge in the world was the one at Shropshire, Eng., which spans the Severn River. The parts were constructed about 1778 at Coalbrookdale Iron Works. A remarkable feature of the undertaking is that all castings are keyed together, no screws nor welding having been used.

In the city of Paris there are between 50,000 and 60,000 families who live by the trade of rag-picking.

Air Patrol is Name Given to New Local Set

The Western Auto Supply Company's new radio set, the Western Air Patrol, will be on exhibition at the Radio Show. The entry of this automobile accessory firm into the radio-selling field will undoubtedly make an enormous difference in the volume of radio sales on the Pacific Coast in the future, due to the number of retail stores operated by the organization and the tremendous buying power that will make possible the selling of a high-grade set at an extremely reasonable price.

The Western Air Patrol, as shown by the Western Auto Supply Company, is a five-tube tuned radio frequency set that, operated under test in different spots selected as "difficult for good reception," has shown up wonderfully well and demonstrated that it is selective to a fine point, has great volume and clear, flexible tone.

The Western Air Patrol is sold to the customer complete, even to the installation. An efficient cabinet speaker that harmonizes with the solid walnut or mahogany case of the receiver is supplied with each set, as are the necessary batteries, tubes and other component equipment.

In line with a Western Auto policy of using standard quality products, the Western Air Patrol is equipped with Cunningham tubes, Franco B batteries, Jones multiplug and other parts that have been found to give excellent results with the Western Auto receiver.

There are few radio set attachments which will yield bigger dividends than a switch in the A battery lead. Amplifier tubes ought not to require any adjustment and use of a switch in the circuit obviates turning off tubes at the rheostat.

Dealer Tunes in Stations Same as Other Fans

BY LOMBARD J. SMITH

(Manufacturers' agent and finance committeeman of the Third Annual National Radio Exposition.)

Although a dealer, I place myself in the same position as a layman. I am no different when at home as respects the enjoyment I derive from radio.

If the radio is not already tuned in, I immediately tune in on some station. In reality, the broadcasting station is beginning to be called a public utility. Not exactly in the sense of the word, but summing up the situation as I shall try to put it, I think you will agree as such.

For instance, we have purchased our fine radio console and cabinet, and have bought batteries, chargers and the accessories in addition to having it installed. We go home at night and want to sit down, read the paper and enjoy, as we all do, the entertainment on the air.

Let us suppose we tune in and find after hard work that there are no stations to be heard. We know the night before, and for weeks and weeks, and for even years, we have enjoyed the best of different kinds of programs from these stations. We have heard grand opera, sermons and the latest sporting and market reports.

To lose all this for a time would put you in as aggravated a state of mind as if your lights were out, and you had to look around for candles.

FIGUEROA STORM DRAIN COMPLETED

In the presence of J. G. Chesley, assistant storm-drain engineer, and a delegation of business men and property owners of South Figueroa street, Unit No. 1, of the $3,000,000 southwest storm drain, was completed yesterday. It now is ready to serve the district in which it is located. The unit it known as the Figueroa-street lateral and extends from Manchester avenue to Santa Barbara avenue in Figueroa street. More than three and one-half miles of drain pipes were utilized in the construction of the lateral, Chesley stated.

Laboratories of Ovenshire Firm Located in City

Los Angeles can be justly proud of her growth as a manufacturing and distribution center for products marking radical advances in the field of radio and her name is today being far-flung in the editorial and advertising pages of publications having extensive national circulation.

To her list, worthy of notable mention must now be added the products of the Ovenshire Laboratories, with offices located at 706 North Main street, Los Angeles, and branches in San Francisco and Seattle.

Their products, the Ovenshire Symphony Speaker and Ovenshire Symphony unit represent in their prominence, the reward of perseverence and determination of their creator and inventer, Elijah A. Ovenshire, to provide music lovers with a radio reproducing unit and speaker which would record without distortion, eliminate "horny" vibrations, give high as well as low tones their correct values and to build up volume of sound without sacrifice of quality. To this laudable determination has since been added the merchandising experience and ability of the company's general manager, Carl E. Rosenberg.

Mr. Ovenshire's years of experimental work was predicated upon his expert knowledge of fine violin making and qualified him to a degree beyond perhaps his own realization but with the result that the Ovenshire Symphony Speaker is in reality far more than a loud speaker—it is a musical instrument, embodying the tone principles of the violin. The entire assembly of vertical grain silver spruce sound-box and alloy-metal tone-arm has been skillfully suspended on a carefully designed "bridge," similar to the bridge of a violin, and it is because of the inter-relation and accuracy of these parts that all tones emerge correct in value, clear, sharp and vibrant and so invariably and truthfully preserve the feeling and rendition of the artist.

Need Revealed for Dormitory at University

A statistical survey of the housing of women students at the University of Southern California divulges one of the incentives for the construction of the new Women's Building, just completed, to be occupied at the opening of the 1925 fall semester this month by fair co-eds of U.S.C.

According to the survey, more than 255 women students who had come to the university from other States or communities had found rooms and board in the vicinity of the campus, and although in every case these quarters were investigated and approved by the committee on student welfare at U.S.C., the report proved conclusively the great desirability of the new dormitory.

Out of 1000 women students it was found that nearly 700 lived at their own homes in or around Los Angeles, while nearly 100 were housed with relatives. Another seventy-five of the feminine contingent of the student body were domiciled in sorority houses, and nearly fifty were living at the homes of family friends or guardians.

More than a score of the women educational wards of the local university were classified as adult, or had been aided by the university appointment bureau in getting employment, with residence, to provide the wherewithal for living and learning during their college years.

The general health of this nation has been steadily improving during the last decade. In 1914 the death rate from all causes was 1500 per 100,000 population. Last year it had dropped to about 1100. This is believed by many experts to be the result of prohibition in spite of the trail of unexpected evils which have followed in the wake of the Eighteenth Amendment.

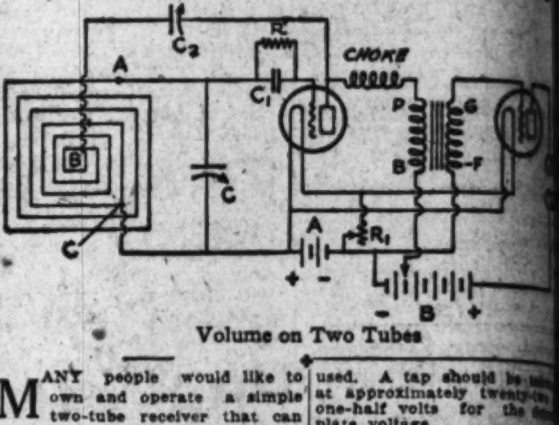
EASY TO MAKE LOOP RECEI

This Hook-up Gives Sharp Tuni



Volume on Two Tubes

MANY people would like to own and operate a simple two-tube receiver that can bring in the local stations on a loop, with sufficient volume to operate a loud speaker, and bring in stations within a radius of 100 miles or so in the head set. Such a receiver will be described today.

The most difficult part of the whole outfit to construct is the loop, so it will be described first. It is of the square type, thirty inches on a side. There are thirteen turns of ordinary lamp cord wire wound around the supports for the loop. A tap is taken off at the eleventh turn. In our illustration above there are eleven turns between points A and C and three turns between C and B. There are no other coils required. The circuit is the familiar Reinartz.

The eleven-turn portion of the loop acts as the secondary coil and the two-turn portion as the feedback coil.

Tuning is done by means of the secondary condenser C, which should have a maximum capacity of 500 mmf. The regeneration control condenser C2 should also have a similar capacity.

The loop should be so mounted that it can be rotated. It will receive best from stations in the direction of the plane of the loop. While the exact setting of the loop is not very critical, it will be found that maximum signal strength is always obtained when the loop is oriented in the approximate direction of the station from which you are receiving.

The rest of the circuit is familiar, and needs little comment. C1, the grid condenser, should be a mica di-electric fixed condenser having a capacity of approximately 250 mmf.; the grid leak R should have a resistance of from two to ten megohms, depending upon the type of tube and detector-plate voltage; the audio-frequency transformer should have a turns ratio up to 5 to 1 and the radio-frequency choke (choke in diagram) should consist of 250 turns of No. 30 to No. 36 d.c.c. magnet wire wound on a two-inch form. This choke coil should not be mounted near the loop, but as far away as possible, and at right angles to the loop's field.

The resistance R1 is a thirty-ohm rheostat and the B battery should have a total voltage of forty-five volts if the receiver is to be worked with the headset and ninety volts if the loud speaker is to be used. A tap should be at approximately twenty-one-half volts for the plate voltage.

SIGNALS FOR STANDARDIZING APPARATUS TRANSMITTED BY RADIO BUREAU IN WASHINGTON

The Bureau of Standards transmits, twice a month, radio signals of definitely announced frequencies, for use by the public in standardizing wave meters and transmitting and receiving apparatus. The signals are transmitted from the bureau's station, WWV, Washington, D. C., and from station 6XBM, Stanford University, Cal.

The transmissions are by unmodulated continuous-wave radio telegraphy. A complete frequency transmission includes a "general call," "standard frequency signals" and "announcements." The "general call" is given at the beginning of the eight-minute period and continues for about two minutes. This includes a statement of the frequency. The "standard frequency signal" is a series of very long dashes with the call letters (WWV or 6XBM) intervening. This signal continues for about four minutes. The announcements are on the same frequency as the "standard frequency signal," just transmitted and contain a statement of the frequency. An announcement of the next frequency to be transmitted is then given. There is then a four-minute interval while the transmitting set is adjusted for the next frequency.

The signals can be heard and utilized by stations equipped for continuous-wave reception at distances within about 500 to 1000 miles from the transmitting stations. Information on how to receive and utilise the signals is given in Bureau of Standards letter circular No. 92, which may be obtained on application from the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C. Even though only a few points are received persons can obtain as complete a wave meter calibration as desired, by the method of generator harmonics. Information on that method will be supplied by the bureau on request.

The schedule of standard frequency signals from both the Bureau of Standards and Stanford University is as follows:

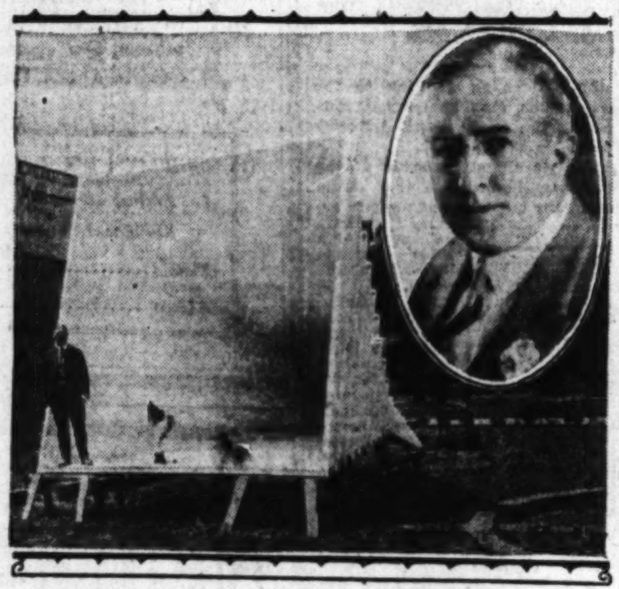
Greatly Extends Audibility Area



Munson-Rayner Company Are Distributors

THE Magnavox Company at its annual meeting in February, 1925, made an analysis of its distributing methods covering the entire United States, indicated that 112 distributors and jobbers without restricted territories were not in position to give the type of representation desired. It was also at this meeting that a new policy was declared, wherein the United States was mapped out not to exceed twenty territorial zones.

In creating these zones, transportation facilities, density of population, and the customs of the buying public were principal factors. These factors were also supported by carefully compiled statistics obtained from the automotive and music trades industries.

They immediately set about obtaining a high-class distributing organization for each zone, logically situated and best qualified to carry out Magnavox sales and service policy. The Munson-Rayner Corporation was selected as distributors for the Pacific Coast territory, consisting of California, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Montana and the Hawaiian Islands, having an aggressive organization fully familiar with the radio trade problems, and appreciative of the absolute necessity of a high-grade merchandising policy in selling high-grade products.

SUCCESS GREETS RADIO EXPOSITION

AUDITORIUM THRONGED BY THOUSAND OF VISITORS

Enthusiasm Reigns as Educational, Constructive and Technical Show Opens

Opened to the public yesterday for the first time, although a pre-view had been held the preceeding evening for men and women actually identified with the world of broadcast, the Third Annual National Radio Exposition drew an attendance which justified predictions of its sponsors that the event will establish a new record for radio shows in the Western States. The attraction is being held in Ambassador Auditorium, where it will continue until next Saturday night.

It was pointed out by those close in touch with the event that the exposition already has established a precedent, which will be echoed by the numerous eastern radio shows scheduled for later in the

ENTHUSIASM REIGNS

Enthusiasm reigned at a high pitch around the door of the show, and it was declared the first day's showings indicated beyond possibility of a doubt that the show will establish a new high record for local radio fairs.

From first exhibit to last, the educational, constructive and entertainment note predominated. This angle of the exposition is displayed considerably more prominently than the commercial of selling radio sets or stirring exposition visitors into prospective customers.

Waldo T. Tupper, managing director, personally was on the floor throughout the opening day to assure himself that every exhibitor carried out orders that his booths be conducted on the basis of a public service bureau. It is expected, he said, that every radio question put by men and women of the will be answered intelligently and satisfactorily.

SERVICE IS AIM

It is the plan of the show, he said, to make everyone get better out of their home radio through learning at the exposition how to handle them advantageously.

Adding considerably to the entertainment and educational features the first of several daily programs of radio technicians and experts held in Ambassador Theater. At this program, a huge was presented with tickets admitting them free to the auditorium where the exposition is being held. It was declared procedure will be repeated throughout the period of the

PRESS' POWER AIDS RADIO ART

Scott Sales Company Official Tells of Growth

Broadcasting Given Great Amount of News Space

Newspapers Own Private Units for Broadcasting

BY W. D. SCOTT,

(Manager Scott Sales Company and committeeman Los Angeles radio show.)

That the "power of the press" is as potent today as at any time in newspaper history, is illustrated in no more convincing manner than by the widespread, sustained and continually increasing interest in everything pertaining to radio.

Yesterday radio was a toy. Today it is a public utility and an important industry. What radio will be tomorrow no man can foretell. Already there are more than 500 broadcasting stations in operation in the United States and there are said to be 10,000,000 regular daily listeners.

In every part of the country, even in the far remote rural sections, one sees the telltale aerial which connects the home with the outside world and so general has become the use of radio that the home which is not so equipped today is the exception rather than the rule.

It is more than likely that radio would still be toddling along in its swaddling clothes had it not been for the generous publicity, support and co-operation of the press.

Fostered from its inception for its news value alone, radio was favored more and more with an ever increasing amount of space in newspapers. Special radio articles in the press met with such instant approval and were so well received by the reading public, that practically all papers augmented this service with special radio pages, sections or supplements, providing a comprehensive encyclopedia of radio products, broadcasting programs, pictures of artists and performers, wiring diagrams, questions and answers, and other radio information.

Today there is scarcely a newspaper anywhere in the land that hasn't a radio editorial service consisting of special articles, illustrations, descriptions of various sets and equipment and general radio news.

Many newspapers have even gone to the great expense of installing and operating their own broadcasting stations, furnishing many of the most interesting, entertaining and instructive programs that reach us through the all-hearing ear, radio, which each and every one of us now may own.

This splendid, whole-hearted sponsorship of radio on the part of the press has not sprung from any greed for gold, but rather from the purely unselfish, public-spirited motive to give its readers the most modern newspaper service possible.

INDIA WILL USE RADIO BY LICENSING STATION

After deliberation and consultation with the local governments, the government of India has taken important steps in the direction of co-ordinating and developing the use of wireless in that country as a means of entertainment and education. The existing stations belonging to the radio clubs are very small, and can do little more than serve the cities in which they are situated.

It is now announced that applications for permission to establish a wireless broadcasting company in India will be received by the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, Wireless Branch, Simla, together with applications for a separate company for Burma.

A license will be granted for a period of ten years, and during the first five years, the company will enjoy a monopoly of broadcasting.

BIG PART PLAYED BY KHJ

Tower Studio Contributes Talent for Entertainment of the Visitors

The Times' contribution to the splendid array of talented entertainers who will play an important part in the third annual Radio Show has been carefully arranged. For the first time in radio history, three stations are co-operating in simultaneous broadcast. The schedule of programs which KHJ will give, as allotted by mutual agreement, starting with the presentation of Jose Arias and his Mexican Entertainers at last night's preview, is as follows:

Sunday, 7:30 to 11 p.m. The entire evening program is sponsored by the Broadway Department Store, presenting the Orpheus Four Male Quartet, composed of Sam Glass, first tenor; Paul Adams, second tenor; Dudley Campbell, baritone, and Houston Dudley, bass; Biltmore Hotel Concert Orchestra, composed of Edward Fitzpatrick, violinist and director; Joseph Heindl, 'cellist; Israel Mendelsohn, pianist; Carl E. Angelotti, organist; A. Jankowsky, second violin, and M. Chernoff, double bass. The orchestra will present ensemble and solo numbers. Gladys Blackwell Pickering, soprano, will sing, assisted by Mona Content, pianist. The program from 10 to 11 will be simultaneously broadcast by KHJ, KNX and KFWB.

During the hour from 10 to 11 p.m. you will have the pleasure of meeting announcers from various Southern California stations, who will be introduced and contribute as they desire.

Monday. In the Ambassador Hotel Theater, between the hours of 1 and 2:30 in the afternoon, a program will be presented, including Uncle John, Uncle Remus, the Titian Trio (violin, 'cello and piano) in ensemble and solo numbers; Mary Newkirk Bower, soprano; Bennie Newahl, ukulele; McClellan Reed, who will speak on the subject, "The International Influence of Radio." This is a forceful address, dealing with the future of radio, and short, from 2:45 to 3 p.m. Billy Lynn, banjo; the Blue Boys' Trio, composed of Billy Lynn, Malcolm Verry and Harold Carpenter, saxophones and clarinets; Paul Adams, pianist, and Albert Macgillivray in novelty selections, will entertain. The interval between 3:30 and 3:45 p.m. will introduce Arthur Raymond Hill, tenor, and Les Roscoe, "The Rag Man of KHJ," in popular numbers that are sure to bring a laugh.

Thursday. Programs for the entire day, from 1 to 11 p.m., will be presented through the courtesy of the Western Auto Supply Company. In the Ambassador Theater from 1 to 2:30 p.m. the Western Air Patrol Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Mace and Orpheus Four Male Quartet. Aimee Semple McPherson of Angelus Temple will deliver an address on "Radio and Religion."

One of the biggest features of the entire show will be the program given from 1 until 2:30 o'clock by Uncle John and a group of the wonder children from KHJ. Patrons of the exhibit will see in person the juvenile stars who have endeared themselves to thousands with their children's hour programs from the tower studio.

During the evening, from 7:30 to 11 p.m., the Western Giant Cord Orchestra, directed by Jack Cronshaw, and the Orphaus Four Male Quartet will present vocal and instrumental numbers on fifteen-minute programs from the various stages in the Ambassador auditorium. The program from 10 to 11 p.m. will be simultaneously broadcast by KHJ, KNX and KFWB.

Kindness, happiness and joy will be the keynote of the programs.

THREE STATIONS AID BROADCAST

Newspaper Studios Send Out Show Programs

Night Concerts Put on Air Simultaneously

Wide Variety of Artists to Appear for Patrons

Adding the entertainment note to the third annual national radio exposition, four newspapers engaged in broadcasting in Los Angeles are co-operating with the exposition by supplying artists from the concert, studio, vaudeville and theatrical world for the many programs each afternoon and evening.

So as not to intefrere with the exhibits, entertainment features will be given at intervals as follows throughout each afternoon and evening: 1 to 2:30 p.m., in Ambassador Theater; 2:45 to 3, 3:30 to 3:45, 4:30 to 4:45, 7:30 to 7:45, 8:15 to 8:30, 9:15 to 9:30 and 10 to 11 p.m., in Ambassador Auditorium.

As a special event, the final one-hour program each evening will be broadcast simultaneously by KHJ, KNX and KFWB downtown stations, it was announced. It also is planned to broadcast the programs, which will be given from the stage of the theater early in the afternoon.

Entertainment will be supplied as follows:

Today—Afternoon by Los Angeles Examiner; evening by Los Angeles Times.

Tomorrow—Afternoon by Los Angeles Times; evening by Warner Brothers and the Illustrated Daily News.

Tuesday—Both afternoon and evening by Evening Express.

Wednesday—Los Angeles Examiner.

Thursday—The Times, all day.

Thursday—Los Angeles Times.

Friday—Warner Brothers and the Illustrated Daily News.

Saturday—Evening Express.

The first day's program was furnished by Warner Brothers and the Illustrated Daily News for the afternoon, and the Los Angeles Examiner in the evening.

BINOCULAR COIL POPULAR

No recent radio development has been so universally indorsed or so widely copied as the binocular coil. Binocular coils in combination with straight-line frequency condensers constitute the backbone of tuned stages. Binocular coils are devoid of external field, shutting out the bothersome effects of powerful currents usually experienced with single cylindrical coils when operating a receiver close to a broadcasting station. These coils contribute largely to the extreme selectivity and stability of operation found in the synchrophase type hook-up. Absence of external magnetic field permits the use of a loop, heretofore found impractical in multi-stage frequency amplifiers due to the feed-back energy from the tuned stages in the loop.

EXPERT TALKS ON RADIO

Director of Huge Local Exposition Gives Insight Into Modern Marvel of Science

BY WALDO T. TUPPER

Managing Director of the Third Annual National Radio Exposition.

Plenty of persons in Southern California will have an entirely different opinion of radio after they visit the National Radio Exposition. I'm speaking of the men and women who judge radio from the average loud speakers heard on the sidewalks and in homes where they visit.

In this sense, those same people now are in the state of mind in which I found myself before engaging in the work of arranging this exposition.

ABSORBING STUDY

Radio, to me, was something that made a terrific noise at the precise moment I was wishing for peace and quietness. Now, radio has become the most absorbing science, modern miracle, "eighth wonder of the world," with which I ever have familiarized myself.

I hope the reader may be interested enough by this time to feel some curiosity about why I have switched so suddenly from a heretical viewpoint. The answer is, I have found how to use radio, and my fount of information was the third annual National Radio Exposition.

In laying plans for the show, which is now under way at Ambassador Auditorium, I came in contact with experts and the finer radio mechanisms.

MYSTERY NO MORE

The former told me and the latter did for me. Now the mysteries of radio, while still dazzling me with their wonderful accomplishments, no longer seem as mysteries. They have become an absorbing science, to the extent that when my day's work is finished I repair to my home, tune in on the best concert for the night and prepare for the enjoyment known only to those who understand how to get the maximum from his set.

Like many persons radio must be known well to be fully appreciated. It is as great, or greater, than anything the world has ever understood. Its greatness, in all its ramifications, can be appreciated by a trip through the exposition.

Thus, it is my firm belief that hundreds, perhaps thousands of men and women, who regard radio as I did, will visit the exposition merely from curiosity, or because they have some fan in their party who insists on going. After scrutinizing the exhibits, talking with the men in the booths and being thoroughly introduced to the enchanting subject of radio, they will emerge thoroughly converted, as I was.

MARVEL OF SCIENCE

One thing the exposition will do. It is certain to convince every visitor that radio is one of the greatest sciences ever known in the history of humanity.

Radio is a thing with personality and character. It exercises as much or greater influence than any human being I ever have known. It affects your character just as does your association with the persons you meet every day.

From the time we first planned the radio show, the men who make the exhibits kept that idea in mind. Unlike many trade expositions, the radio show is not designed solely on a commercial basis. It is arranged to impart a lasting, permanent effect, designed to exercise a potency, by means of its informative powers, on disbelievers as well as on enthusiasts.

Once inside, every bit of information that visitors may seek on subjects such as how to get the most out of their sets, how to build their own, or what is a wave length will be answered. All of this far-reaching, stupendous service is free for the asking.

LECTURE SERIES

With the plan of making the show instructive as well as interesting, we have arranged for a comprehensive series of lectures, demonstrations and recounting of experiences to be told each afternoon by different men and women in the Ambassador Theater.

The service side of radio will be brought out extensively and unmistakably. It will be shown how radio aids the farmer by giving him daily talks on insect pests and crops. The duty of radio in reporting the news of the day and keeping the business man in touch with sport, market and world topics will be exemplified.

Aviators from Uncle Sam's flying service will be ensconced in a booth to show the public how modern invention has found a way of broadcasting from a plane hundreds of feet above the earth's surface.

FACTORY AGENT PLAYS BIG PART

Committee Chairman Tells of Efforts to Improve Sets

Markets and Improvements Must be Carefully Gauged

Poor Merchandise and Sets Soon Become Unsalable

BY CARL A. STONE,

(Past president Radio Manufacturers' Agents' Association and chairman of committee of arrangements Third Annual National Radio Exposition.)

As an economic factor in the merchandising of radio sets, accessories and parts, the manufacturer's agent plays an important part.

He is constantly in touch with eastern and other markets and brings to his clientele and his community the best and latest the trade has to offer in radio.

In all the markets with which he is in touch, there is much in the way of inefficient or poor merchandise which he immediately recognizes and passes up, but seeks to bring only that which is best for his clientele and its customers.

The manufacturer's agent does not come in close personal touch with the ultimate purchaser of radio as his operations consist of the activities in making contact between the manufacturer in other markets with the jobbers in this market. The manufacturer's agent must be alert and quick to adapt himself to changing conditions in the radio field and accept innovations and new ideas that his judgment tells him are worthy of consideration.

He must also have vision to see what is needed in radio and to understand local conditions and local characteristics, in order to get the manufacturers in other markets to incorporate in the appearance or the performance of their set those characteristics which are favored in this community.

In the above manner the radio manufacturer's agent is of service to the actual radio user in performing his part in bringing to the actual radio user the best that the field has to offer.

FORD LIKES RADIO

Radio is a great evangelist. Thousands of men and women have been influenced by religious uplift talks given on the air. The newest convert is Henry Ford. But, strange to say, the Detroit manufacturer declares that his conversion is in favor of dancing. Says Mr. Ford: "Radio brings excellent dance music into the home, and I am in favor of dancing within the home circle. At the present time I am learning all the new steps and recalling many of the old. Waltzing to the music of 'The Blue Danube' is my favorite, but I am experimenting with the Charleston and all the other new and intricate steps, and I must say I enjoy the innovation.

WILL BROADCAST FAIR

Nine New York broadcasting stations will have their studios at the Radio World's Fair, to be held in the Two Hundred and Fifty-eighth Field Artillery Armory, New York, from September 14 to 19, inclusive. From 11 o'clock in the morning to midnight daily it will be possible for radio fans to visit the various broadcasting studios and see them in action. A novelty to be presented will be the Grebe law-wave mobile broadcasting station WGMU. This mobile station will be on exhibit and will also operate at hours to be announced by the show officials.

No Batteries in Sets of Future Radio Receivers

BY A. E. RAVENSCROFT,

Of the Firm, Kierulff & Ravenscroft

Radio fans may look forward now to the day in which batteries will be eliminated. This is one of the outstanding potential improvements, which are in the immediate offing for the receiving-set user.

While some time may elapse before inventors and scientists have accomplished this apparently difficult feat, sufficient progress has been made to assure this accomplishment within a few more years.

Among radio's other highly important strides is the transmission by wireless of motion pictures.

Of particular interest is the fact that both of these achievements are not to be made on receiving sets. Instead, they both are to be accomplished at the sending end of radio. Thus, it is apparent that rapid and radical improvements may be expected in the broadcast stations as we now know them.

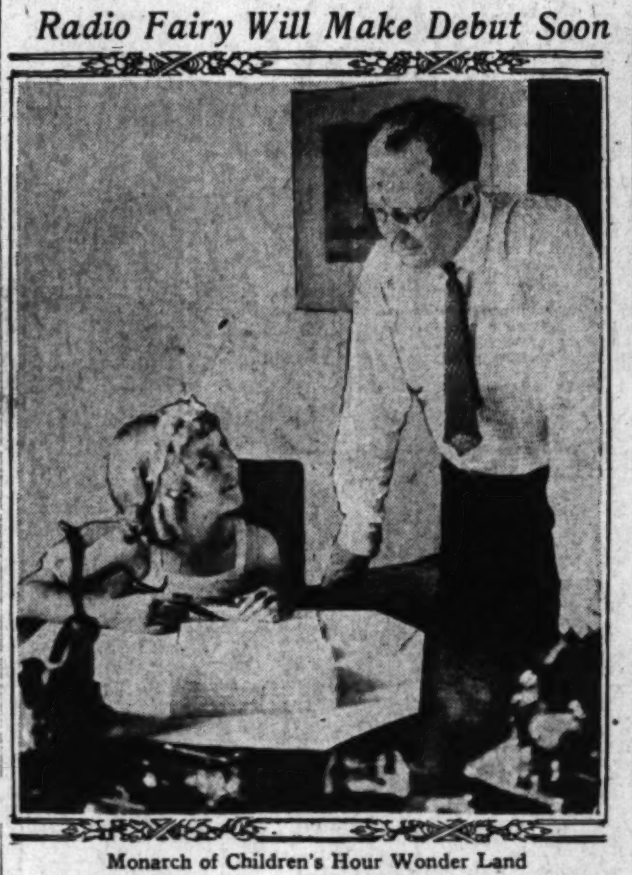
Receiving sets, however, will be generally improved from time to time, although doubt lingers in the minds of many as to whether they ever will be developed to such a point as would cause the present better sets to be declared obsolete.

Patents, sought and obtained by unscrupulous inventors and those who claim to be inventors, now are tieing up radio progress to one extent. The number of patents granted up to date make it almost impossible for any distinct improvement or really new idea being originated without precipitating several suits from those who would claim they already had the same idea on record in the patent departments of Washington.

It is announced that the French Ministry of Marine has opened a new station at Papeete, on the Pacific island of Tahiti.

QUEEN TITANIA TO BE IN FILMS

Radio Fairy Will Make Debut Soon



Monarch of Children's Hour Wonder Land

QUEEN TITANIA, tiny ruler of KHJ's "Radio Fairies," protege of Uncle John and long known as a radio star, will soon be as well known on the silver screen. She has just signed a contract to film twenty-four fantasy stories from the pen of Olena Webb Welch, the photoplays to be released through Westwood Productions.

Two years ago, Uncle John, after watching this little fairy queen broadcast her messages from the Land of Ought-to-Be, remarked that he felt sure she would same day carry her wonderful personality to the public through the medium of motion pictures. It is a coincidence that this prophecy is fulfilled just at this time when the "Radio Fairies" are celebrating their second anniversary at KHJ. One week from next Tuesday evening will mark the 104th consecutive Tuesday broadcast of Queen Titania and her Sandman. In addition to this record there is also the fact that neither of these well-known radio characters have ever been on the air from any other broadcast studio.

While the contract for the pictures in which Queen Titania is to be starred was signed in August, work on the first one will not start until the latter part of this month. It was originally intended to commence shooting the 1st inst., but owing to the fact that the Fairy Queen was to appear as KHJ's representative on the Radio Review at Loew's State, the week of August 29 to the 4th inst., and is a feature at the Radio Exposition from the 5th to 12th inst., the producers agreed to wait so that she might fill these engagements and also slip down to the beach for a week's rest after completing the two show dates.

This series of twenty-four pictures will depict Queen Titania in the same character which she has broadcast, that of the ruler of the Fairyland of Love. J. M. Murray, general manager of Westwood Productions, is so enthusiastic over the work of our wee lassie, that he is personally going to make a trip over his territory to place Titania's pictures in the best houses. Radioland may be interested to know that one of the provisions in the contract is that the picture work shall not be allowed to interfere with her regular Tuesday evening broadcasts.

Matched Unit Set Makes Bow at Exhibition

The Stewart-Warner line of matched unit radio, in its entirety, will be exhibited for the first timo in Los Angeles at the radio exposition to be held in Ambassador Auditorium starting Saturday, the 5th inst. The Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation, manufacturers of Stewart-Warner radio, have long held an eminent position in the automotive field as manufacturers of high-grade magnetic and electrical automobile equipment.

The result of almost three years of research and experimenting will be exhibited in Los Angeles in the shape of what is termed the Stewart-Warner Matched Unit line of radio equipment. The receiving sets to be exhibited consist of four models, all of them using the well known and efficient United States Navy receiving circuit. Two of these models are standard models and two of them are console models with built-in reproducers and battery compartments.

The Stewart-Warner reproducer is said to be one of the best developed "speakers" ever perfected and is shown in both the standard model and those incorporated in various consoles. Stewart-Warner will also manufacture their own tubes—having equipped a factory for that purpose—and promise a tube that for clarity of reception and reproduction cannot be excelled.

Much comment has been made on the beauty of the cabinets in which are housed the different Stewart-Warner console sets. They are examples of the highest grade of cabinet work and made by master craftsmen in wood work. The handsome, two-tone walnut cabinets of the larger sets in the Stewart-Warner line are especially worthy of mention.

A cheap battery may last less than a month, while a good one may last six or nine months.

WHISTLE CAUSED BY WAVES

Because of the increasing number of broadcasting stations, many of which are operating on narrowly separated wave lengths, whistling noises are produced in the receiver. These whistles are caused by the slight difference in the frequency of the waves, and cannot be eliminated by tuning.

Because rust and corrosion interfere with reception, it is wise to renew aerials each year.

MUSIC COMPANY LAUDS INVENTION

Radio Important Adjunct to Home, Says Official

Family Circle Saved Through Broadcasting Art

Five Big Stations Already Located in City

BY C. H. MANSFIELD,

Of the publicity committee, Third Annual National Radio Exposition and manager radio division, Fitzgerald Music Company.

There are so many reasons why there should be a radio in every home that it is difficult to stress any one reason as most important, but I do believe that the principal reason which is really a general summary of several reasons, is that the radio, through the many diversified forms of entertainment it offers, creates a new interest in home life and tends to more closely knit family ties.

In the past decade or so, due to the ever-increasing popularity of the automobile, picture shows, dance halls and cafes, the home has been, for many, only a place to retreat to occasionally for much needed sleep or rest. The family circle, gathering in the living-room after dinner for an evening of reading or conversation, was almost a thing of the past.

But now comes radio, the magic invention of the ages, and like a veritable Aladdin's lamp it brings into the home every wish in the way of entertainment.

No longer is it necessary for the family to go out in search of diversion. When you place a radio in your home it is just as if you were opening your doors to the world of entertainment and education, or just as if you were taking an Arabian Night's journey on a magic carpet, visiting place after place, staying as long as you like in each place listening to the programs of news, music, vaudeville and other entertainment that appeals to you most.

England claims to have the oldest woman's club in the world, it being organized 118 years ago.

RELAY LEAGUE FORMS VIGILANCE COMMITTEE

A vigilance committee has been formed by the American Radio Relay League to check all complaints on interference of amateur broadcasting stations with the regular program stations. All complaints will be handled by men understanding all phases of broadcasting and an accurate check will be kept on all violators. In exceptional cases the licenses will be revoked.

Of all the countries of the world Canada is third in gold production.

ECHOES OF THE WORLD

Echophone Receivers Are Capable of "Picking Up" Programs of Stations With Low Wave Lengths

Destined to Be the "Talk of The Radio Show

—The Echophone radio receivers are the only receiving sets made with that important new development—the Quadracoil.

—Perhaps you have heard of this new apparatus, which, when installed in the Echophone, completely neutralizes the field so that inter-coupling between adjoining stages of radio frequency amplification is completely eliminated.

—This is very important, in that it enables you to tune out noises and programs you do not wish to hear. The original tones of the musical instruments or voices are preserved and brought to those "listening in" in a clear and natural manner.

—The Echophone will bring to you the kind of radio reception you desire. To hear programs distinctly and naturally, without the interference of a multitude of foreign noises, is the satisfaction you seek when you purchase a radio. The Quadracoil in the Echophone will give you that satisfaction.

Model 3 Echophone

—This set will operate with either dry or wet cell tubes. Single tuning control that is very sharp, enabling you to eliminate stations to which you do not wish to listen. Simple to operate. Equipped with Quadracoil. $65

Model 5 Echophone

—A 5-tube receiver which operates with either dry or wet cell tubes. Tunes sharply and brings in distant stations clearly and with volume. It is equipped with the new improvements, including Quadracoil. $115

Model 4 Echophone

—A 4-tube receiver — with a pleasing panel and cabinet will harmonize nicely with other furniture. Operated with either dry or wet cell tubes. Two tuning controls easily operated. Equipped with Quadracoil. $95

Model 6 Echophone

—A 6-tube receiver which might be called the wonder radio set. Can be made selective or broad at any time to become adaptable to atmospheric conditions. Equipped with Quadracoil. Operates with either wet or dry cell tubes. $145

(c) WD-11 base which is of the "push" type having long contact pins which make contact on the sides. One of the four pins is of larger diameter than the others and is connected to the plate of the tube.

The "push" type of socket gives better electrical contact, and calls for a minimum of space in multi-tube or "gang" mounting.

In view of the large number of navy type sockets already in use in broadcast receivers, it became necessary in devising a new standard base to make revision for filling these sockets, otherwise it would have been necessary to continue the production of tubes with the navy base.

LARGE RADIO PLANT IN CITY

Gilfillan Neutrodyne Made Here

Corner of Assembly Factory

WHILE the general growth of the radio industry is a continual source of amazement to the big majority of people in the United States, citizens of Los Angeles, while marveling at the strides radio has taken in the last two or three years, fail to realize that one of the most important radio-manufactuirng organizations in the country is a Los Angeles concern.

Gilfillan Bros., Inc., 1815 West Sixteenth street, Los Angeles, manufacturers of the Gilfillan neutrodyne, is the home of neutrodyne in the West, and the start of this firm, which now has branch factories in Kansas City, Mo., and Long Island City, N. Y., was in this city.

Since the perfection of the Gilfillan neutrodyne about fifteen months ago the demand for this efficient unit of radio-reception apparatus has made it necessary to practically double the production capacity of the Los Angeles factory and make important additions to the manufacturing facilities in the eastern plants.

Probably no other radio-reception apparatus has met with more favorable approval at the hands of the public and that the Gilfillan radio has been so well received is a splendid testimonial as to the efficiency and performance of the set.

The Gilfillan radio is manufactured under license from the holders of the neutrodyne patents, but Gilfillan radio engineers have worked out, in the Gilfillan laboratories, exclusive features that greatly improve the performance of the neutrodyne circuit, and it is these features that have done a great deal to popularize the set.

Braun Official Stresses Import of Annual Show

BY J. A. HARTLEY,
(Secretary and general sales manager of the Braun Corporation, distributors of Freed-Eisemann Radio sets, and chairman of the Third Annual National Radio Exposition finance committee.)

When an industry doing millions of dollars' worth of business a year in California alone, calls a general public gathering, it is bound to be an event of no little importance.

That is precisely the significance of the third annual National Radio Exposition which is held in the Ambassador Auditorium this week. The volume of sales of radio sets, parts and accessories in California in 1924, make this one of the State's largest industries. There are 3000 retail concerns handling radio in the State, and every manufacturer of sets, parts and accessories of importance in this country has his line represented here.

The interest is due, of course, to the fascination radio exerts over practically everyone. Nothing has ever been put within the popular reach that has been taken so eagerly and on such a wide scale as radio. Rapid as was the growth of the phonograph, the automobile, and other commodities, radio has outstripped them all.

The practical value of the show to the private individual as well as to the man engaged in the radio business is just as great as the interest. The function of the radio show is to demonstrate the progress that is being made with this remarkable method of communication. Some of the largest corporations in America are in the electrical field and are utilizing their vast resources in research and experimentation to perfect radio. It is not surprising, therefore, that each year sees notable improvements and refinements of the utmost importance to the radio enthusiast.

This year he will see more extensively demonstrated than ever the uses to which radio is being put in the conduct of the world's affairs. There will be an exhibit by the Navy showing just how radio is being used in the national defense. Telepix, the marvelous method of sending photographs by radio, will have a conspicuous place. Radio in police work, and in various commercial uses will also be vividly presented.

"Mic" Inventor Tells of City's Industry Lead

BY K. M. TURNER,
(President K. M. Turner Radio Corporation)

It is only within the last few years that Los Angeles has really begun to step into the forefront among America's leading industrial cities. Twenty years ago few people realized that Southern California was anything more than a winter resort, where eastern tourists could come to escape the rigors of cold weather. But as the East became more crowded, far-thinking industrial leaders turned their attention to the West Coast, and particularly to Los Angeles.

From the viewpoint of the radio manufacturer, Los Angeles offers many inducements. This city is in the center of one of the greatest radio markets of the world. Interest in radio is perhaps keener in Southern California than in any other locality throughout the entire United States. Broadcasting stations have gone to great pains and expense to arrange programs of high excellence and varied character, offering the "listener-in" a wide diversity of subjects from which to choose.

My entrance into the manufacture of radio-receiving sets in Southern California was partially by chance. Having retired several years ago from active business in the East, I moved to Hollywood, where I felt I could pass the remainder of my days in a laboratory as I saw fit, and in the pursuit of outdoor pleasures and recreation.

However, I found that the development of radio presented such impelling appeal that my fingers itched to get back into work similar to that in which I was engaged ten years ago.

My experience while working upon the invention of the hollow carbon granual, and my invention of the first microphone and the dictograph, gave me a knowledge which I felt could be applied profitably in the perfection of radio reception.

NEW SET ELIMINATES CROWDING OF STATIONS

The new Kennedy model XX using the exclusive Kennedy genuine straight-line-frequency condenser entirely eliminates crowding of stations on any part of dial.

All adjoining wave lengths are separated by equal distances on the dial. Each point on the dial from 1 to 100 corresponds to one of the ninety-seven allotted wave lengths between 200 and 600 meters, separated from adjoining wave lengths by ten kilocycles.

Thus the new Kennedy model XX, handled here by Kieruiff & Ravenscroft, conforms to the station arrangement fixed by the government, by which every wave length is separated from adjacent wave lengths by an equal interval—ten kilocycles.

This clean-cut separation of stations insures clearer, better reception than you have ever known, because you receive all the side bands without interference from adjoining stations — interference that is unavoidable with the old type condensers being used in the present-day sets, which crowd low wave-length stations so confusingly close together. With the ordinary condenser as used in the present-day receivers sixty-two of ninety-seven wave lengths are jammed into the first twenty-four points of your dial—even with the so-called straight-line wave-length condensers, the first sixty-two wave lengths are crowded into the lower thirty-four points of your dial.

Broad tuning in a set may be caused by: Too long an antenna; too large a primary on the tuner; poorly designed condensers—that is, too high resistance and leakage; poor insulation throughout the set; wires in the circuit too long; poor connections or an inefficient ground.

Small Hand Bell Leads to Discovery of Great Invention

RADIO SCIENCE BEGUN BY HERTZ

German Professor Discovers Magnetic Waves

Inductance Coil Made Bell Tremble Through Air

Findings Led to Marconi's Great Invention

BY H. C. GERSTER
of Platt Music Company

In the good old days when cave men reigned supreme each individual produced sufficient only for his own immediate needs and, therefore, only came in contact with that which he knew and understood.

As time passed and new discoveries were made, knowledge increased in direct proportion, and as knowledge increased desire increased and, likewise, more discoveries. Interchange of ideas took place and individual superiority became apparent. As civilization advanced man's self-reliance ceased, diminishing gradually until each relied upon the other for the necessities of life.

It was through the startling discovery of Prof. Hertz, German scientist, radio was first conceived. Leaning over a hand bell which was trembling as from an unseen blow, a trend of thought was started that finally established the fact that electromagnetic waves generated by an induction coil in his laboratory were the cause of the phenomenon. The subsequent discoveries of Marconi gave to the world a new means of communication.

Soon many minds in many lands were absorbed in the scientific and technical problems presented by radio, until today we have worldwide communication and universal broadcasting. The wonders and mystery of radio and the delicate and scientific instruments that made it possible were highly praised and spoken of. Everyone was interested, and now no home is complete without one. Radio everyday necessity and source of has ceased to be a fad, and is an enjoyment.

S. H. Woodruff of Hollywoodland has hit upon a unique idea for the entertainment of the forest ranger who rides the trails in back of that subdivision.

Co-operating with Fred Christian of the Electric Lighting Supply Company, 216 West Third street, Los Angeles, he immediately put his idea into execution. A portable Radiola superheterodyne was supplied to while away the lonely evening hours. Due to the ideal atmospheric conditions of Hollywoodland, the ranger is able to listen in on eastern stations as well as local ones. The set is very sensitive and is capable of picking up stations as far east as Chicago, Detroit and even Pittsburgh.

The instrument fits nicely in one saddle bag of the pack animal. It weighs less than forty pounds, and is completely self-contained, having batteries, loop aerial and loud speaker built in. It is the latest achievement of the manufacturers in the line of a portable set.

Hollywoodland is famed as a long-distance radio-receiving point so the combination of ideal location and supersensitive receiver is bound to yield very satisfactory results.

EXPERT TALKS ON RADIO SHOW

about this invention will be its power to eliminate sound of winds and motor. Instead it catches only the softly spoken words of the man in the plane. Persons who have been in the air know the difficulty of trying to converse with the pilot. Hence, they naturally will wonder how with the conflict of sounds, a speaker could make himself heard as he talks into the microphone.

The auditorium has been enlarged and considerably remodeled to house the spacious attraction. Its proximity to car lines, auto park and the downtown as well as western residential districts bespeak heavy attendance.

Known as having the largest floor space of any building devoted to exposition purposes in Los Angeles, the auditorium has housed all the big and valuable trade expositions since it was built last year. It now is starting on the second season of its career.

will be supplied by the same newspaper.

Programs will consist of favorite broadcast artists from the Los Angeles Times studio, motion-picture stars and the best of musicians and concert singers, who will co-operate with the newspaper and the exposition by making public appearances. They will work on numerous stages placed throughout the exposition, and their voices will be carried to all parts of the auditorium by means of loud speakers.

Progress made by radio since the last show caused visitors to express considerable amazement yesterday. These rapid and far-reaching strides are exemplified by exhibits of actual machines by which wonders of the broadcast sphere now are being accomplished.

Hundreds of children visited the show yesterday and without noted exception they were as enthusiastic or more so than the average grown-up fan. Due to the simplicity with which the radio idea is presented and the high trend of radio enthusiasm among the younger set, the juveniles were enabled to grasp many new radio ideas. It was pointed out in this connection by J. W. Boothe, chairman of the publicity committee, that children are as enthusiastic about radio at this time as they are over aviation and outdoor sports.

When the doors of Ambassador auditorium opened for the first exposition guest, J. A. Hartley, chairman of the finance committee; Carl A. Stone, head of the arrangements committee; Booth and Tupper were present to extend a welcome to the first inflow of patrons.

Others who made up their party were committeemen, including Lombard J. Smith, H. C. Braden, R. B. Yale, H. S. Mason, F. D. Hutchinson, L. E. Taufenback, W. D. Scott, C. H. Mansfield, Al. Meyer and G. F. Hall.

Hundreds of persons in the throng took advantage of an opportunity to meet the leaders in local radio affairs. Many took their radio perplexities direct to heads of firms or departments.

The first program of the radio show broadcast by the four newspaper stations went on the air last night between 10 and 11 o'clock. With the combined power of these several stations and without the usual interference, the program was dispatched with a clarity seldom before equalled in this territory.

Radio merchants throughout Los Angeles yesterday were distributing radio show rebate tickets to their customers. By means of these tickets hundreds entered the exposition at a reduced rate.

Broadcasting Gains Strength in Other Countries

RADIO SPREADS OVER AUSTRIA

American Firm to Erect Prague Station

Argentina Has Interest in Broadcasting

Spain Leads in Use of Sets Made Here

Radio broadcasting started as a regular service in Austria, with the opening of the Vienna broadcasting station on October 1, 1924. Considerable interest in radio has developed since that time and it is now estimated that there are approximately 50,000 receiving sets in use in that country, says Consular advices to the Department of Commerce from Vienna.

Individuals desiring to purchase and operate a radio receiving set must apply for and procure a license from the Austrian government. The annual receiver's license fee ranges from 15,000 to 30,000 crowns and is effective for the balance of the calendar year in which it is issued.

It is also necessary to procure the permission of the government to erect an outside aerial.

Protected by an import duty against foreign competition, Austrian radio manufturers are doing a fairly satisfactory business in their home market. Nevertheless, radio apparatus of American manufacture is sold in Austria and although high prices militate against the American exporter, it is believed that superheterodyne kits, neutroformers, condensers and variable grid leaks should find a fair market in Austria.

IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

The Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs of the government of Czecho-Slovakia has recently contracted with an American firm to erect and equip a broadcasting station at Prague, according to the electrical equipment division of the Department of Commerce. This station, which will have a power of five kilowatts, will be used for broadcasting over the entire republic. It is further planned that smaller stations will be constructed in Brno, Bratislava and Kosice.

This improvement in broadcasting facilities should increase large the present market for radio and this, in turn, should enlarge the presetnt market for radio apparatus in Czecho-Slovakia.

SPAIN GOOD MARKET

Public interest in radio and the resulting market in Spain varies considerably throughout the kingdom. Commercial Attache Cunningham informs the Department of Commerce. The operation of two broadcasting stations in Madrid has created a considerable market for radio sets and parts in that city and vicinity. There is also a radio periodical published in Madrid.

In Bilbao, two broadcasting stations were recently put into operation. A good market for receiving sets, chiefly of the crystal type, resulted. Most of the radio apparatus on this market if of British and French origin, due principally to the fact that local dealers prefer to carry a limited stock and make frequent small purchases. This practically prohibits the radio dealers in Bilbao from purchasing their supplies in distant markets.

That this situation does not obtain throughout the entire kingdom is evidenced by the fact that during the first quarter of 1925 Spain was the leading European market for American radio manufacturers. During that period, shipments of radio apparatus from the United States to Spain totaled $108,370.

IN LATIN AMERICA

Interest in radio is growing rapidly in the Argentine—the foremost Latin-American market for American radio apparatus during the first quarter of the current year, says the electrical equipment division of the Department of Commerce.

The Argentinian government has not as yet issued regulations governing broadcasting and the sale and use of radio receivers. However, a number of broadcasting stations have been erected in Argentina and are now in operation. The most important of these is in Buenos Aires. Wave lengths ranging from 250 to 600 meters are used throughout the republic.

Radio receiving sets and parts are offered for sale in many stores in the larger cities of the Argentine. The majority of the receiving sets offered for sale are imported from the United States but some of them are of home manufacture. These are not, however, in great favor.

WILL CHANGE LAW

The use of radio receiving sets by individuals in Barbados has not developed up to the present time because of the local law prohibiting this practice. This law will soon be changed, however, as it was recently announced by the Colonial Secretary of Barbados that the colonial government has decided to amend the law governing the use of wireless so as to provide a system of licenses for those desiring to use radio receiving sets. A bill providing the necessary legislation will soon be introduced into the House of Assembly. In accordance with this act the control of all wireless apparatus and the issuance of licenses in Barbados will rest with the Pacific Cable Board, which is under the jurisdiction of the British postoffice.

The development of a radio market in Colombia which has no broadcasting station, is largely dependent upon the completion and satisfactory operation of the proposed broadcasting stations in Venezuela, Peru and Costa Rica.

The demand for radio receiving sets and parts in Jamaica is gradually increasing but the field is limited by the low purchasing power of the people. Another obstacle to the rapid development of radio sales in Jamaica is the difficulty experienced, due to static interference, in receiving broadcast material during the summer months.

The radio market in Haiti is limited almost entirely to the Americans resident in the American colony. Several of them own and operate receiving sets, most of which were brought individually from the United States.

NEWSIE BECOMES LEADER IN RADIO

David Sarnoff

In the tallest building in the world, the Woolworth in New York City, sits a man who came from the East Side, where he found bodily sustenance in the pennies obtained from selling newspapers, and who is the biggest figure in radio in the world today.

That man is David Sarnoff. His career is a miracle that is produced only in this America.

Only 36 years of age, he heads the Radio Corporation of America, one of the greatest commercial radio companies in the world, a corporation which embraces through intimate association and interassociation such gigantic firms as the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the Western Union Telegraph Company, the General Electric Company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company among others.

BORN IN RUSSIA

All the vast resources of this company, all its great operations, are under the direction of this man, who is not yet 40, who learned to speak English at the age of 10 and never went beyond a public school education.

David Sarnoff came to this country when he was 9 nears old. He was born in a lonesome section of Russia, from which his father escaped to America with the determination to send for his family as soon as he had saved enough for the magic "shifts-karten"—steamship tickets—the mighty emblem of happiness to thousands of hungering hearts.

Six years later the father had earned the necessary hundreds to buy the tickets for his wife and three children. But they had no sooner arrived and been installed in a $10 a month tenement on the East Side than he became severely ill and his family of five became practically destitute.

FORCED TO WORK

David was the eldest; not only the eldest, but the only one fit physically to go to work. Without knowing a word of English this boy began life's struggle for himself and his family.

A route was offered David when he applied for a job at a foreign language newspaper, and he started to work. What he earned was a pittance, but it was enough to keep the Sarnoffs from starving.

After a few weeks the lack of English began to prey on the boy's mind, and he decided he had to go to school. By the time he was 12 he learned to speak English fluently. He succeeded in borrowing $200, with which he bought a small news stand in a district which the Irish had made their own. The stand was profitable, and proved the stepping stone for the youth who was to become one of the world's greatest radio engineers.

The Czecho-Slovakian government has awarded a contract to an American firm for supplying the equipment for a new broadcasting station to be erected.

INVERSE-DUPLEX RADIO SHOWN AT BIG EXHIBIT

The Grimes three and four-tube inverse-duplex radio is being exhibited at the Radio Show by the Fletcher Radio Music Company at 4713 South Vermont avenue. The Grimes is unique in the radio field in the radio principles underlying its construction. The tubes are reflexed in such a way as to make the three tubes do double duty.

It is claimed by the manufacturers that these three tubes get the same results as six tubes in the average radio. In this arrangement no tube is overloaded, the set operates very smoothly, is absolutely nonradiating and develops a tone equal to crystal reception. This set was originated at radio station 3XP, the radio broadcast station and laboratory of "Radio in the Home," a national radio magazine. These sets have been unofficially in the hands of hundreds of users throughout the country for almost a year, and astounding distance reception, volume and tone are reported.

And we have invariably found the finest type of engineering and craftsmanship.

Besides the models shown above we will have on display the splendid NR-20 at $175.00—a leader among de luxe radio receivers.

FOUR NEW MODELS—each with Freed-Eisemann dependability built into it.

LOWER PRICES—but not a single sacrifice of Freed-Eisemann quality.

SUPER PERFORMANCE—smooth, clear, realistic and always dependable reproduction.

That is the Freed-Eisemann story of 1925 as you will it see visualized in our booth at the Radio show. The changes in this year's models register the progress you expect from a great institution guided by some of America's foremost radio engineers.

EVERY DEALER handling Freed-Eisemann receivers this year holds a special franchise. He has been selected from a large number because of his proven dependability and willingness to give you the fullest co-operation in the enjoyment of your set.

You will, of course, go to the Radio Show with Freed-Eisemann in mind. Look for the booth displaying this name—

These Bargains Are for Tuesday. Store Closed Monday (Labor Day)

Labor Day

Monday, September 7th, is Labor Day—a day when the Country stops to pay tribute to the men of brawn, who are doing the world's work: building its bridges, its modes of transportation, doing the actual mechanical, industrial and shipping jobs—the big necessary work—the real manual and physical labor that must be done.

One is prone to look to the poets and artists and musicians for inspiration, but I look to doers of deeds and constructive work—the producers of the necessities of life—for the progress and comfort of its people.

Down in my heart I have the sincerest admiration for the man who uses his two hands.

To him full credit and a real tribute Labor Day—and every day!

PORT INCEPTION BANQUET MOTIF

Harbor Project Originators Plan Celebration

Twentieth Anniversary to be Observed

Occasion Recalls Epochal Picnic Excursion

Back about twenty years ago a group of enterprising Los Angeles and Long Beach business and real estate men embarked from Long Beach in a flotilla of small launches for a banquet at Terminal Island. The trip proved memorable. Some of the launches overturned near the island and the passengers waded ashore.

At the conclusion of the banquet the guests made a trip of inspection about the huge irregular ditch that is now Los Angeles Harbor to see just what could be done toward converting this ditch into a port.

Partly as a result of this trip, the Long Beach Realty Board was organized a few days later—on September 15, 1905. One of the objectives of the board was the creation of a harbor at San Pedro.

Since then the members have seen the harbor come into being and attain a place as one of the world's leading ports and on the 15th inst. the living members of this board will assemble again at the Virginia Hotel to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the organization and the beginning of construction work on the new Long Beach Harbor.

The banquet will be an elaborate affair, with the original members of the board who made this trip and many of the Los Angeles men who accompanied the party as the guests of honor.

M. Q. Giffen of the Long Beach board is in charge of the arrangements. An attendance of 300 to 400 is anticipated.

School Chief Says Business Chances Good

That opportunities in the business world are better today than ten years ago is the opinion expressed yesterday by R. H. Whitten, president of the Woodbury Business College, which recently moved into its new quarters at Seventh and Figueroa streets.

"Scores of big firms are doing more business in a month than they formerly did in a year and their expansion is limited only by the supply of men and women capable of handling responsible positions," said Mr. Whitten.

The new Woodbury building, elaborately equipped for the work of students, is one of the handsomest private school structures in the Southland and the location one of the choicest in Los Angeles.

SAN DIEGO ARMY and NAVY ACADEMY

"The Coming West Point of the West"

Opening Day September 17th

The San Diego Army and Navy Academy is located on Bay and Ocean, at Pacific Beach, delightful suburb of sunny San Diego. Its record is almost unprecedented in the history of schools.

Although held up to the highest standards of academic work and military discipline, the cadets themselves are loyal and happy. Every outlet for wholesome activities is provided — strong athletic teams, surf bathing, band, orchestra, literary society, drama.

The Academy is the outstanding preparatory school of the West. It prepares for Colleges, West Point and Annapolis, with a Lower School for Younger Boys.

It has always enjoyed the University of California's highest scholastic rating—Division "A."

Notice to Parents

Col. Davis will be at the Alexandria Hotel on Thurs., Fri. and Sat., 10th, 11th and 12th, and will be glad to give information regarding the school.

It was the first private school on the Pacific Coast to secure West Point accrediting.

Its military training and discipline are conducted under War Department supervision.

It has always stressed Christian character training and fostered real Americanism.

$800 will cover practically all necessary school expenses, except uniforms and text books.

It has been necessary to again add new bungalows on account of the increased enrollment, which is now 50 students over last year. A limited number may yet be accepted.

Urban Academy

(Military)

P. G. McDONNELL,
Pres. Urban Military Academy

The Great Outdoor School

GREAT—because from its very foundation the URBAN is an all-round school which not only develops the intellect but pays equal attention to physical exercises and above all character training—a school that teaches its students to love work and pursue it with zest and accept the challenge of hardship whether it be in the class-room, the swimming pool, the riding ring or on the campus.

GREAT—because of the sports that are as much a part of the daily curriculum as arithmetic or grammar—Boys of today very badly need the discipline and social loyalty of good private school and desperately need to be placed in a challenging society which can correct egotism and develop Esprit de Corps and in no way can this Esprit de Corps be so well developed as by the Urban method of well balanced and intensely interesting sports in the open which render the brain keen and quick to respond to instruction and which develop concentration, quick decision and unerring judgment—the traits that make for success in all of life's undertakings—the traits that develop character and the man of character is a self starter. He carries his own power and is not like a wheel barrow which is only moved when pushed from behind.

GREAT—because no pains or expense have been spared to secure the best faculty obtainable—small classes, individual instruction and supervised study—the best and most sanitary equipment, and a well balanced diet of the best quality.

GREAT—because of the marvelous location, the beautiful buildings, and above all because of the atmosphere that envelops the boy at Urban. Healthy breezes not only blow through the windows, but healthy breezes blow through the ear and eye of the child. On his fresh young mind the lore of the world is daily written in indelible ink and therefore the internal economy is modeled with a keen regard for the influence of material environment.

CALIFORNIANS GREETED NEWS OF STATE'S ADMISSION TO THE UNION WITH WILD ACCLAIM

BY BAILEY MILLARD

BRIGHT was that September day seventy five years ago when the star of California was added to the flag. It was on the ninth day of the ninth month of 1850, two years after the discovery of gold in Sutter's millrace, that she was admitted to the glorious sisterhood of States, thus making true the dream of Webster and Clay.

The Diamond Anniversary of California's Statehood is an event which her people will celebrate with joy and pride, and to which those of other States will look with more than passing interest, for they know California as a land of romance whose name is famous in song and story, and they know the speed and spirit of her people.

Red-shirted miners were washing gold from the gulches of the foothills on the day of California's admission to the Union; vaqueros were herding the cattle in the valleys, and the padres were piously counting their beads or instructing their Indian neophytes; feverish men in noisy gambling halls were playing for high stakes; ships were sailing in through the Golden Gate bringing thousands of new gold seekers, and in all this sunset land there was none who knew that in faraway Washington the seal of executive approval had been placed upon the application of California to join the galaxy of States.

It took forty days to send the message of the admission—a message that today could have been flashed in as many seconds. But the news came to the people of this Coast through the slow processes of those times. Not until October 18, when the steamer Oregon entered the harbor of San Francisco with flying colors and booming guns did they know. But when they knew, what yells of joy went up from manly throats, what cheers from fair women, what flag raisings, and what general jubilee!

Immediately a big crowd gathered in the Plaza, and there were gratulatory speeches and wild "hoorays." Then there was a rush for the most glittering and spacious saloon in the town, where gallons of champagne were guzzled down.

Everybody had to drink and drink in regular time. The hilarious company, largely composed of business men in tall silk hats and frock coats, was roughly organized in squads. Amid a fusillade of cork poppings squad after squad marched up to the long bar, bent the merry elbow, drank to the new State of California, and fell back until its turn came again. Rather a bibulous beginning for the now prohibition State.

All night the excited men drank, shouted and sang. The hilarity became a bachannalian riot. If a man started to make a speech he was drowned in a wild chorus of cheers and songs.

They did not know the news at San Jose, then the seat of government, and Gov. Peter H. Burnett, who was at San Francisco, wanted to be the first to tell the people there of the great event.

There were two lines of stages running from San Francisco to San Jose, a distance of fifty miles. The Governor and some of his friends piled into one coach and a rival party into the other. Away they flew at breakneck speed on a record run over the dusty, rutty road to the capital. As the swaying coaches raced along, passing village, hamlet and ranch house, the people rushed out to see what all the racket was about. And right heartily did they cheer when, without halting, the passengers yelled to them the glad tidings, "California is admitted to the Union!"

In San Jose, which the Governor's coach reached first, the news was received with joy, and the only reason why the wine flowed less freely there than in San Francisco was because there was less of it to flow.

It was several days before the news reached Los Angeles, then a town of about 2000 inhabitants, mostly Mexicans and Indians, but the few Americans here made up for their lack of numbers by their joyful appreciation, and their celebration was as hearty as elsewhere in the State.

Los Angeles had been the scene of stormy events, including battles and bloodshed, before the American flag had waved over the old Plaza, but by 1850 the Mexicans had settled down quite peaceably and their relations with their conquerors were amicable enough.

Throughout California American occupancy had been hotly disputed in battles and near-battles, but with the fall of Los Angeles all resistance had ceased. Not a few of the late Mexican combatants entered into the spirit of the celebration of the great event. Indeed, it is said that some of their home-made powder, which had been so useless in their defense of the old pueblo against the forces of Stockton and Kearny, was exploded in honor of the occasion, and that they clinked their mescal glasses right merrily with those of the Americans.

In San Francisco, then a city of 25,000 population, there was a grand celebration on October 29, eleven days after the big news came. All the buildings were gayly decorated. Flags waved from every staff and there were salvos of artillery. There was a long parade, a feature of which was a company of brightly dressed Chinese.

In the evening there were bonfires on the hills and on the islands of the bay. Fireworks sizzled and sparkled and, at the biggest ball ever witnessed in California up to that time, gay couples waltzed till the peep o' dawn.

Nearly every historian who has told how California attained Statehood has likened her to Minerva, who sprang full-panoplied from the brow of Jove. She never had such a Territorial novitiate as was experienced by all the other Western States. She jumped into the Union with both feet, all of a sudden, in the most irregular and, as some annalists have said, illegal way. She may be said to have had no geographical existence save as a name, for her boundaries were undefined.

By the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo at the end of the Mexican War, California became part of the public domain, but beyond its military occupancy Congress took no particular interest in it and was appealed to in vain to set up some sort of popular government.

Many of the old Mexican laws were still in force, and the others were chiefly those of arms. If a man wanted land he went out and took possession of it and held it with his rifle.

Mining-Camp Methods

The calling of the constitutional convention of 1849 and the assumption by the men elected to office under its authority were wholly without Federal warrant or sanction, and the procedure smacked of mining-camp methods, but the people claimed the right to set up a State government of their own in the absence of action by Congress, and they went about the business in a matter-of-fact way.

Just what the Federal authorities had done in California may be briefly stated: While fighting with Mexico in 1846 our government ordered Gen. S. W. Kearny to march

HOW THE LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE HAS PROGRESSED

Children who enjoy the palatial buildings built today for their education can appreciate their advantages more by observing the limited equipment with which Los Angeles boys and girls had to do fifty or sixty years ago.

At the left, below, is the present Alessandro School, a type of what modern school buildings are. To the right of it is pictured the first public school built in Los Angeles in 1855 at the corner of Second and Spring streets.. A group of its students is shown in front of the quaint structure.

The lower view is of the old Spring-street school built in 1884, where the Arcade Building now is.

Lavish Budgets of Today Would Shock Pioneers, Whose First Annual Appropriation Was $7000

By Valerie Watrous

"California, here I come," rang across the world long before gold was first discovered near Los Angeles in 1842. Portola, Serra, Don Juan de Anza, soldiers, vaqueros, padres, men, women and children sang in their hearts if not with their voices: "California, here I come."

And these it was that brought the churches.

But it was the bearded, belted, booted Argonauts that brought the schools. Wherever two or three Americans are gathered together, there is the school. Wherever the Spaniard sets his foot, there is the church.

What would those early mission fathers think of the $24,000,000 school budget for their City of the Angels? Their good shades must stand aghast!

Schools must have teachers and, while not the first to reach Los Angeles, Mrs. Chloe B. Jones, now 83 years of age, the oldest living teacher in the city, is one of the earliest. She arrived here in 1873.

"I came because everybody wanted to come to California," Mrs. Jones explained at her home in Sierra Madre a few days ago, where interviewers found her as perky as a robin in May.

Los Angeles always has had the pick of the educational field, according to Mrs. Jones, because other teachers have been inspired by the same longing to come to California as that which brought her here.

First Schoolhouse

But the "little red schoolhouse" had the start of Mrs. Jones by more than twenty years, although the question had been agitated as early as '48. With the gold strike in '49 at Sutter's Mill, there wasn't a single male in the city of Los Angeles who could write his name!

Perhaps before we talk about that first schoolhouse in '55 it might be interesting to take a backward glance and see how education fought its battle through the years.

History records that Gov. Borica in 1800 made a brave effort to found public schools, but "the Franciscans, unlike the Jesuits, were not patrons of education," says one historian, and "at the time of the acquisition of California, seventy-seven years after the date of its first settlement, there was not a public schoolhouse owned by any presidio, pueblo or city in all this territory."

Teachers Tyrants

When Los Angeles was founded not one of the eleven heads of families could sign his name to the title deed of his house lot. Thirty-six years later, in 1817, Maximo Pina, an invalid soldier, was paid $140 a year for his services as a teacher.

Schoolmasters of the Spanish era were brutal tyrants; they were retired soldiers, and school government was a military despotism, records a historian.

"Their implement of torture was a cat-o'-nine tails made of hempen cords with iron points. To fail in learning the Doctrina Christiana was an unpardonable sin. For this, for laughing aloud, playing truant, or other offenses no more heinous, the guilty boy was stretched face downward upon a bench, a handkerchief thrust in his mouth as a gag, and lashed with a dozen or more blows until the blood ran down his little lacerated back.' "

A private school was opened in 1838 by Ignacio Coronel, who was assisted by his wife and daughter. It was held in his own home, and in order to give the Common Counsel authority over it, Coronel was paid $15 a month with the understanding that he would not ask for an increase in salary. This school continued until 1854, with a lapse of two years, when the schoolmaster joined the gold rush.

Mayor Headed School

Mayor Stephen C. Foster had been agitating the subject for some time, but in 1854 he discovered that there were 500 children of school age and he began an active campaign for a public school. The building was begun and opened March 19, 1855, and Foster had the unusual experience of acting as Mayor and superintendent of schools at the same time, to both of which offices he was elected by an overwhelming majority.

This first building contained four rooms, and was a combination of brick and frame. It occupied the northwest corner of Spring and Second streets, and cost $6000.

What would those old pioneers who wailed over this civic extravagance say about the Belmont High School, which cost $647,084; Fairfax High School, $600,865; John Burroughs Junior High, $397,324; Wilshire Crest elementary, $257,429? These are only a few of the 279 elementary, junior and senior high schools that represent millions of dollars, and to which will be added seventy-nine more between now and January, 1926, at a cost of another $6,000,000.

Storm of Criticism

Over the heads of the school commissioners broke a storm of criticism.

"The new school is too far out of town," cried the parents.

As late as 1877 this feeling still persisted. Mrs. Jones declares that the then Superintendent of Schools would not hold the teachers' institute there for that reason, and met instead at the Good Templars' Hall at the junction of Spring and Main streets.

In the autumn of 1855 a second school of two rooms was opened down on Bath street, near the Plaza. But financial difficulties overtook the commissioners and the schools were closed. William Wolfskill came to their rescue and donated $600 that the schools might be reopened. Again in '59 and '60 they were closed for a time, when other public-spirited citizens financed them.

Small Budget

The total budget for 1861 was $7683, of which $4237 was paid to the teachers.

A third school was built in 1865 at San Pedro and Washington streets, and in 1872 the struggling, straggling little city of Los Angeles achieved a high school. And for the first time received authority from the Legislature to issue bonds. This first issue was for $20,000.

Fifty years later, still straggling, but no longer struggling, Los Angeles voted $36,000,000 for school purposes.

This was the Los Angeles High School, and was built on a barren but sightly eminence at the corner of Temple and Fort streets—now called Broadway and occupied by the County Courthouse.

The corner-stone of the new high school was laid with great ceremony, and when the building was finally occupied it was pointed to with pride by the ambitious pioneers. It contained eight rooms, a library, laboratory and two spacious halls, but only two of the rooms were used as classrooms.

As soon as the new school was opened Mrs. Jones was promoted and became one of the teachers.

First Pupils

"I arranged the first course of study," Mrs. Jones declared, "and three of my pupils, Loman Nedin, now in the city waterworks; Clara Stollenberg, now a professor in Stanford University, and Agnes Wilson, were in the first examination ever held for the University of California."

Mrs. Jones taught in the first Los Angeles High School from '76 to '83. During the years of '80 and '81 she enjoyed the distinction of acting as superintendent of schools, then an unheard-of position for a woman, and also acted as principal and continued in that capacity until 1882.

"Then we were sent out to the new Normal School Building, where the new library is now being built," Mrs. Jones continued. "I bought a ranch in Sierra Madre in '83, and commuted on the Santa Fe overland every day."

She got up at 4 o'clock each morning to catch the 6 o'clock train in order to be at school on time.

"It took me five hours a day on the road, counting the time I had to wait for the train—and I always missed one!"

Half-Day Sessions

Always confronting Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, superintendent of schools, is the half-day session. She has fought that condition ever since she became superintendent, and it may yet bring her "gray hairs in sorrow to the grave."

But 'way back there in '77 they were having the same problem of the half-day session, according to Mrs. Jones, who says:

"The classes were so crowded they had to be divided. When I was superintendent we had a lot of half-day sessions—they killed one teacher outright!"

Mrs. Chloe B. Jones has other claims to distinction than that of being the oldest living teacher in Los Angeles. She graduated from the Northwestern Normal School of Ohio, near Tiffin, from which the late President Warren G. Harding later graduated, and which at one time had three of its former students as Presidential candidates.

Mrs. Jones also numbered in her classes in the Los Angeles High School Arthur Bent, now member of the Board of Education and one of the vice-presidents of the Chamber of Commerce.

Bessie Love, Louise Fazenda and Carmel Myers, screen actresses, also were her pupils.

From 1880 to 1889 Los Angeles boasted eleven elementary schools and one high school, with a total of thirty-two rooms in all.

An old entry in the records of the Board of Education at that time shows that they voted to rent two rooms on Spring street, one on Fort street and one in East Los Angeles, "and, owing to the increasing demands for school accommodations, it will be necessary to add at least four more rooms if they can be rented in suitable localities."

Then and Now

Between the opening week of school and the coming January new school buildings at a cost of $6,000,000 will be available for use. No renting of rooms today.

In 1880 the school population was 3200; in 1886 it had increased to 6050. In the year of 1924-25, 274,263 students were enrolled in the Los Angeles public schools.

Only one blind child was enrolled in the schools in 1880. During that year the Board of Education ordered that school buildings should have large bells, to be rung at suitable times in the morning and afternoon, because, with an "average attendance of 2822, there were 9195 tardy marks."

The superintendent of schools was paid a salary of $125 a month; principals, $100 to $120, and teachers, $100 to $110.

Another entry in the old records of the school board in 1885 is: "Discontinued the use of slate and slate pencil in drawing because it gave the child a harsh touch."

Pioneers of the city will be interested in the old list of textbooks adopted, which included: "McGuffy's series of readers, Reed & Kellog's grammar, Anderson's popular school history and Harper's geographies.

State's Celebration of Admission Centers in Elaborate Festivities San Francisco This Week

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Eight days of jingle and joy, eight days of light and color, eight days in which one may forget the passage of time and yet be reminded that a wonderful seventy-five years have just passed, during which a land of manana, has become the land of progress. That is the program for California's festival year, her diamond jubilee.

Something for everybody, all the time—that was the big idea in framing the series of events for the entertainment of the tens of thousands who have come to California and San Francisco for the grand fiesta.

Accordingly high society has its fling in the grand opening ball tonight. The names in the Blue Book will be found among those who are masked and costumed in Spanish style on the dancing floor or in the boxes of those gathered to see the fun. Society also appears in the series of receptions and dinners given to the prominent guests.

Army and Navy

Then comes labor in the great parade of Monday, when 40,000 men and women will march with gorgeous floats showing the handicraft of mankind. Labor commands with a program that completely fills the day and night.

The mighty forces of the Army and Navy, always a spectacle that draws the crowd, will have all of Tuesday. Not only Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors, but those of the visiting foreign warships will be in line.

Admission Day will be the greatest day of its kind in the history of the seventy-five years. In the morning will be the historic pageant, in which every event of importance from the days of Cabrillo and Drake to modern times will be depicted by the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West. And they will dance, too, every ballroom, every hall in all the city will be open to entertain the visitors.

Both San Diego and Los Angeles were wrested from the enemy, and Gov. Pio Pico, last of the Mexican governors, fled the country.

Gen. Pio Pico

Los Angeles was at that time, as it is today, the most populous and important city in California, and would have been the Mexican capital had Gov. Pico had his way, but the Mexican authorities had preferred Monterey. At one time there were 1100 United States troops in Los Angeles. The Mexicans tried to force them out, and there was fighting for days, and bloodshed, but our soldiers held the place. After the treaty with Mexico Pio Pico, held in high esteem by the Americans here, returned to Los Angeles, where he remained until his death.

From the close of the Mexican War and from 1846 to 1849, there was a list of seven military governors, but their rule was unsatisfactory to the people, most of whom clamored for Statehood for California. But Statehood never came until they took matters into their own hands, held the convention at Monterey, adopted a constitution of their own making, fixed the boundaries of the new State, and elected its first officers.

Los Angeles sent five delegates to the convention, San Diego two, Santa Barbara one, and San Luis Obispo two. It was agreed that all laws be published in both English and Spanish. Several of the forty-eight delegates could speak Spanish only, and the interpreter was kept busy.

There was a great squabble among the delegates over the boundary lines. Some held that they should extend far eastward and include Nevada and Utah. Had this been done, California would have had an area of over 300,000 square miles, and would have been considerably larger than Texas. But as many of the members of the convention were opposed to having Mormons in the State, their territory was not included, and

BY MEANS of the photograph, which speaks the only universal language, and by eliminating technical terms which are essential to the laboratory, but barriers to the layman, the National Geographic Society makes all its findings, and known facts, intelligible to the layman.

For example the scientific results of the Katmai expeditions were published in a series of monographs relating to the tuff deposits, the chemistry of the fumaroles, the incrustations, and the coleoptera collected.

EARNING THEIR WAY THROUGH COLLEGE

RARE COLLECTION OF ANTIQUE ARMS OWNED BY ACTOR

For many years Earle Williams has been steadily assembling a collection of rare antiques, principally arms, with the result that Los Angeles has in him one of the country's leading collectors and authorities in this field. His last trip to New York gave him an opportunity to add to his collection of court swords, his principal hobby, so that now it is one of the foremost groups in the United States. The Williams home on North Kingsley Drive has become a Mecca for visitors to Southern California whose interests run to this type of collection.

One of the most interesting corners in his living-room contains a truly fascinating group of objets d'art. Atop an eighteenth-century Italian chest of richly carved walnut is a papal cape of scarlet velvet of the seventeenth century. At its corners are contemporary bronze miniature replicas of the lamp posts in the plaza before St. Mark's Cathedral in Venice, dating from the eighteenth century. In the center background is a gold jewel box molded and chased by an artist of the seventeenth century; in front of this is still another Italian piece, a Venetian brass boat, whose detail attests its manufacture around the year 1550. Two Chinese wooden figures of ebony lacquer and gold, more than 600 years old, and a pair of modern jewel boxes—one of French cloisonne of the late nineteenth century and a modern porcelain creation by Zuloaga of the famous Spanish artist family—complete the group.

Military Antiques

In another corner is an informal group of military antiques which is worth several times its weight in gold. As a background for this group Williams has arranged an ancient Norman coat of arms, dating from the generation which produced William the Conqueror. The pairs of swords mingle feudal periods and present-day armoring.

At the extreme left is a court sword from France, dated 1750, with gilded hilt and russet designs in relief of floral and rococco patterns, delicately chiseled; oviform pommel, wire-bound grip, knuckle guard, small drooping quillon, pas d'ane and shell guard, and triangular blade thirty inches long.

Alongside this elegant specimen is a heavy practical sword, in its original scabbard, which was brought to this country from England by one of the original settlers of the Virginia colony.

Many Swords

The other pair of swords again presents a similar interesting contrast. The court sword is German, also dated 1750—and also from the famous Clements collection, like its French contemporary—with silver hilt chiseled with waving fluted rococco surface, flattened globular pommel, silver grip swelling in the center, knuckle guard on which is stamped the maker's mark, the pine cone of the Augsburgs; short quillons, small pas d'ane and curving concave shell guard; blade thirty-six inches long, decorated with engraved strapwork designs and figures of angels bearing swords and gilded. With this piece of brocaded steel stands the practical saber carried by Earle Williams's father during thirty-two major engagements of the Civil War as an officer in the Fourth United States Cavalry.

The miniature suit of armor is an exact replica, in proportion and of even date with its original, attributed to Count Krakow and said by authoritative antiquarians to have been worn by him during the Thirty Years' War, around 1620, as a member of the German forces. The original is a part of the Gimbel collection now in Berlin.

The suit is complete to every detail, with burganet (helmet,) gorget (shoulder joints,) breastplate and backplate, pauldrons, (leg pieces,) knee and calf pieces and shoes, arm defenses, tassets and finger gauntlets. Even the sword, scabbard and spurs, as well as the quadrangular shield, are all reproduced in this interesting model.

Antique Dagger

The dagger is even older; also German, it dates back to 1480 and was at one time included in a loan collection placed on exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. It has a semiglobular pommel with swollen center for grip, at the base of which is a short guard; the triangular blade, much corroded and nine inches long, is inlaid with faint gold lettering in Gothic, "Hilf Ma," meaning "Hilf, Maria," a plea for aid to the mother of Christ.

Pikes and maces, powder flasks and flintlocks, spears, broadswords, rapiers and cross-bows, brigandines, coifs, salades, basinets and halbreds—all are represented by choice museum pieces in this noteworthy private collection and owned by the leading antiquarian in the motion-picture colony.

RELICS OF ROMANTIC AGES

Among the antiques prized in the collection of Earle Williams is a Norman coat-of-arms dating from William the Conqueror's generation. It is shown in the central picture with several swords of feudal periods. The objects in inset include a rare Italian chest upon which are various objets d'art from various parts of the world and past ages. Mr. Williams is shown in the inset to the left.

Los Angeles sent five delegates to the convention, San Diego two, Santa Barbara one, and San Luis Obispo two. It was agreed that all laws be published in both English and Spanish. Several of the forty-eight delegates could speak Spanish only and the interpreter was kept busy.

There was a great squabble among the delegates over the boundary lines. Some held that they should extend far eastward and include Nevada and Utah. Had this been done, California would have had an area of over 300,000 square miles, and would have been considerably larger than Texas. But as many of the members of the convention were opposed to having Mormons in the State, their territory was not included, and the boundary was fixed as it now stands.

The Mormons, who had wanted to be in the new State, had elected delegates to the convention, but they arrived too late to be at Monterey. They were bitterly disappointed and went home in a huff.

"Taken as a whole," wrote Bayard Taylor of the convention, "the delegates did honor to California, and would not suffer by comparison with any first State convention held in the republic. The appearance of the whole body was exceedingly dignified and intellectual, and parliamentary decorum was strictly observed."

The constitution adopted by the convention, a liberal, democratic document, was ratified by the people at an election held on November 13 by an almost unanimous vote. Peter H. Burnett was chosen Governor and John McDougal Lieutenant-Governor. A full set of State officers, together with Congressmen, was elected, and on December 20, 1849, over eight months before California's actual admission to the Union, the self-authorized and self-constituted State government was established at San Jose.

But so far as Federal recognition or approval was concerned California was not a State, nor even a Territory. She was no more a State than was the Bear Flag government a republic. But, though irregularly and, as some have held, illegally organized, the people counted confidently upon the acceptance of California and her constitution at Washington, and they were not disappointed, for on August 13, 1850, the Statehood bill passed the Senate and on September 7 it was ratified by the House. And when on September 9 President Fillmore signed the act, California was ushered into the Union.

This week California celebrates her diamond anniversary, with a great jubilee. She will hang the Bear Flag on the outer wall. Her pioneers and their children will march to the tune of "The Days of Forty-nine." It is fitting that the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West should take such a leading part in the celebration as has been assigned to them. For while great credit and honor are due to the pioneers, it is generally recognized that one of the most potent factors in California's wonderful progress has been the dynamic spirit of youth.

MANY CHANGES IN THE WEST SINCE THE DAYS OF THE "FORTY-NINERS"

A great transformation of the trans-Mississippi West has taken place since California entered as a State seventy-five years ago. By 1850 the United States had secured title to the greater portion of the territory west of the Mississippi; there remaining then to come under our flag but one large area, Alaska, and a small one, the Gadsden purchase in Southern Arizona and New Mexico. The main geographical features of this vast area had been discovered; the Spaniards had commenced sending expeditions by land and sea into the Southwest more than 300 years before the discovery of gold in our State, and trappers from Canada and the United States and government explorers had crossed the entire area. But one large river, the Colorado, was unknown for a considerable portion of its course. Nearly sixty years had passed since Gray had entered the Columbia River.

The subdivision of the vast trans-Mississippi area into territories and States was under way. Louisiana, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas and Iowa had preceded California into Statehood; Oregon became a Territory in 1848, Minnesota in 1849, while Utah and New Mexico came in as such in the same year that California became a State. The boundaries of Oregon, Utah and New Mexico were greatly extended over those of the present. The two Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Washington had as yet not reached the territorial stage.

In 1850 the larger portion of the population was to be found in the Southeastern States along the Mississippi River. Missouri was the most densly settled with a population approaching the 700,000 mark; Louisiana with 517,000 was second; Texas with 213,000 third; Arkansas fourth with 210,000. In the area to the west of the Rocky Mountains, California with about 100,000 inhabitants was the most populous section; New Mexico with 62,000 second; Oregon including also what is now Washington and Idaho and portions of Montana and Wyoming, 13,000; Utah including also portions of Nevada, Wyoming and Colorado, 11,400. In our own State the most thickly settled counties, excluding San Francisco, were to be found in the gold belt of the Sierras. Eldorado had, when the census was taken, about six times as many people as Los Angeles county, while the combined population of the latter county with that of San Diego and Santa Barbara was less than a third of that of Calaveras. The entire population of the trans-Mississippi West in 1850 was about 2,000,000 or about the same as that of the Coast counties of Southern California of the present.

St. Louis was not only the leading city of the West but the largest city between Cincinnati and the Pacific. In 1850 it had a population of about 78,000, more than twice that of Chicago and about the same as that of San Diego in 1920. In the short period since the discovery of gold in 1848, San Francisco had grown from an obscure place to the second city of the West in population; it was then the fastest growing city in the Union and threatened the supremacy of St. Louis. Sacramento was racing with the leading gold camps for the honor of being known as the second city of the State; it had a population of about 7000. Salt Lake took the place of the Denver of today as the most important city of the Rocky Mountain district. Of the other larger cities of the West of today, Kansas City, Omaha, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, Denver, Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Los Angeles, San Diego; some had not yet been born while the older ones, San Antonio, Los Angeles, San Diego, were but small places.

Great has been the material progress of the trans-Mississippi West in the seventy-five years following the admission of our State into the Union. Missouri, Texas and California now take rank among the leading States of the Union in population and economic importance, and a far inland State, Colorado, contains half as many people as all the Western States had in 1850, while Denver, though not founded until 1868, has a greater population than any city in the United States had in 1850, New

STUDENTS EMPLOY VARIED AND PROFITABLE MEANS TO GET LUXURIOUS EDUCATION

By Grody Setzler

"Say, just how does a fellow go about earning his way through college?"

This rather baffling question came the other day from a confident youth who had just emerged victorious from a tussle with a local high school graduation.

I was about to answer that I had struggled three years over the problem myself, and was about ready to forward pass the sponge, when there flashed through my mind a train of pictures of what hundreds of my friends and acquaintances were doing in order to pay the next installment on that precious sheepskin.

And I realized that the college student has ferreted out more ingenious methods of coaxing together at least the skeleton of an income than any other class of part-time workers in the field, and that they seemed to do so without keeping company with health-sapping drudgery.

Now the all-vital question to about half the high school fledglings entering college is, "How am I going to get time to attend the important social events; to be an athlete, or at least be some kind of a hero; how to be able to take a full course without sagging under the burden; and even to study, if necessary, and to have time, above these minor details, to work my way through, from a flying start with an undernourished pocketbook?"

Story-Book Heroes

The answer is brain work and no holidays, unless you can make work play.

There are charming fairy tales about myriads of young, industrious, intelligent and Apollo-like gentlemen playing tag through Applesauce College, incidentally picking up as they go along a Phi Beta Kappa vest ornament, leading the football eleven, starting all the grand balls, paddling their own gas canoes, having conferences with the president, winning a tuxedo in a raffle, being the class ivy, crepe and straphanger, and when they graduate in three years, jacking up the mortgage from the proverbial homestead the day they leave college. Such yarns are the by-products of a runaway imagination, and will never leave the pages of fiction.

However, thousands work their way through and survive. But the man who goes through college on his own resources is a scarred veteran, and has done so only by the combination of common sense, luck, alarm clocks, constant scheming and the ability to hold off both creditors and patient professors. He must plan work scientifically, and evade jobs that demand all muscle and no headwork.

Brains Requisite

Any college man can get plenty of physical exercise on the football field, or in fraternity initiations. Long, tiring labor makes a student unfit for efficiency in the classroom, and thereby makes college education a waste of time and money. The case-hardened college man is a financial wizard, an approved Ponzi at large.

I once knew a young preacher student who could pay the house manager every Monday because he delivered a sermon at a small church every Sunday, and skinned us out of our ready cash by skillful poker maneuverings week nights, but this is an exceptional case.

When I attended Oklahoma University the honor system was going full blast. Two youths, taking advantage, place a box of polished apples, a box of 5-cent candy, 5-cent pencils, quizz books and other campus necessities in a conspicuous place on the campus. A sign on this clerkless store said: "Honor system. Take one and drop a nickel in the cigar box." With little business overhead these boys were paying all expenses out of their nickel harvest.

Advertising Bonanza

A bonanza practiced at the University of Southern California is as follows: Two brothers have an attractive card printed up as a complete campus directory. All fraternity sorority, boarding-house, and other important house addresses are printed in the center. Around the directory is room for $200 in advertising, sold in units to university shops, leading theaters, and others who accepted, at a rate that would turn many a newspaper verdant with desire.

These directories are nicely framed, and placed in every campus house, and the advertisers pay every week. The owners of this scheme were able to buy a sport model flivver and a tuxedo between them, while one was able to get engaged. The surviving member makes 8 o'clock classes, and has no grey hairs.

Another method is similar, except that the boys are not genuine students. They pose as such, and wear an air of pinched, scholarly poverty. Their scheme is a standard desk blotter, printed up, and like the real estate subdivision, plotted off in units, to be sold to college advertisers. Both sides of the blotter bear the same imprint, for reverse display.

It has a university circulation of about 300. It is estimated that they make about $100 on each issue.

To my knowledge, they have posed as college students in five of the Southern California colleges, with the best of results. Printing expenses are cut down by leaving the form almost intact for all blotters. However, instead of turning the gate receipts into valuable yet intangible higher education, the two boys are now away on a prolonged sight-seeing tour.

Jazz Bug

One of the best ways to lose sleep and make money is to have musical talent, and then be bitten by the "jazz bug." At the biggest university south of Tehachapi there are some thirty to forty men making from $20 to $40 a week torturing some instrument in a varsity orchestra. They do everything from playing for a grand grocery opening, to padding out the Orpheum Circuit.

Anything that savors of collegiate jazz is popular. Every campus organization avails itself of these music agitators for their dances. A prominent newspaper man in Southern California tooted his way through college with a muted cornet, in less than six years. However, his music stand always carried a text-book.

Employment Bureau

Students with ambition to work should go first to the university replacement bureau, which amounts in most colleges to an employment bureau. Thousands of calls come throughout the year, offering every known variety of work for college people, for night or part-time work.

Anyone having a trade or the beginnings of a profession will find here a chance for development, with fair pay. Then, these jobs often lead to some kind of a summer position, which, according to most college people, is a valuable thing to have cinched ahead.

A friend of mine who was trying to get a strangle hold on his Spanish course, took up the tutoring of a backward high-school youth, and gained both a working knowledge of the puzzling foreign grammar, and a dollar an hour by constant going over of the principles with another. Tutoring is a major outside interest with many students, and there is almost always a good paying job of this kind open.

A Soft Job

Another friend answered the call to drive a limousine afternoons for a touchy old physician, whose calls were merely prolonged visits. The total dividends were; a chance to drive an expensive car, the opportunity to sleep or study on the soft upholstery while the doctor was within, and 50 cents an hour for this painful work.

One of the easiest yet most unpopular jobs that drifted into the replacement office was answered by a young dentist, who had stood the rigors of the anatomy dissecting room, as well as serving on the front lines in France. All he had to do was stay amid the harmless corpses all night in an undertaking parlor. As night watchman he could either study, sleep, or watch as the situation demanded, and still be paid good wages.

A good point to be borne in mind for the student juggling his own earning capacity, is that the average college student spends about $800 a year above his tuition and that the most logical person to share in this cash distribution should be his fellow-student. College is a mild form of Communism, where every student can either sell his services, or be agent for some product needed.

Take the case of my fraternity, because I am somewhat of an authority on it, and my statistics should come from direct source. The house must have a manager, for it is in bad enough shape as it is. This gives opportunity for a capable young man, studying business methods and commerce to make his room and board, and really be appreciated by everybody but the pledges. He collects the laundry, takes table roll, and oversees a thousand and one things for the well-being of the house.

Another fellow has connected himself with a well-known clothing firm, and sells the house on "what the young college goof should wear." Still another sells his services to the student body by editing one of the college publications, and is known as a salaried person.

Others in the same business sell advertising, subscriptions, and manage campus magazine sales. Still others sell football programs at the big games, and see the pigskin battle at the same time. Football programs are a thing that you can't keep people from buying, regardless of who sells them. Student managers of the Los Angeles Coliseum have arranged it so that no one but university students may sell programs, be gatekeepers, take and sell tickets, and operate concessions.

Student Stores

Practically all student stores are run entirely or almost so by student personnel. A big university employs as many as 100 clerks, accountants, and other office assistants, all doing part-time work, and coming on in shifts. University students are always given preference over others in clerical positions open in their institution. They sell their services to the student body, are respected as university officials.

Then, there are the traveling salesmen among the students. One young man is able to drive his own car because he is an expert on printing, and fraternity jewelry.

Selling Gasoline

He is well liked on the campus. He sells nearly all the dance and banquet programs, and knows how to bid, as well as to produce good work. About once a week some new organization starts on the campus, and he helps them plan, and then sells them on the precious hardware. Many students are brokers for a dozen reliable companies selling things that students must have.

Three ambitious and popular youths have schemed, borrowed and managed, and have bought a filling station just off the campus. They intend to continue college life as business men. A former student-boy president sold enough typewriters to students and the administration to keep diploma, flivver and man together.

Every Christmas comes a call from the Postoffice Department for all varieties of clerks, night and day. College people are accepted without question, for they are supposed to be educated. One fraternity has as souvenirs a row of mail-carriers' caps, as evidence of past work.

And so on down the line, one may find hundreds of part-time jobs being filled by college people, such as pear diving (dishwashing;) hash-slinging, shaving lawns and doing other janitorial labors; clerking in stores, minding babies, and working as night clerks in large city banks. One of the best talents for a girl to have is that of hair-dressing. Practically every sorority, boarding-house and dormitory on large campuses has its marceller and permanent-waver, who is always busy putting new frills and contortions in milady co-ed's shingled crown.

Sixty per cent of all college students earn at least part of their college expenses, so that the person who disdains to admit a pay check is in the ineffectual minority nowadays.

GEOGRAPHIC EXPLORERS BRAVE PERILS TO AID SCIENCE

(This is the second of a series of three articles describing the varied and colorful expeditions of the National Geographic Society to remote corners of the earth for the purpose of giving to science the valuable data to be found in unexplored lands. The articles illustrate the true purpose of exploration and what benefits are gained from these adventurous excursions into unknown lands.—Ed.)

BY MEANS of the photograph, which speaks the only universal language, and by eliminating technical terms which are essential to the laboratory, but barriers to the layman, the National Geographic Society makes all its findings, and known facts, intelligible to the layman.

For example the scientific results of the Katmai expeditions were published in a series of monographs relating to the tuff deposits, the chemistry of the fumaroles, the incrustations, and the [illegible] collected.

But the broader aspects of the explorations, intelligible to all persons who take an interest in the world they live in, were described in nontechnical language and by photographs in the society's principal organ, the National Geographic Magazine, in its bulletins to newspapers, and in its weekly illustrated bulletins to schools, which constitute a notable contribution to American public school education.

The society's pioneer glacier expedition, as well as its first volcanic study, had a sequel.

Alaska Tropical

A series of expeditions to Alaska, under Prof. Ralph S. Tarr, studied glaciers with a view to solving ice age problems. The most startling discovery was the geological trace of a Jamaica flora, showing that Alaska once had a tropical climate.

After giving an impetus and doing important work on two fundamental geographical problems, the society entered a third field, that of siesmology.

Until the devastation of Tokio and Yokohama the most calamitous earthquake of modern times had occurred at Messina, Sicily. To this region of recurring tremors the National Geographic Society sent an observer, Charles W. Wright, an eminent geologist.

While Mother Earth keeps her children humble by chastisement of earthquakes and volcanoes, she likewise long withheld two forbidden zones—those around the poles.

The National Geographic Society's participation in Polar exploration began with its co-operation in the Wellman Expedition in 1898, culminated in its support of Peary's expedition, which reached the Pole, and continues in its sponsorship of MacMillan in his effort to clear the mystery of the North's last great "blind spot."

Wellman's party sailed from Tromso, Norway, to Franz Josef Land. There they spent the winter, a single night of 127 days. At times the moon gave a light almost as bright as that of a winter day in temperate zones, enabling the party to take excellent pictures. Their explorations on Franz Josef Land, then virtually terra incognita, were important.

Waters from Two Poles

The party's report abounded in fascinating geographical observations. For example:

"Just as the Gulf Stream is the product of piling up masses of water within the Gulf of Mexico by trade winds of the southern hemisphere, so the Arctic current which brings the icy water down into the Atlantic from the Polar sea is the product of northern trade winds. We were at the meeting of the waters from the two poles of our earth.

"This constant movement of the waters brings to Arctic shores from the headwaters of Siberian rivers masses of driftwood for fuel and building purposes. It seems to us a remarkable beneficence of Nature that we should find timber from the interior of Asia to put into our little hut, and to burn with blubber for our fires 1000 miles above the tree limit and within 600 miles of the North Pole."

What is the use of Arctic exploration? What is the use of courage, of high adventure, of seeking the unattainable?

"The layman doesn't realize how many secrets of science the Far North holds," said MacMillan. "Every sportsman, every farmer, every civilized human being, in short, has been benefited and is yet to be benefited by the facts about birds, flowers, fish, rocks, magnetism and meteorology which can only be learned in the Arctic.

"Put all these aside, however, and the literature of Arctic exploration, as a noble recital of human courage, loyalty and resourcefulness, would justify Arctic exploration."

Story of the Arctic

Peary's discovery of the North Pole is the great hero story of the Arctic.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, in writing a history of Arctic exploration as an introduction for Peary's own narrative of his exploration calls attention to this heroic quality and mentions this incident:

"At the very beginning of his first expedition to Greenland, in 1891, Peary suffered an accident which sorely taxed his patience as well as his body, and which is mentioned here as it illustrates the grit and stamina of his moral and physical make-up.

As his ship, the Kite, was working its way through the ice fields off the Greenland shore, a cake of ice became wedged in the rudder, causing the wheel to reverse. One of the spokes jammed Peary's leg against the casement, making it impossible to extricate himself until both bones of the leg were broken. The party urged him to return to the United States for the winter and to resume his exploration the following year.

But Peary insisted on being landed as originally planned at McCormick Bay, stating that the money of his friends had been invested in the project and that he must "make good" to them. A unique and beautiful memorial to Admiral Peary recently was erected by the National Geographic Society in Arlington National Cemetery.

Members in Washington visit their society's headquarters, they view the notable and varied collection from Chaco Canyon at the Smithsonian, and they learn that their society's maps are used in government departments, with a proprietary interest. Their loyalty and their support alone make their society's work possible.

The society's members feel they have made enduring contributions to the nation in their society's preservation of America's wild life and scenic beauties.

Through the society $100,000 has been contributed toward the preservation for the American people of the giant sequoia and redwoods of California.

"Loud Speaker" Seal

As a result of a National Geographic expedition to the west-coast islands of Lower California, the Mexican government has declared Guadalupe and Cedros islands game reservations.

Already the fur seals of these islands had become as extinct as the passenger pigeon, the dodo and Stellar's sea cow. Fortunately, the elephant seal remains, a curious animal, which probably is a sea-going survival of dinosaur times.

This ungainly creature sheds its cuticle instead of its hair. It has a snorelike trumpet call, made by blowing the end of its trunk full of air, like a toy balloon, then placing this resonator in its wide-open mouth.

As a result of the society's explorations at Carlsbad, N. M., a cavern of exquisite beauty and vast proportions was added to the known natural wonders of our continent, and upon receiving the society's report President Coolidge promptly set aside the cavern area as a national monument.

Plant Explorer

One of the most romantic adventurers of our times, and one of the most useful, is the plant explorer. Dr. Joseph F. Rock, who earlier located the chaulmoogra tree, that yields a leper-healing oil, led the society's noteworthy expedition into Western China.

The Chinese-Tibet border is thickly settled, seldom visited and abounds in plants readily adaptable to the United States. Dr. Rock's major finds were a blight-resisting chestnut tree, now being cultivated experimentally by the United States Department of Agriculture; many kinds of rhododendrons, some of which already have been planted in our national parks, and the discovery of natives practicing the rites of a religion that thrived before Buddhism came.

To do his work Dr. Rock braved the aboriginal tribes of Yunnan, China's "Wild West," and was in the thick of bandit raids and revolutions. He traversed a hitherto unexplored gorge of the Yangtze, deeper than the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.

Once he wrote home despairingly, "God knows whether I ever will come back alive."

One night he slept in a dilapidated village temple, full of coffins. His native guard deserted him; outside the town was a thicket of poles, each bearing the head of a native victim, captured in daytime raids.

At another time he wrote:

"There is no end to robbers. When moving out of this place anywhere one gets an escort of fifty to eighty soldiers, most of them ex-robbers. One is at a loss what to do, as they may turn brigands on the road, or if one should meet active brigands he fears his soldiers will join them.

"Yesterday there was a complete eclipse of the moon. You should have heard the yelling and screaming of the people. The whole village ran about like mad, beating gongs and drums and howling.

"The people said a huge frog was eating the moon up, and they had to make all the noise they could to keep that frog away."

(Concluded next Sunday.)

The SO-CALLED SUMMER SPORTS

By
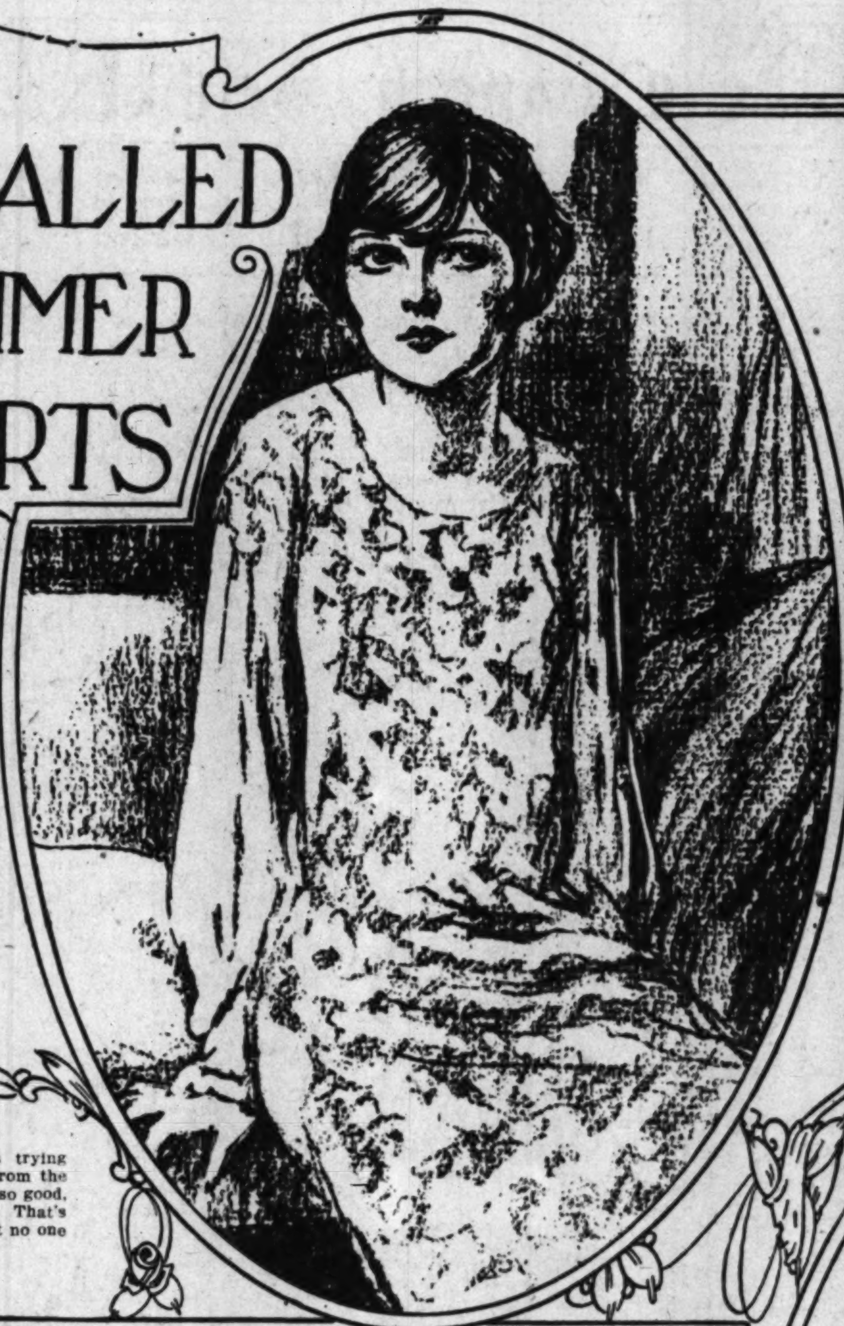
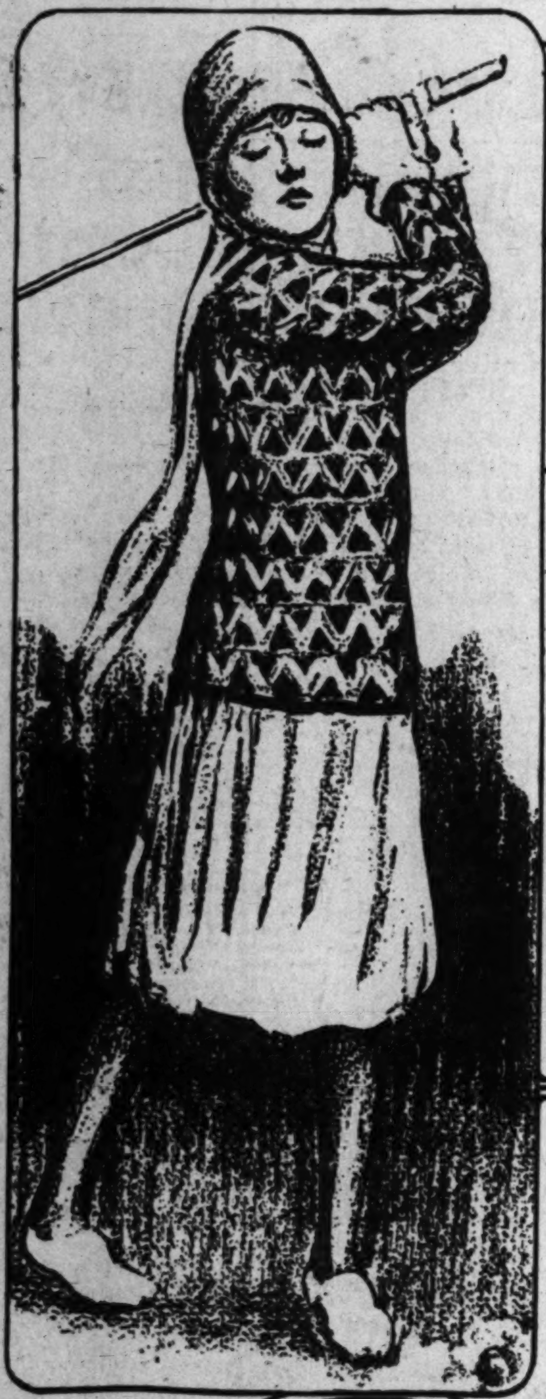
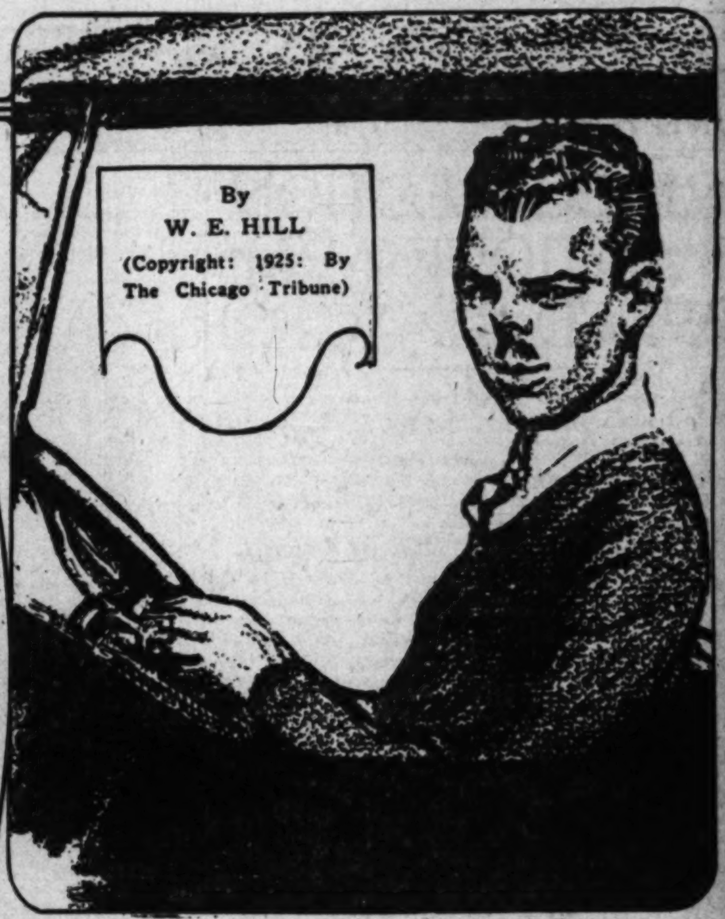
(Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune)

The simple outdoor life, would for most people come under the head of summer sport, but not for Josephine, the jazz girl. Josephine is not exactly back to nature, but is visiting three maiden aunts in the country, which is just about as jazzy. One of those "quaint" localities. "Oh it's quaint all right," Josephine would no doubt inform the world at large. All the young people have migrated to the towns. The only man under thirty for miles around, is a mental defective. Josephine is swinging gently in the porch hammock and wishing that a big Rolls-Royce—or a Packard maybe—filled with cheering college boys would come by and kidnap her.

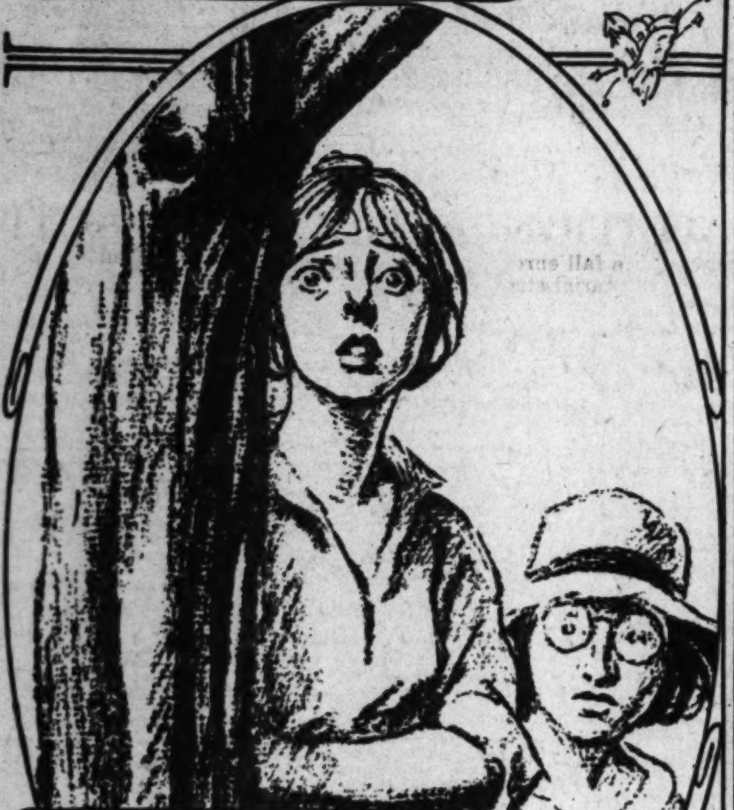




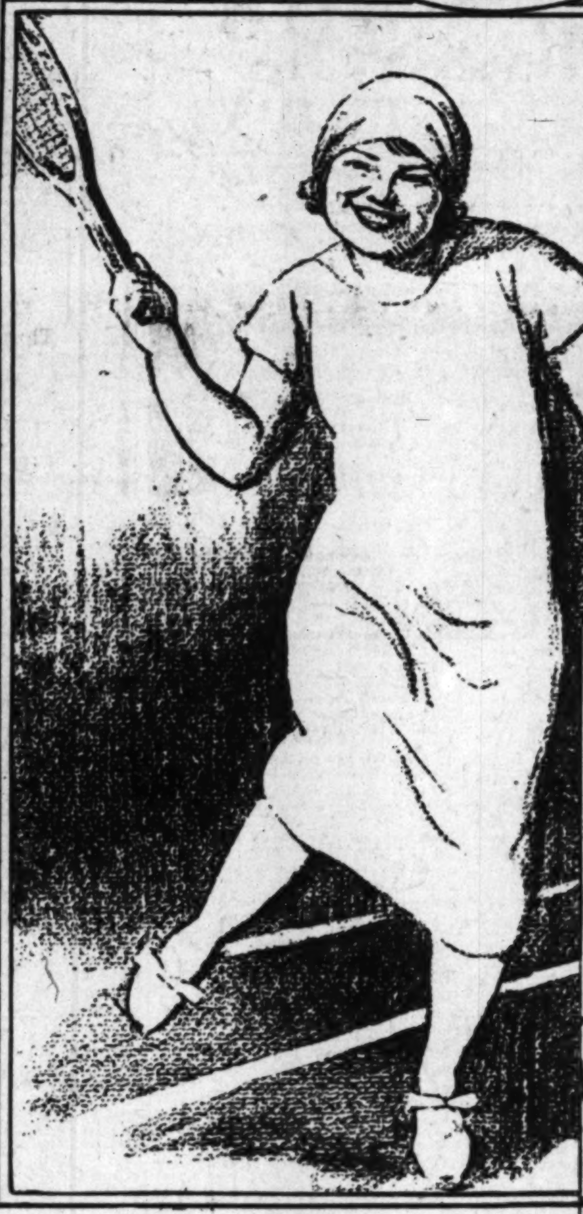
The young lady golfer is trying out the stuff she learned from the professional. It doesn't go so good, now that she's on her own. That's not her ball she's using, but no one else knows, so why not?



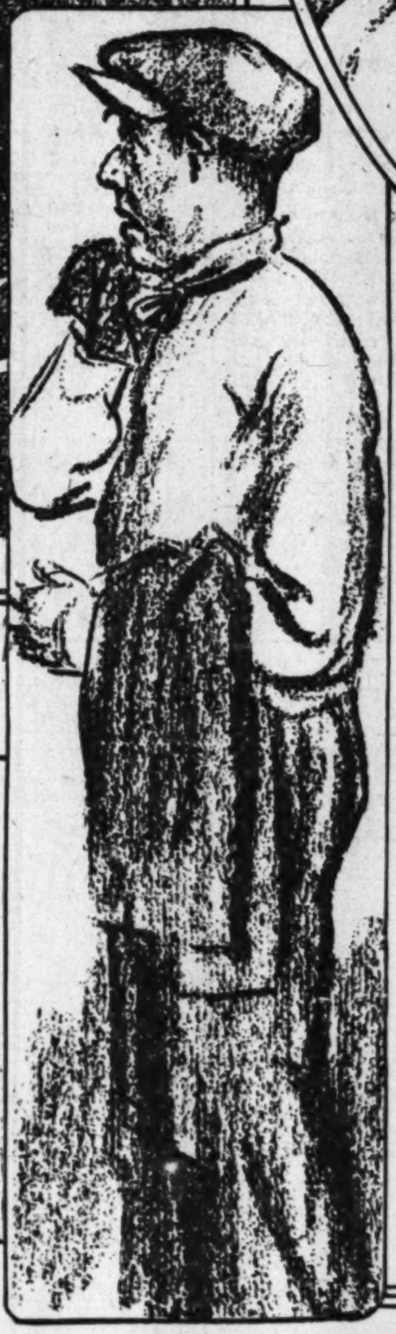
The cautious motorist. Bedford is very careful of his little car—1919 model. There's nothing too good in the way of smooth roads for it. Twenty-five an hour is all he gets from it. "Because," he will tell you, "if you use a car well, it will last you a lifetime.



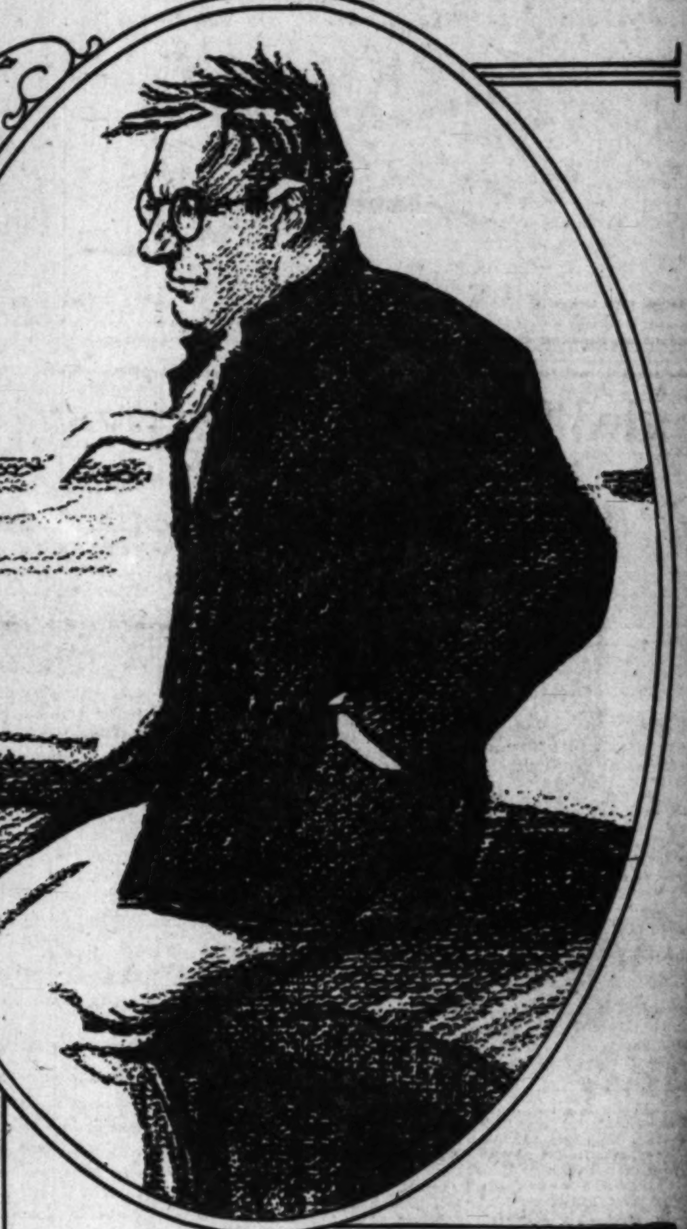
"Cows!" The girl campers are the unwilling recipients, as it were, of a visit from Lena, the neighboring cow. Oh, for a man to handle the situation.



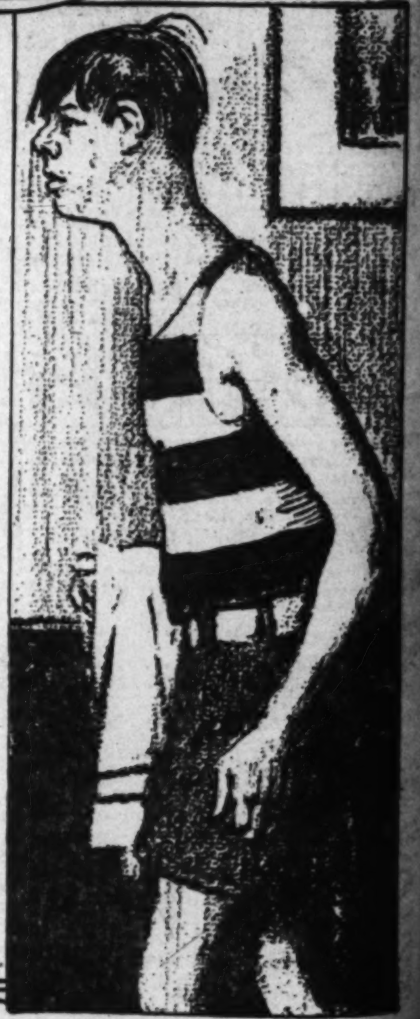
The tennis enthusiast is, she admits, perfectly crazy about tennis. Many who have played a set with her think so too. "Did you ever!" she screams and gurgles playfully, tripping over her rackets "I can't imagine what is the matter with my racket, and my service!"



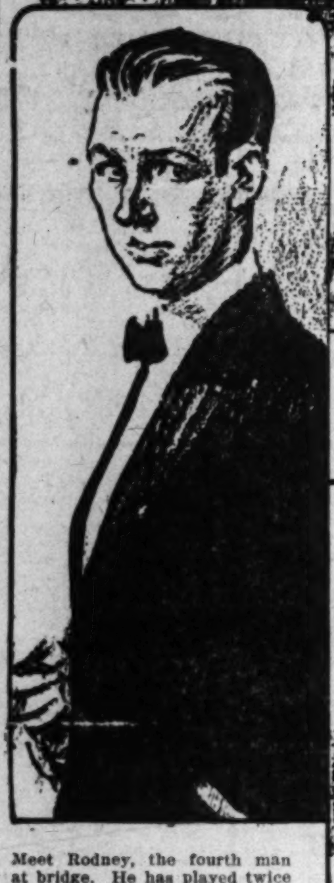
The not so good sailor. Harry is anything but a nautical soul and his day in the friend's power boat is a long one. He has tried so hard to sound seafaring. "Now take this boat," he is saying, "this is a yawl, isn't it? Or it is a cutter—I mean a brig?"



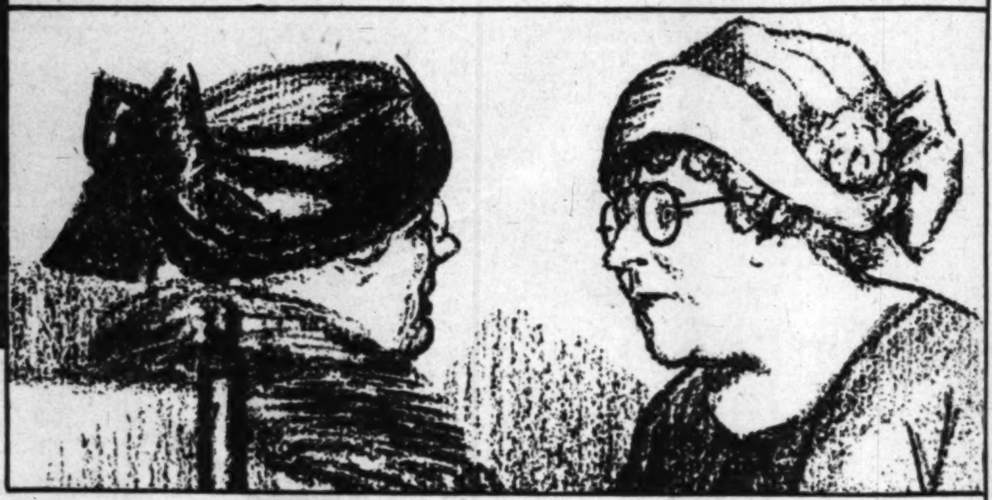
For the hiker, no summer sport can compare with the pastime of calling witty and cutting things after hard-hearted motorists. "So's your old man," hurled at a motorist who says his car is full, is a pretty trick retort, we'll say.



One of the joys of a private swimming pool is dressing at the house, and dripping all over the rugs and the floors on the way back.



Meet Rodney, the fourth man at bridge. He has played twice before, but only with his immediate family. Oh, what the bridge partners wouldn't like to do to Rodney, over the week-end.



The porch talkers are busy at their favorite sport—the operation details. "Of course," says Mrs. Jones-Jones to Mrs. Smythe-Smythe, "in my sister's case there were complications in the form of perfectly terrible adhesions! The doctor said never had he come across such frightful adhesions!"

EXPOSITION SPECTACLES BEING HIRED

Eastern Star Plans to Bring Huge Animal Troupe from Berlin

With an unlimited appropriation for entertainment features, negotiations are now being carried on between special committees of the Order of the Eastern Star and a number of large eastern and European vaudeville acts, with the idea in view of bringing them to Los Angeles for the mammoth fashion and home exposition to be staged by the organization at the Ambassador Auditorium, October 5 to 10, inclusive.

A daily entertainment program will be presented during the entire week of the exposition, and none but recognized vaudeville acts and gigantic spectacles will find a place on the show schedule now being arranged. Among the feature attractions that the committee is now negotiating for is a great European novelty act, comprising seventy-five persons and fifty trained animals. The troupe is now appearing nightly in a Berlin (Germany) amusement palace, and if arrangements can be made for the temporary release of the act, it will be brought to Los Angeles especially for the Eastern Star exposition next month.

Arrangements are now being made for special excursion rates on all rail, stage and ship lines touching Southern California cities and towns and those anticipating attending the mammoth show are assured reasonable transportation prices to and from Los Angeles during the week of the exposition. Advance advertising crews are now apprising the residents of all surrounding towns of the scope and the magnitude of the Eastern Star show, according to Connie V. Adair, president of the Matron's Association of the order.

LASKY HAS HEAVY PROGRAM

Most Extensive Production Schedule in Years Headed by Fannie Hurst's Prize Story

Executive conferences of studio officials, directors, scenario writers and supervising editors were in progress today at Famous Players-Lasky studio in preparation for the most extensive fall production schedule in years, an output following the summer boom, also of great proportions, just finished.

Hector Turnbull, Paramount's west-coast production supervisor, announced that a series of eight new pictures would be in the process of production within a very few weeks.

The first of these will be Fannie Hurst's $50,000 prize story, which will be called "The Mannequin," and which James Cruze will direct. Walter Woods is preparing the scenario, with the assistance of Miss Hurst. The cast is now being selected.

In less than three weeks Pola Negri is scheduled to begin work in her new starring production, "The Tattooed Countess," from the widely read novel by Carl Van Vechten. Malcolm St. Clair has been chosen to direct the vehicle.

Raymond Griffith's next starring comedy will be "Stage Door Johnny," and will be directed by Clarence Badger, who wielded the megaphone for Griffith's recent picture, "Paths to Paradise."

Bebe Daniels will start soon in "Polly of the Ballet," with Neil Hamilton playing the male lead and William De Mille as the director.

The return of Mildred Davis (Mrs. Harold Lloyd) to the screen will be Hugh Wiley's war story, "The Two Soldiers," with Victor Fleming directing and Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in featured roles.

Raoul Walsh's next Paramount production is to be "Hassan," an oriental spectacle, which is considered his forte since his direction of "The Thief of Bagdad" and "The Wanderer."

Hardly

"I want an art drawing to boost my goods."

"Very good."

"Something depicting my product with a pretty girl near it."

"Of course," said the artist, rubbing his hands. "I'll draw you a beautiful girl. Now what do you manufacture?"

"Kitchen sinks."

"Huh. Do you suppose I could get any modern girl to go near a kitchen sink?"—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

PAY TUITION AFTER SATISFACTION
Throughout the fall enrollment period until October 15, no tuition will be required of any Secretarial student entering for the general course until after two weeks' trial.
Then, if you have been fully satisfied, you will pay your initial month's tuition fee from the date of entry. If you are not satisfied, you will report the reason to us and be under no further obligation. This remarkable offer is based upon CONFIDENCE—confidence in ourselves and confidence in you.
But in addition to this, there are many other reasons why Southwestern University SCHOOL OF SECRETARIAL STUDIES is the logical school for you. Think of features such as these and what they mean to you:
FREE TEXTS
All secretarial students will receive their required text books free. Here is a net saving of fully $20 to you on your complete course. And the texts remain your property on completion!
CLUB DISCOUNTS
During September and October class organization, a cash credit of $10 is applied ON EACH enrollment when two or more students enter for the Secretarial program at the same time.
SPANISH—NO CHARGE
Commercial Spanish is offered all students pursuing the Secretarial program without extra tuition.
DIPLOMA
A handsome engraved diploma in an artistic silk-lined flexible leather case is awarded every graduate without cost.
DEBATING, ORATORY, ATHLETICS
Full schedule of intercollegiate debates and oratorical contests. Also football, basketball, baseball under competent coaches.
HIGH TUITION FEES? NO!
Tuition fees nominal. Southwestern owns its own home and saves over $1500 monthly rental which is passed on to our students in service.
POSITIONS CERTAIN
Southwestern had 1042 Students last year. Over 170 Secretarial positions were filled by our Free Employment Dept., in approximaetly six months. This service is open to you for all time after graduation.
We receive hundreds of calls asking us to certify to the ability of individual students and in practically all cases our statements are accepted as final. Do you adequately appreciate the influence of our position between you and success?
BOOKKEEPING AND ACCOUNTING —B. C. S. Degree
The beginners' Bookkeeping course takes from 4 to 6 months. The Higher Accounting and Business Administration program leading to B. C. S. degree takes three years.
Again at the last May C. P. A. examination Southwestern scored highest honors, when of 12 candidates 7 passed in all subjects and 3 in all but one subject. Another national record was scored in Nov., 1923, when 9 out of 13 passed successfully.
Let us talk over your plans. Remember no tuition is accepted in the Secretarial Dept. till after two weeks' trial. An unequivocal Guarantee goes with every enrollment. Our capacity is limited and reservations for the fall term should be made at once. Phone today for our artistic announcement, "The Better Secretary," which gives detailed information.

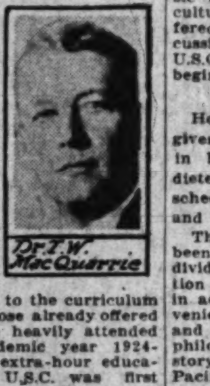
MANY EVENING COURSES ADDED

Metropolitan College to Open 28th Inst.

Curriculum of U.S.C. Covers Varied Subjects

Arts and Business Will be Taught



Dr. T. W. MacQuarrie

The service of a university faculty, a university library, and more than 100 evening university courses will be available to all members of the adult population of Los Angeles when the University of Southern California opens the 1925 fall quarter at Metropolitan College, U.S.C., in the Transportation Building on the 28th inst.

More than twenty-five new courses have been added to the curriculum in addition to those already offered and which were heavily attended during the academic year 1924-1925, when the extra-hour educational work of U.S.C. was first brought downtown and concentrated at Metropolitan College in the Transportation Building.

Dr. Thomas W. MacQuarrie, who became director of Metropolitan College by appointment of the university trustees this summer, announces afternoon and evening courses in liberal arts, education, history and languages which apply toward State teaching credentials, granting college credit at their satisfactory completion. These courses are to be given at 4:10 p.m. and at 7 p.m. during the week, and on Saturday mornings at 8 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. for the convenience and benefit of employed teachers.

START INNOVATIONS

Innovations this September at Metropolitan College include two Thursday afternoon courses in the symphony orchestra and its music, one meeting at 2 p.m. and the other at 4:10 p.m. on the same day. Methods of teaching music also are to be featured at the downtown school on Saturday mornings.

Screen technique, a course in scenario writing covering all literary phases of film production, is one of the special courses scheduled for the fall quarter at Metropolitan College, and what to read, what plays to see, and music appreciation, are additional cultural courses which will be offered one evening a week for discussion and instruction under U.S.C. instructors and lecturers, beginning this month.

ECONOMIC COURSES

Home economics courses to be given this fall include instruction in home nursing, nutrition and dietetics, millinery and textiles scheduled at 4:10 p.m. and 7 p.m. and on different days of the week.

The list of courses which has been planned to benefit every individual interested in adult education from any angle whatever, or in acquiring college credit in convenient hours, includes instruction and lectures on such subjects as philosophy of education, short story writing, the modern novel, Pacific Slope history, racial adjustments, anthropology and history of social thought.

Information regarding additional courses, registration, and the exact time of the meeting of the classes can be obtained from Dr. MacQuarrie, director of Metropolitan College, U.S.C., who can be reached by calling TRinity 1701, or by application on the thirteenth floor of the Transportation Building, Seventh and Los Angeles streets. All classes meet for a period of twelve weeks.

The Sunday School Lesson
FOR SEPT. 13, 1925

THE GOSPEL WHERE NATIONS CLASH

The International Sunday-School Lesson for September 13 is "Paul at Thessalonica and Berea."—Acts xvii:1-12

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

Throughout the British Empire there will be many men studying this lesson whose thoughts will be turned by it to their own war experiences in Thessalonica, the modern Salonica. They will tell tales of Salonica mud and Salonica city bandits who picked out only British officers and soldiers as victims and of the great Salonica fire, and they all declare that Apostle Paul "had nothing on them" in his Salonica experiences.

All of life in this polyglot port is under the shadow of political fears and jealousies. Jugo-Slavia claims as her right—her window on the Aegean—the city of Salonica. Greece holds it as a prize awarded her at Paris, the more to be coveted since the trade of the port has doubled in two years, in rivalry to Constantinople.

Nearly 2000 years have passed since Paul's work in Thessalonica; and the city is still a problem place, with religion a dominant factor. Too large a subject to be treated here, the "Dunmehs," the pseudo-Moslem Jews of Salonica, who have provided most of the leaders for new Turkey, offer a theme as fascinating as the most romantic novel.

A CONTINUING CITY

Before our eyes, the greater part of Salonica has been destroyed by fire, as in times past; so that there are no authentic reminders of Paul's day, save a street of his name. Some very old Greek churches, that during Moslem occupation were mosques, have stood up under the transformations of time. Though its physical characteristics have changed, the city has survived, a queenly port with a great and fertile hinterland. Salonica always has been one of the strategic points in Macedonia.

Right here it should be repeated that what Salonica needs today is what it needed in Paul's time. This tremendous truth has become so incrusted with pious phraseology that its urgent reality is sometimes missed. Every alive preacher longs for new words in which to say that every man and every city that accepts Jesus as Savior and King—He once was officially proclaimed King of Florence—is going to be made over into newness of character. Crime and hatred and evil speaking and all roots of bitterness will disappear from the soul and from the community that yields completely to Christ.

FIGHTING FOR FAITH

Christians may as well make up their minds to accept, as the hub of all the controversy that has recently raged over religion, the question of the place of Jesus Christ in our modern life. That was the point of our lesson incident; it is still the point of the latest religious discussion.

Sinister forces are seeking to supplant Jesus from our civilization. The real issue is not the method of man's first creation, but the power of Christ's new creation. It is less the first Adam than the second Adam that troubles the foes of the Bible and of the church. These enemies are quite as uncandid as were the Thessalonica Jews, who, following the example of the Jews caused Christ to be crucified, cloaked their real aims beneath professions of loyalty to the emperor. All the while their true purpose was not, "Up With Caesar!" but "Down With Christ!"

Something of Paul's fighting faith and clear vision of what is central and essential, is needed in the church of our day. Too many Christians are rather stupidly permitting avowed foes of revealed religion to shift the accent of present thought from Christ to evolution; from Christian character and Christian duty to such "papoose questions"—so John Eliot called them when propounded by his Indians, 250 years ago—as a publicity-seeking New York Unitarian preacher drew up for the Chicago atheist criminal lawyer to propound to Mr. Bryan at the Dayton trial.

Paul made plain in the Thessalonica synagogue that the one clear and supremely important message of the Old Testament is its presentation of a suffering, sacrificed Savior, who is Jesus, the Messiah. Such was the good news that won converts then; and such is the good news that wins converts today.

PAYING THE PRICE OF FRIENDSHIP

Without dwelling upon the riot raised by foes of Paul's faith, (Probably the Apostle would have been surprised if his message had not created a commotion!) for that was the common experience of this brave pioneer, we must observe two points in the terse tale that is our lesson. First is the charge that "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also." That phrase is significant. It means that the new religion was rapidly making a name for itself. Already Christianity's fame as a revolutionary force was becoming broadcast. A deal of new living on the part of converts throughout the Roman Empire is mirrored in this one simple sentence. Nobody denies that the mission of the Gospel is to turn the world upside down; or, better, rightside up. Much present world ferment is to be explained only by the working of the leaven of Christ.

A man who paid high for a friendship is the second figure in the commotion. Jason was Paul's friend and host. So he had to endure Paul's enemies; which is implied in all genuine friendship. A man who will not suffer for his friend never was a friend. In Jason's case, his house was mobbed. He was dragged before the magistrates and arrested, and held in bail to keep the peace. What did Jason care for that, since, while the turmoil raged about him, his friend Paul escaped?

COMMUNITY'S CHARACTER

Cities and towns have characters as marked as those of individuals. The most valuable factor in any residential real estate transaction is the nature of the neighborhood, the quality of the folk who dwell there. Shrewd Dr. Luke draws this distinction between Thessalonica and Berea, the town to which Paul's friends sent him after the riot.

Bereans were high minded and open minded; but not vacant minded. They heard the good news readily; but, with level heads and quiet insistence upon the right of private judgment, they dug into the Old Testament for themselves, to test the missionaries' statements. And the record runs, "Therefore many of them believed." A Bible-studying community quickly becomes a Christian community. Thousands of Sunday-school classes bear the name "Berean" because they emulate these sensible citizens of old Berea, in Macedonia.

So, amid victories and opposition, our hero, frail and scarcely fit for the ordinary hardships of travel, much less for mobbings and imprisonments, went his Gospeling way undeterred, toward the intellectual center of his world.

Vol. XLIV. SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 6, 1925. THE HOME

Affairs of the Week

By Juana Neal Levy

Coming home from summer vacation outings, planning for fall functions and getting the young students ready for finishing school and college, both at home and abroad, society is busy this season of the year before the usual rush of winter's activities.

Among the recent additions to local society are Capt. and Mrs. Henry Norman Jenson, who are just getting settled in their new home at 200 South Grand avenue, Pasadena, where they will be domiciled for at least a year or until they have fully decided upon their permanent location of a home.

Capt. Jenson, retired after thirty years' service in the United States Navy, Mrs. Jenson and their small son Dicky, for more than five years have made their home at Coronado. Capt. Jenson was at the Naval Base for some years and also was Chief of Staff to Admiral Ashley H. Robertson, U.S.N., there, and after his retirement remained at Coronado for more than a year, being much interested in the construction of the new small boat harbor off Hotel del Coronado, which has been erected and constructed so that the officers of the Navy, as well as occupants of yachts and small craft, may land at the hotel harbor without going to San Diego Harbor several miles down the bay.

Mrs. Jenson formerly was Miss [illegible] Allen, daughter of the late Judge Matthew Allen and Mrs. Allen of Avenue 50.

Capt. Jenson recently joined with his brother, C. W. Jenson, in the foundry and machine business here and they have come back to Los Angeles to make their permanent home, being royally welcomed by their many friends.

Miss Evelyn Carr and her mother Mrs. Byron Thorpe Carr have just returned to Los Angeles after an extensive trip abroad, passing some of the year in Africa. Numerous attractively arranged affairs are being planned in honor of Miss Carr, among the hostesses of the near future being Miss Virginia Wright of South Gramercy Place.

One of the charming visitors to Los Angeles this fall is Miss Alma Forker of Bakersfield who is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. [illegible] Tatum at their home, 102 [illegible] avenue. Mrs. Tatum recently entertained with a charmingly appointed although informal luncheon at her home in honor of her guest, ten guests being bidden. Miss Forker, who is an accomplished musician, entertained with a number of vocal selections during the afternoon.

Another charming visitor this season is Miss Virginia Scott of Memphis, Tenn., who has been the house guest of Miss Celeste Cottem at her home at 1912 North [illegible] Place. Many enjoyable affairs have honored the popular young visitor, Miss Cottem giving an elaborate luncheon for her guest, a number of the younger set having been bidden.

Miss Cottem is a student at Cumnock School of Expression, where she is very popular and she is planning to visit at Hotel del Coronado before the opening of the fall season.

[illegible] Sorority of University of Southern California, entertained [illegible] with a luncheon and a [illegible] party at the clubhouse of the [illegible] Club, Santa Monica, the affair being given in the nature of a rushing party. Thirty guests were bidden and Miss Virginia Robinson and Miss Virginia Burmister acted as hostesses.

Miss Louise Budd Mitchell, one of the most popular members of the sorority, who has recently returned from a week's visit at the St. Catherine's in Avalon, Catalina, entertained with a shower at the Canyon Lodge of her parents in honor of Mrs. Bernard Hoyt, formerly Miss Mildred Holt, and later in the season Miss Mitchell is planning a number of attractive affairs.

Among the popular matrons of local society is Mrs. George Robert Sturgis of Beverly Hills, who with Mr. Sturgis has been vacationing at Hotel del Coronado this summer. The beautiful home of the George Robert Sturgis's at 911 Canon Drive, Beverly Hills, is one of the show places of the exclusive suburb. Mr. and Mrs. Sturgis with the latter's mother, Mrs. Grace Kutchin Burt, are enjoying an extended sojourn at the famous watering place, motoring down some weeks ago. The date of their return home is indefinite.

One of the charming young brides of the season, whose wedding was an event of the latter part of August, is Mrs. Bernard L. Hoyt, formerly Miss Mildred Holt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Holt of West Forty-first street, her marriage to Mr. Hoyt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Luce of Anaheim, taking place in St. Vincent's parish house the 22nd inst. at noon, only relatives and a few close friends attending. Rev. Martin G. Hanley officiated. There were no attendants. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Mary Louise and immediately afterward Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt left for a brief honeymoon. After their return in a few days they will be at home to their many friends in the Magnolia Arms Apartments. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt are graduated from the University of Southern California, where Mr. Hoyt is a member of the Zeta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity. Mrs. Hoyt is a Phi Mu member.

Church Wedding

One of the lovely weddings of the month will be that of Miss Margaret S. Bullock, attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gillespie Bullock, who has chosen the 23rd inst., as the date for her marriage to James Poole Abbott, the ceremony to take place in the Wilshire Boulevard Congregational Church. Miss Helen Bullock will be her sister's maid of honor while Mrs. Charles H. Fanner, Jr., (Louise Gonzales) is to be matron of honor, other attendants including Miss Ruth Louise Wallace, sister of the bride-elect, Miss Ruth Brauer, Mrs. De Forrest Home (Lucy Hartzell,) Mrs. Mark Finley (Anna Judge,) and Mrs. Frederick S. Robinson (Audrey Pousette.) The ushers will include Mark Finley, Charles H. Tanner, Jr., Alfred Dewey Davey, Oscar Taylor, Frederick S. Robinson and De Forrest Home.

A reception and wedding supper will follow the ceremony.

A number of delightful affairs are being planned in honor of this popular bride-elect before the wedding. Miss Ruth Wallace entertaining with a luncheon at the California Club Wednesday afternoon, the 16th inst., followed by a matinee party, while Mrs. Frederick S. Robinson is giving a bridge tea at the Wilshire Country Club in honor of Miss Bullock and on the 20th inst., Mr. and Mrs. Mark Finley are planning an affair in honor of Miss Bullock and Mr. Abbott at their home in Harvard Boulevard.

A second wedding in the John Gillespie Bullock family will take place several weeks after that of Miss Margaret Bullock, when Miss Ruth Louise Wallace, another daughter, will become the bride of Alfred Dewey Davey, the ceremony taking place at the family residence, 627 Plymouth Boulevard, Thursday evening, October 15.

A number of delightful affairs are being given in honor of Miss Wallace before the wedding, among the recent affairs being the miscellaneous shower with which Mrs. Frank Bryson entertained several days ago at her home in Harcourt avenue.

Miss Wallace, who is one of the most popular members of the younger set, is graduated from Pine Manor School at Wellesley, Mass., and afterward traveled for several years abroad. She is assisting as one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of her sister, Miss Margaret Bullock and James Poole Abbott, sharing the honors at many of the prenuptial affairs.

Garden Wedding

One of the lovely weddings of yesterday was that of Miss Helen Thompson, attractive daughter of the late William P. Thompson and Mrs. Thompson of Glendale, and Philip Miles Chapman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Chapman of Irolo street, which took place at 4:30 p.m. in the beautiful gardens of the home of the aunt of the bride, Mrs. Leslie C. Brand, at Miradero in Glendale, Rev. Hugh Kelso Walker, D.D., officiating. The ceremony was performed amidst the flowering shrubs and plants, the kneeling bench being placed at the foot of an immense palm on the lawn in front of the clubhouse. The gardens, abloom with autumn blossoms, made a perfect setting

The "California" Offers Real Values in Popular Priced Furniture

Popular priced furniture is only popular when real value is received for the price paid. In this respect the extensive variety of popular priced furniture at the "California" is of outstanding character.

Careful personal selection insures maximum of beauty, comfort and durability for the price paid and the "California's" close margin selling makes possible values that cannot be surpassed anywhere under any conditions.

As an example of these values, the "California" shows a very desirable 5-piece bedroom suite in ivory or French gray enamel; the full size bed, dresser, chiffonier, chair and rocker, complete $91.00. If the dressing table and bench and night stand are included the price is but $39.00 more.

Then there is a very attractive 5-piece bedroom set in gray green enamel with floral decorations; the bow foot bed, dresser, chiffonier, chair and rocker, complete $200.50. Princess dressing table, bench and night stand may be added at an additional cost of $102.00.

Another very attractive value is represented by a 7-piece bedroom set of walnut in combination with gum wood, includes bow foot bed, Princess dresser with bench, chiffonier, chair and rocker, and night stand and is priced $219.50.

There are over seventy different styles in the latest designs of bedroom suites from which to choose ranging up from the prices here quoted to the finest creations costing $1000.00 or more. You will find real values throughout these selections as well as among all the stocks here.

Visit the "California". Compare values. You will be convinced that it will be to your advantage to select your home furnishing needs here regardless of how little you want to spend.

An interesting bedroom suite will be shown in one of our windows throughout this week.

WILL ATTEND SCHOOL IN EAST

Younger Set Member Leaves Soon

Miss Helen McCartney

AMONG the popular members of the younger set who are leaving shortly for the East to attend school is Miss Helen McCartney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. McCartney of 806 Crescent Drive, Beverly Hills. Miss McCartney, who was graduated from Cumnock School, is entering Miss Bennett's School at Milbrook, N. Y.

for the bridal party, which included Miss Dolly Green, maid of honor; Miss Margaret Martin, Miss Doris Braly, Miss Luguinia Carpenter, Miss Jane De Van and Miss Polly Schoder. They all wore frocks of chiffon, cut after the same model, with tight bodice and bouffant skirts and large picture hats of velvet and felt to match their gowns, Miss Green wearing apricot shade while Miss Martin's was flesh color, Miss Braly's was almond green, Miss Carpenter's blue, Miss De Van's orchid, and Miss Shoder's yellow. They all carried old-fashioned bouquets of pompom dahlias to match their gowns with touches of blue delphinium, that of the maid of the honor being a trifle larger than those of the bridesmaids.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Edward Thompson, was charming in her bridal gown of white marquisette, beaded in seed pearls in the lily of the valley pattern, made with long train. Her veil of tulle was caught into a coronet of old Rose Pointe lace, and she carried an arm shower of white orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley. John Slater Chapman, II, came down from the University of California, Berkeley to serve his brother as best man and the ushers were William Woods, Joseph Reading Lippincott, John Stevenson Griffith, Ralph Church and Harold Loskamp.

A wedding tea was served in the gardens and on the lawn of the Brand estate, the bride's table being arranged under the huge flowering trees, while the other tables were spread beneath gay colored garden umbrellas. Two hundred invitations were issued.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman are motoring through the north on their wedding trip, planning to stop in San Francisco, Lake Tahoe, Del Monte and other points of interest and after their return will make their home temporarily with Mrs. Thompson until their own beautiful new home in Carthay Center is completed.

The bride was graduated from Marlborough School here and later from Miss Harker's School in Palo Alto, while Mr. Chapman is an alumnus of the University of California at Berkeley and a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity. Honoring the bride and bridal party, Miss Margaret Martin entertained Friday evening with a dinner at the Biltmore, immediately following the rehearsal, and the guests included members of the bridal party only.

In Gotham

Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Culver, who, with their young daughter, Patricia, have been passing the summer abroad, returned home Wednesday. After a motor tour through England, Ireland and Scotland, they cruised among the Norwegian fjords and passed several weeks in the Scandinavian countries, Germany and France. They are now at the Plaza in New York City and will be home shortly. In a recent letter they report that Northern Europe has been enjoying the balmiest summer experienced within twenty years, reminding them of Southern California.

Dinner-Dance

One of the delightful affairs of the ast week was the dinner-dance with which Miss Evelyn Whittier, attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Whittier of 324 South St. Andrews Place, entertained at the Biltmore Wednesday evening, in honor of her cousin, Miss Helen Whittier, who is leaving shortly for the East to enter college. Twenty guests were bidden and the table was beautifully decorated with a profusion of autumn flowers and ferns. The young hostess, who graduated this summer semester from the high-school department of the University of Southern California, is entering her freshman year there this semester, while the honor guest, after graduating from the Orton School, has decided to finish her education in an eastern college.

Wedding Plans

The wedding plans of Miss Arvilla Cooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wendell Cooley, are almost completed, her marriage to Goodwin J. Knight being scheduled for Wednesday evening in St. John's Church, West Adams at Figueroa street, with Rev. Charles Gardner, D. D., chaplain of Stanford University, officiating, with Rev. George A. Davidson assisting. Many delightful affairs have been given in honor of Miss Colley recently. Wednesday afternoon Miss Virginia Smith entertained at the Hollywood Country Club with a luncheon and bridge party, sixteen guests being bidden. The attractive young hostess, who is to be one of the bridal party, was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Chandler Smith.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. William Stewart, aunt of the bride-elect, entertained with a bridge tea at her home in North Ridgewood avenue, those included being Miss Jean Rackerby, Miss Gertrude Nelson, Miss Virginia Smith, Mrs. Jesse Knight, Mrs. Jenny Moultrup, Mrs. James Moultrup, Mrs. Thomas Reynolds, Miss Sarah Margaret Burns, Mrs. Alonzo West, Mrs. Ambrose Wright, Mrs. Arthur Wendell Cooley, Mrs. Lawrence Gavin, Miss Inez Land, Mrs. Howard Land, Mrs. Maxwell King and Mrs. Z. Sleeth.

Tomorrow afternon Miss Sarah Margaret Burns is entertaining with a luncheon and bridge at the Midwick Country clubhouse, a linen shower being an added feature of the afternoon's entertainment.

Mrs. Alonzo West (Maud Laressy) will be the matron of honor The bridesmaids will include Miss Rosemary Howe, Miss Virginia Smith and Miss Sarah Margaret Burns. The tiny flower girls will be Dorothy and Virginia Wright, nieces of the bride. Barkman McCabe will be best man and the ushers will include Thomas Reynolds, Wylie Bent, Leonard Comegys and Frederick Aberlee. Following the ceremony a wedding supper will be served at the Biltmore for the relatives and bridal party and after a wedding trip in the north, Mr. Knight and his bride will make their home here.

Miss Cooley was graduated from Los Angeles High School and later from the Holy Name College in Oakland, while Mr. Knight is an alumnus of the universities of Stanford and Cornell and is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

Mr. Cooley will give his daughter in marriage.

Seger-Britton

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Segar of 1959 Taft avenue, Hollywood, formally announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Allyen Seger, to Robert Lee Britton, Wednesday afternoon at the family home, Rev. W. Martin officiating. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of rich old lace, sprays of lillies of the valley in her hair and carried a shower of brides' roses and lillies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Gertrude Seger, was maid of honor, wearing a frock of orchid tone organdie and carried blossoms in the same tones. Lawrence Donker served Mr. Britton as best man. A wedding supper followed the ceremony and immediately afterward Mr. and Mrs. Britton left for an automobile honeymoon in the north and after their return will make their home in Hollywood.

Home From Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Merle Fisher (Ruth Inman) have returned from their wedding trip and will be at home this winter in San Bernardino, where Mr. Fisher is professor of science and mathematics in the high school. Their trip was made by automobile. They went first to Galveston, around the Gulf Coast through Florida, then up the coast to New York City, up the Hudson and across to Niagara Falls. Then they crossed into Canada and back to Detroit and Chicago, then on to Denver and home again.

Mrs. Fisher is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Inman of 1507 West Adams street and the wedding was one of the beautifully planned garden weddings of June 10, the ceremony taking place in Long Beach.

Summer Plans

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. DeHaven are occupying the beautiful country home of W. H. Cooke in Fullerton, where they are entertaining with a series of charmingly appointed week-end parties.

Wedding Anniversary

Senator and Mrs. John W. Ballard, who have been passing the summer in their East Terrace Avalon home, celebrated their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary with a beautifully appointed dinner party at the St. Catherine, Sunday evening the 30th ult., when places were marked for Mr. and Mrs. George A. Edgar of Santa Ana, Judge and Mrs. Charles D. Ballard, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond W. Whively and the hosts. The occasion was also the celebration of the fifty-third anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar. Although Senator Ballard is in his eighty-third year he is a familiar figure on the beach, swimming and diving delightful affair of the week the formal tea given by Alpha sorority at University of Cali- Southern Branch, yester- afternoon at the home of Mr. Mrs. J. L. Atkinson in Muirfield Road. The house was beautifully decorated and one hundred guests were bidden. In the receiving line were Miss Maxine Hopkins, Miss Vaughn Atkinson, Miss Peggy McCracken and Miss Elizabeth Keatinge, while the honor guests were Mrs. J. C. Manning, Mrs. A. M. Goodeneau, Mrs. Vera Thompson and Mrs. W. H. Wilkinson.

Dainty refreshments were served by the pledges of the sorority, who included Misses Grace Dale, Christine Bower, Margaret Dale, Jane Graham, May Valliente and Asthor Berkebile.

Among the many other affairs planned by Beta Delta chapter of Alpha Phi are a collegiate tea, a house-warming, a series of cosmopolitan luncheons and a dansant.

The chapter ushered in a series of interesting rush affairs by the gayest of studio dances, the affair taking place at the home of Miss Eleanor Bunnell in Magnolia avenue the past week-end, a Bohemian atmosphere prevailing. The hostesses, Misses Bunnell, June Boothe, Ruth Duryea, Marguerite Hummell, Maxine Hopkins and Peggy McCracken, wore artist's costumes and futurist cartoons adorned the walls of the rooms. A feature of the evening was the banjo music provided between dances by "Hatch" Graham, a guest. Further entertainment was afforded by Mme. Zacali, who painted psychic portraits depicting the subtleties of the souls of many of the guests. A Bohemian supper was served on the veranda and the guests sang "Memories," a popular Alpha Phi song, with banjo accompaniment.

Engagement Announced

Of much interest to local society is the announcement made in Chicago several days ago of the engagement of Miss Mildred Farrar of Seattle, formerly of Los Angeles, to George J. Dunbaugh Jr., of Chicago, who carried off high honors in his class at Yale in 1917. The engagement is the culmination of a romance which began last winter when Miss Farrar was visiting in the Windy City as a house guest of the Potter Smiths at their home in Briar Place. The wedding is scheduled to take place on the 7th inst. at the Farrar residence and after a wedding trip Mr. Dunbaugh will take his bride to Chicago to make their home.

Birthdays Celebrated

One of the enjoyable affairs of the past week was the dinner party with which Mr. and Mrs. Will Stephens of 2136 Fifth avenue entertained Tuesday evening at the Wilshire Country Club, the table being massed with roses and ferns. The affair was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Graham St. Clair and the occasion also celebrated the birthday anniversaries of Mrs. Stephens nd Mrs. St. Clair. Those included were Mrs. Smutler, mother of Mrs. St. Clair, Mrs. Anna Reithel, Mr. and Mrs. James Gee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Stephens and Mr. Robertson. Following the dinner the guests motored to the Stephens home, where Mrs. Stephens gave a delightful program of vocal solos and at 11 o'clock the huge birthday cake with many lighted tapers was a most delightful surprise feature.

Luncheon Party

Mrs. Irving Keller Howeth (Elizabeth Speicher) entertained with a luncheon Wednesday afternoon at the Pollyanna Tea Rooms in honor of Miss Avonelle Kribbs, whose engagement to Chester Howlett was announced recently. Among the guests were Miss Ruby Vennum, Miss Evelyn Kerner, Mrs. Lottie Gregory, Mrs. Owen Savacool, Mrs. Edward Lawton, Mrs. Dewey Callahan, Mrs. Leo Callahan, Mrs. William Cerini, Mrs. Melvin Anderson, Mrs. Edmund Richardson, Mrs. Walter Wist, Miss Helen Redpath, Miss Maude Speicher, Miss Krebbs and Mrs. Irving Howeth. The table decorations were charmingly carried out in a color scheme of pink and green, a corsage bouquet marking the place of the honor guest.

For Bride-elect

Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Brown of 125 Wavecrest avenue, Venice, entertained Thursday evening at the Los Angeles Athletic Club in honor of Mrs. Mabel D. Greer and Horace Horton Mullin, whose wedding will be one of the events of the next fortnight.

Buffet Supper Dance

Delta Sigma Gamma, a social sorority made up of Hollywood debutantes, entertained with a buffet supper-dance at the Encino Country Club, Wednesday evening. Those included were Dr. and Mrs. Earl Pound, Misses Adelaide Negus, Mary Jane Harger, Eleanor Barber, Louise Trekell, Beatrice Yerke, Dorothy Negus and Edwin Corbin, Dale Armstrong, Everett Haraszathy, Robert Carr, Jack Noble and Ralph Sherman.

Back from Tour

Mrs. A. L. Swobodi-Meade after four months travel through the East and Europe returned home several days ago. Mrs. Meade motored across the continent en route east, stopping for visits at the Grand Canyon and Chicago and later was for some weeks in Canada visiting with friends.

Engagement Told

Mrs. E. A. Crouchley of North Orange Grove avenue, Hollywood, announced the approaching wedding of her daughter, Miss Carilyn L. Keatinge and Henry R. Freeman of South Pasadena yesterday afternoon, the delightful affair being in the nature of a bridge tea. The announcement was cleverly made during the serving of refreshments. Each guest was served a little flower pot filled with ice cream out of which grew a tiny sweetheart rose attached to which was a small card bearing the initials of the betrothed and the date "October 3, 1925." Guests included Mrs. William B. Keatinge (Lucille Kertson,) Mrs. George L. Howes, Mrs. J. H. Freeman, Mrs. R. H. Freeman, Mrs. S. H. Freeman, Miss Margaret Weir, Miss Irene Weir, Miss Mildred Christie, Miss Mildred Sage, Miss Alisa Saunders, Miss Jeanne McWilliams and Miss Elizabeth Keatinge, sister of the bride-elect, who assisted in receiving.

Alpha Gamma Delta

One of the most attractive affairs of the week in college circles was the formal tea given by Delta Epsilon chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority of University of California, Southern Branch, in honor of its rushees, the affair being given at the home of Miss Eleanor Lloyd and Miss Elizabeth Lloyd in South Hobart Boulevard. The afternoon was in charge of Miss Dorothy Capps, assisted by Miss Margaret Brinkerhoff, Miss Della Martin, Mrs. Orville Tourr and Mrs. George L. Eastman, patronesses of the sorority, and Miss Janet Watson, and Miss Peggy O'Neil. More than 100 guests were bidden. Other members of the sorority are Miss Eleanor Barber, Miss Mary Bernis Buchanan, Miss Marion Blair, Miss Pauline Brown, Miss Elizabeth Brinkerhoff, Miss Louise Goodsox, Miss Ruth Hartley, Miss Ruby Hammer, Miss Dorothy Hunter, Miss Clara Koth, Miss Janice Martin, Miss June Shoden, Miss Pauline Talbot, Miss Betty Waters, and the pledges Miss Louise Taylor and Miss Geraldine MacCloskey.

For Sister

Honoring their sister, Miss Margaret Virginia Stellar, whose marriage to Rev. Clarence H. Parlour of Philadelphia will be one of the events of the 12th inst., Mrs. C. P. Harper and Miss Josephine Stellar entertained Thursday afternoon at the home of the former with a tea, the guests making guest towels for the dower chest of the honoree during the afternoon. Those included were Mrs. Otis Castle, Miss Emily Fry, Miss Mildred Duncan, Mrs. Thompson Webb, Mrs. Fickett, Mrs. Gus Harper, Mrs. E. A. Stellar, Mrs. Samuel Hayward, Mrs. Gerald Hills, Miss M. Mundt, Mrs. Kenyon and Mrs. Jack Struthers. The wedding will take place in All Saints' Church, Pasadena, and after a honeymoon trip, Mr. Parlour will take his bride east to make their home in the Quaker City, where he is in charge of an Episcopal church.

Brilliant Affairs

The presence of Richard Hageman, distinguished opera conductor, and Mrs. Hageman has resulted in much social activity, many affairs being given in their honor. Among the founders of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association, who will be present at the five performances beginning the 29th inst., are Mmes. Frank Gates Allen, A. C. Bilicke, James Stuart Blackton Egbert, J. Benedict, Norman Bridge, Cecil De Mille, P. A. English, Francis S. Montgomery, Fred Pennington Newport, Ella Brooks Solano, R. D. Shepherd, Oscar A. Pope-Perry

Announcement is made of the marriage Wednesday evening of Mrs. Adelaide Pope to William Perry, the ceremony being read at the home of the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson, 148 Roselawn Place, Rev. B. F. Boller officiating. Mrs. Freeman High, a niece of the bride, played the wedding marches while Mr. High sang several solos and Warren Garwick rendered a violin solo. Mr. and Mrs. Ross H. Wallis assisted as matron of honor and best man. The bride wore a gown of white crepe satin embroidered with satin beads and carried an arm bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley, the matron of honor wearing white satin and a corsage of rosebuds and lilies of the valley. Yellow and green were combined in the house decorations with myriads of lighted-tapers.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Perry will make their home here.

Garden Tea

Alpha Phi Gamma Sorority at University of California, Southern Branch, opened its rush season last Sunday with a charmingly appointed garden tea given at the home of Mrs. A. J. Koll, 118 South Windsor Boulevard. Stringed instruments furnished the music for the afternoon, tea being served in the summer house. Fifty guests responded to invitations.

Rushees Party

Theta Xi chapter of Delta Delta Delta Sorority of University of Southern California entertained its rushees at a delightful party yesterday afternoon in the Woman's Athletic clubhouse, the affair being in the nature of a luncheon, swimming and bridge party. This is one of the numerous rushing affairs planned by this sorority. Alumnae and active members were hostesses of the afternoon among them being Edith Taham, Eunice Bird, Vera Caldwell, Ethel Oliver, Ira Marston, Edith Kinsey, Mabel Smith, Gene Long, Lucy Chase, Eileen Brown and Eleanor Kemp also pledges Dorothy Hueston and Nary Crawford. Among the alumnae were Ruth Seaver, Castella Cardell and Lalla Selbia.

Home Wedding

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Hotchkiss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Hotchkiss of San Vincente Boulevard, Santa Monica, to Paul Leroy Bruington, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Bruington of Pomona, August 25, was one of the prettily appointed events of recent date, Rev. Frederick W. Hatch of the seaside city officiating. The decorations were palms, ferns and flowers. An altar was improvised and the bridal party stood beneath a floral wedding bell. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridal gown was of white satin and lace embroidered in pearls and a long tulle veil held in place by orange blossoms. She carried a shower of roses and lilies of the valley and a lace handkerchief which her mother carried at her own wedding. Miss Gladys Snell of Hollywood sang preceding the ceremony, accompanied by Miss Doris McClellan. Miss Lucile Hotchkiss was maid of honor in robins-egg blue with silver lace and carried pink roses and sweet peas. Miss Sara Leitner of Sheridan, Wyo., in pink, carrying pink dahlias, Miss Ida Leitner in yellow, carrying yellow dahlias, and Miss Vera Hotchkiss in orchid, carrying orchid-tone dahlias, and Miss Stella Goodman in green, carrying burnt orange dahlias, were the bridesmaids. Little Virginia Billhart in peach-colored chiffon was the dainty flower girl. George Brown of Harvard University who came West for the wedding, was best man. Frank and Paul Hotchkiss, brothers of the bride, Newton Hotchkiss, a cousin, and Donald Bruington, brother of the bridegroom, were the ushers. After the ceremony a reception was held at which refreshments were served by Sigma Omicron Sorority sisters of the bride. Mr. Bruington was graduated from University of Redlands and afterward attended University of Southern California, being graduated last spring. Following a two weeks' wedding trip in the north Mr. and Mrs. Bruington will make their home here.

PARTY HONORS BRIDE-ELECT

Chicago Girl Will Wed Tuesday

Miss Beatrice Smith

ONE of the attractive brides-elect of the month is Miss Beatrice Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Smith of Chicago, who will be married to Joseph Goldberg Tuesday evening at the Biltmore.

She was graduated from Milwaukee-Donor College and has been much entertained during her visit here. Recently the four sisters of Mr. Goldberg, Mrs. H. L. Zuckerman, Mrs. L. S. Offer, Mrs. Mark P. Cane and Mrs. Bert Gotleib, entertained with a luncheon party at the Miramar Hotel, Santa Monica, honoring Miss Smith, seventy-five guests being bidden.

Kelly-Trick

The wedding of Miss Gladys Kelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Sweet and Fred W. Trick, son of Mrs. Mary Trick of West Sixty-sixth street, was one of the events of recent date taking place in the gardens of the family home in Alhambra, August 27. Rev. J. Weiland officiated. The altar was massed with roses, ferns and palms and suspended above was a hugh floral wedding bell. The bride wore a gown of pale pink silk with rhinestore trimmings and carried pale pink roses delphinium and ferns. Her veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. Mrs. Lorine M. Dean assisted her sister as matron of honor in poudre blue with a shower of yellow dahilas. Little Catherine MacGee in yellow organdie, carrying yellow roses, was flower girl. Arthur Fowler was best man. Miss Rachel Polson played the wedding music. Mr. and Mrs. Trick left for a wedding trip to San Diego and will make their home here after their return.

Church Ceremony

Sunday afternoon, August 30, Miss Margaret MacKenzie of 1304 Curzon avenue, Hollywood, became the bride of Kenneth Lyall Scott, the ceremony taking place in St. Thomas's Church at 2 o'clock, Rev. Donald MacKenzie, father of the bride officiated. The church was decorated with white flowers against a background of ferns and palms. Miss Myrtle Babbitt and Miss Louise Knight in helitrope organdie and carrying bouquets of pink asters, were bridesmaids, while the maid of honor, Miss Dorotha MacKenzie, sister of the bride, in apricot-colored chiffon, carried flowers to correspond. The bride wore a white georgette crepe frock with silver ornaments, the veil held in place by orange blossoms and she carried a shower of rosebuds and ferns. She was given in marriage by her godfather, J. O. Geberding. Frederick Yostermine was best man, and Robert Dickinson, Fred Dickinson and Armine MacKenzie, brother of the bride, were ushers. Mr. and Mrs. Scott will be at home after October 1, at 4317 Lockwood street, Hollywood.

At Church of the Angels

In the beautifully decorated church of the Angels, Garvanza Way, the marriage ceremony uniting Miss Agnes M. Bumpus, daughter of U. G. Bumpus of Pasadena, and Fred N. Walters of Chino, was read by Rev. Harry Parke, August 29. Huge baskets of long-stemmed tulip dahlias in pastel shades were arranged at each end of the chancel steps while the altar was adorned with flowers and numerous cathedral candles were lighted. Preceding the ceremony Miss Barbara Hebert sang several numbers, while Edward Tompkins played the wedding marches. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white chiffon gown beaded in pearls and trimmed with lace embroidered in lily of the valley pattern, while the veil of tulle was held in place by orange blossoms and pearls and she carried orchids, lilies of the valley and rosebuds. Mrs. Francis Walter was matron of honor in a frock of orchid crepe de chine with picture hat and carried Cecil Bruner buds. Miss Margaret Perry, maid of honor, wore lavender crepe de chine and Miss Eloise Kendall, bridesmaid, wore green crepe de chine. Picture hats completed these costumes and they carried roses and sweet peas in the pastel shades. Evelyn Walters, sister of the bridegroom, in lavender georgette over apricot satin, was flower girl. Calvin Delphy of Chino was best man, the ushers being John A. Perry, of Chino, and Russell A. Walters, brother of the bridegroom. After their return from a wedding trip October 1, Mr. and Mrs. Walters will be at home at 1785 Beverly Drive, Altadena.

Harris-Snow

The wedding of Miss June Harris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Harris of Bonnie Brae, to Bertram Snow of Santa Monica, took place Thursday evening in the Church of the Messiah. Dr. Peck of Santa Monica performed the ceremony and the bride was given away by her father. The bride wore a gown of white beaded georgette and a veil with a lace coronet and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, roses and orchids. Miss Jessica Harris, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor, gowned in peach chiffon and carrying yellow roses. Mrs. David Pollard, formerly Margaret Heeb, was the matron of honor and wore a gown of orchid chiffon. Miss Frances Cattell and Mrs. Arthur Perkins, the attendants, wore gowns of green and blue chiffon, respectively. The matron of honor and the attendants carried shower bouquets of Irish Elegance roses. Arthur Perkins served as best man and the ushers were David Pollard, Vernon Gregg and Dr. John Wehrly.

Following the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents for the relatives and intimate friends. A color scheme of orange and yellow was used in the decoration of the home.

The bride attended University of Southern California and is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority, while Mr. Snow attended University of Southern California and also University of California. Mr. and Mrs. Snow will make their home in Santa Monica.

Church Wedding

The All Saints Church of Beverly Hills was the attractive setting, Wednesday evening, for the wedding of Miss Mildred Hitchcock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Hitchcock, 107 Wilton Drive, and Robert Watson Oliver, North Western avenue. Rev. A. Evans officiated and Mr. Hitchcock gave his daughter in marriage. Miss Edith Marie Hitchcock, was maid of honor and Miss Helen Hitchcock was the bridesmaid. Little Dorothy Oliver, niece of the bridegroom, was the flower girl. Fred S. Oliver served as best man and the ushers were Gail Vanderbraak and Laurence C. Hall, fraternity brothers of Mr. Oliver.

The bride was lovely in a colonial-style gown of flesh-colored chiffon with a fichu of princess lace, tight bodice and a bouffant skirt with a garland of pink roses and forget-me-nots, tied with a shadow bow of silver and veiled with chiffon. She wore a veil trimmed with princess lace and held in place with orange blossoms. Her old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley was completed with a lace frill and a shower of ribbons. The maid of honor was gowned in orchid chiffon, trimmed in silver and a hat of georgette in the same shade of orchid with a silver crown and faced in a deeper shade of velvet. The bridesmaid was gowned in apple-green chiffon, trimmed with French roses and forget-me-nots and a sash of green, hanging below the skirt. Her hat was of the same shade as her gown, faced in silver and trimmed with apple green velvet ribbon. Both carried old-fashoined bouquets of mixed flowers with paper frills and showers of orchid and green ribbons. The flower girl wore a frock of corn colored chiffon. Mrs. Hitchcock, mother of the bride, wore a georgette gown in the tea shade over pink and trimmed with pastel silk embroidery. Her hat of pink completed the costume.

Bridge Tea

Mrs. C. Partridge and Mrs. Harry Cardell, who are leaving shortly for an extended trip East, were honor guests at a bridge and tea with which Mrs. Cassie T. Smith entertained at her home, 816 Bronson avenue, Saturday afternoon. Asters and autumn leaves were used in profusion throughout the rooms of the house, roses being arranged in the dining room, every color being used. Mrs. Cardell won the prize at the bridge games. The other guests included Mrs. A. J. Dohle, Mrs. A. C. Kuchel, Mrs. Frederick Maynard, Mrs. Mary Schott and Mrs. Mulford Bates.

Several Affairs

Mrs. Robert Thomas Burge of Western avenue was the hostess at a swimming party recently at the Santa Monica Swimming Club, the honor guest being Mrs. W. W. Martin of Fort Worth, Tex., who is the house-guest of Mrs. Rufus C. Porter. Sixteen guests were bidden. Mr. and Mrs. Burge entertained Saturday evening, August 29, with a dinner party for twenty-four guests at their home, honoring Dr. C. C. Selecman, president of the University of Dallas, Tex. A Venetian motif was artistically carried out in the appointments and decorations of the dinner table.

Home Again

Mrs. W. T. Collins and her two attractive young daughters Miss Elizabeth Collins and Miss Margaret Collins, have returned to their home in Westlake avenue after an enjoyable sojourn at Catalina Island.

Church Wedding

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Marie Kramer, daughter of Mrs. Martha L. Kramer of Merced street, to Amos E. Landgraf, was solemnized in the Little Church of the Flowers, August 29, Rev. Philip Kemp of St. Marks officiating. Miss Evelyn Cluett assisted as maid of honor and Mrs. Wayne Walker and Miss Ruth Kramer were the other attendants, wearing orchid, apricot and blue georgette, respectively. Little Dorothy Marie Shepp, in white organdie carrying flower petals, was flower girl and Betty Camber bore the ring. Irvin Tanneyhill served as best man and Wayne Walker and Richard Friend were ushers. Following an automobile honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Landgraf will be at home at 3418 Merced street. The bridal gown was of white georgette beaded in silver and rhinestone and the bridal bouquet was of white roses showered by sweet peas.

Bridge Luncheon

Mrs. Earl Reynolds Stone of La Salle avenue, entertained with a bridge luncheon at the Mary Louise Tuesday afternoon honoring Mrs. John William Maltman who has just returned from a four months' tour of Europe. During the luncheon there was music by the J. Kohne Hicks Hawaiian orchestra.

Dinner Guests

With the cool air of early fall, Club Casa Del Mar is the setting for many delightful dancing parties following dinner on the broad verandas. Among the recent hosts are Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Ray of South Gramercy Place, who had as their guests, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Williams, Dr. and Mrs. H. B. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Routt, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Harding and Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Criley.

Mrs. W. S. Heinickle of Santa Monica entertained with luncheon and bridge at the Seaside Club, her guests including Mrs. Robert A. Cury, Mrs. Joseph Saylin, Mrs. F. H. Boettcher, Mrs. L. S. Wall, Mrs. Lee E. Bigeler, Mrs. J. C. White and Mrs. Earle Miller.

En Tour

Mrs. H. M. Nickerson and daughter, Miss Jean, of the Hotel Maryland, who have been in Nova Scotia for several weeks, left August 29, sailing from Yartmouth to Boston. They will pass a few days at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and also make a short visit to Washington, D. C., before leaving for Grinnell, Iowa, where they will visit relatives. While en route to Iowa, they will be met in Chicago late this week by Mr. Nickerson, and will return to Pasadena in time for the opening of school.

Church Ceremony

One of the beautifully appointed weddings of last month was that of Miss Beatrice Duffield, formerly of Whittier, who became the bride of Ernest R. Haines of San Francisco, the ceremony being read August 25 in Trinity Episcopal Church. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Harry F. Allen, wore a becoming gown of white chiffon over crepe satin, the tulle veil held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried an arm shower of bride's roses, white sweet peas and shower of maidenhair ferns. Mrs. Hazel V. Myer of Whittier assisted as matron of honor, while Miss Verna Beam of the same city and Miss Martha Laskey of Los Angeles were the bridesmaids. Tom Meisicks served Mr. Haines as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Haines motored to San Francisco, their future home, from where they will sail for a honeymon in Honolulu.

Attractive Affair

One of the attractive affairs of recent date was the bridge tea given by Miss Mary Joyce and Miss Frances Joyce, daughters of Mrs. W. H. Joyce, of 866 Arroyo Drive, Pasadena, the decorations being especially charming in autumn colors. Those present included Miss Margaret Truax, Miss Elizabeth Huntington, Miss Polly Holbert, Miss Susan Valentine, Mrs. Stephens Kerckhoff, Miss Mary Stimson, Miss Gertrude Macy, Miss Louise Macy, Miss Phoebe Ann Bailey, Miss Helen Dakin and the hostesses.

Visiting Father

Mrs. Arthur L. Hawes (Bertha Peyton) of Spokane, is visiting in Los Angeles, the guest of her father, Valentine Peyton, at his home, 857 South Westlake avenue.

Visiting Here

Dr. Lottie Dwight Graham of Davenport, Iowa, who has been visiting her friend, Mrs. Xavier Geiger of 1617 South New Hampshire street, for the past month, has left to visit her son and many friends in San Francisco. Dr. Graham formerly made her home in Oakland, and is planning to leave for the East in a few months to join a party of friends for a trip around the world.

Quiet Wedding

One of the attractive affairs of yesterday afternoon was the luncheon at the Ambassador given by Miss Jane T. Wyatt in honor of Dr. Nona Wyatt. The table decorations included a central basket of asters of variegated shades of lavender and rose. Streamers of tulle in the same tones extended from the centerpiece to the individual nut cups, which had the artificial aster flowers in rose and lavender; the places were marked by tiny Kewpie doll brides. A surprise feature of the afternoon was the announcement of the wedding of the honoree and Dr. Roy Gilbert, which immediately followed the luncheon at 5 o'clock in the Little Church of the Flowers, Glendale. Dr. Nona Wyatt was graduated from Ann Arbor, where Dr. Gilbert is an alumnus. They will spend their wedding trip in San Diego and afterward make their home in Long Beach. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. D. Henry Wyatt of Santa Paula, and her wedding gown was of rose-toned velvet with hat of blond velvet, trimmed with hand-made flowers in rose and orchid, her slippers and hose being in the blonde tones. She carried roses in the

Mrs. S. K. Lindley is entertaining her daughter, Mrs. Gustav Knecht, and two children, at her apartments in the Gaylord. Mrs. Knecht, with her children, has just returned from an European trip that extended over several months.

Out of Town

Pasadena

One of the most beautiful of recent weddings in Pasadena was that of Miss Susan Valentine, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Valentine of 1421 Wilson avenue, and Otis Buckingham, son of Henry Winthrop Buckingham of 690 Prospect Boulevard, which took place last Thursday afternoon in the gardens of the home of the bride's parents. Rev. John Atwill, rector of the Church of Our Savior, read the service at 5:30 o'clock. The bride's sister, Mrs. William Stewart, Jr., was matron of honor, and the bridal attendants were Miss Florence McGarry, Miss Margaret Brackenridge, Miss Susanna Bryant, Miss Gertrude Macy, Miss Katherine Ware and Mrs. Warner Bliss (Agnes Eisenmeyer.) Winthrop Buckingham served his brother as best man, and the ushers were Howard Cunningham, Taber Mahler, William Hale, William McCay and William Valentine, Jr. Mr. Valentine gave his daughter in marriage.

A very lovely wedding was that of Miss Katherine Orton, adopted daughter of Miss Anna B. Orton, and Alexander Houston Dougall, Jr., son of Mrs. A. B. Dougall of 620 South Los Robles avenue. The ceremony took place Friday afternoon, August 29 at 5:30 o'clock in the secluded gardens of Miss Orton's home on South Euclid avenue, Rev. James Leishmann officiating. Attending the bride were Mrs. Maynard Reynolds of San Pedro as matron of honor, and Miss Anne Redden as bridesmaid. Donald McCoy was best man and William Inloes usher. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served, and the sixty guests present offered their congratulations and best wishes to the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Dougall will be at home at the Mira Flores, on South Euclid avenue, following their honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Bradley of Chicago and Pasadena, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Florence Shumway Bradley, to Carlos M. Fetterolf, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fetterolf of Montclair, N. J. The wedding will take place some time in October.

Miss Katherine West, daughter of William Frederick West of South Pasadena, and Dr. Kenneth F. Smiley of Los Angeles were united in marriage the afternoon of August 26 at the Church of Our Savior in San Gabriel. After the 15th inst., Dr. and Mrs. Smiley will be at home, 1639 Huntington Drive, South Pasadena.

Mrs. W. S. Samuel of 556 Prospect Boulevard, left recently for the East where she will visit friends in Cincinnati and Washington, D. C., after which she will sail from New York for Europe to join Miss Eleanor Bissel and Miss Flora Harper.

South Pasadena

Another charming bride of the season was Miss Evelyn Yates, the daughter of Mrs. Franklin Yates of Fremont avenue, who was married Saturday evening to Robert Burns Soldini of Los Angeles. The ceremony took place at the Yates home in the presence of about seventy-five relatives and friends. The service was read by Dr. S. G. Livingstone of Calvary Presbyterian Church. The bride was unattended. J. A. Soldini was his brother's best man. Miss Franklina Yates, Miss Dorothy Bigge, Miss Lucile McDavitt and Miss Wil Antoinette Bush gave a program of appropriate music during the evening. After an auto tour of points of interest in Southern California Mr. and Mrs. Soldini will make their home in Los Angeles.

Tuesday evening Miss Gerlaine Williams, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Williams of Walnut Park, became the bride of F. Maynard Jacobs, son of Mrs. D. W. McMillan of this city. The Rev. Joshua Gravitt of Denver read the service in the presence of a number of friends and relatives gathered in the Little Church of the Flowers at Glendale. Miss Gladys Williams attended the bride as maid of honor, and her other assistants were Miss Veva Ottsch and Miss Virginia Harte. Miller Towman acted as best man and the ushers were Roger Williams and Henry McCann.

Miss Lorayn Krug was the hostess Saturday at a pretty luncheon in celebration of the birthday of her sister, Miss Hollys Krug. Other guests were Miss Mary Louise Boos, Miss Jean Lichety, Miss Jane Dunbar, Miss Betty Philfrick, Miss Shirley Freedman, Miss Mary Lord and Miss Mary Ann Cotton.

With the green of garden shrubs and trees and gay summer flowers as a background Thursday afternoon Miss Susan Valentine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Valentine of Wilson avenue, became the bride of Otis Buckingham, son of Henry Winthrop Buckingham of Prospect Boulevard, Pasadena. The Valentine garden, which is one of the most attractive ones in South Pasadena, accommodated a large number of relatives and friends who witnessed the ceremony. The Rev. John Atwill, rector of the Church of Our Savior, read the service and the bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride's sister, Mrs. William Lyman Stewart, Jr., acted as maton of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Florence McGarry, Miss Margaret Brackenridge, Miss Susanna Bryant, Miss Gertrude Macy, Miss Katherine Ware and Mrs. Warner Bliss. Winthrop Buckingham was his brother's best man, while Taber Mahler, Howard Cunningham, William Hale, William McCay and William Valentine, Jr., acted as ushers.

Miss Rebecca DeHaven Patterson, daughter of Mrs. George F. Patterson of Oak street, whose engagement was recently announced, has chosen September 9 as the date of her marriage to Adrian Cornell Stanton of Avalon. The ceremony will take place in St. James's Episcopal Church and the rector, the Rev. C. Rankin Barnes, will read the service. Music will be by the church organist, Edwin E. Tarbox, and the full choir. Following the service at the church there will be a reception at the home of Miss Patterson's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Stringefellow of Laurel street.

Monrovia

Wednesday's social calendar was marked by another of the charming bridge luncheons which Mmes. C. T. Renaker and J. Allen Munro have been extending as courtesies to Mrs. Frederick Gibson, the former's sister. Luncheon was served under the huge live-oaks at the Renaker home in Norumbega Heights and followed by an afternoon at bridge. Covers were laid for twenty guests.

Another of the round-robin parties, which have proved so popular this summer with members of the Woman's Club, was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Merle Mosher, who was a joint hostess with Mrs. Scott Gleeten. At 1 o'clock luncheon was followed by an afternoon of bridge, those bidden being Mmes. H. B. Woolston, Don Walters, E. E. Edwards, Park Densmore, A. L. McCament, Arthur Williams, C. W. Higgins and A. R. Clifton.

Mrs. J. M. Bashor and Miss Virginia Perry were hostesses Wednesday afternoon at another of the weekly informal open-house teas at the Woman's clubhouse. Miss Perry presided over three tables of bridge, having as her guests Mmes. Harry Andrews, C. H. Sarwine, E. B. Radabaugh, A. E. Rutledge, Clarence White, O. O. Force, Frank Jones, E. S. Armstrong, James Clark, C. C. Bowlus, and Miss Ida Louderbaugh. Mrs. Bashor was hostess to two tables at brdige, bidding Mmes. E. L. Brewer, Leslie Soderberg, A. E. Harris, E. E. Edwards, Merle Mosher, M. L. Hutchinson and J. R. Mildren.

Presiding over one of the delightfully informal courtesies of the young set Tuesday evening, Miss Ione Rayburn entertained the members of her bridge club with Mrs. Leonard Schultheis as a special guest. The club members were Misses Virginia Bronson, Zoe Gibbs, Mary Jane Bronson, Mildred Marshall, Ellavera Nelson, Marian Harvey, Louise Hotchkiss and Mrs. Kelsey Hall.

The latest of numerous postnuptial courtesies extended to Mrs. Thomas McGaff and Mrs. George Moore, popular recent brides of the Monrovia younger group, was given Thursday evening at the South Pasadena home of Miss Ruth Sexton. The guests bidden were Mrs. Alys Maxfield of Pasadena; Mmes. Alvin Vollmer, Martha Paulsen, Phil Bortells and Misses Mildred Marshal, Ethel Crall and Margaret Broxon of Monrovia, and Mrs. Warren Ross of Los Angeles.

The second in a series of delightful affairs at the Duarte ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Northup was an informal dinner party Thursday evening to which ten intimate friends were invited. The guests were Messrs. and Mmes. C. F. Moore, S. E. Salisbury, A. E. Rutledge, H. B. Woolston and Mmes. E. B. Radabaugh and Ludie Cross.

Miss Ruth Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Butler, in whose honor several social functions have been planned recently, will leave next Tuesday for the East where she will enter Columbia University and prepare for her Master's Degree. Miss Butler has spent her time while in Eagle Rock at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Fisk.

Miss Harriet Kenyon and her mother, Mrs. Kenyon, from San Diego, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Penberthy, 2146 Ridgeway avenue. Mrs. Kenyon is the mother of Mrs. Penberthy and expects to make her home in Eagle Rock.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Mohr have entertained a succession of guests this summer in their charming home in La Roda avenue, none, however, in whom they take keener delight than their present house-guest, Preston MacKinney, their grandson, who will return to his home in San Francisco next week to enter school. Several events have been planned in his honor at the Edgewater Club in Santa Monica.

The breakfast given recently by the Women's Twentieth Century Club proved such a delightful social success that another event has been planned for the 22nd inst. The setting this time will be the charming Oakmont Country Club and the entertainment, luncheon and cards. The luncheon may prove to be of minor importance, however, as a fashion show is to be conducted during the luncheon hour. The committee in charge has promised that gowns for the elderly woman and the young miss in school are to be featured as well as the usual fashions displayed for the matron and the younger woman. Mrs. R. L. McNitt, president of the club, Mrs. J. C. Clausen and Mrs. Roy Parkinson are perfecting plans for the event.

BERKELEY MISS HONOR GUEST

Will Have Outing at La Jolla

Miss Catherine Sedgwick

MISS CATHERINE SEDGWICK of Berkeley, who has been the incentive for a round of delightful affairs during her visit here, will be the honor guest this next week of Mrs. Nichols Milbank Jr., at her home in Wilshire Place and later she will accompany Miss Jeanette Toberman on an outing to La Jolla, where they will visit at the summer home of Miss Augusta Parker of San Diego.

Miss Sedgwick will return later in the fall to Berkeley to assist in the opening of the new Alpha Chi Omega sorority house.

Ocean Park

A brilliant social function of the Order of the Eastern Star at which Mrs. Willard Conklin of Ashland avenue was hostess followed the regular meeting and initiation of candidates on the occasion of "officers' advance night" for the chapter. Mrs. Conklin, associate member of the Ocean Park Chapter, was hostess to some 300 members from other chapters, the thirty-two visiting associate matrons being the guests of honor of the evening. The banquet room was artistically decorated in asters. A motif of rose pink was employed in the decorations and effectively carried out by the flowers and hand-painted place cards marking the places for the officers and the guests and echoed in the delicious refreshments served. Mrs. Emma D. Wheeler, worthy matron of the local chapter, was chairman of the arrangements.

The Ocean Park Catholic Church was the setting used for a pretty wedding recently when Miss Mary Santich of Venice became the bride of Mr. Joseph Maslac of Ocean Park. After a wedding trip to Catalina and San Diego, Mr. and Mrs. Maslac will make their home at 828 Milwood avenue. The happy couple are well known in the bay district, Mr. Maslac being a well-known cafe man, and have many friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Mott of Ashland avenue, accompanied by their house guest, Mrs. Maud Koster of Shanghai, China, are spending several weeks at Camp Baldy, where they are entertaining for Mrs. Koster. Camp Baldy is a favorite spot with the Motts and they yearly spend much of their vacation there.

Long Beach

Entertaining with a children's party without the children was the unique pleasure planned for Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ross upon their return from their around the world trip, by Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Kee, who opened their lovely home in Los Cerritos, Monday evening to a coterie of friends dressed in kiddie klothes. Dancing out-of-doors featured the entertainment, though there were games and speech-making, music and readings given. Refreshments of punch and wafers were topped off with lollypops. Mrs. H. F. Burmester, Miss Marjorie King, Messers Mangum and Rudolph Huber were awarded prizes for the most intriguing costumes. There were more than 200 persons there to welcome home the world travelers and to renew their youth.

A touch of fairyland was given the bridge luncheon Friday, not only by the great variety of flowers but by the many bright winged butterflies whirh hovered over them and flitted about the rooms, in the home of Mrs. Walter R. Fleming, 3830 East Second street, opened to a long list of guests. To complete the fairy picture, the nut cups were in orange, yellow, pink and blue rosebuds and the favors were jewel butterflies. Mrs. Ira Thurman captured the first prize, Mrs. Ray R. Clark the second and Mrs. Emma Parker the consolation in the games.

Carrying out the lavender and gold motif in decorations and menu, Mrs. Glenn Coolidge and Miss Ruth Daugherty were gracious hostesses Thursday afternoon at a bridge tea given in the home of the latter, 25 Cherry avenue. First, second and third prizes were won by Mrs. H. C. Griswold, Mrs. Harry Gillen and Miss Eleanor Bridge at the ten tables played.

Choosing orchids and yellow in her decorations, Mrs. J. H. Rosenberg entertained Wednesday afternoon with a bridge luncheon in her home, 2054 Appleton street. Nut cups, place and tally cards and the gorgeous bowl of fall blossoms for the table's center were in the chosen colors. Mmes. Benjamin Mikels, Stevens and J. Mercy won first, second and third places at the card tables, where Mrs. T. C. Scroggs of Hollywood received the consolation prize.

Azusa

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Baptist parsonage last Wednesday evening when Rev. H. Robert Smith united in marriage Miss Marion Weld of North Adams, Mass., and William Goedert of this city. Miss Weld arrived on the Union Pacific at Pomona at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, where she was met by Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Morden and Mr. Goedert, who took her to the Morden home on North Azusa avenue. Mrs. Morden entertained with a 6 o'clock dinner that evening in their honor. At 8 o'clock the bridal party consisting of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Morden, Miss Lydia Haga and Harold Jester, went to the home of Rev. Smith, where the ceremony was performed. After which Mr. and Mrs. Goedert left on a short honeymoon trip to various southern points. They will be at home on their return in their new home in San Gabriel Canyon which Mr. Goedert has recently completed.

Mrs. C. C. Palmer entertained with a mite box party for the King's Herald at her home Friday afternoon. A splendid program was furnished by the children, in the presence of fifteen mothers. Thirty-five members and their mothers were in attendance. At the close of the afternoon's entertainment, Mrs. Palmer served the guests with dainty refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Jones and daughters Irene and Winefred enjoyed a most pleasant trip to Catalina Thursday.

East Whittier

The Hacienda Country Club of East Whittier was the scene of a pretty dinner party on Wednesday evening, when Mrs. E. M. Benson of Sunset Drive entertained a number of friends. Guests at the pleasant affair included Mrs. Walter Becker of Los Gatos, Cal., Capt. Kankershire of Visalia, Mrs. Evans Holbrook of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Kennedy. Following the dinner, the evening was spent at the Benson home. The entire party with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy were former students in the University of Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Carson Albright of East Whittier entertained on Friday evening at an informal reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Kirkwood, whose wedding was a recent social event. Mrs. Kirkwood was formerly Isabel Aiken. Mr. Kirkwood left Monday for Vancouver, where he will sail for Sumatra, Borneo, East Indies, under a five-year contract for the Shell Oil Company. Mrs. Kirkwood will follow in about six months. The evening was spent in dancing and cards. Pink dahlias were used as decorations. Among those at the pleasant affair were Mr. and Mrs. William Lester, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Willar Moss, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mendenhall, Mr. and Mrs. Carson Albright, the hosts, and the Misses Eva Aiken, Miriam Johnson, Virginia Crawford, Grace Thompson, Azalee Stockton, Dorothy Davis, Mildred Dorland and the Messrs. Oakley Morris, Arthur Johnson, John Smith, Russell Murton, William Smith and Sam McMurray.

Whittier

Miss Doris Elsbeth Landreth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Landreth of Whittier, became the bride of Walter J. B. Jessup on Saturday evening at the Whittier Baptist Church, the Rev. E. M. Hullett officiating. The maid of honor was Miss Ethel Landreth, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids were Miss Lucy Clements and Miss Esther Usury. Paul Davidson of Pasadena served the groom as best man and the ushers were Alvin Whitcomb, cousin of the groom, and Allen Landreth, brother of the bride. Mrs. Jack Arnould, cousin of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly," preceding the ceremony, accompanied by Mrs. Roy K. Cole. The church was beautifully decorated with asters in white, lavender and pink shades. The decorations were in charge of Mrs. Arthur Blakebore, Mrs. H. S. Cadwell and Miss Esther Usury. The bride and groom were both graduated from Whittier College with the class of 1924. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Jessup of Denair, Cal. A honeymoon will be enjoyed in the northern part of the State, after which the young people will make their home in Holtville, where Mr. Jessup is an instructor in the schools.

Mrs. Arthur A. Samson's beautiful garden home at 5116 Montezuma street, Los Angeles, formed the setting of a charming wedding Thursday afternoon when Miss Mary E. McClellan of Brown's Valley, Ind., became the bride of Bruce H. Elliott of Whittier, the Rev. Ernest E. Day, pastor of the Whittier Plymouth Congregational Church, officiating. Little Miss Mary McClellan of Long Beach, was the ring bearer, and little Peggy Lou James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. James of Long Beach, attended her. About forty guests were present at the wedding. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest S. McClellan of Browns Valley, Ind. The groom is a son of Mrs. Margaret E. Elliott of Via Dela Palma, Whittier.

Venice

One of the mose delightful affairs of recent date was the announcement luncheon given by Mrs. A. C. Burk at her residence on Sixth avenue, honoring her daughter, Miss Marie, whose engagement to Harold Myers of Oxnard, Cal., was announced at the time. The wedding will take place early in November. A color scheme of red carried out by beautiful red roses and other handsome blooms was used in decorating the home. A gorgeous centerpiece of red roses adorned the luncheon table. Clever place cards in the form of tiny sheets of music with the title, "Here Comes the Bride," and carrying the prospective bride's and groom's names marked the place of each guest. Favors at the places were tiny violin cases. The guests included Mmes. Ada Nelson, Veva Conklin, Thalia Harstein, Peggy Swall, Lila Hart, Lucile Entirken, Mildred Reed, Miss Lena Hesse and Miss Olga Burk.

Dr. and Mrs. Raphael S. Olsen of Wasatch avenue, Mar Vista, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Pawling of 307 Fourteenth street, Santa Monica, have just returned from a delightful motor vacation of two weeks through California, Oregon and Washington. The party drove as far north as Seattle, where they took the boat for Victoria, spending some time in the Canadian city.

Santa Monica

The home of Mrs. Briggs Brown on Euclid avenue was the scene recently of a delightful bridge tea, when Mrs. Brown was hostess to a group of friends at a pleasant afternoon. The home was gay with fragrant garden flowers. There were three tables of bridge. Prizes were won by Mrs. Myron J. Ellis of Eleventh street and Mrs. A. L. Stephens of Los Angeles.

One of the prettiest home weddings of the summer season was solemnized yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Connell, Sr., of Fifth street, when their daughter, Miss Nancy, was united in marriage to William Shoemaker at 4 p.m. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shoemaker of Eleventh street. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Duff Connell, and the groom by his brother, Victor Shoemaker. The bride was married in her going-away gown, a handsome creation of cracklehead blue satin, and a gray velvet hat and gray satin coat, in which she looked very charming. The Rev. W. H. Cornett officiated. Only the relatives of the happy couple and their most intimate friends witnessed the ceremony. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. John Harvison, came all the way from Pittsburgh for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker left immediately followig the ceremony for San Francisco and Berkeley, where a reception in honor of the bride is to be given upon her arrival by her sorority sisters of the Alpha Delta Phi. Mr. Shoemaker is a graduate of the University of California, and the happy couple have a host of friends both in the northern cities and in the bay district.

Alhambra

Miss Helen Louise Keith, daughter of Mrs. Viola Keith, 560 North Stoneman, became the bride of Ruel B. Carpenter at a quiet but impressive service Sunday at noon at the family home, with Rev. M. S. Runkle of Holy Trinity Church officiating. The bride wore a gown of white embroidered chiffon over white satin. Her shower bouquet was of butterfly roses, sweet peas and maiden hair fern. Miss Kathleen Keith, as maid of honor, wore a charming frock of apricot georgette. She carried lavender sweet peas. Harvey H. Lovell served the groom as best man. Mendelssohn's wedding march and "O, Promise Me" were played by Mrs. Virginia Sanderson during the ceremony. A wedding breakfast for members of the family followed the cecemony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter left on a honeymoon trip and on their return will be at home at No. 4 South Cordova.

Another pretty home wedding was that of Miss Lucile Doty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman W. Doty of 333 North Chapel, and Leroy M. Stauffer of Philadelphia. Dr. Harry L. White read the service in the presence of intimate friends and relatives. A profusion of summer flowers and greenery were used to decorate the home. Before the ceremony Miss Ada Mae Robinson sang "I Love You Truly." Following an informal reception, Mr. and Mrs. Stauffer left for a motor trip in the northern part of the State, and upon their return will reside in this city. Mrs. Carpenter has been a member of the Los Angeles Library staff for the past two years.

bonbon baskets marking each place at the refreshment table, disclosed the secret of the engagement of Miss Jennie Lacey and Leland J. Durfy of Hollywood. The wedding date has not been set. The guests were Mrs. Stewart Smith and Miss Barbara Durfy, sisters of Mr. Durfy; Misses Helen Buck, Mildred Haghty, Ada Sallstrom, Genevieve Mulligan, Mary Rich, Gladys Sharpe and Helen Ingiedue, Mmes. Frank Weller, Guy Harn, B. Dudley Scudden and Ellis Thomas.

Glendora

Glendora society has seldom been more interested than in the lovely double ceremony which last Thursday united in marriage Miss Mary Clarinda Ramsay and Thomas Lewis of Los Angeles, and Miss Geraldine Ramsay and Prof. [illegible] Clark of Gardena. The brides are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Ramsay, and have since childhood been socially prominent and admired for their unusually beautiful and well-trained voices. The Glendora Methodist Church, where 300 friends gathered, was decorated with bamboo, potted plants and ferns, which were lightened by many baskets of mammoth yellow dahlias.

At 1 p.m. Mrs. B. W. Richardson, pipe organist, and Mrs. Henri [illegible], violinist, began the preliminary music. Their numbers were followed by vocal solos by Mrs. [illegible] Taylor. As the time of the ceremony approached Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. C. B. Shoemaker sang "At Dawning," which was followed by the solo, "I Love You Truly," by Mrs. Shoemaker. The brides, escorted by their father, were preceded by the flower girls, Dorothy and Mildred Comstock. The attendants of Miss Clarinda Ramsay were the matron of honor, Mrs. Donald Purday of Long Beach, who was in pastel blue georgette, and Miss Helen Azey of Redlands, also in a gown of [illegible]. Mr. Lewis was attended by [illegible] Gee of Long Beach and Kenneth Hollingsworth of Hollywood. The ceremony which united the troth of Miss Clarinda Ramsay and Mr. Lewis was read by Dr. Scudden of Pasadena, a former pastor of the Glendora Church. Miss Katherine Miller, in a gown of orchid georgette, and Miss Hilda Suydam in pale green attended Miss Geraldine Ramsay. Mr. Clark had as his best man and groomsman his brother, Paul Clark of Pasadena and Jess Bonner of [illegible]. The marriage ritual for Miss Geraldine Ramsay and Prof. Clark was read by Rev. Al[illegible] Inwood, present pastor. The similar gowns of the brides were lovely creations of white satin and were worn with veils. Their bouquets were showers of lilies of the valley and roses. Those ushering were George Ramsay, Worth Coleman of Long Beach, Prof. G. P. [illegible] of Los Angeles and Keith [illegible].

San Pedro

Five months a secret, the news of the wedding of Miss Wanda V. [illegible] of San Pedro and J. Alden [illegible] of San Francisco was announced at an affair of smart appointment, recently given by Miss [illegible] Gaffey at her home at [illegible] Heyler streets. Stealing a march on their friends, the couple were wedded in Riverside [illegible] and were so successful in keeping their secret that the announcement of their engagement was received with all confidence a few weeks ago. Mrs. Stohr, who has been a San Pedro resident for two years, has left to join her husband in San Francisco and the couple will make their home there. Attached to ribbon streamers of lavender and pink, which radiated from the wishing-well centering the table at which the collation was served, diminutive envelopes contained the wedding announcements. Guests at the announcement affair numbered fourteen.

Complimenting Miss Florence Mansfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Mansfield of San Pedro, whose marriage to James Douglas of Los Angeles will be an event of the fall season, Mrs. Harrington Wells entertained recently with a beautifully appointed prenuptial shower given at the hostess' home, 644 Second street. Pink and white prevailed in the decoration of the rooms and dahlias and chrysanthemums formed the dainty floral combination employed at the affair. Games supplied diversion at the affair, which was attended by Miss Florence Mansfield, Mesdames Carl Heisterman of Los Angeles, May Williams, Meade Raines, Paul A. Hastings, Davide Dart and Joseph Roberts, Misses Mabel Weir, Dorthy Mansfield, Nina La Force and Evelyn La Force of Los Angeles, Lottie Mae Boyd, Iris La Porte, Lillian Liebisch, Marguerite Schneider, Mary Bachtel, Ruth Limecooly and Kathleen Craig and Mrs. Harrington Wells.

Presided over by Miss Edna Abbott at her home at 857 West Eighth street, a bridge tea was a recent charming affair in San Pedro. Guests were Misses Ruth Burdick and Pauline Burch of Pasadena, Yvonne Ells, Margaret Stanley and Spofford Curley of Los Angeles; Dorothy Sinclair, Fern Montgomery and Betty Allen of Long Beach, and Helen Murphy, Mary Reed and Calla Johnson Van Camp of San Pedro.

Inglewood

Mrs. Sydney Monroe was hostess Tuesday evening at a prettily appointed dinner given at her home on South Hawthorne Boulevard in celebration of her birthday. The rooms of the hostess's home were beautifully decorated with a profusion of the season's flowers, and in the dining-room the soft glow of many tiny candles gave a festive appearance to the table. A large birthday cake graced the center of the table, and covers were laid for seven.

Mrs. Mary O. Smith is entertaining as her guest her nephew, Everett Darnell of Minden, Neb.

Mrs. Otto A. Gerth has as her guest her sister, Mrs. Harry Robbins of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Ethel De Yoe and son Jay of this city are enjoying an outing at their summer camp near Camp Baldy.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond S. Spears entertained on Saturday evening at their home on East Regent street, having as their guests the members of the Ramblers' Club. Asters and carnations were used by the hostess to make the rooms attractive and after a delightful evening spent at cards the guests partook of a delicious supper at midnight. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Grandy, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Helm, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Martin, Mr. and Mrs. D. Herbert Deane.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Moseley entertained on Saturday afternoon at a delightful luncheon followed by an afternoon of bridge. The guests included a number of former Nebraskans, friends of the host and hostess at the time they lived in that State. Purple and gold were the predominating shades in the decorative scheme, carried out in asters and dahlias. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Slabaugh, Mrs. Clara Brainard, Mrs. Rebecca Guthrie, Miss Lu Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Hunt, Mrs. Grace Pennell, Mrs. O. J. Aimies, all of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Nelson of Culver City; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Witten of Altadena; Mrs. W. D. Trapp of Inglewood.

YOUNG ASSISTANT AT AFFAIR

Bride Enjoys Bridge Tea Function

Miss Frances Jamison

MISS FRANCES JAMISON of Rimpau Boulevard was one of the charming young assistants at the bridge tea given recently by Mrs. Jack Badham (Bess Kissinger) at her home in Citrus avenue, honoring Mrs. Bernard Holt, one of the popular brides of the season. Thirty-eight guests were bidden and Mrs. Badham was also assisted by her mother, Mrs. J. B. Kissinger.

Santa Ana

A wedding of unusual interest in Santa Ana was that at which Miss Juanita Daguerre, daughter of Mrs. M. E. Daguerre of El Toro, became the bride of Frank Seidel of Santa Ana. The ceremony was read by Rev. Father Keating at the parish house in Riverside. Immediate relatives of the couple were present. After the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served in the patio of the Mission Inn. After a wedding trip to Northern California, Mr. and Mrs. Seidel will make their home in Santa Ana.

Miss Florence Cochems, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cochems of Santa Ana, and Merrill Hare of Orange were married at the home of the bride's parents, 310 West Second street, this city. Rev. Hitchcock read the marriage service. Following the ceremony, the couple left for Venice where they will make their home. Sixty guests were present from Pasadena, Los Angeles, San Diego and Santa Ana.

An attractive prenuptial affair was that given last week by Miss Glenna Jean Hill, at her home, 1403 South Main street, for Miss Iris Head, who became the bride of Harold Knight of Santa Monica. Bridge was the diversion of the evening. First prize was awarded to Miss Ethel Smallwood. Miss Isabelle Wylie won second prize and the consolation award went to Miss Estelle Halesworth.

Huntington Park

The home of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Sandford was a bower of summer flowers Thursday night when Mrs. Sandford's sister, Miss Bess Watson, became the bride of Mr. Leonard F. Gartner of Long Beach in a simple ceremony pronounced by the Rev. S. S. Sampson. Sixty guests were present to witness the ceremony. The bride-elect was attended by her sister, Mrs. Sandford and her brother, B. E. Watson, was best man to the groom-elect. The ring ceremony was pronounced. The young people are spending their honeymoon in Long Beach.

The First Methodist Episcopal Church choir, under the direction of E. L. Anderson, is arranging to put on a sacred concert on the evening of the 20th inst., when there will be a chorus of forty voices. "The Messiah" will be sung during the Christmas season, states the director, with a chorus of sixty voices.

Riverside

Mrs. Theodore Newell of 146 Larchwood Place entertained at the season's first early autumn party when she was hostess at one of the prettiest and one of the most elaborate of fall bridge parties, given for Mrs. Albert Miller. Shades of gold and green were used for the color scheme. Gold and green bouquets, all the table appointments, even the menu from the first course of orange and emerald cocktails down to the green and gold cream candy mints and bonbons repeated in piquant style the hues chosen. Golden ophelia roses and ferns in a basket sunk in fairy-like billows of gold and green tulle centered the table. At each plate was a corsage of ophelia rosebuds. Place cards were Japanese. Dainty maidens, hand-painted on rice paper, were mounted on green and gold folders. Tints of golden orange in flowers and tulle were seen in the colors of the Venetian crystal luncheon plates and tall stemmed goblets. After luncheon bridge and mah-jongg were the diversion of the afternoon. Bridge was played in the labrary and mah-jongg in the music room, where a tall cabinet of hand-carved teakwood and hand-carved chairs from Japan and inlaid lacquered tables suggested an oriental background. Mrs. Eloise Roorbach won first prize at bridge and was given a beautiful bridge table indicator. Miss Elsie Younggren won first prize at mah jongg and was awarded a clever little gift from China. Mrs. Albert Miller was presented with the guest prize of a hand-embroidered towel. Mrs. Catherine Reed made low score at mah-jongg and Mrs. A. D. Nichols at bridge. To console them the hostess presented them with long-handled ivory claws (known in the Orient as back scratchers) brought from China by Mrs. Newell. Guests were Mrs. E. B. Criddle, her daughter, Mrs. R. Trowbridge of Los Angeles, Mrs. E. Miller, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Eloise Roorbach, Mrs. O. H. Tucker, Mrs. A. D. Nichols, Mrs. Catherine Reed, Miss Krerulas of San Francisco and Miss Elsie Younggren.

Miss Ginevra Heiser, who is to marry Gerald Ingersol, was the guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given for her by Mrs. H. A. Stevens, 296 Rosewood Place, and Miss Avis Morgan. Coral and lavender, the bride's colors, were used in the decorations in the home and in the supper. The bride-elect was showered with beautiful gifts for her new home. Guests were Mrs. Ruby Wells, Miss Ann Scarborough, Miss Lilla White, Miss Gladys Stephenson, Miss Mildred Cox, Miss Frances Bandy, Miss Ada Renner, Mrs. Fred Troth and Miss Mona Parsons.

Fullerton

A charming luncheon was given for Miss Esther Jackson by her mother, Mrs. R. N. Jackson, at their home on South Spadra Road Saturday afternoon. The affair was a surprise for the honoree and the guests were also surprised when they found that on beautifully decorated cards was a clever verse announcing the engagement of Miss Esther Jackson and William Cramer, both of Fullerton. The table was decorated with pink asters and lavender dahlias, while about the rooms of the house were baskets and bouquets of beautiful flowers in the same shades. Little hand-painted place cards were also used and they carried out the color motif. The wedding date was not told, except that it will be sometime in the fall of this year. Miss Jackson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Jackson of 512 South Spadra, and is employed at the Union Oil office at Brea. William Cramer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. N. V. Cramer of South Spadra and is connected with the Peoples Furniture store, owned by his father. The guests invited to the luncheon were friends and relatives. They were the Mmes. Kate Bengolia, John Miller, Pete Ficken, Chester Stearns, all of Orange; Arthur Shipkey of Anaheim, N. V. Cramer and Harry Shipkey of Fullerton; the Misses Lydia Ficken, Nellie Wilkins of Orange; Gladys Cramer and the honoree's sisters, the Misses Viola and Leona Jackson.

At the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Pinero of 214 West Malvern avenue, a number of their friends met Friday evening for a dinner and bridge party. The house was beautifully decorated with large baskets of dahlias in the mixed colors. Dinner was served at card tables and each seated four. A lovely bouquet of asters and bridge tallies were on each table. Immediately after the dinner the bridge games were started and progressive bridge was played. When the score cards were gathered in at the close of the evening, it was found that G. H. Chessley of Fullerton, was the high scorer for the men and Mrs. A. C. Spelle of Long Beach, winner for the women. The consolation was given to Mrs. D. Pyles of Walnut Park. The guests at the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Allen of Pasadena; Mrs. A. C. Spelle of Long Beach, Mr. and Mrs. D. Pyles of Walnut Park, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Chessley and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Fritz of Fullerton.

Burbank

The home of Mrs. George Mason was the scene of a farewell party given for Mr. and Mrs. William Austin of Verdugo avenue. The Austins left this week for Hemet, where Mr. Austin will be an instructor in the high school and Mrs. Austin will have a position in the grade school.

Donald Crosby of Houston, Tex., who is visiting here, was the guest of honor at a dancing party given at the Rendezvous at Santa Monica, by his cousin, B. E. Werminghaus.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Smith and family have returned to Burbank after a long stay at Yosemite Valley. They are now at the home of Mr. Smith's sister, Mrs. D. A. McFall on Verdugo avenue, but will later move to their home on Magnolia Boulevard.

A charming Japanese tea party was given last Friday to seventy-five friends in the patio of the Methodist Church, with Mrs. O. H. Skeen and Mrs. J. M. Cox as hostesses. All decorations were in Japanese effects, with girls in Japanese costumes as a reception committee.

San Fernando

A prettily appointed garden party and dinner were given on Thursday and Friday of last week by Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Maclay. About twenty-seven guests were present at both functions.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Deason of South Brand Boulevard have as guests at their home, their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Flinn of St. Louis, Mo. Mr. and Mrs. Flinn were accompanied to California by their little granddaughter, Mary Louise Deason.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strathern had as a guest at their home last week, Mrs. Grace Glenn of Bakersfield.

Mrs. Norman Hess of Maclay avenue had as a guest last week, Miss C. Losee of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Dial of Chatsworth Drive, last week entertained Mrs. Frederick W. Vroom of Hollywood, choir director of the Hollywood Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Moore, during the week, entertained Mrs. Buchanan of San Diego, with a picnic dinner at Memory Gardens.

Van Nuys

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Cleland and children have returned home after spending most of the summer at Hermosa Beach.

Prominent members of the younger social set who took part in the tennis games last Saturday, were W. Park Newcomer, J. F. Peters, Frank Tiara, Dr. Robert W. Cooke, Miss Mildred Scott and Miss Mildred Hannan.

Among Van Nuys people who attended the Missouri picnic at Sycamore Grove Park were Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Praiswater, John Praiswater, Miss Gladys Praiswater, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Greenish and Paul Greenish, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mendenhall and Mrs. Margaret Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Friddell and daughter are spending two weeks at Yosemite Park.

Mrs. Leslie Taylor and little daughter Maxine have returned from a vacation at Long Beach.

Redondo Beach

Following closely upon the announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Hazel Eikenbary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Eikenbary of Juanita avenue, to Wallace McBride, have come a delightful series of prenuptial courtesies tendered the charming bride-elect. One of the prettiest of these was

Dear Madam:

Miss Swobdi, who has just returned from Paris, sends to you this message, that the gowns, wraps, hats and accessories, being shown at the Fashion display this season, are of incomparable charm, both in coloring and material.

The selections she has made from the leading Couturiers of Paris, together with her own adaptations, will complete an assemblage of unusual beauty.

They will be on display beginning Tuesday, September 8th.

A LIVING SILHOUETTE IS CREATED!

AND now comes the animated silhouette! Casting aside tradition, the couturiers for the new season modeled their wraps on living figures instead of designing on inanimate dummies as was the old method. This new treatment creates a sylphlike gracefulness when you are walking. You will rejoice in the pleasure such a garment has in store for you. With the need of a new coat staring you in the face, tomorrow presents the proper time to come in to try on these vivacious modes.

This coat of Dovbloom has collar and patch of Platinum Wolf. The cuffs and novel side band are trimmed with buttons and loops.

the miscellaneous shower with which Mrs. Elwyn Shannon entertained recently. Decorations of late summer flowers adorned the rooms and the tables where refreshments were served, and sharing in the event were Miss Emmacile Balaam, Miss Ethel Oliver, Miss Rena Holland, Miss Cecile Wilson, Miss Allura Burns, Miss Ruth Steel, Miss Alyse McBride, Miss Irene Bradbury, Miss Ruby Rehm, Mrs. Velma Mallete, Mrs. Anna Falck, Miss Bess Tufts, Mrs. Virginia McBride, Mrs. Daisy Shannon, Mrs. Florence Christianson, Mrs. Margot Perkins, Mrs. S. J. Eikenbary, the honoree and the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Ihm were the inspiration for a charmingly appointed dinner party presided over by Mr. and Mrs. Leon Stern of South Catalina avenue. At the dinner table, centered by lovely fuchsias, were Mr. and Mrs. Ihm, Mrs. Sue Gale, Miss Isabel Mohan, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Austin, Bert Stern and Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Stern.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Schaeffer and Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Schaeffer are enjoying a two weeks' motor trip through the north. Their destination is Seattle, with pleasantly arranged stop-overs at Lake Tahoe and in the redwood country.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Fraley have been entertaining week-end guests frequently throughout the summer and recently were hosts at a delightful beach picnic to which Dr. and Mrs. George Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice M. Alfred, Mr. and Mrs. Winn Evans, Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. B. Y. Taft, were bidden.

Garden Grove

Enjoying a three weeks' vacation trip, a number of Garden Grove folks are visiting in Northern California. Included were Mr. and Mrs. Herman Christensen and family. A stop was made in Fresno county, where Mr. Christensen has large farming interests. From there they motored to Bishop, where Mrs. Christensen will visit friends. Her husband was joined here by M. B. Allen, E. M. Dozier, F. P. Rosselot, William Lehnhardt and Jack Crill. Deer hunting is their objective and the mountain fastnesses of the high Sierras will be visited by the party.

A very enjoyable week was spent at Newport Beach last week by a party of ladies from here. They were guests of Mrs. Ella Holtz at her beach home. Included were Mrs. H. H. Pollard, Mrs. F. McConnell, Mrs. C. A. Westgate, Mrs. J. Jentges, Mrs. R. A. Wilcox, Mrs. E. Zimmerman, Mrs. Anna New and Mrs. William Chandler.

Returning travelers this week were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Crosby, who have been making a motor trip through Northern California, Oregon and Washington. They have been gone ten weeks. Mrs. W. B. Merchant and daughter Frances returned Thursday from a summer spent at the home of her mother Mrs. C. Mellott of Mount Harris, Colo.

Owensmouth

One of the very happy affairs of the week was the picnic supper served in Brand Park, San Fernando, on Tuesday evening, honoring S. Erle Goodall, prominent rancher and superintendent of the Community Sunday School, whose birthday it was. Those attending besides Mr. Goodall and his wife and two cunning children were, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goodall, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Goodall and young Ralph, Jr., Rev. and Mrs. Clyde P. Metcalf, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hoefer, Mr. and Mrs. John Osborn and daughter of Los Angeles, and Laurence Sheldon of Madera.

The spacious home of Mrs. Louella Hall on Shoup avenue was the setting for a delightful party on Thursday when thirty-five ladies from Santa Paula and six from Los Angeles, all members of the Mary A. Livingston Society of the Universalist Church in Santa Paula, were entertained by her at their monthly business and social meeting. The bountiful noon-time luncheon and renewing former friendships made the day an especially pleasant one.

Mrs. W. E. Beckstead and Mrs. J. A. Stroehle were the complimented guests at a delightful bridge luncheon on Thursday; several friends having arranged the courtesy in compliment to the birthdays of the two honor guests. The artistic Girard Inn was chosen as a setting for the pleasing affair. Those attending other than the honor guests were, Mrs. V. L. House, Mrs. Roy Sebree, Mrs. W. W. Speere, Mrs. Maurice Beckstead, Mrs. V. I. Hadley, Mrs. Lillian Hadley, Mrs. Fred Orton, Mrs. Frank O. Wadleigh, Mrs. A. J. Young, Mrs. Julius Franz, Mrs. A. H. Haworth, Mrs. R. L. Wallach, Mrs. L. J. Tindall, Mrs. Arthur Hoefer, Mrs. E. J. Canavan, Mrs. V. L. Rennick, Mrs. J. A. Matthews, Miss Harriette Matthews and Mrs. H. H. Dace and Miss Catherine Egbert of San Fernando and Miss Beth Glascock of Taft.

La Habra

Coming events were announced at the linen shower given Saturday afternoon in compliment to Miss Mary Louise Hickan, by her cousin Mrs. Edgar Herman, at her pretty home on West Florence avenue. A merry party of intimate friends of the two young women were the guests. The color scheme in lavender and yellow was carried out with asters and dahlias for the rooms, while the dainty collation served after an afternoon spent in hemming towels and playing games showed the same hues. Mrs. Herman was assisted by her mother, Mrs. W. F. Taylor and sister Josephine Taylor. Guests included Mrs. A. C. Catland and daughters, Miss Irene Catland of Santa Ana, Mrs. Ted Corcoran of Fullerton, Miss Eleanor Simpkins of Whittier, Mrs. Kent Garner, Miss Nellie Taupe, and Miss M'Lisse Kipp of Brea, Mrs. P. H. Goodell, Mrs. Horace Blair, Mrs. L. N. Hickam, mother of the honoree, the Misses Emily Young, Ethel Lindell, and the guest of honor Miss Hickam. The announcement of her coming marriage to B. M. Hoge on the 13th inst., was inclosed in tiny favors.

Two social affairs were held this week on Mountain View avenue as farewell compliments to the C. E. Rowley family who left this week to take up their residence in Montebello after a number of years' residence in La Habra. On Friday evening Miss Elizabeth Wright entertained in honor of Miss Norma Rowley at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wright. A merry evening was spent with a few intimate school friends. On the same evening, Mr. and Mrs. Rowley were given a farewell dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Wardrip. Lavender and red asters were used in a decorative scheme while a huge basket of golden glow centered the well-appointed table around which were gathered Mr. and Mrs. Rowley, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. John Upton, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Davis, and Mr. and Mrs. Wardrip.

Buena Park

Mr. and Mrs. John Kane are entertaining Miss Anna Collins of Pasadena this week. Miss Collins has just recently returned from an extended eastern trip with visits made on relatives and friends in Grand Rapids, Mich., Chicago, Denver, Salt Lake City, and the three sister cities of Northern California, San Francisco, Berkeley and Oakland. As both the hosts and visitor had mutual friends in some of these cities a very delightful visit was had.

Friday evening members of the Eastern Star and their families enjoyed a most delightful lawn party at the commodious country home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McComber at La Mirada. Spanish decorations and the colorful gowns made a delightful scene. Refreshments were served by dark-eyed senoritas and the program was carried out with the dance and music typical of our sister republic. Games and dancing amused the many guests until late in the evening. The program and much of the success of the affair was in the competent hands of Mrs. Martha E. Shinn.

Yorba Linda

The members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of this city have requested the return of Rev. George A. Rodgers as a token of their esteem. Mr. Rodgers's work among the boys has been so splendid that they wish to express their appreciation of Mr. Rogers in this manner. Charles Tebbs of New York, a well-known art critic, was a dinner guest of Miss Marsha Vernon Wednesday. Other honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Parmenter, Mrs. B. Shaw of Los Angeles. Mr. Tebbs is spending a vacation period in the West and California especially.

Several families are home again after delightful motor trips to other parts of California. Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Knight returned Thursday from a three-weeks' trip through Northern California with visits to the redwood forests. Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Dykman and family returned from Big Bear, and are cosily located in their new home on Casa Loma.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hurley have returned from a few weeks spent at Balboa Beach.

Dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hargrave were his brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hargrave of Ontario. Mr. and Mrs. George Kellogg also entertained at dinner at their ranch home on Tuesday. The guests were the grade mothers of the Yorba Linda school.

Covina

The immediate relatives witnessed the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Ruth Paddock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Paddock and Van Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Smith at 10:30 Tuesday morning at Glenwood Mission Inn, Riverside. The double ring service of the Methodist Church was used by Rev. John Nickelson, pastor of the Covina Methodist Church. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Paddock and Mr. Edward Parker of Riverside stood with Mr. Smith. Upon their return from a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Bertha Philleo and Rolland Philleo entertained this week Lewis and Roger Minkle of Fort Dodge, Iowa.

Dr. H. A. Taylor and wife who have been guests of the former's brother, A. R. Taylor and wife left this week for Sulphur Springs, Ark. where Dr. Taylor is dean of the John Brown University and head of the science department and where Mrs. H. A. Taylor is instructor in French.

Ralph Nye, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Nye returned this week from Honolulu where he has been the guest of his brother, Lieut. W. P. Nye and wife.

L. H. Root this week entertained his cousin, Sheldon Patterson of Syracuse, Calif.

Miss Virginia Lang of Baldwin Park entertained thirty young people of that place and West Covina last Saturday night with an out-door supper in honor of her week-end house guest, Miss Marjorie McComas of Hollywood.

Miss Ruth Paddock was the hostess last Friday afternoon to eighteen matrons of Covina at a delightful Kensington party given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Paddock of Vincent street. On Saturday evening Miss Paddock entertained a similar number of her girl friends.

Lankershim

The local force of the Security Trust and Savings Bank of which Fred Weddington is vice-president was informally entertained at his home last Thursday evening. A barbecue was served in the gardens, and a dancing platform was erected under the walnut trees. After dinner, the evening was spent in dancing. Eighteen employees of the bank were present.

Miss Beulah Arndt, who has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. G. K. Fox of Magnolia Boulevard, has returned to her home in Cincinnati.

A delightful carnival and dance was given last Wednesday by the Lankershim Woman's Athletic Club. Guests wore plain clothes as part of dance program.

Miss Opal Standle of Magnolia Boulevard, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Condon of Hueneme.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Davis are being congratulated on the birth of a daughter.

Mrs. Davis, nee Irene Madson, has been visiting her parents. She expects to return to her home in Marianna, Fla., in October.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Seely have returned from a 1600-mile vacation trip. They visited Yosemite Valley, Mono Lake and thence over the mountains to Reno, Nev. On the return trip they stayed a few days at Lake Tahoe, and then went over the Sierras to Sacramento and down the coast route to Lankershim.

Brea

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shanks and son, Bobbie, left Monday for an extended visit with relatives in Fayetteville, Ark. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Sellers and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Rhones are enjoying a two weeks' outing, hunting and fishing at Mammoth Lake and other near-by resorts.

Coming up from Long Beach, where they are enjoying their summer vacation from Redlands, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sexton were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Sayles Friday evening. The Sextons were former residents of Brea.

Six small guests helped Miss Eunice Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Hazel Wilson, remember that she was one year older Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Sexton of South Flower street. Games were played. A pretty cake with four pink candles revealed the age of the little hostess. Mrs. Sexton was assisted by Mrs. Wilson in entertaining.

Mrs. Stella Keene of Brea spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Stevens, on her ranch at Costa Mesa. A delicious chicken dinner was enjoyed by her, her sister and family, Mrs. Charles Swann of Fullerton, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Shafer.

Placentia

Tuesday and Wednesday were bright spots in the social life of Placentia when Mrs. John Wallace of Alta street entertained a group of friends on Tuesday and the San Sousi Club Wednesday afternoon. Five hundred was the amusement for both afternoons. Handsome prizes were given to the lucky players. After the game refreshments were served. The color scheme of pastel shades of lavender, pink and yellow were noted in both refreshments, and with masses of asters and dahlias in abundance in the cosy rooms. The group on Tuesday consisted of Mrs. W. Bowen, Mrs. T. L. McFadden, Mrs. E. K. Kirby, Mrs. Sam Newns, Mrs. Lisle Morehouse, Mrs. Fred Cline, Mrs. A. Pierotti, Mrs. Fred Woodson, Mrs. J. D. McDonald, Mrs. W. Benny, Mrs. H. P. Bender of La Habra, and Mrs. Anna New of Garden Grove. The members of the San Sousi Club included Mrs. A. J. Barnhart, Mrs. Victor Gorenflo, Mrs. C. E. Haiber, Mrs. Elmer Hochstein, Mrs. Charles Lee, Mrs. J. L. Orr, Mrs. W. D. Solesbee, Mrs. J. E. Scott, Mrs. Herbert Sullivan, Mrs. Roy Charlton, Mrs. E. A. Eisenhacher and Mrs. G. W. Cowen.

With the many hostesses of this city spending the summer at their beach homes at Newport, this beach has been a popular meeting place for the many clubs. On Tuesday, Mrs. Elizabeth McFadden entertained the members of the B.G.N. Bridge Club at her home with a four-course luncheon. She was assisted by Mrs. Grace Ford of Fullerton. After luncheon cards were played at which Mrs. William Berkenstock, Mrs. William Blattner and Mrs. McFadden won honors. Mrs. Sam Newnes will entertain in September.

Tulare

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hodges returned Tuesday from a ten days' vacation in San Francisco and Berkeley. Miss Virginia Hodges, who went north with her parents, remained in the Bay District where she has registered as a sophomore at the University of California.

Mrs. Guy Noble and son Bruce, have returned to their home here after a visit of six weeks in Colorado with relatives. Harold Frew of Los Angeles is spending his vacation with friends here. Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Jacques of Los Banos have returned to their home after a brief visit here with Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Rocha of Paige. Mrs. Jacques and Mrs. Rocha are sisters.

A number of local people who have been spending their vacation at Giant Forest, Sequoia National Park, enjoyed a picnic Sunday at the Benton and Cain camp. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Benton and family, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cain, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Slemmons, Robert Carter, Mr. and Mrs. T. Z. Mizell, James and Lillian Erwin and Walter Rock.

The home of Miss Dorothy Amen in Salida Place was the scene of a merry gathering of the younger set. This meeting took the form of organization of a Thimble Club. At close of the evening a dainty ice course was served. Members of the club present were Mesdames Rothwell Owen, Melvin Rawson, Kenneth Sturgeon and Shirley Luke, and the Misses Nettie Manock, Mabel Way, Hazel Hoyt and Dorothy Amen. Mrs. J. T. Crowe was a guest for the evening.

Rialto

Miss Mabel Bemis arrived home this week from a summer vacation trip to Atlantic Highlands, N. J., where she visited her sister, Mrs. Kenneth Perkins, formerly Miss Grace Bemis, who grew to fine young womanhood in this community. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins are the owners of a fine new home at Atlantic Highlands. Traveling eastward Miss Bemis stopped at Grand Canyon and Chicago, visiting friends there; homeward bound, stops were made at San Francisco and Berkley. After a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bemis and other Rialto relatives, Miss Bemis is leaving for Los Angeles, where on Tuesday she will again take up her duties as a teacher in the public schools of the city.

In company with Dr. P. J. Gass and family of San Bernardino, Miss June Tibbot is en route for the High Sierras. Going by automobile to Oriancha, from there the party will travel on horseback, packing their baggage on burros. The men of the party will hunt deer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Boyd are at home after a delightful vacation drive about Northern California. They visited Yosemite Valley, Mariposa Grove, Eureka, Napa, the petrified forest and geysers near Santa Rosa and Santa Barbara, coming from there down the coast to Los Angeles and on to Rialto. They were away about a month.

Mrs. C. H. Bohannon, Mrs. Orville Weller and little daughter, Rosalie, motored to Altadena this week to visit friends. Sightseeing, they had the pleasure of inspecting a $40,000 home under construction at Pasadena.

Upland

In compliment to her sister and niece, Mrs. C. O. Robinson and Miss Marjorie Robinson of Berkeley, and her daughter, Mrs. J. Prugh Herndon of Tucson, Ariz., who are her house guests, Mrs. Walter Emmet Boulton entertained Saturday afternoon with a reception and tea at her home, 406 Euclid avenue. Dainty pastel shades featured the decorations, the blossoms employed including asters, zinnias, snapdragons and delphinium. Some fifty society women of Upland and Ontario attended the affair. Mrs. Van Natta and Miss Frances Barr presided at the tea tables. Mrs. Robinson and Miss Robinson are shortly to return north after having spent the major portion of the summer in Upland. Miss Robinson is soon to enter Stanford University as a sophomore.

Complimenting the Misses Anna and Freda Wedel, two popular members of their organization, who are shortly to leave Upland and join their parents in Woodlake, members of the Upland Business and Professional Women's Club entertained with a musicale and supper Friday evening at Red Hill Country Club. The marriage of Miss Freda Wedel to William Collier, Jr., of Santa Ana is to be an event of the fall and Miss Anna Wedel is to become affiliated with a Woodlake mercantile concern for the success of the supper belongs to a headed by Mrs. Henry which was in charge of

Eczema

"At last a good night's sleep!"

OH! The joy of a peaceful, restful night. What a wonderful "up and going" feeling follows such a night of undisturbed slumber.

Oh! What tortures—what agony—what despair—goes with the nights where eczema and other skin diseases hold power and drive away rest and peaceful slumber. For under the cover of darkness like crafty beings of the underworld these eruptions work their most serious havoc.

S.S.S. is the established conqueror of these annoying skin diseases. S.S.S. drives these ever disturbing elements from your system—elements that carry in their wake—lack of energy—undermining health! You may try in vain to get rid of them by using salves, lotions, washes, all to no purpose. You can't do it that way—the seat of the trouble lies deeper—impure blood trying to throw off poisons through the tender skin.

S.S.S. purifies the blood. It aids Nature in creating new red-blood-cells by the million! Blood-cells that send new rich blood coursing through your system. Red blood that drives away eczema—drives away pimples, blackheads, boils and rheumatism, too. An increase in red-blood-cells means added strength, added vitality and renewed vigor. Because the medicinal ingredients of S.S.S. are purely vegetable, it may be taken with perfect safety. Start taking S.S.S. today and watch it rout that annoying, skin destroying, health undermining army that holds your system in its grasp! Learn again what it means to enjoy peaceful, restful nights of slumber.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

Is Husband Grouchy? Then Try This

"Grouchy" Feeling Mostly Due to Stomach

"There is nothing I have not tried for stomach trouble. Until I heard of Adlerika nothing would help. NOW I can eat, sleep and have not that 'grouchy' feeling I used to have. Friends are all pleased with it." (Signed) Jack Ryder.

Intestinal Evacuant

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports from Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. (Name given on request.)

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere.—[Advertisement.

EW YORK, Sept. 5.—There is d one bright spot in Broadway's e world this week, and that is little Embassy Theater, where he Merry Widow" is playing. eryone loves this picture. It is most glorious entertainment has come to our screens in a g time. As a matter of fact, I t recall any picture that I ever oyed more.

"The Merry Widow" is a master- e of direction and it is a tri- ph for John Gilbert and Mae rray. PHILOSOPHY OF CHAPLIN EXPRESSED

Easy to Judge, Not Easy to Understand, His Summary of Hollywood Code

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Charlie Chaplin summarized his moving-picture philosophy of Hollywood the other day. He did it to a British interviewer in these words:

"It is easy to judge; it is not easy to understand." Amplifying this conception, he said:

"If I have the villain in a story I try to give him good action—to make a sort of doubt steal into folks' minds as to whether, after all, a fellow who is a cad under one set of circumstances may not be quite a decent sort of fellow under another set."

Chaplin explained this—and much more—to Robert Nichols, a British writer, who went to America seeking an answer to the question, "Why don't we get better movies?" Nichols is now writing the result of his investigation in a series of articles, which are appearing in the London Times and attracting widespread attention. He gives this description of Charlie Chaplin:

"If you are an artist it is marvelous fun to be with him, for he gives an impression of understanding the peculiar potentialities of the film medium more fully than any other man in Hollywood. Heine called Berlioz 'a gigantic nightingale, whose voice is the orchestra,' and the same might be said of Chaplin, substituting cinematograph for orchestra."

Speaking of the screen, Chaplin told the Englishman:

"The more I work in it the more astonished I am at its possibilities and the surer I am that at present we know next to nothing about it—except a few don't's. The movies—what a medium!"

Chaplin here grabbed the Englishman's elbow in sudden excitement. Upon him was a craving to show what he meant in motion, "because," remarks Nichols, "motion is the medium natural to the man." Then, calming himself, Chaplin continued:

"I don't care much about the story, or plot, as they call it. If you have the neatest-tailored plot in the world and have not living

TH GORDON SCORES AGAIN

YORK, Sept. 5.—To those of us who, year in and year out, the jaunty and endless cavalcade of plays as they pass this way every now and again the experience of hearing in a blare just under the window, the overtones of an old premoni- sudden recollection of having heard that same fanfare long before, sounding faintly down the wind.

He was obliged, to be sure, conscientiously to deplore a rather unfortunate "Wendy." "But," he added in grateful memory of a most spirited pillow dance, "but Ruth Gordon was ever so gay as Nibs." It had been her first performance on the stage and this was her first notice in any paper anywhere.

A week or so later, he chanced to hear a little story about the newcomer to be. He overheard it while, with the devil-may-care recklessness of his earlier days, he was buying sugar cookies in Mrs. Ruggler's cake shop. Two women were gabbling of the theater and one of them was telling how, on the night before, the newcomer had given a performance so distrait that when the final curtain

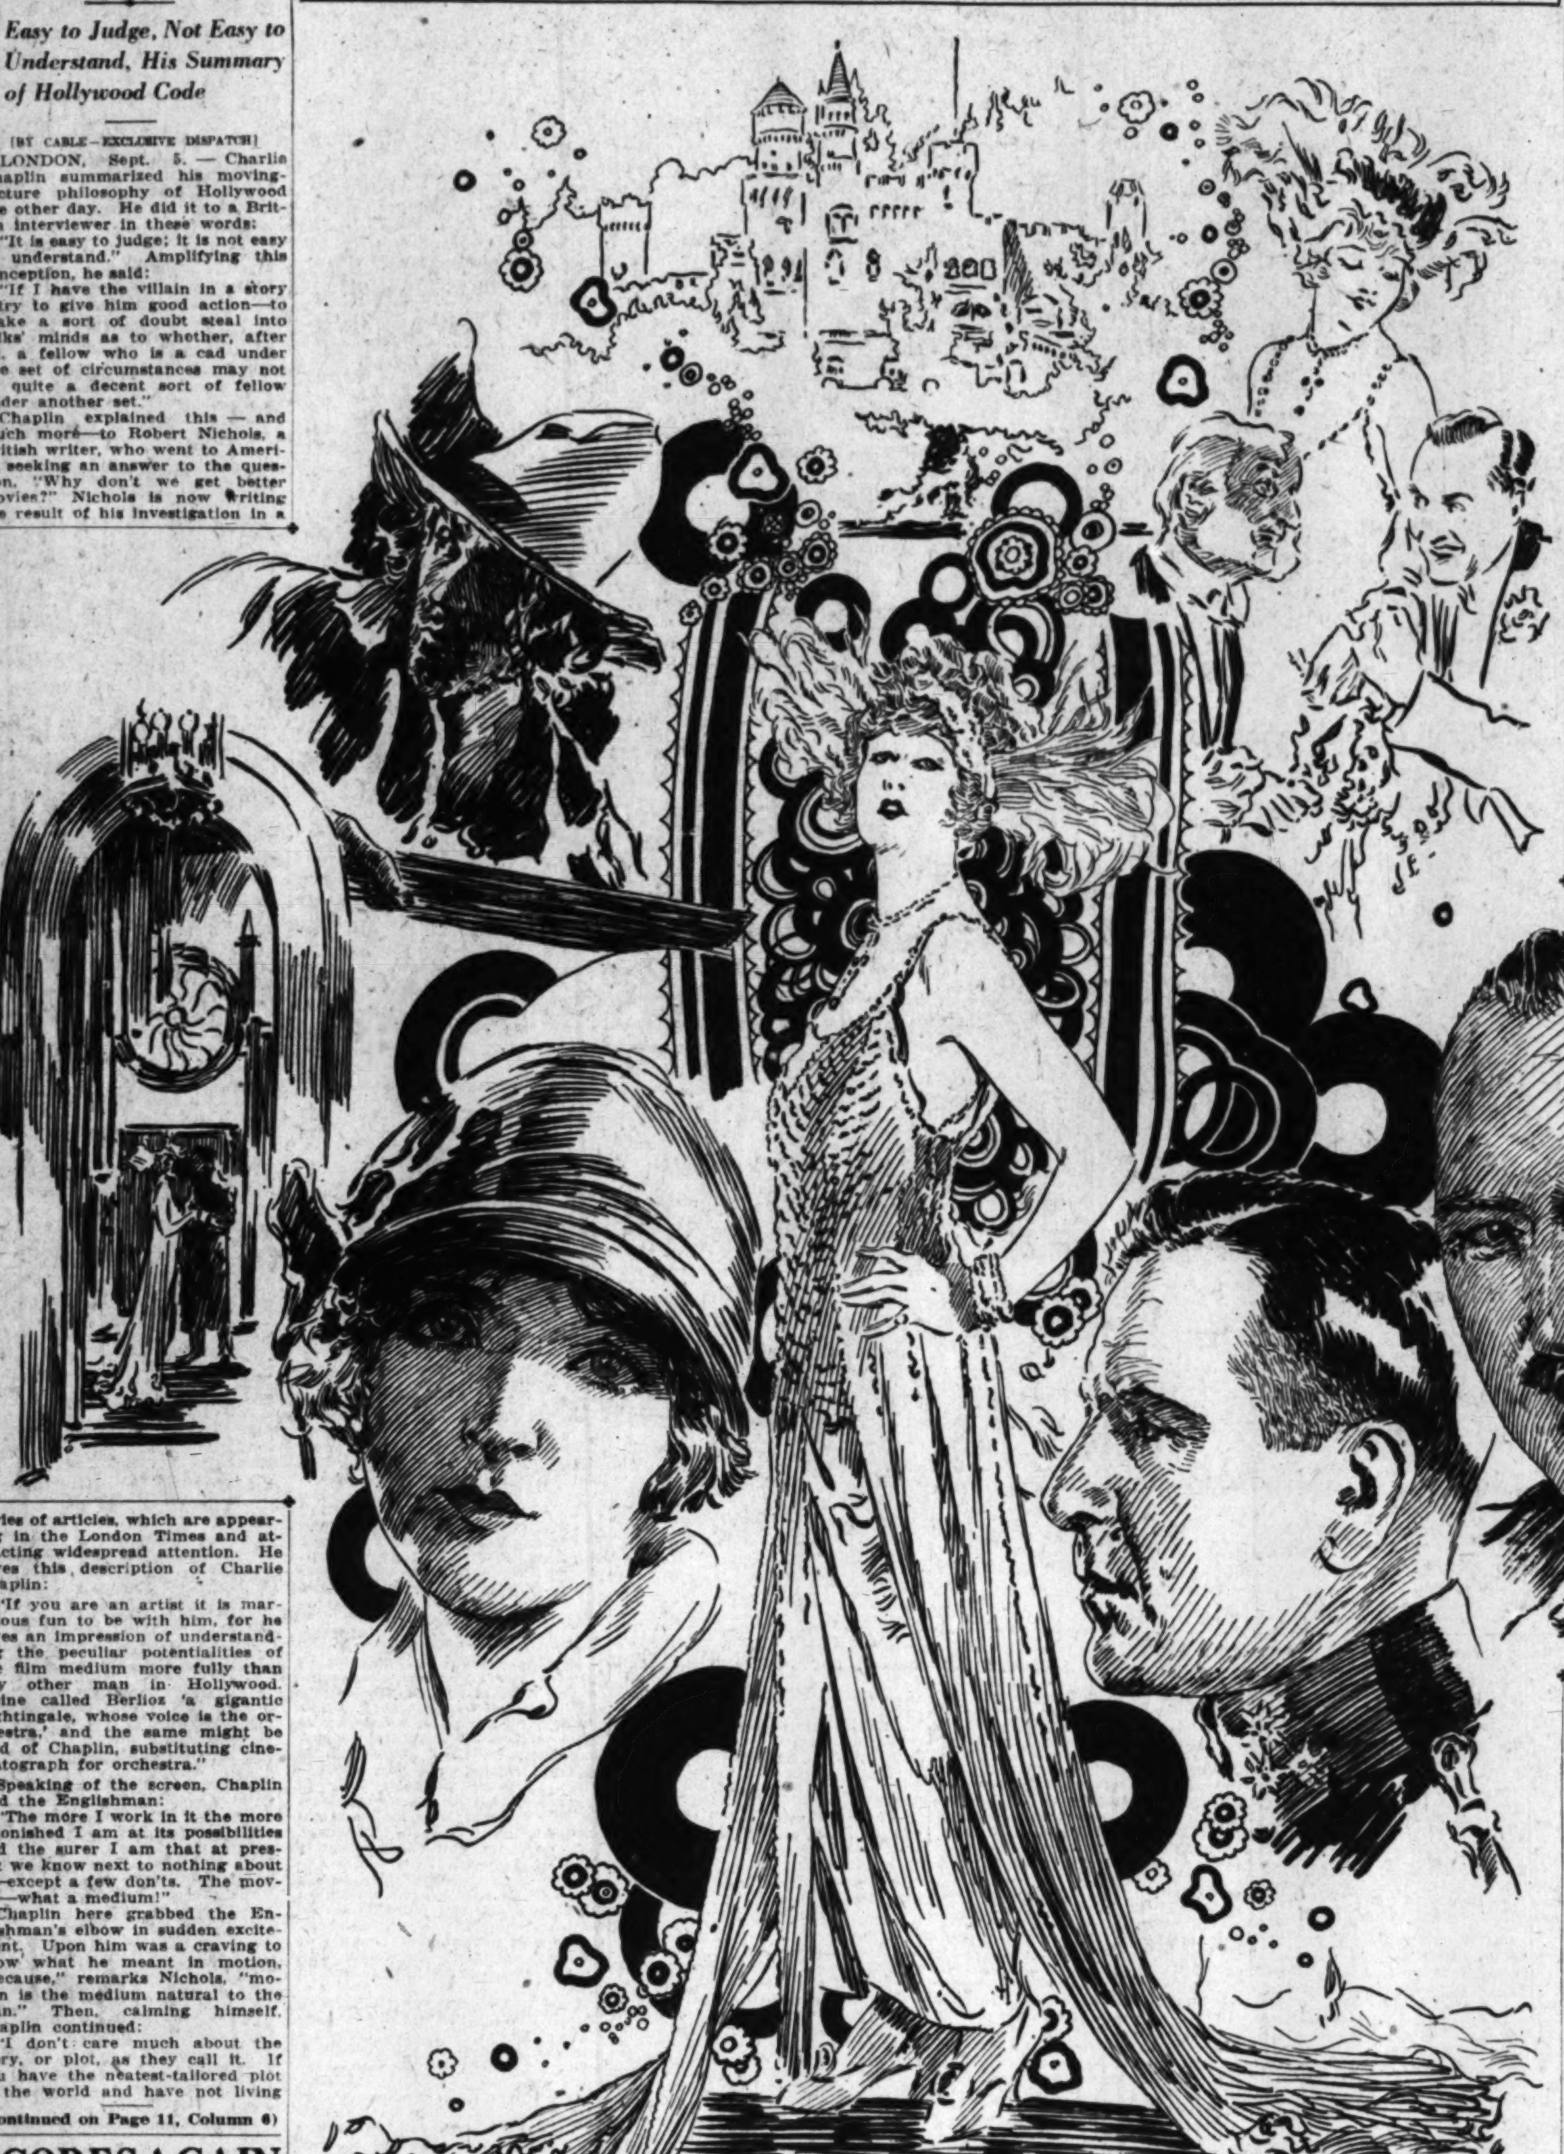
Viennese Drama Depicts Drabness, Splendor

The gripping transformation brought about in Vienna, Europe's gayest and most colorful city, by the World War is vividly pictured in "The Viennese Medley," a new First National photoplay which features Anna Q. Nilsson, Conway Tearle, May Allison and Ian Keith. June Mathis, who translated the story to the screen, labels it "an epic of the war—without a single war scene."



"Viennese Medley" Personalities as Seen by Staff Artist A. L. Ewing

Vienna in scintillating splendor; by night a jeweled city of a thousand twinkling, sparkling, varicolored lights; by day a city of laughter; its imposing, time-stained mansions a fitting background for throngs of light-hearted men and women and trimly elegant officers.

Vienna, dulled and drab; by night a blackened, brooding splotch; by day a broken-spirited city, its somber stone houses a fitting background for throngs of gaunt men and women and shabby, shambling soldiers.

VIENNA—THE HEROINE

So do we see Vienna, the real heroine of "The Viennese Medley," the latest contribution by the First National forces for lovers of the cinema drama.

"An epic of the war," June Mathis calls it, and she it is who is responsible for the translation of the story to the screen. "An epic of the war best describes this picture," she says, "and yet there isn't a single war scene in it. Rather it is the effect of the war on a city, a city made up of families, just as we find here in America."

PATHETIC AUSTRIA

From some few people there has been an expression of feeling, perhaps more suitably called a questioning attitude, as to the advisability, as far as sentiment is concerned, at this manner of featuring a city which, during the war that so undermined it, was an enemy to this country. However, Miss Mathis and her associates believe that little antipathy is felt for the Austrians now. And this is probably true, for even during the war there was never a very active animosity directed against them. Their part in the war was so largely that of a "cat's paw," maneuvered into position by Germany's Kaiser. Their suffering from starvation was so great that, instead of hatred, they drew sympathy, and it is to be remembered that the minute the armistice was signed Herbert Hoover immediately rushed foodstuffs to them.

Because Vienna before the war was considered the most col-

FINDS CONTINENT INSPIRING

Carmelita Geraghty, Making Film Near Munich, Visits Spots of Historic Interest

BY GRACE KINGSLEY

Our best picture stars are traveling so much these days that they are coming to know this little old globe so well that they can take it apart and put it together again!

Carmelita Geraghty is taking her first trip abroad, and naturally she is as thrilled and delighted as she can be.

"If you think I've come down to earth," writes Carmelita from Munchen, "since that day before I left, when we saw each other a few moments at the Montmartre, you're entirely wrong, because I'm still so excited that I lie wide awake all night staring into space, while all the colorful events of the day go marching by again, and I anticipate what's coming tomorrow—principally whether it is going to be possible to get the 1 o'clock train for Lido-Venice on Saturday afternoon, and what color pajamas to buy or wear on the beach there, and all kinds of frivolous ideas.

GERMAN DIRECTIONS

"The picture we came over to make is getting along very well indeed. Virginia Valli and I are both playing chorus girls, with Virginia, of course, the sympathetic heroine, while I am the naughty person who gets everyone into trouble. In spite of having an English director and two English leading men, it is very difficult working with the rest of the cast, which is all German, as the director has to direct all in German, so by this time we are both able to speak a little and to

MARMONT IDEAL FILM SUFFERER

Actor Ghastly Thorough in His Portrayals

Formerly Rollicking Singer in Musical Comedy

Came Here for Holiday and Was "Shanghaied"

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Of course they usually concede him a little "soul satisfaction" at the end of the last reel, but for seven years new Percy Marmont has suffered copiously, nobly, persistently, with ghastly thoroughness.

He may be considered our supreme picture exponent of tortured anguish—only by meeting sorrow in bucketfuls, having his heart torn and lacerated, nursing frightful soul hurts with sublime nobility of character can Percy ever draw his plutocratic salary with a clear conscience.

And to think that this Englishman once fled the musty precincts of an English law office and the tyranny of small anguishes, to become a gay light comedian, exciting naught but public laughter! Possessing a good singing voice, not quite so fine as that of his distinguished musical brother, Victor Marmont, in England, Percy began his dramatic career in musical comedy, singing all sorts of jolly, rollicking songs. Or playing in that Christmas institution, the pantomime, which isn't "pantomime" at all, but generally a highly sensationalized version of, say, Cinderella or The Babes in the Wood, in which the comedian is a very important person. Percy once

WEST COAST HUB OF PRODUCTION

Sunshine Insures Future of Hollywood

Leaders Declare No Chance of Location Change

Maximum of Clear Days Keeps Cost at Minimum

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Just so long as the California sunshine floods the studios of Hollywood and no laws inimical to the industry's progress are passed, the millions drawn from pockets of theater-goers all over the world will flow toward Los Angeles.

The heads of the great production companies here tell you so. The talk of a little Hollywood in Florida, of producers changing the base of operations, of the lessening of activity on the west coast, is utterly unfounded, they frankly say. And the reason is this:

Hollywood is the cheapest place in all the United States in which to make pictures.

Put that little proverb down in your notebook and keep it for reference. And so long as the dollar can be conserved or made to do the most work, it will be spent where it travels in high.

H. M. Warner of Warner Brothers put it this way:

TOO GREAT DELAY

"We sent a company to Delaware Water Gap to shoot some scenes for a picture. Six weeks passed. Eight weeks passed. At the end of twelve weeks the company returned—with some of the "shots." Can you imagine such a condition in Hollywood? Now then, that's your answer to why pictures can be made cheaper in the west coast plants than any place in America.

Mr. Warner was rearranging the furniture in his private office on Upper Broadway. The day was stifling hot and the perspiring office force valiantly tried to put some pep in its movements, but the pep wasn't there. The chief executive, himself, had shed his coat and rolled up his sleeves to get a bit of respite from the oppressiveness. He spoke occasionaly of his home by the side of the Pacific and wished that he was in Los Angeles.

"We are not making any pictures in the East," he continued, "and we do not propose to, save those which must have the 'atmosphere' of New York. Approximately half of our $8,000,000 budget for the year has been spent and virtually all, if not all, of the balance will be expended at our west coast studios. And we expect to continue spending it there, this money drawn from every part of the globe. Unless, as I said, fool laws are drawn which will tend to hamper the activities of the industry.

"Speaking solely for Warner Brothers, we find that the great number of cloudless days and the warm, delightful weather permit production to proceed with such unbroken regularity that a picture can be started and completed in such a short time that the loss from inactivity is negligible. And inactivity after the company is assembled and a picture started is what makes the costs pile high."

He paid a tribute to Motley H. Flint, who, he said, has done more

CENSORS TIGHTEN GRIP

Foreign Countries Rapidly Becoming More Drastic in Screen Regulations

Motion-picture censorship in foreign countries is rapidly becoming more drastic, according to J. S. Woodhouse, who for the past two years has been making an intensive study of the situation and has succeeded in reducing the "censorship mortality" of Universal films nearly 100 per cent.

Advices just received by him announce that a national law is being drafted by Jugo-Slavia, which comprises Serbia, South Serbia, Macedonia, Montenegro, Voivodina, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Crotia, Slovonia, and Dalmatia. Meanwhile a censorship commission has been promulgated by the Secretary of Interior and is now in operation, passing on all films before permitted to be shown. This commission includes representatives from the Ministry of Interior, the State Council, Ministry of Education, Ministry of National Health, and women's clubs. This kingdom has a population of 12,017,323 and covers an area of 95,737 square miles.

Passage of a national motion-picture censorship law in Czecho-Slovakia is expected in the near future, according to advices received from that country. This does not mean that there is no censorship at present, for the Minister of Interior has promulgated regulations of films and a censorship board is composed of representatives from the Ministry of Interior, the Ministry of Commerce, the Minister of National Defense and representatives from business and cultural associations. This board has power to reject any part or the whole of a film offered for exhibition in the country, and also decides whether a film passed may or may not be shown to children under 16 years of age. General rules covering objectionable features have been established by the censors.

Recently there has been much discussion in newspapers of Chile in favor of government motion-picture censorship. At present censorship of films is in control of the Chilean municipalities, which maintain a strict supervision of screen entertainment. The recent discussion was occasioned by the difference in standards disclosed in various communities, illustrated quite forcibly when a picture called "El Consultorio de Madame Renee," was rejected in its entirety in Valparaiso, after having been displayed throughout the remainder of the republic. Another incident disclosed the fact that the municipal censor is not necessarily the last word. This occurred in Santiago when a native film entitled, "Martin Rivas," had been approved by the censors, but was stopped by the police authorities, because the police claimed certain scenes tended to discredit the authority of the law.

According to a report just received from the official film censor of Ireland, operation of the law for the first year, completed, brought under inspection 4,943,800 feet of film. There were 1307 dramatic subjects submitted, of which 104 were totally rejected, or an 8 per cent total loss.

According to Mr. Woodhouse's records 53 per cent of the world (from a population standpoint) is subject to official motion-picture censorship, while 60 per cent of the American sales quota and over 70 per cent of the foreign sales quota are under censorship restriction. From all of this territory Mr. Woodhouse has accumulated rules and deletions over a period of two years, thus equipping him to advise on scenes and titles to be avoided and how to circumvent delicate situations.

PHILIP CARLE AGAIN VIGNOLA'S ASSISTANT

Philip Carle, who has been with Robert G. Vignola as assistant director for the last seven years, will again be associated with him in the production of "Fifth Avenue," Arthur Stringer's epic story of New York, which is soon to be placed in production at the Hollywood Studios by A. H. Sebastian.

Since his release from the Army at the close of the war, Carle has been with Vignola continuously, with the exception of a short period which he directed a series of two-reel pictures in Maine for Holman Day Productions. It is of interest to note that the leading roles in these pictures were played by Huntley Gordon and Mary Astor—the latter but 15 years of age.

RUTH GORDON SCORES AGAIN

fell, Peter Pan captured Nibs amid the chaos of collapsing scenery and blooded her severely. At the first word of the lecture Nibs dropped down on a canvas tree stump and blurted out her story—the story of word coming up from New England just before the performance, that her mother had died there in the seaport town which was her home. Whereupon, the toiling stage hands were startled out of their accustomed phlegm by the sight of Peter Pan, perhaps with some instinctive foreknowledge of a shadow that lay across her own pathway just ahead, dropping down beside the forlorn Nibs to pat her on the back a lot and cry a little with her.

"THE LITTLE MINISTER"

A fortnight later, the play was to make room in the bill for "The Little Minister," and the tumultuous children would be disbanded. For most of them this meant the old, discouraging rounds of the managers' offices. It was, therefore, to a most worried Nibs that Miss Adams spoke of this impending dispersal one night when, as always, the two of them stood together in the tree trunk waiting each for her cue to step out onto the swarming stage.

"Nibs," Peter Pan whispered there in the twilight of the wing, "would you care to stay on with the company and play one of the village women in 'The Little Minister'?"

At which sudden radiance of prospect, Nibs behaved in a manner that calmer folk reserve for the more momentous moments of life, as when, for instance, they are hit on the head with a steel girder. For Nibs replied by just reeling silently out of the tree trunk and Tootles, the twins, Michael, Wendy and all were somewhat taken back at her wordless and swaying advent in the scene full three minutes before her cue. No lecture followed this disaster, but the next night, when once more Nibs stood waiting for that cue, she heard the voice of Mr. Pan whispering glacially:

"Nibs, if you think you can somehow manage to stay in the tree trunk I should like to talk with you about 'The Little Minister.'"

SAD ENDING

So Ruth Gordon was in the wings a fortnight later when once again Lady Babbie danced through Caddam Wood. It was a revival that lasted only a little time, for before long the tour was suspended and Babbie was hurrying west. The tidings had come that Annie Adams was dying in Salt Lake [illegible]

I suppose other engagements followed the resumed Maude Adams tour but I first heard the sound of the distant trumpets again when I returned, a battle-scarred veteran of the Marne and Argonne, to learn that somehow the American drama had been worrying on without me and that in this interval, the Nibs of yesteryear had attracted notice (of various kinds) by playing the baby talk lady with Gregory Kelly in "Seventeen." But, it was in another Tarkington comedy, the one called "Tweedles," that I myself discovered how good an actress the years and the theater and Gregory Kelly had made out of my favorite Nibs. To anyone who saw the searching truth and the ginghamy dearness of her performance as Winsora Tweedles the success she scored in "Mrs. Partridge Presents" came as no surprise.

NOW "EVE'S FALL"

Now in "The Fall of Eve" she is all there is. It is a play about a jealous little wife who gets tipsy on champagne, fondles her husband's best and much embarrassed friend in the dusk under the impression that it is her husband himself and then wakes up next morning with the mistaken impression that she had been an unwitting adulteress. If, from this brief summary, you conclude that "The Fall of Eve" is a dull, daffy and dimly distasteful drama, it is because there is no use keeping anything from you. But then, if it must be recorded that "The Fall of Eve" is no great shakes—is, in fact, no shakes at all, the same thing must be said as usual, of all the plays which August has brought to New York. September with ten new plays its first week and as many the week after, will tell a different story. It always does.

It would take 460 sperm candles to equal the illumination of the average electrically lighted home.

to bring, establish and maintain the motion-picture industry in California than any other one man. He not only was instrumental in landing the Warner Brothers' business there, but he induced them to buy homes in Hollywood.

"I have found this, too," he continued. "You can get money from the banks of Los Angeles, when your proposition is 'right,' just as readily as you can get it in New York or any other place.

"The only people who are starting motion-picture companies anywhere else are those who are trying to promote—who want to sell stock. I guess there are a lot of them. But we have no protest against the reception we have had from the financial institutions of the West. They have treated us fine."

Carl Laemmle, head of the Universal Pictures Corporation, is in Europe, but officials at the executive offices scoff at the idea of any cessation in Universal's activities in the West.

"Why," said S. Singerman, departmental manager, "we have a studio here across the river at Fort Lee which has not been used by Universal for ten years. We rent it out sometimes to other companies. Pathe made 'Into the Net' there with Jack Mulhall about a year ago and some Sawyer-Lubin plays were filmed there with Barbara La Marr. But nothing by Universal.

"In fact, we couldn't make Westerns here—and Universal has turned out a lot of them. We haven't any of the 'great open spaces' here necessary to their production. Furthermore, we are still building at our Universal City plant and expect to continue centering our activities there. We came to this decision because it's the least expensive place to film our plays. Your sunshine makes it so."

Mr. Singerman added that the cost of labor, skilled and common, was so little greater in New York than Hollywood that it had slight effect on the final total of production cost.

GET BIG END

Famous Players-Lasky is producing approximately 60 per cent of its current photoplays in Hollywood and 40 per cent in New York and elsewhere. Charles E. McCarthy, exploitation manager, speaking for the company in the absence of other executives, said numerous reasons existed for this.

"For instance," he said, "'The Street of Forgotten Men' could best be filmed in New York because it is typically a New York story. We needed the great Easter fashion parade on Fifth avenue and we needed scenes from the bowery. 'Night Life in New York' is another typically New York story and we had to have the New York 'atmosphere' for it. For 'Wild, Wild Susan' we needed Hotel Astor, Park Lane and the New York fire department.

"'Lovers in Quarantine,' filmed in Bermuda with Bebe Daniels, might just as well have been filmed at Catalina Island, only, Miss Daniels was here and virtually all we needed in the company were here. So—why cross the continent to Catalina?

"On the other hand, it would have been impossible to make such plays as 'The Covered Wagon,' 'North of 36' and 'The Pony Express' in New York. They had to come from the West just as most of the 60 per cent we are producing there had to come from the West. It is the logical place for a majority of our productions. The Paramount studio in Long Island is the largest studio in the world under one roof, but it is nothing as compared to our Hollywood studio which covers acres. Mr. Zukor has very emphatically stated that he had no idea of lessening production in the West."

OLD COLOR GONE

Mr. McCarthy evinced a bit of grim humor in speaking of some of the famous bits of atmosphere provided by New York. The bowery, for instance, as shown in "The Street of Forgotten Men," was built on the Paramount lot in Long Island, especially for the filming. Gone is the bowery of the old days with its sordid lure, its misty night life, its phantom shadows, its Apache habitues. Gone are its colorful characters who lived hectic lives while the rest of the city slept. The strong arm of the law has reached into its very heart and ripped out the dens and denizens. Its "Dago red" liquor and its gangsters have given way to vichy and milk and to the band from the Salvation Army.

Even Chinatown has changed so that in order to get realistic scenes of life among the orientals, 'tis necessary to go over into Jersey. The evil part of New York's Chinatown has disappeared, just as Bohemia drifted from Greenwich Village with the coming of the tourists. The Chinese resent the appearance of the cameramen and chatter in a strange tongue at the actors and actresses who come to their narrow little streets and pagoda houses to film scenes for American photoplays. In fact, it often is found more satisfactory in New York to build studio sets of Chinese quarters and such places ah the bowery than to use the natural places as they now stand. Their old color has gone.

They can't improve upon the statue of the Goddess of Liberty or make more colorful the crowds which pour into Ellis Island and land in town opposite the Battery. Nor can they produce the beauty spots which nature has provided in the wide-open West. Both "atmospheres" probably always will be used in pictures, but the West will continue to produce the greater number of all photoplays.

At least, that is what the heads of the great companies say.

COWBOY STORY TO BE TOM TYLER VEHICLE

After analyzing the entertainment values of several stories by noted authors, it was announced yesterday that "Sir Piegan Passes," will be the next starring vehicle for Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s brand-new western star under a long-term contract to the producing firm. The story was written by W. C. Tuttle and deals with the adventures of a cowboy. Production is slated to begin in a few weeks when work of editing Tyler's first western, "Let's Go, Gallagher," has been completed.

THREE NEW FILMS AT PICTURE HOUSES

Three new photoplays make their debuts this week at the film theaters. Included are "Wild Horse Mesa," with Jack Holt and Billie Dove, Metropolitan; "Never the Twain Shall Meet," with Bert Lytell and Anita Stewart, Loew's; and "Off the Highway," with William V. Mong, Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowers, Forum.

Other attractions are "The Iron Horse," Criterion; "The Freshman," Million Dollar; "Sally of the Sawdust," Rialto; "The Unholy Three," Alhambra; "Hell's Highroad," Tally's; "The Gold Rush," Egyptian, and "Fine Clothes," West Coast Boulevard.

"Off the Highway" at Forum

William V. Mong, Marguerite De La Motte and John Bowers head the all-star cast of "Off the Highway" Hunt Stromberg's picturization of Tom Gallon's widely read novel, "Tatterly," now at the Forum Theater.

"Off the Highway" is an engrossing picture laid in that ever-fascinating realm, the artist's colony, and deals with the struggle for existence of a young artist and his sweetheart model.

Lloyd at Million

While the biggest thrills of Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman," at the Million Dollar Theater, and some of the heartiest laughs, take place during a football game, this picture is not essentially a football comedy. Rather, it is a college story, concerned with the experiences of a freshman who determined to become the most popular man in college. The situations brought about by his endeavors provoke the laughter that is rampant throughout the picture.

Adding to the collegiate atmosphere are Waring's Pennsylvanians the singing-playing college men, assisted by David Murray and Hilda Lee in an entertaining prologue.

Circus Tale at Rialto

"Sally of the Sawdust," now playing at the Rialto Theater, is D. W. Griffith's latest superproduction. The photoplay is replete with humor.

Carol Dempster and W. C. Fields, noted stage comedian, have the principal roles. The production is an adaptation of the stage success in which Madge Kennedy and W. C. Fields played a year on Broadway, New York.

"Wild Horse Mesa" Starts

Thousands of wild horses, hundreds of Navajo Indians and a new package of thrills, romance and adventure characteristic of the prolific pen of Zane Grey, the author, are the attractive features of "Wild Horse Mesa," the current attraction at the Metropolitan.

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., are the leading players in the picture which is described as whirlwind action from start to finish. The story centers about the ruthless persecution of wild horses in the days when cruel methods were adopted by horse thieves to capture them in wholesale quantities.

"Grand Opera versus Jazz" is Frank L. Newman's newest novel stage offering—an amazing contest featuring ten big specialties. The decision of the contest is left with the audiences.

"Unholy Three" Stays

"The Unholy Three," which has been playing to record-breaking crowds at the Alhambra Theater, is held over for another week. Many consider it the best film of 1925, and the greatest crook-drama of all times, with Lon Chaney playing the leading role.

The story deals with the adventures of three master criminals recruited from a dime museum, a ventriloquist, a giant and a dwarf, who are banded together in an amazing partnership of crime. The picture was directed by Tod Browning, and contains many scenes of heart interest from the underworld, with touches of comedy. Supporting Lon Chaney are Mae Busch, Matt Moore, Victor McLaglen and others.

South Sea Story at Loew's

"East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet!"

So Kipling wrote, and upon this Peter B. Kyne based his enchanting romance of California and the South Seas, "Never the Twain Shall Meet," which is at Loew's State this week.

The story deals with a half caste island princess, Tanca, played by Anita Stewart, and her hopeless love for Dan Pritchard, scion of a wealthy San Francisco family. Their attempt to cast aside the barriers of convention that stand in their way, in the languorous tropical isles of the South Seas, is the theme of the story. Bert Lytell plays the American youth. Huntley Gordon, Justine Johnstone, Lionel Belmore and Florence Turner also are featured in the cast.

Fanchon and Marco present an atmospheric prologue to the feature entitled "South Seas Ideas," with Novelle Brothers, Roy Smoot and an array of Lotus Land Beauties. Gino Severi, famous conductor-composer, has been especially engaged as leader of the Loew's State Music Masters, and will present his own hauntingly beautiful score of Polynesian music.

Leatrice at Tally's

"Hell's Highroad," the story of suddenly acquired wealth and the sorrow it sometimes entails, is the current attraction at Tally's Theater. Leatrice Joy is the star of the production.

It is the first picture produced by Cecil B. DeMille in his new studio. "Hell's Highroad" is done in the usual lavish De Mille manner.

"Gold Rush" Continues

Entering its twelfth week, "The Gold Rush," Charlie Chaplin's ten-part comedy-drama presenting the funny side of the hardships of the "sourdoughs" in the Klondike gold strike, continues to draw crowds to Grauman's Egyptian Theater.

Sid Grauman presents a stage introduction, "Charlie Chaplin's Dream," which offers beautiful girls in glittering crystal costumes and a novel repertoire of songs and dances, with a scintillating panoramic spectacle of the Land of the Midnight Sun as a background. The unique film Grauman produced to introduce the cinema stars at the world premiere of the picture, animated by the spoken voice, is continued by popular request during the engagement.

"Fine Clothes" Showing

With an all-star cast headed by Alma Rubens, Lewis Stone, Percy Marmont and Raymond Griffith, "Fine Clothes" opens today at the West Coast Boulevard Theater, Washington and Vermont.

This bill is supplemented by West Coast Presentations, which includes a new and novel "Idea," staged by Fanchon and Marco, assisted in the symphonic interpretation by Rube Wolff's Boulevardiers.

"Iron Horse" at Criterion

That William Fox success, "The Iron Horse" is now showing at the Criterion Theater. This initial downtown engagement is limited.

The film was directed by John Ford and is a powerful screen description of the building of the first transcontinental railroad. The cast includes George O'Brien and Madge Bellamy, supported by J. Farrell MacDonald, Francis Powers, James Welch, Gladys Hulette and others.

The Criterion bill also includes an atmospheric prologue, featuring a group of Iroquois Indians, a comedy, newsreels and organ numbers by Leonard Clark.

EXTREMES SEEN IN WAR DRAMA

orful city in the world, the contrasts that it later went through make the drama of this story all the more gripping. Miss Mathis and Director Curt Rehfeld, who also had an active hand in molding parts of "The Four Horsemen," especially stress the point in this production that the central family of five daughters, with their loves and hates, and their husbands and children, is just a typical middle-class family of any country.

Hovering over this household, like a guardian angel, diffusing sunshine, alleviating sorrow wherever she can, is Tanta Ilde, a frail little wraith of a woman of gentle birth. With her live four buxom daughters, beautiful each in their distinctive fashion and radiantly happy with their little home affairs. The fifth girl is married to a scholar who, with his professorship at a neighboring university, maintains his family in a very comfortable fashion.

One of the daughters, Fanny, everyone looks to for a brilliant marriage with the dashing young Count Maxim von Hartig, of an aristocratic family. However, in an effort to aid a girl friend in distress she becomes involved in a chain of circumstances which make her conduct appear so questionable as to bring about the cancellation of the engagement by the Count's mother. Her own family even view her with suspicion to such an extent that she is forced from the home and into the poverty of the streets.

During the most distressing period of the war, hungry and broken-spirited in her efforts to convince her family of her innocence, she finally chooses the "easy" life. Meanwhile, the family, by varying stages, has been reduced to stark destitution. Although they feel they cannot condone her sins, they quite enjoy the money she earns in her fashionable gambling house. It is even rumored by this time that she is the mistress of an ex-butcher who, in the maelstrom of events, has become a ridiculously wealthy war profiteer.

Returning from the war and greeting her as a hostess in her night club, the Count feels a return of affection which even her surroundings fail to dim. When his mother beseeches her aid as a final sacrifice in a long series of unselfish acts she succeeds in prejudicing the Count so he gravitates toward a wealthy South American heiress.

Perhaps the most delightful point of this story, originally by Edith O'Shaunnessy, is the number of subplots running through the plot. Each sister has her own little love affair, ripening and culminating in joy or sorrow at the end of the picture. And through it runs the fine-spirited little aunt.

From a group of dozens, even hundreds of elderly ladies the selection was made in favor of Lucy Beaumont. Miss Mathis claims that she stepped right out of the book, so perfect is her characterization of the role.

Anna Q. Nilsson plays the role of the misunderstood Fanny, and in her later scenes manages to wear some really soul-stirring gowns and head-dresses. As the count, Conway Tearle adds another type to his long list of screen impersonations.

The cast contains many brilliant names in the film firmament, such as May Allison, Ian Keith, John Sainpolis, Edward Earl, Carrie Daumery, Jean Hersholt, Hale Hamilton, Marcia Manon, Mary McAllister, George Billings, Thur Fairfax, Virginia Southern, Briggitta Clark, Katherine Chambers and Boris Karloff.

Antonio Balboni, who in private life is the husband of June Mathis, is responsible for some of the splendid atmospheric details of the production.

CHAPLIN GIVES HIS PHILOSOPHY

characters you have nothing. Producers assert that the public wants this, that, or the other—battle, murder and sudden death in evening dress and smoking jackets. That is the bunk. The public does not know what it wants, except that it wants an evening's entertainment. I try to give it that. Where the words leave off, gesture begins. Don't we speak of a person being speechless with rage, dancing with impatience or setting his teeth? The final motions of the soul are speechless, animal, grotesque, or of incomparable beauty.

"Some day," Chaplin continued, "I will do a film of gargantuan gayety and tenderness—everything enormous—jugs, bottles, fists, faces, grins, tears—all enormous. We can't make progress unless we get credit for trying. There are more people trying than the public generally supposes. Give us credit and we hope to do better."

DAVID KIRKLAND WILL DIRECT FRED THOMSON

David Kirkland has supplanted Del Andrews as director for Fred Thomson, according to an announcement by Milton Gardner, production manager for the F. B. O. Western star. Andrews recently completed "Riding the Winds," his fourth Thomson production, and will shortly resume work with another unit, doubtless at F. B. O.

fell, Peter Pan captured Nibs amid the chaos of collapsing scenery and blooded her severely. At the first word of the lecture Nibs dropped down on a canvas tree stump and blurted out her story—the story of word coming up from New England just before the performance, that her mother had died there in the seaport town which was her home. Whereupon, the toiling stage hands were startled out of their accustomed phlegm by the sight of Peter Pan, perhaps with some instinctive foreknowledge of a shadow that lay across her own pathway just ahead, dropping down beside the forlorn Nibs to pat her on the back a lot and cry a little with her.

"THE LITTLE MINISTER"

A fortnight later, the play was to make room in the bill for "The Little Minister," and the tumultuous children would be disbanded. For most of them this meant the old, discouraging rounds of the managers' offices. It was, therefore, to a most worried Nibs that Miss Adams spoke of this impending dispersal one night when, as always, the two of them stood together in the tree trunk waiting each for her cue to step out onto the swarming stage.

"Nibs," Peter Pan whispered there in the twilight of the wing, "would you care to stay on with the company and play one of the village women in 'The Little Minister'?"

At which sudden radiance of prospect, Nibs behaved in a manner that calmer folk reserve for the more momentous moments of life, as when, for instance, they are hit on the head with a steel girder. For Nibs replied by just reeling silently out of the tree trunk and Tootles, the twins, Michael, Wendy and all were somewhat taken back at her wordless and swaying advent in the scene full three minutes before her cue. No lecture followed this disaster, but the next night, when once more Nibs stood waiting for that cue, she heard the voice of Mr. Pan whispering glacially:

"Nibs, if you think you can somehow manage to stay in the tree trunk I should like to talk with you about 'The Little Minister.'"

SAD ENDING

So Ruth Gordon was in the wings a fortnight later when once again Lady Babbie danced through Caddam Wood. It was a revival that lasted only a little time, for before long the tour was suspended and Babbie was hurrying west. The tidings had come that Annie Adams was dying in Salt Lake City.

The engagement with Maude Adams was the first chance that came the way of a young and grotesquely hopeful player who had arrived from Wollaston, Mass., the year before, with whatever money had accumulated under the fishhooks in the ginger jar on the mantel piece. In that year she had doubtless played Lady Macbeth quite often to the great admiration of her reflection in the mirror of her bureau in a theatrical boarding house and, at the dramatic school she attended by day, had filled notebook after notebook with such helpful hints, for instance, as the instruction that when playing a minor role, she should always step onto the stage with her left foot first but while playing a major role she should inaugurate her entrance with the other. (I am not making this up. That's what the teacher really said.)

I suppose other engagements followed the resumed Maude Adams tour but I first heard the sound of the distant trumpets again when I returned, a battle-scarred veteran of the Marne and Argonne, to learn that somehow the American drama had been worrying on without me and that in this interval, the Nibs of yesteryear had attracted notice (of various kinds) by playing the baby talk lady with Gregory Kelly in "Seventeen." But, it was in another Tarkington comedy, the one called "Tweedles," that I myself discovered how good an actress the years and the theater and Gregory Kelly had made out of my favorite Nibs. To anyone who saw the searching truth and the ginghamy dearness of her performance as Winsora Tweedles the success she scored in "Mrs. Partridge Presents" came as no surprise.

NOW "EVE'S FALL"

Now in "The Fall of Eve" she is all there is. It is a play about a jealous little wife who gets tipsy on champagne, fondles her husband's best and much embarrassed friend in the dusk under the impression that it is her husband himself and then wakes up next morning with the mistaken impression that she had been an unwitting adulteress. If, from this brief summary, you conclude that "The Fall of Eve" is a dull, daffy and dimly distasteful drama, it is because there is no use keeping anything from you. But then, if it must be recorded that "The Fall of Eve" is no great shakes—is, in fact, no shakes at all, the same thing must be said as usual, of all the plays which August has brought to New York. September with ten new plays its first week and as many the week after, will tell a different story. It always does.

It would take 460 sperm candles to equal the illumination of the average electrically lighted home.

FILM INDUSTRY TO REMAIN HERE

to bring, establish and maintain the motion-picture industry in California than any other one man. He not only was instrumental in landing the Warner Brothers' business there, but he induced them to buy homes in Hollywood.

"I have found this, too," he continued. "You can get money from the banks of Los Angeles, when your proposition is 'right,' just as readily as you can get it in New York or any other place.

"The only people who are starting motion-picture companies anywhere else are those who are trying to promote—who want to sell stock. I guess there are a lot of them. But we have no protest against the reception we have had from the financial institutions of the West. They have treated us fine."

Carl Laemmle, head of the Universal Pictures Corporation, is in Europe, but officials at the executive offices scoff at the idea of any cessation in Universal's activities in the West.

"Why," said S. Singerman, departmental manager, "we have a studio here across the river at Fort Lee which has not been used by Universal for ten years. We rent it out sometimes to other companies. Pathe made 'Into the Net' there with Jack Mulhall about a year ago and some Sawyer-Lubin plays were filmed there with Barbara La Marr. But nothing by Universal.

"In fact, we couldn't make Westerns here—and Universal has turned out a lot of them. We haven't any of the 'great open spaces' here necessary to their production. Furthermore, we are still building at our Universal City plant and expect to continue centering our activities there. We came to this decision because it's the least expensive place to film our plays. Your sunshine makes it so."

Mr. Singerman added that the cost of labor, skilled and common, was so little greater in New York than Hollywood that it had slight effect on the final total of production cost.

GET BIG END

Famous Players-Lasky is producing approximately 60 per cent of its current photoplays in Hollywood and 40 per cent in New York and elsewhere. Charles E. McCarthy, exploitation manager, speaking for the company in the absence of other executives, said numerous reasons existed for this.

"For instance," he said, "'The Street of Forgotten Men' could best be filmed in New York because it is typically a New York story. We needed the great Easter fashion parade on Fifth avenue and we needed scenes from the bowery. 'Night Life in New York' is another typically New York story and we had to have the New York 'atmosphere' for it. For 'Wild, Wild Susan' we needed Hotel Astor, Park Lane and the New York fire department.

"'Lovers in Quarantine,' filmed in Bermuda with Bebe Daniels, might just as well have been filmed at Catalina Island, only, Miss Daniels was here and virtually all we needed in the company were here. So—why cross the continent to Catalina?

"On the other hand, it would have been impossible to make such plays as 'The Covered Wagon,' 'North of 36' and 'The Pony Express' in New York. They had to come from the West just as most of the 60 per cent we are producing there had to come from the West. It is the logical place for a majority of our productions. The Paramount studio in Long Island is the largest studio in the world under one roof, but it is nothing as compared to our Hollywood studio which covers acres. Mr. Zukor has very emphatically stated that he had no idea of lessening production in the West."

OLD COLOR GONE

Mr. McCarthy evinced a bit of grim humor in speaking of some of the famous bits of atmosphere provided by New York. The bowery, for instance, as shown in "The Street of Forgotten Men," was built on the Paramount lot in Long Island, especially for the filming. Gone is the bowery of the old days with its sordid lure, its misty night life, its phantom shadows, its Apache habitues. Gone are its colorful characters who lived hectic lives while the rest of the city slept. The strong arm of the law has reached into its very heart and ripped out the dens and denizens. Its "Dago red" liquor and its gangsters have given way to vichy and milk and to the band from the Salvation Army.

Even Chinatown has changed so that in order to get realistic scenes of life among the orientals, 'tis necessary to go over into Jersey. The evil part of New York's Chinatown has disappeared, just as Bohemia drifted from Greenwich Village with the coming of the tourists. The Chinese resent the appearance of the cameramen and chatter in a strange tongue at the actors and actresses who come to their narrow little streets and pagoda houses to film scenes for American photoplays. In fact, it often is found more satisfactory in New York to build studio sets of Chinese quarters and such places ah the bowery than to use the natural places as they now stand. Their old color has gone.

They can't improve upon the statue of the Goddess of Liberty or make more colorful the crowds which pour into Ellis Island and land in town opposite the Battery. Nor can they produce the beauty spots which nature has provided in the wide-open West. Both "atmospheres" probably always will be used in pictures, but the West will continue to produce the greater number of all photoplays.

At least, that is what the heads of the great companies say.

COWBOY STORY TO BE TOM TYLER VEHICLE

After analyzing the entertainment values of several stories by noted authors, it was announced yesterday that "Sir Piegan Passes," will be the next starring vehicle for Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s brand-new western star under a long-term contract to the producing firm. The story was written by W. C. Tuttle and deals with the adventures of a cowboy. Production is slated to begin in a few weeks when work of editing Tyler's first western, "Let's Go, Gallagher," has been completed.

THREE NEW FILMS AT PICTURE HOUSES

Three new photoplays make their debuts this week at the film theaters. Included are "Wild Horse Mesa," with Jack Holt and Billie Dove, Metropolitan; "Never the Twain Shall Meet," with Bert Lytell and Anita Stewart, Loew's; and "Off the Highway," with William V. Mong, Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowers, Forum.

Other attractions are "The Iron Horse," Criterion; "The Freshman," Million Dollar; "Sally of the Sawdust," Rialto; "The Unholy Three," Alhambra; "Hell's Highroad," Tally's; "The Gold Rush," Egyptian, and "Fine Clothes," West Coast Boulevard.

"Off the Highway" at Forum

William V. Mong, Marguerite De La Motte and John Bowers head the all-star cast of "Off the Highway" Hunt Stromberg's picturization of Tom Gallon's widely read novel, "Tatterly," now at the Forum Theater.

"Off the Highway" is an engrossing picture laid in that ever-fascinating realm, the artist's colony, and deals with the struggle for existence of a young artist and his sweetheart model.

Lloyd at Million

While the biggest thrills of Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman," at the Million Dollar Theater, and some of the heartiest laughs, take place during a football game, this picture is not essentially a football comedy. Rather, it is a college story, concerned with the experiences of a freshman who determined to become the most popular man in college. The situations brought about by his endeavors provoke the laughter that is rampant throughout the picture.

Adding to the collegiate atmosphere are Waring's Pennsylvanians the singing-playing college men, assisted by David Murray and Hilda Lee in an entertaining prologue.

Circus Tale at Rialto

"Sally of the Sawdust," now playing at the Rialto Theater, is D. W. Griffith's latest superproduction. The photoplay is replete with humor.

Carol Dempster and W. C. Fields, noted stage comedian, have the principal roles. The production is an adaptation of the stage success in which Madge Kennedy and W. C. Fields played a year on Broadway, New York.

"Wild Horse Mesa" Starts

Thousands of wild horses, hundeds of Navajo Indians and a new package of thrills, romance and adventure characteristic of the prolific pen of Zane Grey, the author, are the attractive features of "Wild Horse Mesa," the current attraction at the Metropolitan.

Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., are the leading players in the picture which is described as whirlwind action from start to finish. The story centers about the ruthless persecution of wild horses in the days when cruel methods were adopted by horse thieves to capture them in wholesale quantities.

"Grand Opera versus Jazz" is Frank L. Newman's newest novel stage offering—an amazing contest featuring ten big specialties. The decision of the contest is left with the audiences.

"Unholy Three" Stays

"The Unholy Three," which has been playing to record-breaking crowds at the Alhambra Theater, is held over for another week. Many consider it the best film of 1925, and the greatest crook-drama of all times, with Lon Chaney playing the leading role.

The story deals with the adventures of three master criminals recruited from a dime museum, a ventriloquist, a giant and a dwarf, who are banded together in an amazing partnership of crime. The picture was directed by Tod Browning, and contains many scenes of heart interest from the underworld, with touches of comedy. Supporting Lon Chaney are Mae Busch, Matt Moore, Victor McLaglen and others.

South Sea Story at Loew's

"East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet!"

So Kipling wrote, and upon this Peter B. Kyne based his enchanting romance of California and the South Seas, "Never the Twain Shall Meet," which is at Loew's State this week.

The story deals with a half caste island princess, Tanca, played by Anita Stewart, and her hopeless love for Dan Pritchard, scion of a wealthy San Francisco family. Their attempt to cast aside the barriers of convention that stand in their way, in the languorous tropical isles of the South Seas, is the theme of the story. Bert Lytell plays the American youth. Huntley Gordon, Justine Johnstone, Lionel Belmore and Florence Turner also are featured in the cast.

Fanchon and Marco present an atmospheric prologue to the feature entitled "South Seas Ideas," with Novelle Brothers, Roy Smoot and an array of Lotus Land Beauties. Gino Severi, famous conductor-composer, has been especially engaged as leader of the Loew's State Music Masters, and will present his own hauntingly beautiful score of Polynesian music.

Leatrice at Tally's

"Hell's Highroad," the story of suddenly acquired wealth and the sorrow it sometimes entails, is the current attraction at Tally's Theater. Leatrice Joy is the star of the production.

It is the first picture produced by Cecil B. DeMille in his new studio. "Hell's Highroad" is done in the usual lavish De Mille manner.

"Gold Rush" Continues

Entering its twelfth week, "The Gold Rush," Charlie Chaplin's ten-part comedy-drama presenting the funny side of the hardships of the "sourdoughs" in the Klondike gold strike, continues to draw crowds to Grauman's Egyptian Theater.

Sid Grauman presents a stage introduction, "Charlie Chaplin's Dream," which offers beautiful girls in glittering crystal costumes and a novel repertoire of songs and dances, with a scintillating panoramic spectacle of the Land of the Midnight Sun as a background. The unique film Grauman produced to introduce the cinema stars at the world premiere of the picture, animated by the spoken voice, is continued by popular request during the engagement.

"Fine Clothes" Showing

With an all-star cast headed by Alma Rubens, Lewis Stone, Percy Marmont and Raymond Griffith, "Fine Clothes" opens today at the West Coast Boulevard Theater, Washington and Vermont.

This bill is supplemented by West Coast Presentations, which includes a new and novel "Idea," staged by Fanchon and Marco, assisted in the symphonic interpretation by Rube Wolff's Boulevardiers.

"Iron Horse" at Criterion

That William Fox success, "The Iron Horse" is now showing at the Criterion Theater. This initial downtown engagement is limited.

The film was directed by John Ford and is a powerful screen description of the building of the first transcontinental railroad. The cast includes George O'Brien and Madge Bellamy, supported by J. Farrell MacDonald, Francis Powers, James Welch, Gladys Hulette and others.

The Criterion bill also includes an atmospheric prologue, featuring a group of Iroquois Indians, a comedy, newsreels and organ numbers by Leonard Clark.

orful city in the world, the contrasts that it later went through make the drama of this story all the more gripping. Miss Mathis and Director Curt Rehfeld, who also had an active hand in molding parts of "The Four Horsemen," especially stress the point in this production that the central family of five daughters, with their loves and hates, and their husbands and children, is just a typical middle-class family of any country.

Hovering over this household, like a guardian angel, diffusing sunshine, alleviating sorrow wherever she can, is Tanta Ilde, a frail little wraith of a woman of gentle birth. With her live four buxom daughters, beautiful each in their distinctive fashion and radiantly happy with their little home affairs. The fifth girl is married to a scholar who, with his professorship at a neighboring university, maintains his family in a very comfortable fashion.

One of the daughters, Fanny, everyone looks to for a brilliant marriage with the dashing young Count Maxim von Hartig, of an aristocratic family. However, in an effort to aid a girl friend in distress she becomes involved in a chain of circumstances which make her conduct appear so questionable as to bring about the cancellation of the engagement by the Count's mother. Her own family even view her with suspicion to such an extent that she is forced from the home and into the poverty of the streets.

During the most distressing period of the war, hungry and broken-spirited in her efforts to convince her family of her innocence, she finally chooses the "easy" life. Meanwhile, the family, by varying stages, has been reduced to stark destitution. Although they feel they cannot condone her sins, they quite enjoy the money she earns in her fashionable gambling house. It is even rumored by this time that she is the mistress of an ex-butcher who, in the maelstrom of events, has become a ridiculously wealthy war profiteer.

Returning from the war and greeting her as a hostess in her night club, the Count feels a return of affection which even her surroundings fail to dim. When his mother beseeches her aid as a final sacrifice in a long series of unselfish acts she succeeds in prejudicing the Count so he gravitates toward a wealthy South American heiress.

Perhaps the most delightful point of this story, originally by Edith O'Shaunnessy, is the number of subplots running through the plot. Each sister has her own little love affair, ripening and culminating in joy or sorrow at the end of the picture. And through it runs the fine-spirited little aunt.

From a group of dozens, even hundreds of elderly ladies the selection was made in favor of Lucy Beaumont. Miss Mathis claims that she stepped right out of the book, so perfect is her characterization of the role.

Anna Q. Nilsson plays the role of the misunderstood Fanny, and in her later scenes manages to wear some really soul-stirring gowns and head-dresses. As the count, Conway Tearle adds another type to his long list of screen impersonations.

The cast contains many brilliant names in the film firmament, such as May Allison, Ian Keith, John Sainpolis, Edward Earl, Carrie Daumery, Jean Hersholt, Hale Hamilton, Marcia Manon, Mary McAllister, George Billings, Thur Fairfax, Virginia Southern, Briggitta Clark, Katherine Chambers and Boris Karloff.

Antonio Balboni, who in private life is the husband of June Mathis, is responsible for some of the splendid atmospheric details of the production.

CHAPLIN GIVES HIS PHILOSOPHY

characters you have nothing. Producers assert that the public wants this, that, or the other—battle, murder and sudden death in evening dress and smoking jackets. That is the bunk. The public does not know what it wants, except that it wants an evening's entertainment. I try to give it that. Where the words leave off, gesture begins. Don't we speak of a person being speechless with rage, dancing with impatience or setting his teeth? The final motions of the soul are speechless, animal, grotesque, or of incomparable beauty.

"Some day," Chaplin continued, "I will do a film of gargantuan gayety and tenderness—everything enormous—jugs, bottles, fists, faces, grins, tears—all enormous. We can't make progress unless we get credit for trying. There are more people trying than the public generally supposes. Give us credit and we hope to do better."

DAVID KIRKLAND WILL DIRECT FRED THOMSON

David Kirkland has supplanted Del Andrews as director for Fred Thomson, according to an announcement by Milton Gardner, production manager for the F. B. O. Western star. Andrews recently completed "Riding the Winds," his fourth Thomson production, and will shortly resume work with another unit, doubtless at F. B. O.

Present-Day Favorites Sign New Contracts

As a fitting epilogue to the brilliant Greater Movie Season of 1925, ushered in by the splendor and gorgeousness of the fine quality of entertainment which marked the season—comes Paramount week.

Paramount week, an annual event celebrated by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which opens today and continues for seven days, is a timely institution—for it is in the nature of a promise of Paramount quality in its motion-picture product for the coming fall and winter seasons—a promise that the same quality of product which distinguished Greater Movie Season will be offered, not only for that week but during the months to come.

The promise is backed up by the announcement of its pictures, the stars and directors who made them and the leading authors and playwrights who prepared the stories and plays from which they are being adapted.

Among the offerings for Paramount week are some of the most notable productions which have ever borne the famous trade mark. These include Richard Dix in "The Lucky Devil," Cecil B. De Mille's "The Ten Commandments," "The Trouble With Wives," featuring Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor, Irvin Willat's "Rugged Water" with Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery, James Cruze's "Beggar on Horseback," Allan Dwan's production "Night Life of New York," with Ernest Torrence, Dorothy Gish and Rod LaRocque; "In the Name of Love," with Ricardo Cortez, Greta Nissen, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton; "The Street of Forgotten Men," a Herbert Brenon production with Percy Marmont, Neil Hamilton and Mary Brian, and Sidney Olcott's "Not So Long Ago," featuring Betty Bronson, Ricardo Cortez and other stars.

In Los Angeles, Managing Director Frank L. Newman, of the Metropolitan theater is offering for a Paramount week attraction, Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa" with Jack Holt, Esther Ralston, Noah Beery and Doug Fairbanks, Jr. "Wild Horse Mesa" is described not only as Zane Grey's greatest story, but also as one of the most thrilling western romances ever screened and a picture which promises to do justice not only to the name of Paramount but also to satisfy the discriminating tastes of the Los Angeles theatergoing public.

In addition to the photoplay, Newman, assisted by Milton Feld, production director, is preparing some novel entertaining stage features, the type for which he has already become famed as Los Angeles' favorite managing director in the few short weeks he has filled that positin since arriving from Kansas City.

Paramount week is the occasion for the announcement by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of the signing of several new stars and featured players to be seen in current and forthcoming productions. Notable among these are Gilda Gray, the famous shimmy dancer who recently broke all records at the Metropolitan and other theaters during her tour of the country; Florenz Ziegfeld, who will make a picture for Paramount release, glorifying the American girl; the famous Beery brothers, Noah and Wallace; Thomas Meighan who has just signed a new contract to make Paramount pictures for several years to come; Raymond Hatton, sterling character actor; Raymond Griffith, who will make Paramount pictures exclusively; Adolphe Menjou to a long-term contract; Douglas MacLean, whose future productions will bear the Parmount trade mark; Harold Lloyd, recognized as one of the leading comedians, now engaged in making his first picture for Paramount release; Bebe Daniels, to a new contract; Warner Baxter, and other noted players.

NEW STORIES

Equally brilliant is the list of directors and the new stories and plays which have been purchased and are being prepared for adaptation to the screen via Paramount. Notable among the latter is "The Wanderer" just completed, and in view of advance criticisms, may make new wonderful laurels for the stars, directors and producing organization. The grandeur, beauty and heart-compelling interest of this one production alone is worthy of special mention, according to its producers and critics. Among its featured players is beautiful and talented Greta Nissen, the Danish discovery of Jesse L. Lasky, whom the producer has boldly prophesied will be one of the leading scintillants of the silver sheet in less than six months.

Gloria Swanson and Pola Negri, the recognized queens of the screen, are numbered among Paramount luminaries in forthcoming pictures.

Of special significance is the announcement of the signing of D. W. Griffith, long recognized as one of the greatest geniuses of the screen. Henceforth, Griffith will make pictures exclusively for Paramount release.

Paramount week is not an infant institution nor a new idea. This is the eighth annual Paramount week. Since the first celebration of the event eight years ago, the name "Paramount" has been constantly growing in importance, not only to theater exhibitors, but also to the public who view the screen entertainment, until today it stands definitely for genuine ideals—the finest quality of photoplays; the works of the greatest authors and playwrights and producers and the histrionic ability of the screen's most capable actors and actresses—and it's slogan—"If it's a Paramount picture it's the best show in town!" is making good in spirit and in practice.

TALENTED TRILBY

Trilby Clark, Australian beauty, who is playing a leading role in the Hunt Stromberg production, "The Prairie Pirate," looms as a promising contender for the lariat-twirling title contest, to be held by Will Rogers this week. Miss Clark, who was raised on the Australian flat lands, is adept at handling the rope and displays her proclivities in the picture now being filmed.

EUROPEAN TRIP INSPIRES HER

understand quite a bit of the language, but I do think it's the hardest one of all.

"The studio here is rather small—a glass stage, with most of the sets built outside. It is out in the country, too, about twenty minutes out of Munchen, lovely scenery, though, and very bracing air, so the drive out is quite a pleasure. Everyone is very friendly, and they have quaint customs of continually shaking hands and little formalities of 'Wie geht's' and 'Auf Wiedersehen' every morning and evening. On leaving the studio everyone lines up to shake hands as you go out the door. This is very Bavarian. Our smallest wishes are carried out immediately and they are very considerate in every way.

EUROPE'S GARDEN SPOT

"I shall never attempt to describe Lake Como, where we were rushed to location after one hectic day in Paris, immediately upon arriving. It is the garden spot of Europe. I took some snapshots and will send you some as soon as they are ready. Goodness only knows when that will be—they have no equivalent to 'hurry' in their vocabulary out here.

"We were lucky enough to go through Switzerland in the daytime, so we saw a great deal of it, including miles of Lake Lucerne, which is beautiful, also. I should love to stay in the Alps a few weeks. We had to stay overnight at a funny little hotel in Zurich before getting on the train for Munchen. In France we were quite all right, because, much to my amazement, everyone could understand my French—thanks to that dear M. Jomier and our charming lessons together. In Italy we quickly picked up enough phrases to get around, but here—that's a different matter.

"I'm dying to tell you about the remarkable Sunday we spent yesterday. Karl Kitchen invited us to come over to Salzburg, about two hours from here, just across the Austrian border, to have luncheon with Franz Lehar, the composer. Imagine how thrilled we were! We motored for miles through the marvelous, rugged Austrian Alps, by a chain of lakes, through deep black forests which sent out a rush of cold air like opening a huge door in a storage plant. It was a heavenly warm day, and the air was like wine. That alone would have been enough for me, riding along very fast with the auto top down, and meeting little if any traffic, so there was not the usual dust and grime that we experienced in Italy. We came to Salzburg, which is full of such interesting spots as Mozart's birthplace, and beautiful cathedrals, a fortress built in the thirteenth century and endless diverting sights.

"But we forgot everything else when we entered the villa of Franz Lehar at Ischtl. Once it had belonged to a French duke, and a great many things are still as they have always been. However, Herr Lehar has collected all kinds of antiques, and his rooms are a strange mixture of the modern and the extremely old. What a perfectly charming little man, with laughing eyes!

"He is preparing to put on in Vienna his latest operetta, 'Paganini.' His director and the author of the book were also there. To us fell the distinction of being the first outsiders to hear the new numbers. They are lovely. M. Lehar played for us himself. He spoke enthusiastically of meeting Mae Murray in Paris, and what a wonderful woman she is. Just now he is working on a theme for 'Romance,' to be adapted for Geraldine Farrar. He took us all over the strange house with its ancient Viennese furniture and porcelain stoves, to his workroom one the top floor. On leaving, this perfect host put us in our car and stood on the front steps waving us out of sight as long as we could see.

"Good heavens! How hard to come down to Munich again and start in the routine of work! However, Virginia and I both long to get back to Hollywood and our own studios again, and we are both sure we'll want to work harder than ever when we do get back. This is no Pollyanna talk, you know—it's just that we both feel stimulated after seeing so much of things so worth while. All the other girls who have been here have had just the same reactions, I know."

"MERRY WIDOW" JOY OF WEEK

showing "The Limited Mail." This is an old-fashioned piece with some thrilling train wreck scenes and Monte Blue as the homespun hero. Of its kind it is very good and no doubt the children will like it.

FEATURED ORCHESTRA

The real feature of the Warner Theater is the orchestra under the direction of Herman Heller, formerly of Los Angeles and the Sid Grauman theaters. His orchestral numbers are a joy and should attract many music lovers to the theater.

Warner Brothers are also showing "The Love Hour" on Broadway. It is put out under the Vitagraph trademark but I have reason to believe it was made by Warner Brothers. Is it possible that they are putting out their second-rate productions as works of Vitagraph?

There may have been worse pictures than "The Love Hour," but not in my memory. The story is so artificial that it hardly seems possible that anyone would make it in this enlightened age.

Ben Bernie, the jazz king who presides over the Rialto Theater, puts on an entirely new act each week, with special costumes and jokes. All the inspiration he could find in "The Love Hour" was the fact that the hero was ordered to Switzerland for his health. So Ben Bernie, dressed up as an Alpine guide, engaged a few yodelers and did his best to make patrons forget the picture.

TERRIBLE STRUGGLE

Louise Fazenda and Willard ouis did their best to lessen the terrible monotony of the film and succeeded with some fine old slapstick scenes but, alas, they were struggling against terrible odds.

Thomas Meighan returned from Ireland just in time to learn that "The Man Who Found Himself" would not get a two weeks' run on Broadway. All of his previous pictures have played a second week in the Paramount houses.

Production is jogging along in the New York studios. Howard Higgin has practically finished "The New Commandment" for Robert Kane and will begin on the Michael Arlen story, "The Dancer from Paris," next week. Dorothy Sebastian is to play the title role. Dorothy Gish is going abroad to play "Nell Gwynne" for Graham Willcox Productions and if she improves any on the performance of Mary Pickford in the role years ago she will be doing well. Blanche Sweet and Ben Lyon are to appear as "Romeo and Juliet" in one sequence of "Bluebeard's Seven Wives," which Al Santell will start for Robert Kane next week. Richard Barthelmess is still in a quandary over whom to have as leading woman in "Just Suppose." Famous Players-Lasky and First National studios are fairly buzzing with activity. And all up and down Broadway where theaters are beginning to show their fall fashions in stage plays, prices of film rights are going sky high.

Marriage at an early age is more frequent in small towns and rural districts than in large cities.

Nigel Barrie Learns Producers in America Work Fast

Nigel Barrie has seen how fast American producers can work.

Barrie, who returned recently from several years in foreign productions, and has just completed the heavy lead in "Hogan's Alley" for Warner Brothers, was signed on Sunday last to play the heavy lead in "Steel, Preferred," a Metropolitan production.

On Tuesday he was told to prepare to leave for Pittsburgh, Pa., where the epic of the steel mills will be filmed. Two he was speeding just realizing that he had time to arrange portation of the robe which he had England to Holly

Musician Hurled into Stage Role by Fate's Twist

When the comedian of "La Poupee" fell against an iron bar and fractured his skull, Arthur Clayton was catapulted from the orchestra pit to the stage.

There was not the simultaneous action in this procedure that marks such events as outstanding "gags" in a motion-picture comedy. The setting was an African coastwise steamer en route to Durban, carrying about sixty persons comprising the company of artists scheduled to play in the production.

Clayton was the orchestra leader, but unconsciously he had memorized all parts. He did not realize this familiarly with the lines until the manager's deep despair over his inability to secure a substitute prompted Clayton to offer his services. He donned grease paint for the first time and made a successful stage debut with results that he was signed on a long-term contract.

The scene now shifts to Los Angeles, where Clayton returns to the Wilkes Orange Grove in the sensational cloudburst, "White Cargo," which opens tonight by popular demand, revealing the former captain of Sir Baden-Powell's original scouts in the Himalayas, in the vehicle in which he made his first American stage appearance.

Flashbacks of Clayton's past life glimpses him as a producer owning three road companies playing "East Lynne" and "The Midnight Wedding," to which Transvaal theatergoers trekked as much as 300 miles to see. He served with the Colonials in France and came out of it the victim of a gas raid, overcoming the effects by crossing the globe to California. Although born in England, Clayton passed most of his life below the Equator, going to South Africa as a boy and leaving in his early twenties at the outbreak of the war.

BOBBY STARTS

Bobby Agnew has started work on his starring role in "Up and Down," the last picture which Micky Neilan will direct under his present M.-G.-M. contract. This story is said to abound with hilarious comedy situations and gives Bobby an excellent opportunity to continue his rapid rise to stardom in this field.

ONE NEW OFFERING ON PROGRAM

"Whispering Wires" has its Los Angeles premiere at the Morosco today. This is the one opening on the legitimate bill. However, "White Cargo" starts a return engagement at the Orange Grove.

Continued attractions include "The Sap," Majestic; "Lady, Be Good," Mason, and "White Collars," Egan. At the Orpheum Frances White is the headliner, while Ann Greenway shares stellar honors at the Hillstreet. Bernard Bolden's trained animals are the Hippodrome's big offering, and "That's My Baby" is the new Burbank revue.

"Sap" Continues

The "Sap," starring Edward Everett Horton, the distinguished comedy actor, in the role of a [illegible] young failure who turns out to be a roaring success in business, begins its second laugh-creating week tonight at the Majestic Theater.

Miss Ruth Renick, the Majestic's new leading woman, scores brilliantly as the headless young wife in the "Sap." Producer Michael [illegible]'s well-chosen supporting cast numbers Franklin Pangborn, Ruth Stewart, Carold Wines, Herbert Bethew and Parks Jones.

A special Labor Day matinee will be given tomorrow in addition to the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

"White Cargo" Returns

Sensational in the extreme, a vivid presentation of life in the tropics, is the press and public verdict on "White Cargo" which returns by popular demand to the Wilkes Orange Grove tonight. "White Cargo," which recently enjoyed a seven weeks' run at the Grand-avenue playhouse, is predicted, during its return engagement, to rival the New York, London and Chicago presentations in popularity.

Ever since it closed its western premiere engagement here there has been an increasing demand for its return, with the result that Tom Wilkes sliced the San Francisco run in order to give Los Angeles the production it demands, along with the same cast including Capt. Arthur Clayton, Marcella Zabala, Leonard Mudie, George V. Pierce, and others.

New Burbank Revue

"That's My Baby" is the title of the new Burbank show this week, a sparkling revue of comedy and music. The comedy headliners, Lee Bud Harrison and Jack Miller, will be seen doing their antics, and the balance of favorites, along with the popular chorus of baby dolls, helps to make the revue a breezy success.

"That's My Baby" is second to the last of performances to be given by the present company of players. The week starting the 13th inst., an entire new company of players will make their appearance at the Burbank. Up to the present moment, however, no names have been given, although negotiations and contracts will be completed within a day or two.

"Lady, Be Good" Stays

The test of a good musical comedy lies in the way its songs "take," and by this standard, "Lady, Be Good," now playing at the Mason, under the Edward D. Smith banner, is a "knockout." For there is no performance, when half of the audience leaving the theater, or between the acts, is not whistling or humming one of the tunes of the show.

The most popular of the songs are "Fascinating Rhythm," "Lady, Be Good," "Hang On To Me" and "I'm a Little Jazz Bird," but the others come in for their fair share of favor, too.

T. Roy Barnes, Kitty and Ted Doner head the distinguished cast, which includes Ernest Wood, Hal Van Renssalaer, Edith Griffith, Rose Doner, Margaret Cullen Landis, Bernice Hough and Charles Cunningham.

Just "White Collars"

The phenomenal success of "White Collars," which is about to enter its eighty-fifth week at the Egan Theater, seems to prove that most theatergoers like to see themselves on the stage as they really are.

This comedy puts on the stage a typical middle class family. The play is kindly but candid. The virtues and failing of this family are alike made plain and vitally alive to the spectators. One sympathizes, even while he cannot for the life of him help laughing.

Then again, the excellent cast supplied by Frank Egan undoubtedly has had much to do with its great success. Craig Ward and Diane Esmonde have the leading roles. Other players are Zellah Covington, Marvel Quivey, Stuart Erwin, Blanche Douglas, Betty Sinclair, Paul Kruger and Gordon White.

Trained Animals Featured

The children are bound to be particularly delighted with this week's bill at the Hippodrome, for Bernard Bolden's trained animals are the big attraction.

In addition, Princess Chin Chee Toy, giving interpretations from the American and Chinese stage, is featured. Four other acts complete the vaudeville program.

On the screen "Dangerous Pleasure," with Dorothy Revier and Niles Welch, is the offering. Short film subjects are also included.

Justine at Hillstreet

Jimmy Savo, the clever comic, is featured in his new offering, "Slow Motion," in which he is supported by Miss Joan Franza at the Hillstreet.

Ann Greenway will be seen in a cycle of song characterizations. Allen White's "Entertainers" present a novel musical offering in which they dispense "blue" numbers. Nate Leipsic is a trickster that should be watched. Harry La Vail and Sister have a new athletic offering

On the screen, "Go Straight" is the feature and has as its stellar players, Owen Moore, Mary Carr and Gladys Hulette. A news reel, Aesop's fable and a comedy will round out the bill.

"Whispering Wires" Opens

"Whispering Wires," the mystery play which opens at the Morosco today, is more than a thriller, it keeps them on the edge of their seats from the moment the curtain rises until the final drop.

The play was adapted by Kate L. McLaurin from the famous story also entitled "Whispering Wires," by Henry Leverage. The whole plot revolves about a romance and has exceptionally good comedy relief, which is sustained throughout the piece.

Gavin Gordon, Morosco's brand new leading man, will make his debut in Los Angeles in this mystery play, opposite Charlotte Treadway. Others in the cast are Jane Morgan, J. Morris Foster, Joseph Eggenton, Ann McKay, Thomas Miller, Richard La Salle, Irving Kennedy, William Gregory and Harry Hoyt.

Frances White at Orpheum

Frances White, who used to be a chorus girl here in her earlier days, but is now an international star of songs, most of which are created by her in her own peculiar way, will headline the Orpheum bill opening Labor Day. Miss White was jumped out here directly from New York. She brings Billy Joyce as her pianist, and a lot of new songs, though her "Mississippi" and other well-known songs are still in her repertoire.

Jim Toney and Ann Norman are also featured in the new bill; they are veterans of vaudeville, and return in "You Know What I Mean."

Ernest R. Ball, who has written the ballads of a nation, brings a company of girls to exploit his numbers, but Ernie still sticks at the piano and sings his own in his inimitable fashion. Redmond and Wells are clever in "The Gyp," an act they alone can put over; Bert Melrose and his drop o' Scotch will thrill everyone—and he never takes a drop too much. Ben Bard and Jack Pearl, who have set a new pace in funny patter, will be held over another week, as a big feature. Hickey Brothers, Judson Cole, with topics and news, are features also to be enjoyed.

played the role of one of the Ugly Sisters in Cinderella while on tour in South Africa. In fact, it was as a laugh-maker that he won the plaudits of the British Empire, even if he was drafted into high-class drama with Sir George Alexander, Sir Herbert Tree and Cyril Maude after a while. Thus do they know him, for instance, in Australia, where his lot lay amongst the prettiest chorus girls with the finest voices to be found anywhere.

FORCED INTO FILMS

But seven years ago Percy, who wanted a holiday, sneaked over to New York. Such a jolly country, America, don't you know.

And that, doggone it, is how he broke into pictures and anguish. He hadn't been in town an hour before he was accosted by a man on Broadway—yes, just like that! It appeared that the man was looking for a tall, lean, starved looking Englishman. Maurice Tourneur and Elsie Ferguson positively had to have one for "Rose of the World."

"But, my dear chap, I am only here for three weeks," protested Percy. "I couldn't possibly, 'pon my word, I couldn't."

But when they discovered his name was Percy that finished it.

He began to suffer right away—that very first day—and he has been steadily increasing in unmitigated anguish ever since.

He thought it must surely have reached a climax in "If Winter Comes." But so gloriously poignant was his suffering in that, that they promptly commandeered him to suffer through "The Light that Failed," "The Clean Heart," "K, The Unknown," "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," right up to this "Street of Forgotten Men," at the Metropolitan, last week.

He has been every kind of a sufferer, crook, aristocrat, scientist, artist, doctor—he has had cancer and gone mad and lost his jobs and his girls and his wives and seen his children die, and been wrongly accused and misunderstood and imprisoned and nearly murdered—but oh, they haven't done with the fellow yet.

You may picture the studio staff engaged largely upon finding suitable anguish for Percy to portray—and wild and hilarious rejoicing when someone thought of Conrad's "Lord Jim." Having made him suffer every kind of sorrow on the land, they are now making him suffer all round the world and chiefly on the sea.

Once in a way they let him suffer well tailored, as in Franz Molnar's "Fine Clothes," but mostly he has to suffer in cheap, hand-me-downs or acute masculine negligee. But rich or poor, gentleman or bum, all they ask of Percy is continuous and profitable box-office suffering.

ESTELLE RESTS

Estelle Clark, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, has finished her role in Robert Z. Leonard's production of "A Little Bit of Broadway," and is having a long-needed rest. It is rumored that Miss Clark is to have a big part in a new M.-G.-M. production to start in about three weeks.

NEW OPERA PATH

MODERN MUSIC DRAMA DEVELOPS SINGERS

By Isabel Morse Jones

This season will witness the production of grand opera in this city by two companies in close proximity. Historians of Los Angeles can not recall a similar opportunity for study, comparison and observation of the different methods of presentation used by noted rivals. The big parts will be sung by artists from both the Metropolitan and the Chicago companies and the relative merits of each will be judged by individual performances. The interesting differences will come from comparison of the stage settings at the two totally different auditoriums, the Olympic and the Philharmonic, and the resources displayed there.

Fashions in opera settings are changing. The popular "stagey" sets with their multiplicity of detail seem to be giving place to the simplicities of suggestion just as they have on the speaking stage. We are more than ever, demanding the subtleties of opera, and a successful star must be as good an actor as he is musician. The music drama of the future is not to be made ridiculous by the absurdities of yesterday. Many of the mysteries of the legendary operas will be re-created by the minagination of the audience, and thus in the only way possible, will they become realities.

New styles in singing are sure to result from the development of new background. Artists will have more play and freedom and it is not too much to expect that the opera composers of the future will also be influenced. Tradition will have so little to do with a performance. The effect of the music will be added to by stage decoration and the movements of the characters with relation to the lighting and settings. Los Angeles will watch these new effects in "Carmen" and in two productions of "Aida," one by the California company and one by the Los Angeles company. Both stage managers are endeavoring to make the effects alive by new sets and modern lighting.

The two conductors, Gaetano Merola of the California, and Richard Hageman of the Los Angeles Civic companies have interestingly different backgrounds. Mr. Merola is an intense, dark-skinned, dark-haired Italian, with all of the Latin characteristics. Mr. Hageman is a towering Teuton, with light hair and a massive brow and a career back of him at the Metropolitan and in Holland, that inspires awe. The results of these differences will be clearly set forth at the conclusion of the season. Both hope to establish permanent opera in the West with the best artists available to the various western cities for a few weeks at a time throughout the winter. If the plan receives encouragement resident singers will have the opportunities hitherto denied them and the new idea in opera giving will develop out here on the "last frontier of music."

Chicago Vocal Teacher

Mme. E. Manlove, teacher of voice, has come to Los Angeles from Chicago, where she specialized in the science of breathing and directed a boys' choir for several years.

Miss Alchin to Write

Carolyn Alden Alchin, eminent authority on harmony, has resigned her position on the faculty of the University of California, Southern Branch, to devote her time to several books on music.

Miss Mabel Wadsworth, who represented Miss Alchin in New York City, has returned here to take up the work which Miss Alchin is giving up.

Child Singer Honored

Little 11-year-old Grace Nelson, the talented pupil of Gilda Marchetti, had a happy recognition of her gifts recently. Grace Nelson, a popular soprano of the same name, was appearing at the Hill-street Theater and heard of her Los Angeles namesake. Upon hearing the small Grace sing, she introduced her at the Saturday matinee and the child received much applause. Grace is being carefully trained by Miss Marchetti so that the promise of her voice may be fulfilled in later years. She studies piano with Adele Lauth.

Freebey Studio at Club

Grace Adele Freebey, the talented Los Angeles composer, has moved her teaching quarters to spacious new rooms in the Friday Morning clubhouse on Figueroa street. Miss Freebey has long been identified with music both here and in Pasadena. She is one of our most popular accompanists.

Lewyn Teaching

Helena Lewyn of Hollywood has taken up her musical activities again with every prospect for a successful season as a concert pianist and teacher. She made a very favorable impression last year in a series of sonata recitals at the Friday Morning Club with Ben Whitman, the violinist.

Clarence Eddy at St. Vincent's

The recent completion of St. Vincent's Church, Figueroa and West Adams, has given to the city one of the most beautiful edifices yet erected among the pretentious buildings of this section. A Kilgen organ has been installed, complete in every detail, the gift of Mrs. E. L. Doheny, and will be opened to the public for the first time on Tuesday evening, the 8th inst., under the direction of that eminent organist, Clarence Eddy.

The reputation of Mr. Eddy, his great virtuosity and his masterly interpretations are well known both in Europe and America.

The program for Tuesday evening is diversified, with an underlying theme of sacred presentation, and will close with the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament by St. Vincent's choir. The numbers follow:

Prelude and Fugue D Major	J. S. Bach
Afterglow (dedicated to Clarence Eddy)	Frederic Groton
Hymn of Glory	Pietro A. Yon
Ave Maria, No. 2	M. Enrico Bossi
Emmaus (new)	J. Frank Frysinger
Grand Choeur Dialogue	Eugene Gigout
The Bells of St. Anne de Beaupre	Alexander Russell
Swing Low Sweet Chariot	Carl R. Diton
Russian Boatman's Song (Arranged by Clarence Eddy)	Anon
In a Monastery Garden	Albert W. Ketelby
Toccata in F (from Fifth Organ Symphony)	Charles W. Widor

DeAvirett Teaching Here

Abby De Vvirett, teacher of piano, who has made his home in Long Beach for several years, will move his residence studio to the Ansonia Apartments at 2205 West Sixth street this year. Mr. De Avirett has recently returned from a long sojourn abroad.

Ryan in New York

Ernest Ryan, teacher of ballroom dancing, will return from his visit in New York City in time to open his fall classes, October 1.

Kathryn Wentz to Remain

Kathryn Wentz, soprano and voice teacher, has lengthened her visit to Southern California into an indefinite stay and will teach here at the Southern California Music Building. Miss Wentz will appear at the Biltmore in October. She is a pupil of Delia Valeri who is associated with Bonci in New York.

Zoellners Add to Faculty

Frederick Clint has joined the Zoellner Conservatory as assistant in the violin department.

A new feature of the curriculum is the giving of free class solfege lessons to every student.

Dunning System Teachers

The Dunning system of music study is represented by Isabel Tone, normal teacher, La Verne Fleetwood of the Misses Jane's School in Hollywood, Georgina Warren, Mildred Haines in charge of music at Kenwood Hall, and Myrtle Woodson.

Kolin Program

Feodor Kolin will supervise the notable program to be presented at Mrs. Alice Barney's reception for Richard Hageman, conductor of the Los Angeles Civic Opera. An interesting program has been arranged with the following artists:

Miss Frances Hanson, violinist and harpist, pupil of Feodor Kolin; Wilhelm van den Burg, 'cellist; Olga Steffany, contralto, pupil of Feodor Kolin; Winifred Long, dramatic soprano; Chief Standing Bear, playing his ancient flute; Prof. Heintze, playing the bagpipes; Grosskaupf Morrison, tenor, and Mr. Ernaldy, baritone. A group of dancers with Miss Violet Blackton; Mr. Shaffer; Virginia de Roseer, little Yvonne, Mr. Obadiah and Ahmed Sohrab, as Persians, precedes a pantomime and ballet, "The Shepherd of Shiraz," written by Mrs. Alice Barney, with incidental music.

A feature of the evening will be Feodor Kolin's "Hindu Dance Poem," with the composer at the piano, and Richard Hageman's song, "Do Not Go, My Love," as a tribute to the composer.

Beatrice Fenner Saturday

The gifted young blind composer, Beatrice Fenner, will appear in a farewell recital assisted by notable artists at the Los Angeles Opera and Fine Arts clubhouse, 927 Menlo avenue, Saturday evening. Miss Fenner is going to New York to study under the Julliard Foundation through the good offices of her friend, Amelita Galli-Curci. She will live at the School for the Blind in New York. Calmon Luboviski, eminent violinist, will play Miss Fenner's latest composition for violin and piano. She is only 20 and possesses a lyric talent for music writing and for poetry that is amazing. Galli-Curci sang her things in London before 10,000 people.

Mary Newkirk Bower, well-known soprano, Melba French Barr, favorably known for her costume songs, Tilda Rohr, popular contralto, Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus, resident artist of high attainments, and Alexander Kisselburg, baritone singer of achievement, will also appear on the program.

A Capella Choir

The Smallman a Capella Choir has again resumed rehearsals after two weeks' vacation. This body of enthusiastic young singers have modeled themselves on the style of the Ukrainian Chorus and have already made a tremendous impression with their work. They sing unaccompanied and from memory, and it is impossible to ascertain how they get their pitch. Mr. Smallman will present them in concert this fall at the Philharmonic Adutorium.

Chalfont Operatic Success

Lucile Chalfont, who recently made a sensational operatic success at the 1925 Mozart Music Festival in the "Magic Flute," counts Los Angeles as her home. The critics were enthused over the fact that the role was sung in its original key. She will sing in America for a brief season this fall and return to Italy for added experience in repertoire.

Ruth May Shaffner Leaves

Ruth May Shaffner is a Los Angeles girl who has endeared herself to many people of California, where she has appeared in concert, and there are many regrets that she is leaving Sunday, the 13th inst., for New York to spend the winter in further study and concert appearances.

Formerly known as an organist and accompanist, Miss Shaffner has in the past year made her debut in grand opera with the San Francisco and Los Angeles opera companies, with much success, as soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, and with Sophie Braslau and the Los Angeles Oratorio Society in the Bach Christmas Oratorio. She has also been a valuable member of the quartet of the First Presbyterian Church of this city. She is planning to do some work with Sembrich, Conrad Bos and Mollenhauer of Boston.

Nature School

Maud Meserve Falconer, director of the Nature Music School, is assembling her first teachers' normal class of the fall the 9th inst., at 1 o'clock. Teachers interested in the nature music course are invited to attend the demonstrations.

A children's reception and demonstration will be held by Miss Falconer celebrating the opening of the winter classes Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock and Saturday morning.

McAdam Dancers in Films

Adeline Leone McAdam, head of the McAdam Normal School of Dancing, has just finished directing dancing scenes for Larry Semon, screen comedian, in his latest production, with fourteen of the McAdam clever kiddies.

The special training in motion-picture work given in the McAdam school has made the children's department extremely popular with picture studios. Scores of McAdam children have been furnished for Universal and other prominent studios, while news reels of the pageantry productions of the McAdam school are now being shown in the East.

Many professional students of the school have also appeared in prominent parts on the screen. Katherine Grant, beautiful and popular leading woman of the Hal Roach studios, was a protege of the McAdam school, entering the school at 8 years of age. Dorothy Crooker, Jane Anderson and Leva Brown, other clever dancers of the school, have been filling stage and screen engagements with Fanchon and Marco productions.

Oatman School

All arrangements have been made at the Marta Oatman School of the Theater, 1510 South Figueroa street, for an intense course of study for the new junior drama class for the next six months, starting on the 7th inst., at 9 o'clock. This course of study covers all fundamental principles of stage technique, consisting of voice training, stage deportment, pantomime, diction and dancing.

Smallman Studios

John Smallman is again teaching in his Los Angeles studio after a successful summer as director of music at the Pacific Palisades Chautauqua, where he also conducted a school of music.

Mr. Smallman will again conduct the Los Angeles Oratorio Society and the Glendale Oratorio Society and the choir of the First Congregational Church.

Miss Jay Kingman and Mr. Loren Robinson won the two scholarships Mr. Smallman offered this summer at the Smallman summer school.

American Girls Best

Alexander Oumansky has resumed his duties as ballet master of the New Capitol Theater, Berlin, Germany. He writes that European girls cannot compare in beauty and grace with the American girls.

He will be back before long to resume active charge of the Oumansky Studio, 2614 West Seventh street, the classes of which, during his absence, are under the direction of Miss Roma Burge.

In connection a dramatic school has been added under Miss Lillian Salzer. A ballet organized from the school is rehearsing daily for a ten weeks' tour in this country preparatory to joining Mr. Oumansky in Berlin.

Steele-Dodge Concert

The honor of opening the concert season in Santa Barbara has been conferred upon Olga Steeb and Marjorie Dodge.

It is the desire of the Woman's Club of the stricken city to restore it to normalcy as soon as possible and believing music to be one of the quickest ways they have scheduled a series of concerts for the coming year.

Following this appearance, Olga Steeb will tour the Northwest and Marjorie Dodge will leave for New York, stopping for concert and orchestra appearances en route.

San Francisco Recitals

Melba French Barr has returned from a trip to San Francisco where she arranged for several joint recitals with Alexander Kisselbaugh, baritone, for the coming season.

They will feature song cycles for soprano and baritone, many of which are new to western audiences.

Hubbard Departs

France Goldwater entertained the vocal class of Arthur J. Hubbard at an informal party just before his departure for Boston. This is his third season in Los Angeles and by far the most successful one. As a token of their appreciation, the class presented Mr. Hubbard with a gold-headed cane suitably engraved.

Mr. Hubbard will not return to Los Angeles next year.

Axel Simonsen Home

Mr. Axel Simonsen, eminent violin-'cellist, has returned from two years' sojourn abroad. He has had gratifying success in concert work in Paris and comes back to rejoin our resident artists with a refreshed musical outlook. Mr. Simonsen will appear in recital soon.

SIR HENRY WOOD PLANS RETURN

Sir Henry Wood, conductor of the Queen's Hall Orchestra in London, made a warm place for himself during his all-too-short week of conducting at the Hollywood Bowl this summer. He is one of the outstanding figures of the season and the musical cognoscenti as well as the "twenty-thousand" unite in his praise both as a splendid conductor and program builder, and as a human being of broad interests and much charm.

Los Angeles readers will be interested in cuttings from the London Evening News which sent a representative to interview Sir Henry on his landing at Southhampton.

"It is twenty-one years since I have been in the United States and I never dreamed a country could develop so quickly. The welcome we got was simply amazing. It was a wonderful experience I look forward to repeating."

Dr. J. J. Carter will appreciate the following which probably was an error of the interviewer. "I have never played in such ideal surroundings as those at Los Angeles, where I was invited by Mrs. Carter, the wife of a prominent Californian conductor, to conduct four symphony concerts.

The correspondent adds that Sir Henry "looked extraordinarily well. He said that Lady Wood and he intend to go to America every July, as much for their health as for the concerts they will conduct."

JOINT RECITAL AT GAMUT CLUB FRIDAY

Music circles are interested in the recital to be given by Hortense Barnhart-Jones, widely known throughout the East as an operatic star and concert artist, and Rhea Silberta, composer-pianist.

Appearing in a joint recital at the Gamut Club Friday evening, the 11th inst., these two talented artists will present a program of exceptional interest, introducing several works new to America and to the West.

Their program will reveal the versatility of the two women, each of whom will appear in two groups, the last of which will feature four of Miss Silberta's compositions, sung by Miss Jones, with the former at the piano.

As a former Los Angeles girl Hortense Barnhart-Jones comes to Los Angeles again after five years in New York, where she has achieved an enviable place in the operatic and concert world.

Possessed of a beautiful, resonant mezzo-soprano voice, Miss Jones, as a member of the Lyric Club, won her first laurels several years ago.

Later, in New York City, Miss Jones quickly won the praise of the critics and gained for herself a place in opera as well as in concert.

Miss Jones will be accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Hennion Robinson, with the exception of the group of Miss Silberta's compositions, when the latter will be at the piano.

Miss Silberta has to her credit more than thirty-five compositions which are included in the repertoire of the leading concert artists of the day.

The program as arranged for the forthcoming recitals is:

Sonata Appassionata, Opus 57	Beethoven
Rhea Silberta
O del mio dolce ardor	Gluck
Danza Fanciulla	Durante
Grand Aria from "Le Prophete"	Meyerbeer
Hortense Barnhart-Jones
Danse D'Olaf	Pick-Mangiagalli
Ronde des Lutins	Nerini
Pell Street (From "New York Days and Nights")	Whithorne
Fantasie-Ballade	Silberta
Rhea Silberta
Morgen	Strauss
In einem Herbstwald	Josef Marx
Sur le Terrace	Fourdrain
Dualisme	Brunel
In alto mare	Respighi
Hortense Barnhart-Jones
"By the Sea"	Silberta
"Beloved"	Silberta
"Wild Geese"	Silberta
"Yohrzeit"	Silberta
Miss Jones and Miss Silberta

PUBLIC LIBRARY LISTS MUSIC MAGAZINES

That there are many music magazines available for public use in the art and music department of the Los Angeles Public Library is probably not known to as many of the music lovers of Los Angeles as it should be. These magazines, a list of which follows, contain current news of music and musicians all over the world, as well as interesting articles on relative musical subjects. There is always a current reference copy of each magazine which may be read in the library. Recent numbers may be borrowed for a week.

Music magazines, art and music department, Los Angeles Public Library:

FARWELL'S PAGEANT AT FAWNSKIN

Considerable importance has been attached to the coming production of Arthur Farwell's new dramatic-action music pageant, "The March of Man," which will be presented four times over the Labor Day holidays at the Theater of the Stars, Fawnskin, Big Bear Lake. Mr. Farwell has written, directed and produced more pageant music dramas than anyone else in this country, it is said.

The new opus was written especially for production in this new and immense amphitheater, to be given at this time. A large cast has been assembled and trained, which includes a chorus, the Russian String Quartet, Vernon Stiles, famous opera tenor, and many other persons of note.

This production is to be something of a dedication masque to round out this first successful season, and will be in the nature of a gala performance. The theme, broadly, is the linking by man of art and nature, the preservation and reforestation of the California mountains and forests, and the safeguarding of them as a permanent great natural playground. The idea, of course, is enhanced by the dramatic action and special electrical effects, colored lights and music. A miniature forest fire, mountain storm and other novelties are included.

Following the "March of Man" performances, dancing will be enjoyed for an hour or two in the open-air pavilion. At 12 midnight the comic opera, "The Undying Worm," written by the Fawnskin Grand Opera Company (not incorporated,) will be given in the tea room. The libretto is by Stephen Chalmers, widely read novelist and magazine writer, and the lyrics are by the entire company, "with frequent swipes from Verdi, Puccini, etc." The affair is said to be the funniest thing which will have been presented on any stage west of Honolulu, and the statement has been made that even the crowned heads of Europe have never seen "The Undying Worm." It is explained, incidentally, that the title of this opera in ori-eyed form has nothing to do with the plot. Following the presentation of opera, which contains some very good voices, as well as some bad ones, breakfast will be served.

OPERA READING CLUB PLANS ITS PROGRAM

Dr. Frank Nagel, director of music for the Opera Reading Club of Los Angeles and Hollywood, has been re-establishing relations with eastern musical sources. It is upon these he purposes to build the programs of the coming season for the Opera Reading Club, taking advantage of all opportunuities afforded by visiting artists. In the coming season the presentations will be with the aid of chorus, orchestra and ballet, with at least one given further color and dramatic flavor by the introduction of a stage presentation in costume ambitiously approaching formal operatic form. It is the purpose of Mrs. Ralph Waldo Bucknam, president of the club, with Dr. Nagel and her executive board to surpass the record of that period by additional talent, and novel features to give variety to the prospect.

Another unusual feature to the program laid down is the broadcasting of an entire opera, giving a radio sample of the club's work for the approval of fans as well as members of the organization.

For the first regular analytical lecture-recital Dr. Nagel will unfold the beauties of "Samson and Delilah" at the new auditorium in the Hollywood Woman's Club, October 5.

DANCING MASTER ENGAGED AT FORUM

John P. Goring, managing director of the Forum Theater, has engaged Arnold Tamon, dancing master, who has been working for the past few weeks preparing the ballet prologue to "Off the Highway," which is the Forum feature now playing. Mr. Tamon, in his present offering, outdoes anything he has ever done as to staging and artistic finish. The dancers, who so ably assist him in carrying out his ideas, are each solo dancers, and well on the way to be proclaimed stars. Such well-known names as Mollie Halstead, Carmen De Lara, Charlotte Lane, Dolly Simon, Pauline Becker, Leslie Rodriguuez, Leah Banon and Gaveda Nelson give utmost assurance of the tone of Mr. Tamon's presentation.

SPROTTE WITH ALICE GENTLE IN "NARCISSA"

Mme. Sprotte of Los Angeles is in San Francisco, where she will open with Alice Gentle in the opera "Narcissa," which is to be one of the leading features of the official program of Diamond Jubilee Week. The opera, written and produced by Mary Carr Moore, is being staged at the Wilkes Theater, and will play from the 7th to the 13th, inst., inclusive.

A note of special interest is added to Sprotte's appearance in 'Narcissa' in San Francisco; the role she sings, Waskema, the Indian prophetess, she created when the opera had its premiere in Seattle in 1912. It was also Sprotte's premiere on the Pacific Coast, and both had an unqualified success.

Mary Carr Moore, the composer, is directing the opera herself, which gives her a unique place among women composers, she being the only woman in the world who has both written and directed a grand opera. The orchestra has been drawn from the personnel of the San Francisco Symphony, and, with the exception of Mme. Sprotte and Alice Gentle, who sings the title role of Narcissa, the whole cast is composed of resident artists, amateur and professional.

Roger Manning Wins Promotion by Loyal Work

Loyal and efficient service has again been rewarded in motion pictures.

Announcement was made yesterday by B. P. Fineman, general manager of the F.B.O. Studios, of the appointment of Roger Manning to succeed Clarence White as production manager of F.B.O.

Mr. Manning, who has been affiliated with several of the foremost picture companies, both in New York and Hollywood, during the last several years, joined the F.B.O. staff under Mr. Fineman about two years ago. He has been in charge of locations for all F.B.O. units.

Mr. White, whom Mr. Manning has succeeded, has joined S. S. Hutchinson, pioneer motion-picture producer, who has returned to activity on a large scale. White will serve as production manager for all of the Hutchinson units, which will operate at the F.B.O. Studios.

Wally Riddell was director of programs and led in an informal discussion after the program. Visitors were welcome, he said, and "cordially invited to smoke, sleep or put their feet on the chairs."

Des Moines Club

Extending an invitation to all women formerly of Des Moines, the Des Moines Women's Club will give a luncheon and program at the Women's Athletic Club, 833 South Flower street, on the 11th and 12th insts. at 12:30 o'clock.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made not later than Wednesday by telephoning Mrs. S. A. Perkins, 922 South Ardmore street, DRexel 6478.

The club, recently organized, meets the second Friday in each month, and all women formerly of Des Moines are cordially invited to join. The program for the afternoon has been arranged by the following committee: Mrs. Doll Bonebrake, Mrs. Leo O. Flaherty, Mrs. E. DeKriuf and Mrs. A. Shivars.

Daughters of the British Empire

Queen Alexandra State Chapter, D.B.E., announce that general meetings will be conducted in the Assembly Hall of the Friday Morning Club, 940 South Figueroa street, on the first Mondays of each month, beginning tomorrow at 2 o'clock p.m. This will be the opening meeting after the vacation season. A large attendance is expected.

Women's Athletic Club

An advance in membership fees and limitation on memberships in the Women's Athletic Club of Los Angeles is announced. On November 1, next, the regular membership fee will be advanced to $500 ($550 including war tax,) and junior membership, $75 ($82.50 including war tax.) Life membership to be limited to the number of 200, and only thirty such memberships are still available. Total memberships, including life, regular, junior, nonresident and such special memberships as provided by the by-laws, are limited to 2500. Members desiring to sponsor friends may wish to have application forms entered before the advance in fees becomes effective, and it was suggested that action at the time will eliminate a possibility of placing the names of prospective members on a waiting list.

The September dinner-dance will take place on Tuesday evening, the 29th inst., from 7 to 12 o'clock, and the affair will be informal. Reservations limited to 300 are being accepted at the dining-room.

Arts and Crafts Society

It will be of interest to readers of this department to know that the Arts and Crafts Society of Southern California has been successfully launched and the dreams of its founders and members realized in that the future of the assembled crafts is assured. The last ten months, since the opening

Beautiful Womanhood in Two Types

Miss Leona Linsler

Justine Johnstone

Persian and American

In the highlights of the week's affairs it happens that two lovely young women stand out as exponents of varied beauty. The contrast is charming and delightful. Last night in the old garden of Mrs. Alice Barney in Hollywood, where a hundred guests saw the mime-ballet and playlet, the first by Mrs. Barney and the second by Mizra Ahmed Sohrab. Miss Linsler, the wonderful Viennese dancer, appeared as Scheherazade, the slave girl, in "The Veiled and the Unveiled." Tomorrow night Miss Johnstone will appear at one of the local theaters as an exponent of beauty for American womanhood.

STATE'S DAY TO BE FETED AT BANQUET

California's Admission to Union to be Honored Under Soroptimists' Auspices

California Day will be celebrated by the Soroptimists Tuesday at the Biltmore with a program that promises to be redolent with the charm of old California and stirring in its appeal for the new.

Wednesday the 9th inst. marks the seventy-fifth anniversary of admission of California into the Union. A Diamond Jubilee celebration is planned for San Francisco to last the week when many Angelenos will be present, notably Senora Rudecinda Sepulveda Dodson and her daughter, Mrs. Florence Dodson Schoeneman, both prominent socially and in club circles here. The Soroptimists hope to bring the memorable historical event before the public in Los Angeles.

Miss Grace Stoermer, who is chairman of history and landmarks for the California Federation of Women's Clubs, a past president of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, prominent in the business and civic life of the city, is the fitting chairman of the day. The affair will begin with a luncheon in the ballroom of the Biltmore at 12:30 p.m. Invitations to representatives of civic life have been extended and the following clubs and organizations have been asked to participate: Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Advertising Club, Women's Advertising Club, Woman's City Club, Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs and

CONSTRUCTIVE FORCE AIM

Federation of Women's Clubs Determines to Work Toward Conservation and Stimulation

"The conservation and stimulation of constructive forces"—This is the new slogan of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs as announced by the president, Mrs. J. B. Lorbeer, at the first meeting of the season Thursday in the beautiful new headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce Building.

With distinction and enthusiasm were the activities of this huge machine of constructive friendliness set in motion. More than 100 women, chairmen of departments and officers from the five counties of the district gathered about the beautifully appointed luncheon tables, the speakers' table being centered with a huge bouquet of brilliant autumn flowers, the gift of the Chamber of Commerce.

R. W. Pridham, president of the chamber, extended his greetings and told the women that a closer co-operation undoubtedly would prevail between the two bodies than ever before. He spoke of the great civic asset to the community that women's clubs had already proved to be with the promise of even greater power and influence.

The addition of ten new clubs since June was announced by Mrs. William Waller Slayden, chairman of extension.

Mrs. Daniel Baptiste of Somis, auditor, reported that in the last two years she had driven sixty miles twice a month to attend board meetings and had never been late. "I always received the best of compensation for my effort," she said, "and I intend to keep my record during this term of office. I tell this only to show the new workers how really worth while is the work," she added.

Merely to mention the names of the other speakers indicates to those who are wise in club lore the excellence of the after-luncheon session. They were, in the order of their introductions by Mrs. Lorbeer, beautifully presiding as toastmistress: Mr. Pridham, Mrs. Ella Mack of Ventura county; Mrs. E. H. Edwards, president of Inyo county, who sent her greetings; Mrs. Orla Spray, chairman of press; Mrs. Baptiste, Mrs. Lymna B. Stookey, American citizenship; Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith, community service; Mrs. Henry T. Wright, chairman of co-operation with ex-service men and women; Mrs. John F. Mead, American home; Mrs. Frank Spring, home economics; Mrs. Adah D. McGorray, education; Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes, history and landmarks; Miss Grace Stoermer, chairman of the same department for the State; Mrs. Walter Fisher, conservation; Mrs. Orville Rouitt, literature; Miss Ruth Antoinette Sabel, music; Miss Leta Horlocker, art, and Mrs. Mae Carvel, industry and employment; Mrs. Edmond M. Lazard, child welfare; Mrs. Louis S. Gillespie, Indian welfare; Mrs. Charles McKelvey, parliamentary law; Mrs. Howard U. Sherwood, treasurer; Mrs. Harry W. Michael, radio; Mrs. Alfred Graham, motion pictures; Mrs. Arthur J. Mix, birds and flowers; Mrs. Harry Louis Stroh, reciprocity and programs.

Mrs. Fisher presented a resolution to the board asking for the aid and influence of the women in passing Senate bill No. 4155, which will come up before Congress for action in December. The bill provides for an appropriation of $11,-

ART EXHIBIT PLANNED BY STATE CLUB

Prizes Will be Awarded on Paintings, Sculpture and Miniatures

The sixteenth annual exhibition by the California Art Club will be conducted at the Gallery of Fine and Applied Arts, Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art at Exposition Park under the auspices of the board of governors and the director of the museum from October 1 to 28, next. No work will be received at the gallery after the 25th inst.

Works of members of the club whose dues for the current year are paid, will be received to the number of three from each member, and two may be exhibited if favorably passed on by the jury of selection. Works must be the original of the sender and must be those not previously shown in a public exhibition in Los Angeles and must be suitably framed in the case of paintings, in accordance with the exhibition rules of the club.

It is suggested that owing to the limited space of the gallery, exhibitors limit the size of works submitted. Rejected works found unavailable by the jury should be removed as soon as notice is received. Prizes will be announced later. The jury shall have discretion to award three honorable mentions, one each in painting, sculpture and miniature.

The jury of selection will be:

What Women are Doing

By Myra Nye

To help her husband simply by being charming, appreciative of his endeavors, expertly able to criticise, without nagging, and make a background that is both restful and beautiful for his life of artistry—this, she says, is the endeavor of Mme. Gaetana Merola, wife of the distinguished conductor of the California Opera Company. A generation ago this ambition of a wife was no novel thing. Today it stands forth as worthy of comment and of interest, it is so rare, especially in a wife who has had a career of her own as has Mme. Merola.

Before her marriage the lovely Rosa Duce, as prima donna, sang in nearly every capital city of the world. Mme. Merola, after two years of married life, in the height of her career, her voice still gloriously beautiful, decided that not even further excellence in her art, nor applause, nor public approval, could compensate for the heartaches her sensitive nature endured when those in the company discovered that she was the wife of the conductor and openly, often bitterly, intimated that was the only reason she held so high a place in the company. Nor could applause pay her for the time that her career took her from her home and husband.

"I was never so happy as when I learned that home-keeping hearts are happiest," said this dark-eyed singer who is the happy combination of Polish and French.

The united musicians are domiciled at the Gaylord Apartments during the opera season, which begins early in October, and during the weeks of preparation Mme. Merola has been present at all the rehearsals conducted by her husband.

At home this gracious and graceful young woman loves her piano music. She is a skilled pianiste as well as a singer, delighting her friends with both of her talents. Her hobby is paintings and she is a connoisseur of art, often frequenting the exhibits at the Biltmore and Ambassador. All this comes in the happy interims between wanderings from city to city where music is conducted by the master musician, her husband. Only lately they have lived in Italy, London, New York, Cuba, Canada and several of the cities of the Middle West. Each year they spend a few months in Europe. Now they are enjoying to the utmost this Southland and look forward to a happy return another season.

Lydia Knott Hillyer

Lydia Knott Hillyer, who as Lydia Knott has made interesting many roles of screen mother, recently enjoyed a most unusual vacation. One would imagine that Mrs. Hillyer would choose a fashionable resort with every convenience and all of the comforts so befitting a woman of her daintiness and charm, but this is exactly what she did not do. With Dr. Della Hubbard (both are members of the Soroptomist Club) she journeyed to the far-famed metropolis of Huntington Beach!

"We had planned to spend a few days of our vacation together," said Mrs. Hillyer, "and when Dr. Della suggested a week-end at the beach——" Here she smiled, and her gesture indicated the inevitable.

"But why," I queried, "did you choose Huntington Beach?"

"I believe it is the only beach on the south coast where camping is free, with no questions asked as to family history, color of hair, preference for cheese and views on evolution. Then, too—we wanted quiet, and we surely got it there!"

Another smile and Mrs. Hillyer was launched upon a description of their vacation.

"We camped about two miles south of Huntington Beach and about fifty feet from the Pacific Electric car tracks—and shake!—every time a car went by our tent and utensils shivered audibly. We really had a great deal of fun about it, though.

"We went into the ocean twice, I believe, and both times the undertow prompted Dr. Della to remark, 'Don't worry about this undertow, your chiropodist is with you!'

"The second night (we were only there two nights) we really had visitors. Three very youthful, important Boy Scouts came with their scoutmaster to pass their tests in steak cooking. Believe, me, they were glad to use our grate for that all important event."

"With the exception of the advent of the Boy Scouts our vacation was uneventful—and the rest of our rest—was rest!"

Thus is disproved the theory that all members of the film industry crave the modern—excitement, thrills, ease.

After thanking Mrs. Hillyer for her courtesy, the thought occurred to me that probably the role of mother in real life has fitted Mrs. Hillyer so well for the roles of mother in reel life. She is the mother of Lambert Hillyer, well-known director.

Celeste Nellus-Ryus

Featuring the trend of modern music, illustrated by the compositions of Moszkowski, Rachmaninoff, Ravel, Cyril Scott, Scriabine, Palmgren, Cadman and MacDowell, with personal reminiscences of these and other famous artists, Celeste Nellus-Ryus will give costume recitals before many women's clubs this season.

The opening day of Los Angeles Ebell, the first Monday in October, is to be president's day and Mrs. Ryus will give the program, assisted by Sol Cohen, violinist, who is now on his way home from Europe, where he has spent the last year. Together they will do new French ensemble numbers of Ravel for piano and violin, never before heard on the Pacific Coast.

Mrs. Ryus also will give the first musicale of the season for the Hollywood Women's Club, October 14. She is so thoroughly familiar with the psychology of club audiences that in these delightful recitals she is winning and charming, not alone for her musical ability, but for her intimate friendliness with her audience. Mrs. Ryus has studied many years in Europe with such masters as Busoni and Maurice Moszkowski and has known many of the world's greatest artists, all of which gives her a splendid musical background for her presentations.

Mrs. Jack Vallely

As curator of books and current literature department work, Mrs. Jack Vallely made a notable record for herself in club circles by her fine discriminations in literary things and by her leadership. This year she will continue her work as curator. The plan of study will be to develop the evolution of the novel, she says, and adds: "To do that we will concentrate each meeting on some big step in the history of fiction. Greek influences, the Middle Ages, Richardson and Fielding, essay, poetry and modern tendencies all will be considered.

In addition to this work along literary lines, Mrs. Vallely will give eight talks on the novel, each talk illustrated by a current publication, before the following clubs: Woman's Club of Alhambra, West Ebell, Woman's Club of Huntington Park, Lincoln Study Club, Norwood Parent-Teacher Association, The Reading Club.

Miss Faith Chevaillier

Miss Faith Chevaillier has provided more than one hundred entertainments to unfortunates the last year. United Artists have given their series and thus been enrolled in Faith's Joy Givers' Club.

She also has obtained machines to take the patients of Rest Haven on picnics or drives, thus hastening their recovery. Those persons willing to loan their machines for several hours please call Miss Chevaillier, ANgelus 6166. Though 75 years of age in December, she is still active, but dear little Miss Faith would be glad for help in her ministry of joy-giving.

Judge Gavin W. Craig endorses Miss Chevaillier as a member of the Board of Prison Directors to be appointed by Gov. Richardson.

Dr. Maud Wilde

Infant Welfare lectures and conferences by Dr. Maud Wilde, president of the Mothers' Educational Center, will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. in Bullock's lecture room. The program follows:

Wednesday, September 9.—Prenatal care; demonstration; bathing the baby.

Wednesday, September 16.—Postnatal care; demonstration; clothing the baby.

Wednesday, September 23.—Infant care; demonstration; sunlight for the baby.

Wednesday, September 30.—The psychology of fear; demonstration; the baby's bed.

Wednesday, October 7.—Maternal impressions; demonstration; bathing the baby.

Wednesday, October 14.—Infant feeding; demonstration; clothing the baby.

Wednesday, October 21.—Behavior problems; demonstration; infant hygiene.

Wednesday, October 28.—The story of life; how to tell it; book exhibit.

Wednesday, November 4.—Postnatal care; demonstration; clothing the baby.

Wednesday, November 11.—Training versus punishment; demonstration; books and material for mental development.

Wednesday, November 18.—Teething and the digestive disorders; demonstration; infant hygiene.

Wednesday, November 25.—Prenatal care; demonstration; bathing the baby.

Annual reception for babies and their mothers Saturday, November 28, 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

CONTEST FOR SCRIBBLERS

In order to stimulate further efforts of members in the Scribblers League, Orra E. Monnette will donate the first prize in the yearly short story contest, which will be open to league members only. There will be a second and third prize, the latter for poetry. During the summer plans were formulated whereby members interested in playwriting and poetry can enjoy the two new sections added to the league. Chairmen in charge are Charles E. Huey, playwriting, and Phylis Dyenforth Fortune, poetry. The league opened last night with a meeting in Rowland Hall, 313 West Third street. Short stories and verse were read and criticised. The officers serving for the year are Adeline Marshall Durlin, president, A. Hunt, vice-president, Florence Hunt, recording secretary and Mrs. Minnie Snell, corresponding secretary. The board of directors serves as a ways and means committee. The Scribblers League is composed of men and women interested in the better American literature.

OF ART AND ARTISTS

BY ANTONY ANDERSON

The Toad

Napoleon turned his horse about
And down the steepest path set out,
Letting the horse go on alone,
Picking its way from stone to stone.
The trees stood leafless on the hill,
The puddles in the clay lay still,
Napoleon set his gaze below;
The west was streaked with afterglow.
They struck the highway—up its side
The horse, without a warning, shied—
In scarlet water on the road,
Still as a sea-rock, sat a toad.

SUMMER ASSEMBLY AT CANNELL-CHAFFIN

A collection of pictures from everywhere is being exhibited for two weeks in the Cannell-Chaffin galleries. There are twenty-six canvases in all, by almost as many painters. It, therefore, happens that not every one of the pictures can be mentioned, however briefly. But we will touch upon a few of them this week, reserving others for future consideration.

This is entirely a landscape show. There are no figures, though there are two still life studies, one being by Carle Blenner, the other by Hovsep Pushman. Both of these are excellent, for the makers of both are fine craftsmen, who seldom or never fall down on their jobs. Pushman's picture, indeed, "The Sacred Green," is an exquisitely subtle thing, one of the best in a show that holds an Inness, a Keith, a Twatchman, a Ryder and two Morans.

The porcelain plate that has been set up against a gray-pink background gives the title to Pushman's study, an arrangement of a bronze Buddha, an iridescent vase and a few trinklets. Simple. But art. And seductively beautiful art at that. Blenner's picture of lilac sprays in a large gray vase is also very intriguing. The artist is past master in the painting of flowers.

The Inness, "Sunburst," a green and orange scheme, is not, it seems to me, a very good example of this artist's work. It is harsh, painty. The canvas was probably dug out from some corner of the painter's studio after his death. The Keith, "Golden Symphony," is typical, a good, but not a strikingly good, example of this American master's later work. The sun has not yet set, and the sky is luminous. We come upon the usual foreground pool and oaks, all dark brown. The Keith formula.

The two Morans are of first-rate quality and represent two distinct periods of the painter's long and distinguished career. "A Cloudy Day in Old Mexico," rich with summer's grays-greens and showing an opalescent sky, was painted as late as 1919, when Thomas Moran was almost 80 years of age. It is very tender in feeling. "Emerald Pool," a study from the Grand Canyon, was painted in '93, when Moran stood at the apex of his imaginative and technical power. It has strange and haunting beauty. It is nature in one of her sublime moods, but nature transmuted into art.

Robert Vonnoh's "Stately Poplars" has the refinement in feeling and color, the compositional dignity and beauty, that distinguish all this artist's best achievements in landscape. Few men interpret New England's autumnal subtleties with greater understanding and sympathy than Vonnoh. Another profoundly penetrating revealer of nature's secrets was John Twachtman. What suavity of brushwork we find in "The Old Mill Cos Cob," what a sense of flowing rhythms in line and color. Still another such painter was J. Alden Weir, whose "Truants," remarkably original in composition—a semicircle of gray stone wall on the brow of a hill—has all the elusive qualities of color and tone that became so marked in all his later work. Weir was a painter whose fame will grow with the years.

The canvases by Ryder, Borg, Braun, Hunt and other painters will come up for discussion later.

VARIOUS AMERICANS SHOW AT HATFIELD

The Hatfield galleries, on Wilshire Boulevard directly east of Vermont, commodious, well lighted and agreeable to loiter in, are also holding the customary "summer show" of works by American painters. The exhibition is varied and attractive, not too large, and a very pleasant hour may be spent there by the lover of good pictures.

Among the painters represented on the walls are William H. Chase, Frederick J. Waugh, George Bogert, H. M. Kitchell, Henry W. Ranger, Edward Dufner and Ernest Lawson, not a few of whom have an international reputation. And the pictures shown are not indifferent examples, "studio sweepings"—quite the contrary. Though not so large as the Cannell-Chaffin exhibition of pictures by Americans, this show upholds the same high standard. Indeed, our local galleries are certainly "toeing the mark" with the precision of their competitors farther east, those of Chicago, New York and Boston.

The Chase picture is one of the most interesting and attractive in the collection, a pastel portrait of the artist's wife seated in his studio. The costume of the sitter is quaint and old-fashioned and, according to modern ideas of dress, rather ugly. Yet the picture is charming, all the still-life accessories being painted with the technical bravado, the triumphant mastery that was Chase's. A painting hanging over the mantel in the studio repeats the green of the plush of the sitter's chair, and the quick red color notes so typical of Chase are found in an embroidered Chinese coat thrown carelessly—or carefully—over a screen, and in the small rug on which Mrs. Chase's feet are placed. This picture was reproduced in The Times last week.

Waugh's picture, "Gull Rocks, Monhegan," has also been reproduced in The Times. It is well worth your further study, even if you have seen it before, for it is a superb piece of painting and reveals Waugh's power in rendering the surge and rush of the sea along the ruggest coast of Maine. The Bogert offering is a typical example of this painter's well-known Venetian sunsets with their full quota of bellied sail aglow with many colors.

Kitchell has chosen for his subject a forest clearing, the afterglow suffusing the scene with a golden radiance. Indians have erected their wigwam under some trees at the right, and a canoe is drawn up against the bank of a lake, whose edge form the foreground of the picture. Lawson shows a landscape painted among the hills of New Hampshire. A little church and a few outbuildings are huddled among the trees. Big white clouds are massed on a clear blue sky. The picture, painted with sweeping freedom, displays a clear note of modernism.

The exhibition remains at the Hatfield for some weeks.

PAINTINGS LEAVE PERU FOR MUSEUM

Cable advices received at the Los Angeles Museum state that the quota of paintings assigned to Peru was ready to leave Lima on August 31 by the first boat sailing for the States.

This marks the next step in connection with the plans for the large exhibition of 500 paintings by the leading artists of the two Americas which is to open at the Los Angeles Museum on November 3, remaining on exhibition until January 1, 1926.

Each South American republic was allotted a quota of paintings based on the population, and relative artistic importance of the country. The quota for Peru was set at twenty paintings. Guillermo Salinas Cossio of Lima, in cooperation with a committee of artists, has been in charge of the selection of the paintings from Peru.

One painter, Enrique Barreda, who is at present in Europe, will be included in the Peruvian representation and sends word from London that he is greatly interested in the exhibition, and has arranged for one of his most important canvases to be forwarded to Los Angeles from his studio in Paris.

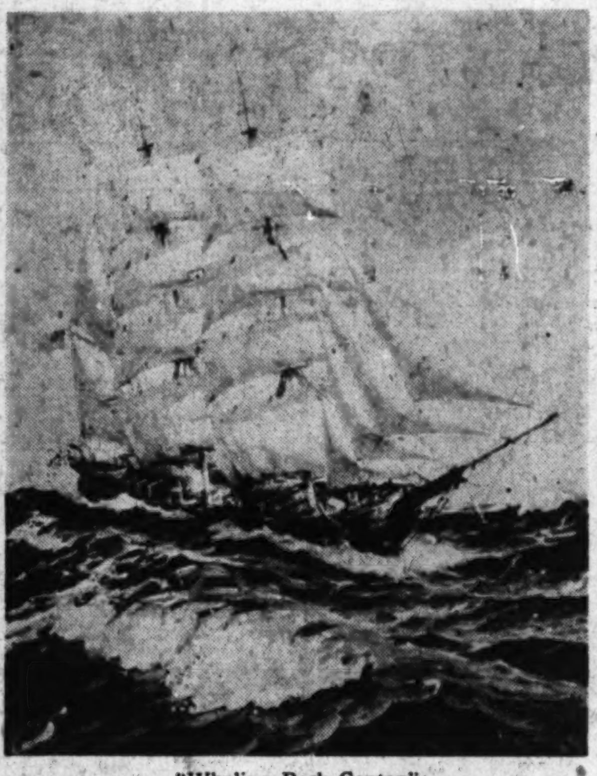
Through the Peruvian Consul at New York a number of Peruvian painters who have studios in New York have been invited to send paintings before the jury meeting in New York. Paintings so accepted will then be sent to Los Angeles to come before the final jury here.

MAJORGRAPHS WILL BE AT THE BILTMORE

One of the early fall exhibitions which will be held at the Biltmore is a group of caricatures by Major. This celebrated caricaturist came to Los Angeles for a few months last spring to make "Majorgraphs" of many of our well-known men and women of affairs, motion-picture stars, etc. While here he arranged for a showing of some of his finest portraits and sketches at the Biltmore salon, and the work of this artist in several mediums will be disclosed in this city for the first time.

In Central Europe Major has a splendid reputation as a portrait painter, and several portraits in oil will be included. The bulk of the exhibit, however, will be made up of his deliciously humorous caricatures of celebrated people and figures in European society, politics and art, and a generous number of Americans, and not a few of Los Angeles interest. These he has executed on heavy paper of good size, many of them in color, somewhat after the manner of Max Beerbohm.

The caricature shown here is of Merle Armitage, impresario, who is associated with the Biltmore salon, and was made by Major last spring when he was doing the series for The Times.



"Whaling Bark Canton"

By Duncan Gleason, who is exhibiting twelve paintings of ships at the Biltmore salon this week.

WATER-COLOR SOCIETY, LOS ANGELES MUSEUM

The fifth annual exhibition of the California Water Color Society opened yesterday at the Los Angeles Museum, to continue to the 27th inst.

The jury on selection met so late in the week that it is impossible for me to tell you exactly who will show and who will not, but these are a few of the Los Angeles and San Francisco painters who undoubtedly will—the list would have been a longer one if some of the artists had not been so dilatory in sending their work in: Rowena Meeks Abdy, Carl Oscar Borg, Val Costello, Anita Delano, Henri De Kruif, R. Vernon Hunter, Charles L. A. Smith, Stanton Macdonald Wright, Karl Yens.

At the same time there will be two water-color exhibit one-man shows, the exhibitors being Alfred Hayward and Dorothy Kent. Miss Kent will also exhibit drawings in several mediums.

Hayward showed his water colors last spring in the Denver Art Museum, and at that time G. W. Eggers, director of the museum, wrote of them:

"Alfred Hayward's water colors are fine examples of the way in which water color would reveal itself it it had the power of choosing. They epitomize the possibilities and realties of the medium . . . But above and beyond this stirring certainty of markmanship, there is an intelligence in their organization and a passionate intensity in their vision of the rugged world they depict . . ."

SAN FRANCISCO SHOWS WALKER COLLECTION

Editor Times: For the benefit of art lovers and the interested public generally, who may intend to visit San Francisco this fall, may your paper be utilized to call attention to the rare collection of paintings now open to the public in the new Legion of Honor Memorial Building, San Francisco?

There are 126 canvasses in the collection, and most of them masterpieces. Dolci, Tintoretti, Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Turner, Constable, Lawrence, Gainsborough, Reynolds, Corot, Breton and other artists of equal ability are represented. They present a group of such beauty and merit that it is a privilege for art lovers and students to be able to see them.

The collection belongs to Mr. T. B. Walker of Minneapolis, and it is due to his love of art that they are in California and open to the public.

In addition to the paintings, Mr. Walker also loaned his rare collection of jades and antique necklaces, which are also open to the public view in the same building.

I have been advised that these paintings will remain until December 1, next.—[R. L. Underhill (Berkeley.)

Don't Forget the Fair

Painters and sculptors who are intending to exhibit in the art gallery of the coming Los Angeles County Fair in Pomona are urged not to forget the last date of entry. They may send canvases or sculptures not later than September 15 to the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, or to the fair grounds in Pomona not later than September 16. The jury on prizes—Andrew Bjurman, Roscoe Shrader, Karl Yens, Theodore B. Modra and Antony Anderson—meet on the 21st, the day before the opening of the show.

The indications are that the exhibition will be an unusually strong one, with many new names on the walls. Modra, guiding genius of the exhibition, believes that the sculptors are coming to the front this time, and that there will be "some surprises."

And some prizes, too—$100, $25, and $25 for oils, $100, $25 and $25 for water colors and pastels; $100, $25 and $25 for sculptures. Ten student prizes of $5 each will also be distributed.

The Studio Inn

The Studio Inn, conducted by Henrietta Shore, Annette Shore and Helen F. Schock at the corner of Sixth street and New Hampshire avenue, opened its hospitable and artistic doors to the public last Tuesday with a special dinner from 6 to 8 o'clock.

The Studio Inn will serve luncheons, teas and dinners, with accommodations for special parties. In conjunction with it there is the Studio Gift Shop, displaying imported curios or rare and beautiful design. Paintings by Henrietta Shore will be on exhibition. Miss Shore's prowess and reputation as a painter are known to us all, for she was an Angeleno for some years before she went to New York. We are glad that she has come back to remain with us. Success to the Studio Inn!

Arts and Crafts Society

It is pleasant to record that the Arts and Crafts Society of Southern California has been successfully launched, and that the dreams of its founders and members are realized in the assurance of its future success. The past ten months, since the opening of the shop at 2508 West Seventh street, has shown a steady increase in sales. Public interest is increasing rapidly, and expressions of gratitude are general for the fulfillment of a long-felt need in supplying a center where the finest of handcraft work may be obtained.

The society is seeking for a new location in which it will be able to take over the entire management of the craft shop.

West Coast Arts

West Coast Arts Incorporated is holding an exhibition of paintings at the Young Women's Christian Association Building, fifth floor. This society of women painters and sculptors holds interesting and comprehensive exhibits once or twice every year. The present show will be reviewed next week in Art and Artists.

Manoir Shows Panels

On the afternoon of September 4 Irving Manoir, whose show at Cannell-Chaffin's will be remembered, held an exhibition of his decorative panels, landscapes and screens of amazing brilliancy in color and charm in design, at his studio, Fairywoods, Laguna Canyon.

Campaign for New Talent on at Universal

A campaign to find new material for future screen stars is being conducted by Universal Pictures Corporation.

Working on the belief that there are many potential stars in the rising generation, Carl Laemmle, president of universal, has ordered a policy of granting film tests, and giving parts to promising newcomers.

More than a score of screen aspirants who are considered possible material for future picture personalities have been placed in the Universal Stock Company, and are being trained in small parts and bits.

Fourteen girls, all comparatively unknown to the screen, are now in the stock company, playing western and comedy leads and small parts in feature productions. From these girls, Universal hopes to find stars as Mary Philbin, Laura La Plante, Marian Nixon and others were discovered.

The girls—some of whom will be the Marys, Normas and Polas of tomorrow, are Janet Gaynor, Olive Hasbrouck, Isabel Stiefel, Fay Wray, Ora Teague, Blanche Fisher, Dorothy Gulliver, Vanna Carroll, Virginia Bradford, Elsie Tarron, Thelma Hill, Adrienne Dore, Verna Dooley and Regina Doyle.

A similar campaign is being conducted to find future male stars of pictures. Raymond Keane was picked from the extra ranks by Dimitri Buchowetzki, and given the leading juvenile role in the Super-Jewel production, "The Midnight Sun." George Lewis was given his first big opportunity with the juvenile lead in "His People." Matty Kemp, Louis Freelander, Jack McGrath, Buddy Phelps and others, also have been placed in the stock company, and are being trained in small parts.

Cohan Musical Show Called World's Best

George M. Cohan's American song and dance show, "Little Nellie Kelly," is coming to the Playhouse on Monday evening, the 14th inst.

This is a Louis O. Macloon attraction, and it is being staged by Lillian Albertson, who is responsible for "No, No, Nanette" and "Lady, Be Good."

Mr. Cohan's latest musical triumph has been termed "the best musical play in the world." This is not an individual opinion; it is the expression of thousands of playgoers who have written personal letters of praise to the author.

George M. Cohan is more generous than the announcement promises. Besides the tuneful music, the singing and dancing, he gives us a real plot, something about valuable stolen necklaces. This plot is at no point permitted to become dangerous to the singing and dancing novelties, which are swiftly supplied. Nor is it allowed to obscure the other allurements, yet it is not once lost complete sight of. There are twenty song hits, any one of which is worthy hearing, to say nothing of the various styles of dancing by several youthful terpsichoreans.

Macloon selected a fine cast of New York players for "Little Nellie Kelly." Alice Cavanaugh, Lester Cole, Joseph Neimeyer, Franklyn Farnum, Robert Carter, Eugene Borden, Joseph Griffin, Gettie Gallaghar, Clay Hill, Una Fleming, Catherine Ward and a long list of others.

Pangborn Says He Never Will Pine For Home

"As long as I have a chance to play in Los Angeles the year 'round, they'll never get me back to New York—and Newark, New Jersey's my home town at that."

The speaker, as Harold Bell Wright would say, was none other than Franklin Pangborn, who is scoring a personal hit second only to that of Edward Everett Horton in "The Sap," William Grew's hilarious comedy now entering its second week of full houses at the Majestic Theater.

And Mr. Pangborn can give voice to such sentiments after playing for an entire season with Francine Larrimore, the New York star, in "Parasites," in a role for which Pangborn was personally picked by the playwright, Cosmo Hamilton, and Miss Larrimore.

Not only did Cosmo Hamilton pick Pangborn for the part—he rewrote it completely to fit the svelte Pangborn figure. The role originally had been intended for a fat man, and "Pang," as his fellow-actors at the Majestic dub him, hasn't shown signs of corpulency—yet.

Pangborn opened with Miss Larrimore in "Parasites" in his aforesaid old home town, Newark, N. J., and was accorded the ovation that home towns always give to thespians with whom they grew up. After the try-out the play opened very successfully in New York at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater, after two months going to the Princess Theater in Chicago, and then back east by easy stages.

Pangborn was vacationing in Los Angeles, and had even bought his ticket to return to New York this fall, when Michael Corper took over the Majestic Theater and asked Pangborn to become a member of the stock company he had engaged to support Edward Everett Horton.

"Words can never tell," said Pangborn, "how glad I was to turn in that return ticket and stay in Los Angeles, particularly in association with Mr. Corper."

Thespians Born and Not Made, Vignola Holds

"No director ever made an actor."

This is the comment of Robert G. Vignola on recent charges from abroad that American movie folk are merely animated sticks who go through their parts mechanically with the megaphone as their mainspring.

"If an actor or actress has talent," said Mr. Vignola, "a capable director can help to bring it out. But no directing genius in the world can make a good player of a man or woman who has not the histrionic instinct to begin with.

"What is more there is no director who would waste his time on a screen aspirant who had nothing but looks. There are too many capable people available.

"Directing at best is not an easy job, and we directors are always looking for players who can sense a part themselves and relieve us of the tedious task of interpreting it. Occasionally, some genuine 'dumbbell' rises above the extra ranks, but she seldom stays there. Making a picture under such a handicap is so nerve-racking an ordeal that no director will tackle it more than once.

"The idea that screen stars are lacking in real talent probably originates in the fact that many have risen rapidly from humble beginnings.

"But this is due to the fact that the motion picture itself is a new art, with a technique of its own. That technique was naturally acquired by those who broke into the game early, even though they were in minor roles at the time. It furnished them with a background which enables them to compete successfully now with younger, perhaps branier players.

"Of one thing the public can be sure. The director advises, but it is the actor or actress who must create, whether the play be on the screen or the speaking stage."

BITTER EXPERIENCE

Alice Calhoun knows what it is to go through a gruelling cross-examination in a courtroom. She spent three whole days in the witness chair being cross-examined by the District Attorney in her part of the misunderstood wife in B. P. Schulberg's production of "The Other Woman's Story," in which she enacts the leading feminine role. Electric lights were installed in the Los Angeles courtrooms, which were loaned to Director Gasnier for the occasion.

Desmond Next Attraction for the Hillstreet

William Desmond celebrated stage and screen star, returns to his first love, the legitimate, at the Hillstreet this week, where he will be seen in a comedy-drama playet, "Do Your Stuff," which was specially written for him by Ethel Clifton. In support of Mr. Desmond there is a company of well-known screen players, which is headed by the beautiful Mary MacIvor, who is none other than Mrs. William Desmond in private life. Jerome Sheldon and Jerry Cook are also cast in prominent parts.

The old timers of the Rialto will remember Bill as the hero of the old Morosco stock company that held forth at the Burbank Theater some fifteen years ago, when Main street was the principal street of Los Angeles.

"Do Your Stuff" is filled with action, thrills and comedy in abundance, and the star is given an opportunity to display his ability for the speaking stage as well as the screen.

Mr. Desmond has made an enviable reputation for himself on the screen, and has been crowned as the king of "thrillers" by Carl Laemmle of Universal for his heroism and ability to enact all the dare-devil stunts required of such a star, without a "double." In "Do Your Stuff" Mr. Desmond portrays the part of a "tough" Mexican.

THE PLASTIC AGE BREAKS RECORD

Marks' Sensation Finished in Fourteen Days

Director Ruggles Says Hays Approved Script

Donald Keith and Clara Bow Head Youthful Cast

BY KATHERINE LIPKE

A year or so ago when "The Plastic Age" by Percy Marks came out schools and colleges throughout the country rose up in righteous wrath at this startlingly revealing glimpse of modern college life.

Later Universal bought the film rights and Will Hays automatically put the seal of disapproval on the transaction by placing a film ban on the book. So Universal let it go. However, the other evening in a little Hollywood neighborhood theater I saw a preview of the completed picture, directed in fourteen days by Wesley Ruggles for Schulberg Productions. In an audience of all types of people, the picture met with wide enthusiasm.

REASON FOR FLAPPER

So that irritating thorn in the side of the industry, "The Plastic Age," has at last found film expression. In an age when flapper pictures have rather subsided because of over production, and an overfed public, this story of youth influenced by modern thought and conditions promises to be most unusual. Perhaps the reason is that although flappers abound liberally in the film, they are made a means to an end rather than the end itself. No one said, "Let's have a flapper picture" when "The Plastic Age" was made.

According to Wesley Ruggles, who directed it, "We took a boy from a good family and sent him to college. Then we brought him face to face with modern problems and ideas and watched him flounder about a bit. We let him go under, and then handed him a jolt which brought him on top again, stronger and better for the experience. There isn't anything in that which should rouse the wrath of anyone, it is just youth and life everywhere."

SAYS HAYS APPROVES

Mr. Ruggles claims that Mr. Hays saw the completed script and approved of the adaptation. If this be true then there will probably be little trouble over the removal of the Schulberg officials to obey the Hays ban. "The Plastic Age" will be released on November 5 and it will be interesting to watch its reception by theaters all over the United States.

Aside from the interest excited in the picture by the "ready made" publicity caused by the book, and the susequent ban by Hays, "The Plastic Age" ranks in the realm of the remarkable in the fact that it was filmed in fourteen days and one night. This is quite a record for a seven-reel picture in this day when "overhead" haunts the industry like a phantom and many weeks are taken for a few scenes.

Mr. Ruggles believes that "The Plastic Age" should be a success because of the simplicity with which it was filmed, if for no other reason. From the first grinding of the camera until the last everything went smoothly. There was no discord—or technical difficulties. So it is no wonder that those in charge of the picture are not worrying over the fact that it is still technically under the official ban. They believe that "The Plastic Age" was meant to be filmed and that in its present treatment no difficulties will be encountered.

In order to create a note of realism in the football sequence the consent of Pomona College was gained for the use of the college varsity and freshman teams for a real football game, with the insertion of but two actors in the sequence.

This brings another point to light. Although the book received the unqualified disapproval of educational institutions throughout the country, yet in the actual filming the company received the aid and co-operation of one of our most conservative and well-known western colleges. All the exterior scenes of the picture were taken on the Pomona College campus, in fact.

The note of college realism gained in this way aided immensely in creating the right atmosphere of accuracy which was so essential to a picture which presents its greatest appeal to students throughout the country.

YOUTH SERVES

Most of Mr. Ruggles's actors in "The Plastic Age" are quite young, with the exception of Henry Wal- all and Mary Alden, who play the father and mother of the boy. The rest of the cast is practically of college age. Not one professor is shown in the picture and the scholastic side of college life is used. The film deals directly with the ultra-rapid social life and subsequent effect on the athletic prowess of the boy involved.

Donald Keith plays Hugh Car- the chap around whom the events occur, and he promises to make in that role a lovable, human character which undoubtedly does much to make the picture a thing of sympathetic appeal. The part of the little college flapper is played by Clara Bow, who seems remarkably fitted for the part, while a newcomer is seen in Gil- t Rowland, who has an important character role. Oh, youth abounds in "The Plastic Age."

Very little money was spent on the filming of "The Plastic Age." And certainly that great horror "overhead" could not eat its traditional quota in fourteen days. So whether the public embraces this picture and pronounces it good or lifts its eyebrows and sniffs a trifle, "The Plastic Age" still emerges a remarkable picture in point of speed of production.

ABRAMSON DISPOSES OF CROOK PLAY RIGHTS

Max Abramson, well-known scenario and title writer of Hollywood, has returned from New York where he sold the stage rights on a novel crook drama to one of the largest eastern theatrical producers. The play is based on incidents and psychology acquired from the underworld during Abramson's long career as a special feature writer on several New York papers. The play is scheduled for production this season and Abramson is revamping it while preparing the titles for Richard Talmadge's latest picture which is tentatively called "Dr. Jim," and which will be released through F. B. O.

MYRTLE REFUSES OFFERS

Myrtle Stedman has received an offer from a New York producer to return to the light opera stage on which she became a well-known figure several years ago, before embarking upon a motion-picture career. However, future screen engagements will prevent her from accepting the offer.

BEAUTY GIVES HEALTH HINT

Justine Johnstone Advises Deep Breathing and Exercise as Aids to Well-being

How can I obtain a clear complexion, and get rid of blackheads and pimples? How can I improve my walk? How can I get my neck fatter? How can I make my eyes bright? I bathe them every day but still they are dull and look so tired. An oculist tells me I don't need glasses. How can I get a healthy full-of-life feeling? I'm always so tired. It seems almost too much trouble to make the best of myself, yet I do want to. I am sure there is nothing wrong with my health.

These questions are a few asked Justine Johnstone, acclaimed one of the world's most beautiful women. There is one thing without which no remedy in the world will be of much use concerning health and beauty, and that is deep breathing. She says: "The air which we take into our lungs with every breath keeps the blood warm and flowing through our lungs; when we cease to breathe the blood ceases to flow and the heart stops beating, or pumping, as we should more correctly say. For the heart is the pump which sends the blood out to the extremities of our bodies and so keeps all the body cells alive and healthy. Don't you see, then, that if we do not inhale all the air we might, we are not backing up our hearts sufficiently, not giving them the energy they require to carry on all the arduous pumping work?"

URGES DEEP BREATHING

"You may pat pounds of cleansing and nourishing creams into your unoffending faces, but nothing on earth will give your skin that clear transparent healthy look which you desire unless you breathe properly. Deep breathing will fill out the hollow necks, and give a rounded contour and glowing color to the cheeks as no amount of massage could do. Deep breathing will straighten your shoulders and back and keep your head erect. You must be erect and well-poised in order to take a really deep breath, so you see, the habit of deep breathing would naturally bring the habit of holding yourself well.

"'How do you manage to keep your skin so fresh looking?' a woman once said to me as we were powdering our noses and tidying our hair during an interval of rest from a crowded ballroom. 'My face gets positively dirty by the end of an evening no matter how much I use my power-puff,' she continued As she said this I glanced instinctively at the powder-puff with which she was violently dabbing her flushed face, and I could have told her that her face got dirty because of using the powder-puff and not in spite of it. For that powder-puff was really soiled, incredible as it may sound.

DAINTINESS ESSENTIAL

"I cannot sufficiently impress upon you the fact that fastidious daintiness is the first essential to beauty," continued Miss Johnstone. "A plain girl who has realized this fact to the utmost has more chance of being attractive than the pretty girl who is the least bit frowsy in her habits and appearance. There is a compelling charm about perfect grooming that mere prettiness can never possess. The eye is immediately attracted by that air of wholesome vitality that a really well-groomed woman carries with her. She radiates freshness and those who come in contact with her are caught, unconsciously, perhaps, in her spell Then they notice her particularly. The clear skin, bright hair and sparkling eyes, perfectly manicured hands, carefully shod feet, and absolutely spotless gown or suit claim their share of admiration.

Justine Johnstone is herself a shining example. She has followed her own precepts.

SOCIETY OF CINEMALAND

BY ISABEL STUYVESANT

Mme. Alla Nazimova entertained at her beautiful home, 1432 Havenhurst Drive, Monday, in honor of the Zahpad Trio. Hers is a lovely and original domicile, speaking distinctly of its owner and her personality, for she herself designed it and furnished it with beautiful ornaments brought from all over the world. It is arranged with facilities for picture projection, and at the request of Alfred Hertz, one of the guests, her latest picture, "My Son," was shown. Musical selections were given by the trio and other guests, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hertz, Rudolph Ganz, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Seastrom, Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Carter and Mme. Lili Petchnikoff.

One of the pleasures of Nazimova's guests of late is to see some of the beautiful creations in the now-famous twelve trunks, as famous as the forty black jars of Ali Baba, which she brought from Paris. Many of them are elaborate frocks and robes hand painted by art students of Paris.

Music Club of the Colony

George O'Hara of Ogden Drive was host Tuesday evening to the latest unnamed club in cinemaland, a music club where music is the chief and often the sole topic of conversation. A new piano was an acquisition of the host and he made the affair something in the nature of a piano dedication.

Among the guests were Walter Anthony, who gave a brief talk concerning music; Mr. and Mrs. Neely Edwards and the latter's young daughter; Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Andriot, C. R. Walsh and Vladym Ureniff.

Sixty Club

The formal dinner-dances of the Sixty Club, screenland's most popular and exclusive group, continue in popularity. The next one will be held at the Biltmore the 12th inst., and every two weeks thereafter. Frank Elliott is the president and presided at the last dinner-dance as well as afterward during the Charleston contest with Art Hickman's orchestra providing the jazz syncopation.

Page My Diamond

Robert C. Vignola was a guest at the Montmartre the other evening for dinner and was the last to leave the table. Driving down the boulevard he noted the empty set on his ring. He hurried back to the table just as the waiter was gathering the cloth. Together they shook it and the diamond, valued at $1200, scintillated on the floor. "A little too much of a fee for an informal party," commented Bob to the friendly waiter, who grinned.

Bride Entertains

Mrs. Sam Warner (Lena Basquette) entertained with a smart luncheon last week at the Montmartre. Among her guests were Mrs. Jack Warner, Mrs. Ernest Belcher, Mrs. Harry Rapf, Mrs. Frank Newman, Miss Viola Newman, Claire McDowell, Mabel Hilburn and Carmel Myers.

This was the first formal affair given by Mrs. Warner since she came from New York a bride, and the young hostess proved herself possessed of poise and charm at the dinner table as well as in the dance. Beautiful appointments graced the affair and the table was centered with maidenhair fern and orchids with smilax trailing the cloth.

Pour Prendre Conge

Before leaving for San Francisco to become the bride of Edmund Lowe, Lilyan Tashman gave a prettily appointed luncheon at the Montmartre. Among her guests were Kathleen Clifford, Hedda Hopper, Claire Windsor, Kathryn Bennett, Mrs. Charles Ray and Mrs. Adela Rogers St. John. Roses and gardenias were the table decorations.

House Guest is Honoree

Mrs. John Ford is entertaining at her Hollywood home, her cousin, Mrs. James Stewart of Texas. A number of charming affairs are being given in the latter's honor. Among them recently was a luncheon when Mrs. Ford was hostess. Among the guests were Mrs. William K. Howard, Mrs. Clarence Brown, Mrs. Charles Dorian, Mrs. D. W. Wilson, Mrs. Tom Reed and Ruth Collier.

On Vacation

Evelyn Brent left Thursday for a vacation journey of six weeks. Three thousand miles from home she found herself shoeless, or comparatively so. Miss Brent's pet extravagance is shoes and her wardrobe usually contains a half hundred pairs made to order by a Hollywood bootmaker. When she travels they occupy a special trunk. But this time the trunk was left at the Hollywood home which has been bombarded with telegrams and radiograms, the last few days.

There was a young woman who lived in her shoes, she had so many pairs she didn't know what to do until she lost them. This is the theme of the wireless story.

Visits Daughter

Mrs. Percy Marmont is happy to receive a visit from her mother, Mrs. Stuart Dawson, who has recently come from England. Mrs. Dawson is dividing her time between the Percy Marmont home in Laurel avenue and that of her other daughter, Miss K. Dawson, who lives across the street.

Honoring Miss Daniels

Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Andriot entertained Sunday with an oriental party in honor of Miss Bebe Daniels at their Beverly Hills home. The Chinese motif predominated in decorations and appointments. Water lilies, bamboo and Chinese incense enhanced the beauty of the patio and drawing rooms.

Abalone Bake

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Flynn (Viola Dana) have just returned from Catalina Island, where they were complimented with an abalone bake by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Pabst of Beverly Hills, who entertained aboard their yacht. Among the guests were Miss Shirley Mason, Miss Eloise O'Neil, Harlan Fengler, Jerry Wonderlich, Jack Frost and Gilbert Newton.

LATIN ARCHITECTURE SUBJECT OF STUDY

Mrs. Charles V. Craig

EBELL CLUB LEADER OFF FOR MEXICO

Mrs. Charles V. Craig and Group of Women to Tour Southern Republic

Mrs. Charles V. Craig, chairman of the building committee of the Los Angeles Ebell Club left Wednesday with a group of women for a month's tour of Mexico. They will visit the city of Mexico, Guadalajara, Cuernavaca, Cueretro, Pueblo and Lake Chapala. Every year Mrs. Craig conducts a party to her beloved Mexico, where she lived for so many years and where she is trying to create an understanding of and interest in the artistic creations of the Mexican people. She always brings back with her much of the pottery and glassware as well as some beautiful pieces of antique furniture. While in Mexico, Mrs. Craig will study the Spanish and Mexican architecture to gain some new ideas to bring to her committee which is working on plans for the new clubhouse.

Friday was one of the very busy days at the Ebell of Los Angeles, but only a few of the members knew anything about it. It was the day set by the members of the practical relief department for outfitting the many school children who look to this club for aid. All through the summer the members of the department have been preparing for this day, making underwear and dresses and collecting shoe and stockings so that these children, most of them from families of the disabled veterans, could go back to school happy and unashamed. And the best of it is that the children know that these wonderful women will be there to help them again if it is necessary, and that some one from the club will keep in touch with the family to see what can be done to remedy the distressing condition.

The children who came were of all ages from the first grade and from college, for the practical relief assists several of the girls who are able to be in high school or college because of the scholarships received from the Ebell Club. If the garments did not fit, the women of the committee were there to take in or let out so that all could look well dressed when they left.

Penwomen Will Have Program with Luncheon

Having conducted the regular business meeting Tuesday, the 15th inst., at the Hollywood Library, the monthly luncheon of the League of American Penwomen, Los Angeles Branch, will be given Tuesday, the 28th inst., at 1:15 p.m. Among the events prepared will be a short program, by Marguerite Lawrence Test of Riverside, who, with Maurine Dyer, mezzo-soprano, will give a short program of original songs and poems. It is asked that all reservations be made for luncheon by Monday, the 28th inst., or before by writing or phoning Mrs. Emily Hughes Wright, Glendale 2074-W.

September radio programs will be on Mondays, the 14th and 28th inst., from 8 to 9 p.m.

At the last luncheon at the Writers' Club the program included an interesting talk and history of the little theater movement, including the Potboilers and their clever productions, by the founder, Sigurd Russell.

Cliffor Howard was clever and delightful in a plea for more or subtler words to aid in expression, and especially to obviate the use of personal pronouns. Announcement was made of the winning of a prize offered by a monthly magazine. Mrs. Helen L. Gaut, the winner, was present to receive applause.

ALBERTA VAUGHN HAS RESUMED 'MAZIE' SERIES

These are busy days for little Alberta Vaughn. The diminutive Hollywood star has resumed work in the "Mazie" series now being produced in two-reel installments by F.B.O. There will be twelve in all and the stories are from the pen of Nell Martin, with Doris Anderson handling the continuities and Ralph Ceder and Jimmy Wilkinson the direction. Alberta had two days of rest last week following the completion of episode No. 2 and spent the time trolling for broadbills at Catalina. None were caught, however.

DOROTHY TO GO NORTH

Dorothy Phillips will be one of the chief entertainers at a big show that will be held in San Francisco next month in conjunction with the Diamond Jubilee celebration of the State of California. Miss Phillips has been identified with the committee in charge of entertainment and motion pictures.

CRYSTAL CUP. By Gertrude Ath- Boni & Liveright, New York. "The Crystal Cup" Mrs. Ath- follows up her success in Oxen" by making sex the keynote of her story, with psychoanalysis introduced as needed to keep keen the appetites of her readers.

Her impossible heroine, Gita Cartaret, is represented as a girl with an aversion for men, one who effected mannish clothes and a hard-boiled air. Her emotional wires had been crossed in her early years by the hard and bitter experiences she and her mother had gone through in various European centers, as a result of the vicious and eternally bankrupt life led by Gita's father, "the last of the Cartarets." Having been approached by roues and wine bibbers, leered at by gamblers and money-lenders, appraised by senile old men and blear-eyed cafe habitues, Gita had quite naturally turned from sex as from a horror. All this is tenable enough and Mrs. Atherton sketches it in with sufficient reality.

Even the hackneyed scenes in the old manor house near Atlantic City, with the domineering grandam on her last legs,, and the sullen Gita watching her from narrowed eyes, is passable, if not sublimely new. But when Gita inherits the manor house and begins to take notice, she becomes more and more a literary atrocity, rather than an American girl of the period. She still has her repressions and inhibitions and horrors in regard to men, whose touch she cannot bear. But this does not prevent her from cultivating assiduously the successful middle-aged author, Eustace Bylant, who springs full-fledged from Mrs. Atherton's brain for her convenience.

When the people of the smart set to which Gita belonged by divine right began to talk, Gita promptly proposed to Bylant, making it clear that the marriage was to be one of the noli me tangere variety so common in the fiction of the Bertha M. Clay school, read with avidity by the "hired girl" and others of equal literary discrimination two or three decades ago.

Of course, Bylant accepted, with the idea of winning her later. In the romantic past the husband usually did win. But not now. And not with Gertrude Atherton, who prefers to awaken her sleeping beauty with a lover provided by her for that purpose. This is done according to plan, despite the mad jealousy of Gita's best friend, who tries to murder her in true Athertonian style. So we leave Gita palpitating for love of her lover, while her husband lies ill in an upstairs room. But Gita is respectably waiting for the law to release her.

A decadent novel because full of false psychology, shallow philosophy and unwholesome suggestion, and filled with glittering and often clever pictures, painted for the edification of the sensation seeker and the sentimental.

THE INCA WORLD

We have all read more or less about the civilization of the proud and wealthy Incas. and how, with treachery and cunning, Pizarro and his Spaniards conquered and despoiled them and reduced them to slavery. But how many of us know how wonderful was the organization of their empire and how many Socialistic theories of a later age they had already worked out and put into practice? Anna Barwell's translation of Otfrid Von Hanstein's "The World of the Incas," published by E. P. Dutton & Co., gives an adequate and deeply interesting account of this absolute monarchy that maintained the most Communistic state the world has ever seen, and also describes in detail the Inca civilization, with all its magnificence and gorgeous ceremonial, and tells the moving story of its conquest and downfall. The picturesque and tragic story of this vanished race has been too easily forgotten, and this book, that narrates the dramatic tale so interestingly, will be welcomed by all readers who have a liking for history.

THE MODERN HYPATIA

"I believe it to be true," says Mrs. Bertrand Russell in her little book on feminism, "Hypatia," just published by the Duttons in their Today and Tomorrow Series, "that the education and outlook of men is more old-fashioned than that of women reared in the freedom of feminist tradition. Men have not yet realized how women's outlook is changing, nor attempted very seriously to adapt themselves to the change. They will do so, of a certainty; for, true as it may be that above all desires in woman is that to be pleasing to men, it is still truer that the desire of desires in man is to be pleasing to women."

AMERICAN NEGRO SPIRITUALS

The Spingarn medal, given each year to an American negro citizen for the most distinguished achievements, has been awarded to James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Mr. Johnson is at the present time at work on probably his greatest cultural contribution to the interpretation of the negro, namely, "The Book of American Negro Spirituals," which the Viking Press, Inc. will publish in September. Mr. Johnson is the editor of this volume and in addition is writing an informative introduction to it. J. Rosamond Johnson, his brother, is doing the musical arrangements of the various songs, with additional numbers by Lawrence Brown, accompanist to Paul Robeson.

Small, Maynard & Co., announce for early publication "Evolution Explained," by J. Inglis Parsons, M. D. Dr. Parsons tells us in his preface that the object of this book is to place before the general public, in simple language, the chief facts which prove the law of evolution, to show how the action of this law affects the social structure of the nations and also their relations to the chief dogmatic religions of the day.

LITERARY GOSSIP

Peter B. Kyne's novel, "Never the Twain Shall Meet," has been filmed and opened at Loew's State Theater yesterday. It is a California romance with a strong strain of antioriental propaganda running through it.

The Duttons have just added another volume, Abbe Prevost's "Manon Lescaut," to their series of the world's best literary treasures of all times and races, the Broadway translations. This famous classic has been translated especially for this issue by George Dunning Gribble, who supplies also an introduction in which he outlines the life of the Abbe Prevost, discusses the circumstances of the writing of "Manon Lescaut" and the extent to which it is autobiographical, and with anecdote and allusion and critical analysis studies the story and its style.

"King and Commoner," one of the plays in the collection "Magic Lanterns," by Louise Saunders, published by Charles Scribner's Sons, was recently given for the benefit of the Bird Sanctuary in New Canaan, Ct., and will be acted again shortly in the artist's colony at Silver Mine. Another play by Miss Saunders, "The Knave of Hearts"—which so took Maxfield Parrish's fancy when he saw it produced that he asked to be allowed to illustrate it—will be published by Scribner's in the fall.

Here is a good one from Little, Brown & Co., "Each of Octavus Roy Cohen's stories is read by two negro employees. If it amuses or causes them to laugh, Mr. Cohen, paradoxically, knows there is something wrong and rewrites the story, for Mr. Cohen interprets negro life so truthfully that what to the negro is a realistic event, seems uproariously funny to the white man. His latest book of such stories is 'Bigger and Blacker.' "

George A. Birmingham, the English novelist, is noted for his rollicking good stories, "The Great-Grandmother," "King Tommy," "Found Money," and others. People read his novels for their mellow humor and sparkling wit. In "Bindon Parva," (Bobbs-Merrill) he turns the humor and the wit into the more serious channels of twelve short stories laid in that same Wessex of Hardy's cultivation.

After many adventures in the Balkans, whither he journeyed to collect atmosphere for the opera which is to be made from his story "The Lost Gospel," Arthur Train has returned to this country. Ernest Shelling, composer of the music, accompanied him on the trip. Mr. Train, whose new book of legal reminiscence, "On the Trail of the Bad Men," was recently published by Charles Scribner's Sons, arrived in time to read the proofs of "The Lost Gospel" and another story, "The Blind Goddess," which Scribner's will shortly issue.

Thomas Seltzer announces on his advance list of fall publications a "Nathalia Crane Song Book," including settings by Frances E. Friedman of "The Janitor's Boy," "Love," "The Rose of Rest," "The First Story," and several other poems in the famous volume by Brooklyn's 12-year-old poetess. In Miss Friedman Mr. Seltzer believes he has discovered a composer whose talents are singularly adapted to the task of setting the Crane verses.

"Michael Field," as every one knows was not one poet but two, Catherine Bradley and Edith Cooper, who lived in almost complete seclusion and who wrote under the pseudonym "Michael Field" poems and poetic dramas that were a fantastic contrast to the drab Victorian world without. "A Selection from the Poems of Michael Field" (Houghton Mifflin Company) is a selection from their copious works with a preface by T. Sturge Moore.

Whatever comes of the new Chinese political imbroglio, there are at least two Americans who will not be convinced of America's disinterestedness in the case. They are Scott Nearing and Joseph Freeman, authors of "Dollar Diplomacy," which B. W. Huebsch announces for September. "An outline of American Imperialism" is the significant subtitle, and in addition to its analysis of the Chinese episode, there will be chapters on Canada, Mexico, Cuba, the other Caribbean states, South America, Hawaii and the Philippines, and finally the new phase of American diplomacy inaugurated by the vast post-war indebtedness of Europe.

In a letter to his publishers, the Century Company, Johan Bojer makes the startling statement, apropos of his forthcoming novel, "The Emigrants," that the Scandinavian people in the United States equal in number, at least, the Scandinavian people left at home. And overcrowding at home, he goes on, is not the explanation, for Scandinavia is not overcrowded.

BEEKEEPING AUTHOR'S PASSION

Dallas Lore Sharp, famous nature writer, whose new book, "The Spirit of the Hive," has just been published by Harper's, is well known in Los Angeles. He has lectured here on several occasions and has always made a favorable impression. Dr. Sharp lives in Hingham, Mass. Beekeeping, he says, is not a hobby—it is a passion. So are his woodlot and garden. So was his teaching. He taught twenty-three years without a day's absence. Then he decided to stop and start life again in a new way.

"It is rather exciting to try that sort of thing after 50," Mr. Sharp says, "but that is the time you most need to to do it, and it is about your last chance."

Mr. Sharp points to five decisive days in his intellectural life: The day he bought his first book; the day he was sent to find mistletoe in a New Jersey swamp; the day he met the old naturalist, J. W. P. Jenks of Brown University; the day he got his first check for writing; the day when, trying to smash a dissenter's theological system, his own, like a house of cards, came tumbling down upon him.

"From the day when I made that first financial investment in books (it was Gilbert White's "Natural History of Selbourne," for 30 cents) my way was fixed. But behind that (I was about 13 years of age, I think) lies a memory of open-air life in the fields and by the river, with shipwrights, oystermen and sea captains (my farmer-father owned part of an oyster sloop.) I had the deep swamps and the acquaintance of all kinds of wild life, but almost no books. Even before I knew it I was plotting to write my own books. And behind all that, given a Quaker mother (she bore five sons and four daughters) who at 84 is as keen for life as her children, and given the need for hard work, economy, resourcefulness, simple living and a turn for dreams, and any boy will pull through.

"I don't play golf. I hoe and build stone walls and chop in my woodlot and work with my bees and, early and late, each day attend to the chores which are more than money or meat or play, and next to religion and books and friends.

"I am bumped off of Mullein Hill and forced to travel a little. I love people and have lectured to 100,000 of them since September of this year, and they have lectured to me, and I deserved it. So I am not a hermit—though I dream delightfully of being one some day."

ESTHETICS OF ARCHITECTURE

AMERICAN HOMES OF TODAY. Their architectural styles, their environments, their characteristics. By Augusta Owen Patterson. The Macmillan Company, New York.

"This is a book rather on esthetics than architecture," says Mrs. Patterson in her preface. It is trenchantly written, beautifully illustrated, and sells at a price that is a compliment to all Americans, as it presupposes that all of us are highly paid or are living on the income from our Liberty bonds.

"The first years of this century," says Mrs. Patterson, "have seen significant changes in architectural style in American homes, changes almost as significant, mentally, as the abandonment of the knife as a food conveyor."

In this book Mrs. Patterson strives to codify these changes and to explain the mental background of our best efforts to surround ourselves with the beautiful, at the same time that we keep out the wind and weather. Also she strives to explain the unexplainable happenings that have led Americans as a nation to recognize that the architect and the decorator know a good deal more about their business than do the housewife and the man who spends most of his day at the office.

Patiently, persistently, Mrs. Patterson traces the home-building art in this country from the Colonial through the clapboarded Parthenon, iron-deer, jigsaw puzzle, brownstone-front, Richardsonian, or what-have you spasms and recessions to the year 1900, when, as she sets forth, "something went click in our architectural mentality," and "we came of mental age, as it were."

Thereupon, just to celebrate our freedom, we took down the lightning-rods, rolled out from under the granite feather bed with which, as Mrs. Patterson puts it, Richardson had "weighed down nascent American taste" and decided that we had lived long enough among the monsters of taste. We were aesthetically reborn, even if the films did come in about that time, or shortly after.

Now, 1900, may or may not be the precise year that burnsides went out of style and leg-of-mutton sleeves last startled the horses, but the date is near enough for Mrs. Patterson's major thesis that the architecture which followed was much better and more intelligently varied than that which went before.

In chapters on the English, Italian, French and various others styles of architecture, on the garden, farm groups, and the decorative room, Mrs. Patterson proves her contention that we are now about as far from 1870 in architecture as we are from "St. Elmo" in literature. What the future will say about our present Rogers' groups, we don't know.

IS IT GOOD ENGLISH? By John O'London. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.

The genial gentleman and master of English who has lent his name and ability to John O'London's Weekly for, lo! these many years, in: "Is it Good English?" gives us grammar without groans. But, then, he starts with the presumption that "good English follows clear thinking rather than that system of rules called grammar which youth loathes and maturity forgets."

Since Ambrose Bierce issued his "Write it Right," we have seen no more informing collection of dialogues on good English than the little collection which John O'London has gathered from the files of his publication. In answering questions in his publication, John O'London has written for the larger world, which is concerned with participles and precepts, but which loathes rules. Now the only thing for all of us to do is to start thinking straight and we shall be masters of language.

Now and then intense grammarians rise up to quarrel with the use of the singular verb with a plural subject, as in "Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory" or "wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings." John O'London suggests that "the singular verb is more intense than the plural verb," hence its usage, occasionally, by those who do their thinking straight. It is a simple solution of a vexing problem and John O'London is right, eternally right.

John O'London also is right when he says that the clear thinker and cogent writer never has recourse to the puerile expressions, "the former" and "the latter." The cogent writer and clear thinker has a message that he puts over without repetition, or when he does repeat he does so in such a manner

GORDON YOUNG APPRECIATED

Edwin Bjorkman writes to Alan G. Rinehart of the George H. Doran Company in regard to "Seibert of the Island," Gordon Young's splendid new novel, recently reviewed on this page:

" 'Seibert of the Island' proved one of the biggest treats you have given me in a long while. I could not get at it until the night before last, but when I did, it was good-by to my night's sleep. One does not put that thing down halfway through. It was Pike's Peak or bust, once I was started at it.

"What a book! What a surprising thing! So big, and yet so almost melodramatically intense. So much thought combined with so much knowledge of the life described and, at the same time, with such a sense for dramatic values. It is quite unbelievable.

"Stevenson comes to mind naturally as a comparison. 'Ebb Tide' and 'The Wrecker' . . . both of which I have always liked more than some of his more famous works. But, mere stylistic perfection apart, Stevenson is not in it with Young. I don't know a thing about life on those islands . . . nothing, that is, except what I have read in books, from Melville to Maugham. But Young makes me feel all the time that this is the real thing and that is what counts to me. I don't care a hang whether he has pictured reality or not."

RECENT FICTION

ALAN. By E. F. Benson. George H. Doran Company, New York.

"Alan" is a minute and penetrating study of a novelist of some distinction, named Alan Graham, who in his days of unclouded vision and consequent success, had married Agnes, a charming girl much younger than himself, who regarded him with worshipful eyes and felt it an honor to be chosen as his amanuensis and general attendant as well as his spouse.

But Alan's invention and imagination began to fail when his wife was still in early middle life. While far from being aware of the extent of the inroads which time and close application to his work had made, he yet realized that his fire was dimmed and concluded that he needed the stimulus of a new amanuensis. He, therefore, took on a widow named Mrs. Probyn, who desired to shine by reflected light, and accepted an invitation from her to stay at her country home, there to dictate his projected novel to this sychophantic admirer. His wife would not be left alone, for Timothy, a cousin of Alan's, about nine years younger than the latter's wife, had recently come to establish himself in London, and in the meantime was living in the Graham home. Timothy wrote short stories and sketches in impressionist style, and Alan, who hated that sort of literature, was nevertheless beginning to feel jealous of his cousin's dawning success.

But in his native egotism he could not imagine himself as a spiritually forsaken husband, and so failed to realize that Timothy had also been successful in winning the heart of Agnes. However, his literary jealousy led him to break off all relations with his kinsman, and the enamored pair were thus driven to secret assignments, although there were no overt acts of unfaithfulness, and the dutiful Agnes remained as detestably amiable as before, pampering her husband's egotism and cheerfully serving him during the slow decay of his mental and physical faculties. The author carefully describes Alan's gradual breakdown and further obliges by dovetailing the closing incidents of this little drama so neatly that the funeral baked meats scarcely needed safe conduct to the family refrigerator.

He failed, however, to write a probably necessary da capo at the end of the tale, since Agnes, as has been related, was a half-score years older than her lover. Nevertheless there is the case of R. L. S. to the contrary, and sentimental readers may, therefore, hope that a like miracle might operate in favor of Benson's sweetly silly heroine.

THE UNHOLY EXPERIMENT. By Constance Smedley. The Dial Press, New York.

It may as well be revealed at once that "The Unholy Experiment" was an attempt by an English portrait painter and a writer of popular fiction who had been duly wedded with bell, book and candle, to adjust themselves to new sex partnerships.

The artist husband visited New York unchaperoned in order to execute certain commissions in his line of esthetic endeavor, and there encountered single-handed a young married woman from the despised and rejected Middle West, who, like the football recruit in Ade's most successful play, was "crazy about art."

Considering it his duty to remain in the United States indefinitely in order that this seeking soul should by his efforts become thoroughly enlightened, Ronald Craven refused to return to his home and wife, even after Mrs. Craven had instituted a suit for a restitution of conjugal rights, the first step toward an English divorce.

Deeply humiliated by her husband's desertion, Edna Craven sought distraction by herself undertaking an American tour before formally instituting a suit for divorce. She had a number of friends in San Francisco, and after two days spent in New York she boarded a train for the Pacific Coast. On this journey she met a transplanted middle westerner who was at that time the editor of a very advanced New York magazine. They encountered mutual friends in a stop at Albuquerque, and after leaving them indulged in a series of adventures during which she, in the classic phrase of the late Bertha M. Clay, was "tempted to the verge."

Reaching San Francisco she was all too soon confronted by her errant husband, who in the meantime had inherited an estate and a tidy little income in his native land on condition that he become reunited to his wife. Having wearied of his self-imposed task and finally concluding that his protege was incapable of rising to his esthetic level, Craven was quite ready for a return to England, and as the story always lays decided emphasis upon his wife's high sense of moral responsibility, it follows that she instantly consented to accompany him. But she insisted on a special parting session with her

ENGLAND AND THE CIVIL WAR

In His Scholarly and Impartial Study of This Trying Period Dr. Adams Shows That the British Government and People Feared Chiefly the War's Effects.

BY THOMAS F. FORD

GREAT BRITAIN AND THE AMERICAN CIVIL WAR. By Ephraim Douglass Adams. Longmans, Green & Co., New York.

Historians as well as politicians have ever been ready to practice the familiar out-door sport of "twisting the lion's tail," and the attitude and conduct of the British public and government during the conduct of the Civil War has been one of the most convenient stumps from which this class practiced their favorite pastime.

That Britain was guilty of both sins of omission and commission during that trying period no careful student of the history of our foreign relations during the conflict will have the hardihood to deny. But that Britain deliberately and with malice aforethought sought to aid in bringing about the dissolution of the American Union is a notion without foundation.

That there should have been bluster and braggadocio and a decidedly belligerent attitude as a result of the "Trent Affair" is natural. In fact, had it not been for the caution and foresight of Palmerston and Russell and the ever pacific attitude of the Prince Consort, war would have been the result. Just how a war with Great Britain at that particular moment would have affected the course of history no man can now say, but that it would have been a deplorable mistake and an international tragedy, there is little cause to doubt.

Many of our historians, eminent precursors of Hearst of today, have made it a point to make the better seem the worse in every treatment of that troubled time and they have studiously imputed to the British government and people the most unfriendly motives, entirely forgetful of the fact that Britain, too, at that time was treading he deeps and shallows of a storm-swept political sea that made a calm and safe policy of neutrality impossible.

In "Great Britain and the American Civil War," Dr. Adams makes a careful study of both the British government and the British people during the war as well as of the political and economic conditions in Britain at the time, which so largely determined public feeling. Though an American, Dr. Adams, who is well known as Professor of History at Stanford University, manages to be entirely impartial. His is the work of a scholar and judicial investigator, not of the partisan patriot.

Documents not heretofore open to historians have been studied in detail, as have the personal papers and correspondence of the British Cabinet, such as Lord Palmerston, Lord John Russell and Gladstone, and of Lord Lyons, the British Minister to America. Research has also been made into the diplomatic correspondence at Washington, the private correspondence of James Mason, Confederate envoy to Great Britain, the Russian correspondence at St. Petersburg and other documents having a direct bearing on the situation.

The war interfered greatly with Britain's economic and commercial interests. Cotton was then, as it has been in the years since, essential to British industry. Her pinners and fabricators of cotton and of cotton products were in a sad state, and every day the war continued only increased the desperation of their plight. Then, also, her carrying trade was being interfered with to an alarming extent and, in fact, her whole commercial and industrial structure was being menaced. Is it to be wondered at that both people and government were given to outbursts of temper?

That ships built in British yards later appeared in the Confederate Navy is not necessarily conclusive proof of Britain's ulterior motives. Ships are a commercial commodity. If builders of ships could realize big prices from the Confederates for their product—being good business men they sold in the highest market — those ships naturally found their way to the Confederate customer. A well charge—and it's a wonder some of our anti-British maniacs have not done so—that the bogus Scotch whisky now being smuggled into the United States, in defiance of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, is the result of a deliberate British plot to wreck the Constitution.

Then there was the cotton loan. Mason, the Confederate agent, boasted, when this loan was floated, that the success of the loan was the equivalent of "financial recognition of the Confederacy" even though political recognition was technically denied. While the prompt and generous response of British investors in this "speculation" was taken by the North as an evidence of British hostility, it would appear that this too was unwarranted. British investors are and always have been speculators. They are as prone to take a flier as the proverbial Chinaman. The bonds, carrying as they did, a clause making them convertible at par into cotton at sixpence for each pound, was, to say the least, attractive when cotton was selling at twenty-one pence on the open market. Then too, the loan bore 7 per cent interest and was offered at 90. Quite as attractive as many of the foreign loans floated in the United States after the armistice.

Reading the carefully documented pages of these two volumes, we see all these events, so trying at the time, in their true perspective, seeking to protect their own best interests in precisely the same way as neutral powers have a habit of doing under similar stresses and strains.

The author has previously published "British Interests and Activities in Texas" and "The Power of Ideals in American History." He has been at various times lecturer at the universities of Harvard, Yale, Johns Hopkins, Michigan, California, Kansas. His degrees are A.B. and Ph.D., University of Michigan; LL.D., Grinnell College; Litt.D., Tufts College. He is a member of the American Historical Association and Fellow of the Royal Historical Society. The book, which is two volumes, should find a place in every library of consequence, especially those of colleges and universities.

THE BEST OF THEIR KIND

Beautiful things are still being made, despite all the outcry against this so-called machinery age, even beautiful books. During July and August, at the Art Center, 65 East Fifty-sixth street, New York, there was shown a collection of travel posters and travel books, each of twenty-two publishers being limited to three recent books. Of the sixty-six books accepted for the exhibition the following seven were chosen for honorable mention by competent jury as "conforming to the best traditions of book making for typography, page size, presswork and illustrations:" "Hill Towns of the Pyrenees," text by Amy Oakley and the illustrations by Thornton Oakley (the Century Company;) "Stalking Big Game With a Camera in Equatorial Africa," by Marius Maxwell (the Century Company;) "Little Pictures of Japan," edited by Olive Beaupre Miller, pictures by Katherine Sturges (the Bookhouse for Children;) "My Eskimo Friends: Nanook of the North," by Robert J. Flaherty in collaboration with Francis Hubbard Flaherty (Doubleday, Page & Co.;) "New Trails in Mexico," by Carl Lumholtz, illustrated (Charles Scribner's Sons;) "Pearls and Savages," by Capt. Frank Hurley, illustrated (G. P. Putnam's Sons;) "Voyaging Southward From the Strait of Magellan," by Rockwell Kent, illustrated (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

THE CHRISTIAN RENAISSANCE

The Century Company has taken over the publication of "The Christian Renaissance, a History of the Devotio Moderna," by Albert Hyma, Ph.D. In recognition of this book Dr. Hyma has been made a member of the Historical Society of the Netherlands and a fellow of the Royal Historical Society of England. It is the first history of the hitherto little-appreciated movement known as the Devotio Moderna, which was the real beginning of the Protestant and Catholic reformations. It contains a copy of the constitution of the Brethren of the Common Life at Deventer, which had been thought lost by the authorities in Europe and which Dr. Hyma discovered in the Royal Library at The Hague. To the student of history this discovery is as vital as the finding of an original book of Virgil. There are 126 pages of notes and bibliography which reveal the painstaking scholarship of the author.

NEW WYETH BOOK

The publication of a book with illustrations by N. C. Wyeth is always an event, especially when the book is a classic. The famous illustrator has made five paintings for "The Oregon Trail," by Francis Parkman, published in August in Little, Brown & Co.'s series of classic stories for children, the Beacon Hill Bookshelf.

THE NEW

IN STORES AND HOMES

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

By Olive Gray

Oh, Let's

Give the other fellow his share of the carseat! His money is as good as ours, and he is entitled to his share of space. Nowhere is selfishness more evident than upon street cars, nowhere is altruism more commendable. I am sorry to say that women with children are most thoughtless of all passengers, allowing their little ones to occupy unpaid-for seats while elders stand, permitting them to soil the clothes and tramp on the feet of their neighbors.

New Attachments

Sleeves, long in abeyance, find many new and strange ways of forming attachments of dresses and wraps. Economy, always striving to keep pace with Madame la Mode, must perforce resort to intrigue, in sleeve affairs. Longing for the lengthy sleeve is fulfilled by attaching the full bishop to the short, or no-sleeve of the passing season. Often, new and exclusive garments come with such a full sleeve, the lower part of which is lavishly embroidered, or fashioned from contrasting material. Thus is furnished the excuse for such differentiation in the made-over dress or wrap.

Sophisticated Hats

It has been said that only the genuine aristocrat, can afford to be democratic, and to carry the thought into millinery—the utmost simplicity may be disported by the genuine masterpieces in hats. Such come forth in felt, in velours, in velvet, shaped with exacting correctness and trimmed with just one item, usually a very small item, but oh! so meticulously right. A tiny ornament, posed in the proper place, a teeny-weeny feather fancy, of just the right coloring and shape; a furry, satiny, leathery motif, most sure of itself; a band of ribbon-smoothing, where it should be. No fussiness to cover sloppy workmanship, but visibly tailored perfection, everywhere. This, the season's decree.

Pantying

Whether or not this portends a return to feminity, the new lingerie is fraught with womanish allure. Madame, in her fascinating Parisian lingerie shop, within that so-French place, recently ensconced in its new home, allowed me to festival my eyes upon her most recent imports. Panties are a feature of the novel underthings, which she handles affectionately and describes in dulcet tones. The new panties—one must define them in the diminutive—are the merest nothings, of cloudy chiffon, set beneath the chemise or step-in. The latter is sometimes of crepe de chine, exquisitely hand-embroidered, or of chiffon brocaded in silk or velvet. One adorable set, which I am sure it would be no sin to steal—since no woman could resist its charm—was of rosy crepe de chine in a luxurious quality, motifs being embroidered in groups of violets with tiny peeping leaves in faintest green. Apricot, hearts-of-rose, Nile, orchid—are some of the salient colors in these garments intime. All bear the inimitable stamp of Paris, in those little touches, which make for exclusiveness in such articles.

Unbobbing Bobs

If some women and girls are tired of bobbed hair and wish to relinquish the mode, it is no proof that bobs are going out. Variety is the spice of feminity. If the notion takes you to unbob, and you wish to avoid the long interval of growing new hair, you can find many different ways of covering the lapse between no-hair and hair. There are at the hair-dressers, bob-attachments, half-bobs, fractional coiffures and even entire bob-wigs, so shingled, bobbed or otherwise simulating your own hirsutery as to bridge the gap during the natural growth.

Novel Handbags

Handbags of plaid woolen fabric—for all the world like that of one's dress or coat! These are the very latest from Paris. In neutral tones of brown or leather colors, such bags are the nth degree of chic.

Do Not Tell Me!

Do not tell me that dresses cannot be shorter—they can and are! I have been looking at the latest ones from Paris. With these come garters, in loveliest silken effects, with doll-heads of painted silk and having real silky hair. It is intimated that these garters are for wear quite above the knee and now why should such loveliness be concealed? That is not the Parisian way.

Bands of grey shaking from light to dark are used on an ensemble of beige grey.

Bands, medallions and fringe of metal mesh are used in ornamenting new frocks.

At the resorts the two-piece frock of silk crepe may be worn until the dinner hour.

Black and white applique motifs are used on an orange tennis blazer of jersey fleece.

Blond satin slippers lead for evening—with gold and silver kid as close seconds.

Flower and velvet trimming is used on the wide-brimmed hair hat in pastel colorings.

One lovely gown is made entirely of heavy white silk fringe, used in a diagonal pattern.

In her summer wardrobe the woman of fashion includes an unlined coat of velveteen.

Long sleeves may be slit from elbow to wrist to show pleated crepe sections underneath.

The waistline may be marked with small bands of tucks in waiving or geometric patterns.

The scarf may be attached to the front of the neckline, and button in back with three buttons.

Inserts of colored braid are used on a tiny hat of black felt and a matching purse of antelope.

Transparent Georgette coats, weighed with ribbon trimming, are worn over printed crepe frocks.

A feminine note is struck in costume by the numerous bows, tied either high or low on the corsage.

SUGAR AND SPICE

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Oh, dear, I do hope I am not telling tales out of school. But I can't write another line until I've whispered this. Now you understand it is a whisper, don't you?

Well, Michael Arlen will be in Los Angeles on October 15. But that isn't all. Pola Negri is going to give a big banquet for him.

And he is only 29 years of age, and talks as wittily as he writes, and oh, he is such an extraordinarily fascinating young man. And "his name is on the lips of the world" and "he makes nearly a half million dollars a year"—and "he used to be a poor boy, as poor as Charlie Chaplin once was" and "he isn't the least bit spoiled, I give you my word" . . . and I could go on indefinitely quoting remarks like that about him by some one who met him in New York.

Mercy, what a lot Michael has to live up to! He is going to write an original screen story especially for Pola . . . and if his reputation survives this, and his disposition survives Hollywood, he really will be a most remarkable young man, won't he?

Of course, there couldn't possibly be any social rivalry in Hollywood, could there? It just happens that when one set of picture celebrities entertains a British peer, another one has to be available for the rival set next week.

So if Giles S. Holland Fox-Strangeways, Earl of Ilchester, did have a fancy dress ball given for him last week, at which he was taught to dance the Charleston with more or less success by one fair and famous hostess, every other peer that ever dropped into Hollywood can claim an equally celebrated host—even if the hosts don't happen to be considered eligible for the local Blue Book.

Rather amusingly ironical this, when you come to think of it. Local Blue Book compilers are of one mind about excluding motion-picture celebrities from their sacred lists of the socialy indorsed — yet these excluded ones bag every titled aristocrat that comes to the town.

On the other hand, the bona fide Blue Book hosts get most of their eclat out of entertaining the professional celebrities.

The charming hostess who had Leonida Coroni for a guest the other evening, considered herself quite as favored as anyone who could claim Lord Ilchester.

And Coroni is some personality. He stands over six feet, has bushy black hair, and has an immense and amazing voice. He is enjoying a vacation here—having fallen in love with us when he came two years ago, the occasion upon which San Francisco "discovered" him, so that New York promptly annexed him.

I heard him, in naughty playful mood, give the most astonishing imitations of Caruso and Chaliapin. It was Caruso singing again. Our hosts gave us the same song by Caruso on the Victrola afterward, and we marveled.

Coroni is really a Russian, with a fearsome name. So, as his voice is Italian, he chose an Italian name for professional purposes.

On that same occasion we met Mlle. Zadah Guerin, whose skill as a pianiste we had already realized, and whose beauty we had admired, since she has been among us for two years. But Coroni revealed greater glories of her. She had not told us of her triumphs in Paris and New York . . . because she was out here recovering from a paralysis of her right arm, and was filling up her time with teaching.

The girl is very young, quite beautiful, and extraordinarily talented as well, made her musical debut—Paris at 5 years of age. Coroni says he walks three hours Her chief enthusiasm just now is the California Opera Company that is to delight us at that new Olympic Auditorium this season. Mam'selle is teaching the entire company to sing in French, most of the operas to be given us being in that language. And, of course, the teacher had to have a deep and appreciative knowledge of the five operas to be given as well.

James Young, after three marriages, maintains a bachelor menage now; lives all alone in a big twelve-roomed house, with three bathrooms. And gets most of his domesticity out of two jolly boys next door.

An amateur palmist and astrologer at a party told Jimmie that his heart line was most extraordinary, that he loved a home, and that "although you may be a bachelor, I see four marriages for you."

Jimmie looked anxious—he is kind o' scared of a possible fourth venture. In the meantime, however, he is learning the Charleston and even won Pola Negri's approval in it—she being an expert par excellence.

Which reminds me—I don't approve of Pola's newest bob. It may go with the tennis and the swimming, but it doesn't belong to the nation's pet siren vamp. Not seductively speaking.

Pity the poor artist! Three famous celebrities have told me this week that they always starve for several hours before giving a performance.

Coroni says he walks three hours and eats almost nothing for twelve hours before singing in opera.

Mlle. Guerin says she starves for twenty-four hours and walks and walks before giving a recital.

Pola Negri says she goes on short rations all the time.

All agree that Art shines best on an empty stomach.

John Barrymore is under harsh criticism for his high and haughty treatment of the beloved Harold Lloyd. Harold was introduced and enthusiastically expressed his admiration for John's work.

John, in disagreeable mood, is quoted as saying "Oh, these motion-picture people—no sincerity, no sincerity" and turned away, ignoring the comedian's friendliness. John dropped several pegs in the studio affections by that act.

I was discussing the advent of young Joseph Schildkraut with some motion-picture people—telling how he assured me that he visited Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" several nights a week, to "learn his art from the greatest genius of the age."

"Sheer affectation" jeered a lovely actress. "He is all affectations. He will never make a screen actor. On the stage, he has all the tricks of the voice to help him—but the camera searches out the weakness of character. Joseph has some art but no feeling—and feeling is more important than art before the camera."

NO PRODUCTION LULL APPARENT

Studio Managers Scoff at Predicted Slump

Contracts Made for Large Release Programs

Independents May Slacken for Few Months

According to advance schedules given out by the various studios, this fall will see on the whole an even keel of production with probably a slight increase in activities toward the first of the year. This completely puts at rout the various rumors that have been floating about Hollywood concerning a probable shutdown. Because the fall usually is the slack period at studios, it has become to be a fairly accepted fact that there will be a shutdown during these months, and about this time every year the rumors begin.

There has been such unprecedented activity at the various studios during the late spring and summer that all signs would seem to point to a necessary slowing down of production. Some people have even gone so far as to predict that the coming months will witness another slump equal to that suffered in the industry two years ago. However, this is an impossibility, according to studio managers, on account of the large release programs already contracted for by them.

AUGUST PEAK

True, the number of productions, together with their size and general activity, seemingly reached a peak during the middle of August. During one week alone more than 9000 extras were used at the studios with a total expenditure of some $85,000. This is the first time for two years that such a large number of extras has been used at one time. At Famous Players Paul Bern employed about 1500 extras in one day for Pola Negri's latest picture, "Flower of the Night;" Victor Fleming about 500 for "Lord Jim;" George Seitz about a 1000 for "The Vanishing American," and Jimmie Cruze some 500 people a day for "The Pony Express."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer further added to the total with 2000 extras for the week; more than 1000 were employed on the United lot, while the independents, including Fox and Universal, boosted the total with another 2000.

GIANT EXPENDITURES

Because of the large amounts involved in the various productions, there has been plenty of food for conjecture. Added to this is the fact that several of the larger studios have been working on shorter schedules and consequently are ahead on their productions. For instance, Warner Brothers' contract calls for the production of forty pictures for the year, a third of which have been finished already. This naturally means that if they continue at the same place there will either be a lull between the time they finish their present schedule and the time when they begin on the following year's program, or they will produce fewer pictures at a time.

The same state of affairs is found at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Their program calls for the release of fifty-two pictures during the year, dating from August 1 to August 1. With barely a month elapsed on this year's program they have covered about a third of their schedule. Despite the fact that they are so far ahead with their releases, Harry Rapf, in charge of production at the studio, claims they will continue to keep up their present pace.

First National announces a program which will equal in every respect the activity they have maintained during the summer. The same is true of the Joseph Schenck productions. Famous Players shows a full schedule, with a peak of production coming around about Thanksgiving. Universal reports an even tenor of production, with a possible slight increase, so it would seem there is little or no basis for these rumors about a shut-down.

POSSIBLE LULL

The only possible place where a temporary lull in production may take place is in the ranks of the independents. In their case it is a matter of borrowing money for productions and after a certain number have been made they must of necessity wait until a certain percentage of their investment has been returned to them or their bankers. Since the independents have been going full blast during the summer months there is reason to believe that their activities wil be nil for the next few months.

One reason for the advanced schedule at some of the larger studios is the economy program on which they have been shooting. Where before eight or nine weeks required for pictures, now they are being made in twenty to thirty days.

Ruth Robinson Buys Residence in Los Angeles

Ruth Robinson, famous stage star, has arrived in Los Angeles and has purchased a home here, where she will reside permanently, she let it be known today. The noted Broadway and stock actress was last seen here about five years ago when she headed the company at the Morosco Theater.

Miss Robinson has been noted for her interpretations of sympathetic roles on the stage and she is said to have one of the most appealing stage personalities in America. She soon will be seen in Los Angeles, either in a stage or a screen production. It is interesting to note that such famous male stars of the films as Richard Dix, Creighton Hale, Douglas MacLean and Edmund Lowe have appeared in support of Miss Robinson on the stage.

HISTORIC LOCALES

Al Rogell, now directing Jack Hoxie in two of his own stories, is introducing to the screen the historic locale of the Little Big Horn country of the Dakotas, made famous by Custer, Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane, but never before actually photographed.

RECENT DOINGS AMONG WRITERS

He thinks the authentic explanation lies in the adventurous spirit of the viking stock which once went sailing out into the seas on raids but which latterly, in America, has found the conquering of the western prairies—seas of land, he calls them—a task to challenge their courage and energy. The United States is the only country to which Scandinavians have emigrated in large numbers, Mr. Bojer points out.

In a letter recently written by Charles Norris to a friend, that noted writer remarks concerning the new Harry Hervey novel, "Ethan Quest:" "I have just finished 'Ethan Quest' and I agree with you that it is an unusual book—an extraordinary piece of work. It is a poem, and I can not recall ever having read more beautiful word-painting."

Ben Jonson, volume one, by P. Simpson and C. H. Herford, will soon be published by the Oxford University Press, American branch. This is the first volume of the monumental work on which Mr. Simpson has spent many years. When completed it will be the only authoritative and full edition of Ben Jonson in existence. This volume contains the life, contemporary notes and records referring to Jonson, Jonson's letters, legal and official documents relating to Jonson's life, a list of books known to have been in Jonson's library, the first six introductions to the plays.

AESTHETICS OF ARCHITECTURE

that one is not concerned with what goes before or is to follow. The reader is concerned, instantly, with the matter in hand.

Among clear thinkers John O'London finds a man "whose ideas were multitudinous and urgent," so multitudinous and urgent that he acquired the world's largest vocabulary, 21,000 words. The man is Shakespeare and the reason he acquired all these words is cogently set forth by John O'London in support of his major thesis, that word mastery follows on appetite and that clear thinking makes one a master of language. Shakespeare would speak and his vocabulary "was equal to his genius, and it is so with every man." To carry the idea a bit further: think and language will be given unto you.

But it will help you some if you will acquire and inwardly digest John O'London's "Is It Good English?"

admirer, who rudely transformed the chaste embrace which she offered into a genuine California bear hug, which reduced her robe to ribbons and left her in a fainting condition. For of such is the kingdom of Pecksniffian British morality as reincarnated by the fresh and fragrant imagination of this distinguished authoress.

Character Star Will Continue in Screen Work

Whether a successful actress should retire when youth has fled, or go on taking whatever parts she is physically fitted to play, is a question brought up by Eugenie Besserer who is playing an important role in Robert Z. Leonard's production of "A Little Bit of Broadway," at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio.

In the picture Miss Besserer plays the part of Pauline Starke's mother, an actress who has quietly retired on a little New Jersey farm. She lives there enjoying the peace of the country and reliving in her dreams her past triumphs.

In real life Miss Besserer is one of the most successful character women. She went on the stage when only nine years old, and has been connected with the dramatic arts ever since. She has played leads opposite the greatest actors and for years was starred in her own original plays.

Miss Besserer says she will never retire until she dies. Like the old clown, the smell of the sawdust ring always brings her trouping back. She recently completed the part in the screen version of "The Circle," that Mrs. Leslie Carter created on the stage.

Charles Ray is co-starring with Miss Starke in "A Little Bit of Broadway," and in the supporting cast are Lawford Davidson, Lilyan Tashman and Ned Sparks.

Lemons Tighten Wrinkled Skin

Squeeze the juice of two lemons in a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents, shake well and you have the very mildest anti-wrinkle lotion to tighten relaxed skin, erase fine lines and eradicate crows-feet.

Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion into the skin at night. By morning most of the tell-tale wrinkles, tired lines and crows-feet are smoothed out, giving a more youthful contour to cheeks, chin, throat. It leaves the skin velvety soft, clear and fresh.

Beauty experts use this astringent lotion for enlarged pores, also to bleach and whiten sallow, tanned skin.

Mix this harmless lotion yourself since it acts best immediately after prepared.—[Advertisement.

VERSES FOR CHILDREN BY A SHUT-IN

"Kiddiedears of the Long Ago" Charming Picture of Childhood Joys

A child's book of verses, about hood, its joys and heartaches, a child would write them if it ld, such is "Kiddiedears of the g Ago," by Becky Tabor (The kerbocker Press, N. Y.)

A rare understanding of chil- n is the undercurrent in this collection of verses. It is a kind of understanding, not ted with any degee of arti- ity. Becky Tabor loved chil- n before affliction made her a -in. Instead of crying over misfortune or giving way to ndency, she accepted her fate et at once to make the best it. She found that by living er childhood she was happy. happiness she is giving to ers in "Kiddiedears."

A group of the former class, some teachers and writers who were in quest of some spot far from the "madding crowd" where they might live for a little while the primitive life of our pioneer forefathers, decided on one of these camping trips. They thought it would be fun and more in keeping with their plan to dispense with tents and roll up in blankets at night, as members of hiking expeditions in the wilds often do. They also thought it would be a novelty to have no particular objective, but just to start out and travel over the desert and into the mountains. To sleep at night under the stars which always look so big and bright in the desert skies. They always seem so close to earth out there.

WHAT PRICE NATURE

Their vacation began and they left civilization behind. They journeyed on through the heat and glare, with the engine pounding like tired hearts. Getting caught in a fierce sandstorm is not the most desirable experience in the world even for vacationists seeking novelty. It did not deter them, however, from continuing on their mad expedition to nowhere in particular. They ate their sandwiches under the weird, gaunt, mysterious Joshua trees and tried to imagine how it felt to be really primitive. When they reached the foothills they found them enveloped in smoke from a dozen forest fires. They watched the red flames in the distance as they crept on, on into the heart of the mountains. They saw them eating rapidly into the big timber while selecting their camping spot for the night.

The vision of forests aflame afar off robbed them of all desire to use their permit for a fire, so they sat around on huge boulders and ate the canned stuff that always reminds one of mother's day at the club or the cook's day off at home. They dipped up water from a trickling stream that looked suspiciously like the Los Angeles River at the foot of Elysian Park. They tried to reassure themselves with their textbook lore, especially regarding the fact that running water purifies itself, no matter how far it may be from chemical purity at the early stages of its meanderings.

"But dears," one of them exclaimed, "even if running water does purify itself as it flows, don't you think something depends upon its speed in transit? This water does not flow, it merely trickles." After noting the contents deposited here and there amid the green and brown scum they decided that they were not thirsty. They also thought that another camping spot farther on in the mountains might be more desirable. So they motored on into the night of the mountains.

COLD SHIVERS

"Why not find an inn for the night?" one of the timid ones suggested.

"And acknowledge defeat at the outset? You know we plan to demonstrate that a return to primeval simplicity can be fascinating even to the ultra-civilized."

"Yes, this vacation is to be something different. Why spoil it by an allusion to inns and beds?"

As they motored on they had thrilling visions of cats about to leap from overhanging boughs and lions prowling in search of prey. Some coyotes barked. It sounded as though there were a hundred or more of them, but they remembered that one or two could make that much noise. Pausing again to hold another council, shivers crept up their spines as one of the party related a cheerful tale about a mountain cat. It leaped from a tree into the midst of a group of men who were eating their midday meal in these very mountains not far from the spot where they were halting.

"What happened then?" one asked while each hair on her little bobbed head stood up in the horror which gripped her.

"Oh, the cat sprang back into a tree before the men realized what had happened. It was more frightened than they as it landed among the pork and beans. It made a hasty getaway."

"How exciting," the artist murmured. "And no vest pocket cameras available?"

"Did you notice the feathers scattered about the entrance to the cave under that big boulder back there?"

"Yes, probably the lion was waiting back in its shadows for his next meal of owls or—"

"Don't finish the sentence, please, until we get back to civilization!"

AN UNDERDONE VACATION

As it takes a peculiar type of mental and temperamental make-up to successfully do a camping stunt in the primitive style, this party decided after two days and a night of this search for adventure, that the reality fell far short of the expectation. As they still had several days of vacation time to dispose of—some of them several weeks—they decided that Catalina was the logical place for the remainder of their holiday madness.

At the end of a week, however, they declared that Catalina was altogether too modern for a real vacation. All the old quaint, picturesque beauty of the mountain island, its quietness and peace, had vanished. The speed demon had invaded its quiet waters with speed boats, and the ubiquitous cafeteria had established itself in Avalon. It had lost its atmosphere of dreamlike charm. Like a hybrid it now possessed no individuality.

There was little to distinguish it from a bit of old Main street or a fishing village. It was all right for the masses who never draw contrasts or seek novelty in the shape of adventure, but for this party it was too much like a trip to the Venice pier and a hike up Topanga Canyon, finishing with a dinner at a downtown cafeteria. It lacked zest.

So as vacation time is ending one naturally feels like indulging in some reflections on the why and wherefore of this mad desire to get away from work and civilization. Perhaps the most satisfying form of vacation is that taken in homeopathic doses, the week-ends that nearly all of us can indulge in. To those who are possessed of superabundant energy that must find expression in work of some kind, longer ones spell boredom. So after all, when we are waving adieu to the vanishing illusions of vacation we find work the most intriguing and satisfying experience.

EASTERN STAR

The first of September ushered in the resumption of regular activities on the part of Eastern Star chapters. On that date, the drill team of Southern California exemplified the initiatory work at Southland Chapter, Pasadena, after vacation. This team is headed by Mrs. Lillian Holman, who acts as Worthy Matron. Following the meeting, Southland's members and guests enjoyed dancing and cards.

Arlington Chapter No. 418 will give a ball at the Egyptian Ballroom, Ocean Park pier, on the 24th inst., according to Dorothy Benson, Worthy Matron. The proceeds derived from this paid affair will be devoted to charitable purposes.

Eagle Rock Chapter will give a card party at the Eagle Rock Masonic Temple on the 25th inst., for the benefit of the Eastern Star Home.

Esperanza Chapter is planning a surprise dance for the 19th inst. at the Masonic Temple, Pico and Figueroa. Elmer Garrett, Worthy Patron, has charge of the affair.

The ladies of El Sereno Chapter have been working in preparaiton for the bazaar to be given on the 17th inst., day and evening, at 4951 Huntington Drive. There will be dancing in the evening.

Hollywood Chapter will entertain the 1925 matrons and patrons on the 28th inst., in conjunction with West Adams, Cahuenga and Radiant chapters, at the Hollywood Masonic Temple. Flora Whitney, Associate Matron, has charge of the affair.

Loyalty Chapter will have its advancement of officers on the 10th inst. at the Oddfellows' new temple. Irene Gilliam will be Acting Worthy Matron.

Montebello Chapter announces a dance to be given under the auspices of its Progressive Club, V. E. Gardner, chairman, on the 26th inst., at Montebello.

Ramona Star Chapter of Monterey Park will celebrate its fifth birthday with a party for members and friends on the 19th inst.

Sunset Chapter will have a dance at the Venice Ballroom on the 16th inst.

Sunnyside Chapter will unite with Sunnyside Masonic Lodge in giving a dance on the 12th inst., at the West Ebell clubhouse.

Estelle Thomas, Worthy Matron of West Adams Chapter, announces a 6 p.m. dinner on the 11th inst. at 5179½ West Adams street. The dinner will be followed by the regular meeting.

Westlake Chapter is planning a luncheon under the direction of its Wide-Awake Club at the Odd Fellows' Temple on the 15th inst.

Wilshire Chapter will give a dinner at 6 p.m., the 12th inst., at Third street and Western avenue, Mrs. Florence Noe will have charge of the affair, and will be assisted by the officers of the chapter.

FRATERNAL AFFAIRS

Officials of the Clarence F. Smith Lodge, No. 482, F. & A. M., yesterday announced the following meetings to be conducted at Pico and Orchard streets: September 9, 7 p.m., first degree; September 16, 7 p.m., second degree; September 23, 7 p.m., third degree; September 30, 7 p.m., third degree.

SCOTTISH CLANS

Clan Cameron, No. 192, Order of Scottish Clans, will stage its annual picnic at Eagle Rock Park on Labor Day. A program of Scottish games, highland dancing, bagpipe playing and addresses will be given. All persons of Scottish extraction are invited.

AMERICAN YEOMEN

Election of officers will feature the meeting of California-Pacific Homestead, No. 2124, to be conducted on the evening of the 11th inst., at the Disabled Veterans' Hall.

A card game will be enjoyed by members of Poinsettia Homestead, No. 1735, on the evening of the 9th inst., at the Fraternal Brotherhood Building.

Union Homestead, No. 2131, will conduct a business meeting, which will include election of officers, on the evening of the 11th inst., at 232 North Vernon avenue.

A dance and social will be given by San Pedro Homestead, No. 6524, on the evening of the 7th inst., at the Odd Fellows' Hall.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Grand Chancellor Frank F. Merriam was honor guest of King David Lodge, No. 237, Knights of Pythias, at the unveiling of the charter at Pythian Castle Hall, 230 South Spring street last Thursday. The Knight rank was conferred on a class of esquires in the presence of the Grand Chancellor, after which a light repast was served to members and visitors. The charter was placed in the keeping of the officers of King David Lodge, with appropriate ceremonies by the Grand Chancellor. Page Rank was conferred on a class of fifteen.

REDMEN

At 1480 West Jefferson street last Monday night, Mojave Tribe No. 124, Improved Order of Redmen, closed the business session at 9 p.m. and the balance of the evening was given to Troupe 71 of the Boy Scouts in which they demonstrated a large variety of tests and rendered several musical selections. There were also demonstrations and talks given by others present who were higher in the ranks of Scout work. Refreshments followed the entertainment and many invited guests were present.

Next Monday night falling on a holiday (Labor Day) Mojave Tribe will not meet.

Next Friday night Manitou Council No. 48, Degree of Pocahontas, will give an entertainment at 437 South Hill street.

ILLINOIS SOCIETY

Students from the Egan School of Dancing were entertainers at the monthly session of the Illinois State Society of Southern California on the evening of August 28, at 233 South Broadway. Walter C. Blue presided; Rae Conduit led community singing and Porter's Orchestra supplied music for dancing. Announcement was made of the coming picnic which will be at Sycamore Grove on the 27th inst., for all former Illinoisans and their friends. Basket dinners and a program of speeches, music and games will feature the reunion. Thirty-five members were added to the society at its last meeting.

STATE SOCIETIES

This will be Kansas Week and "Jayhawkers" will have two chances to meet old friends. Next Tuesday evening when the monthly social will be given at Moose Hall, 427 South Hill street.

A popular program is promised and there will be roll call of counties and dancing. After the entertainment, there will be sociability and refreshments. Next Saturday is the date of the Southern California picnic reunion at Sycamore Grove Park. From 100 miles around Kansans will rally, and the county headquarters will witness thousands of old comrades in happy meetings. Every picnic attraction will be staged and Dr. and Mrs. Ed Hiner will be on the program. The basket dinner hour will precede the entertainment.

Texans will meet their new president, Claude A. Shutt, at the social next Friday evening at the Music Art Hall. Following the program there will be dancing.

The Pennsylvania State Society will meet next Tuesday evening at the Fraternal Brotherhood Building. A program will precede dancing.

Hundreds of inquiries are coming in about the picnic for the Michigan people next Saturday at Sycamore Grove. President M. R. Parmelee is completing plans to care for all who attend, and expects to welcome 10,000 Wolverines. Dr. and Mrs. Ed M. Hiner will be on the program.

Buckeyes will rejoice to learn that their monthly reunions will be resumed Tuesday evening, September 8 at the Ebell Clubhouse. With president Alfred H. Redmond in the chair, a splendid program is assured. All Ohio folks are invited. Dancing will follow the program.

MOOSE

Golden State Lodge 29, Loyal Order of Moose, conducted a meeting Wednesday night. This was the largest attended session of the lodge for a long time, and matters of special interest to all members came before the members. The lodge is now in a position to advance and expand, and will in a short time now be in position to purchase or lease more suitable quarters.

Plans were laid for the Judge Henning class in October and it is expected that this will be the banner class for the fall.

The next event of the Moose will be the picnic and frolic of Unity Legion No. 6, at Sepulveda Park, San Pedro, on Sunday, the 13th inst. This is for all Moose and their families. There will be several attractions that will be of interest to the members. Special attention will be paid to the comfort of women and children. On the 19th inst., the women of Mooseheart will give a dance and entertainment at Moose Hall. Golden State Chapter No. 860, is meeting with success in the effort to double the membership.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF FORESTERS

First of the Supreme Court delegates to return to Los Angeles was Financial Secretary Charles Wilde. He reported an enthusiastic session with much constructive work done.

Court E. G. No. 33, conferred the degrees on a class of fifteen candidates last Tuesday. It was an interesting session of the court, and elaborate plans were made for visiting disabled members.

Plans have been perfected for the benefit for the new Forester Hospital to be given at Benevolence Hall on October 8. Luminaries of the motion-picture world have promised to be present, and the program will include the acts of several of the leading members of vaudeville houses. These stars have all volunteered their services without cost.

Companion Court E. S. will give its monthly social session next Tuesday evening, and Companion Court Morris Vinyard will meet on Wednesday afternoon.

MASONIC DOINGS

The Royal, Select and Super Excellent Master's degrees of York Rite Masonry will be conferred on William Gibbs McAdoo, Mayor George E. Cryer and Judge Walter S. Gates at an outdoor ceremonial in Whiting's Woods, Montrose, on Saturday afternoon, the 12th inst., it was announced yesterday by H. W. Reynolds, Recorder of Los Angeles Council No. 11, the officers of which will confer the degrees upon the prominent trio.

Past Illustrious Masters Charles E. Wright, A. L. Cavanagh, Herman E. Bennett and Mark T. Lee will assist the Illustrious Master, John H. Sheridan, and other officers in conferring the degrees, and Mattison B. Jones will act as special inspector. Grand Master MacLafferty and other grand officers will witness the ceremony.

Following the ceremonies a Spanish barbecue will be served in the grove at 5 p.m., under the direction of Charles V. Means.

Southern California Lodge is laying plans for what promises to be one of the most interesting Masonic evenings of the year on the 23rd inst., according to advice received from James Scarborough, Jr., Worshipful Master. This night will be in honor of Will H. Fisher, Grand Junior Warden of Masons in California. Officers of Wilshire Lodge will confer the third degree.

Following the meeting there will be a program and refreshments.

FRATERNAL BROTHERHOOD

Victory Lodge, No. 1068, T.F.B. conducted a business meeting on Thursday evening. The members are bringing their friends to the business meetings, allowing them to witness the splendid exhibition of drill teams and then amusing themselves in the clubrooms during the business meeting, after which the lodge room and dance hall are thrown open to outsiders.

Mme. Bessie Bugby, chairman of the entertainment committee, is planning a series of entertainments for members and their friends.

J.O.U.A.M.

State Councillor Green of the Junior Order, United American Mechanics, will pay an official visit to the Riverside Council next Saturday evening. Members of Hancock Council, No. 20, will accompany him.

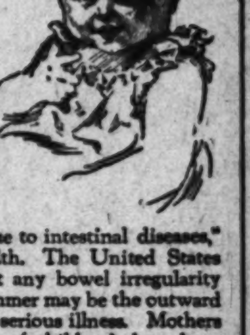
"Our council was one of the first to fill a savings bank bell for the benefit of the Orphans' Home," said Oscar McNeil. "Work in the second degree will be given next Tuesday evening and a drill team to be composed of former service men, will be reorganized.

SPANISH SUNLIGHT IN MAKING SECOND WEEK

Tomorrow will mark the second week of production on First National's "Spanish Sunlight," costarring Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone. Alfred E. Green has started the wheels of filming into fast action and everybody associated with the story feels it will be an excellent vehicle for both Miss La Marr and Stone. This is the first camera appearance in Hollywood Barbara has made for two years and the star is most enthusiastic with the thought of again working in Hollywood.

"Spanish Sunlight" will give her every opportunity for her histrionic talents and affords Lewis Stone an excellent role. The picture is being made on a lavish scale and will be one of the fall releases on First National's schedule.

Summer Time Danger Time for Babies



"SUMMER is the purgatory of motherhood. Of all the babies born in the United States, from 12 to 20 out of every 100 die in the first year of life, and the majority of these deaths take place during the warm months," according to Assistant Surgeon General W. C. Rucker and Senior Surgeon C. C. Pierce, of the United States Public Health Service, in a Public Health Report.

Bowel Trouble Is Cause

"Twenty-five per cent of the deaths of infants under one year of age is due to intestinal diseases," say these leading authorities on health. The United States Public Health Service asserts that any bowel irregularity occurring in babies or children in summer may be the outward and visible sign of the beginning of a serious illness. Mothers must never consider any disturbance of children's bowels as unimportant or "only summer complaint."

Give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

Don't gamble with your baby's health! At the first sign of any bowel disorder give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and lessen the danger of more serious illness. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of the finest Egyptian senna with pleasing aromatics and pepsin in pure cane syrup, a laxative that has been the standard family remedy in countless homes for more than thirty years, pleasant to take, mild in action and positively effective. If you have never used it in your home write for a free trial bottle to Pepsin Syrup Company, 520 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois.

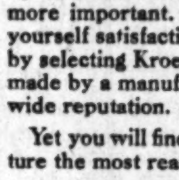
The hidden part is the important part



If you could watch the hundreds of manufacturing operations that must go into any piece of upholstered furniture, you would understand why we urge you to investigate carefully that part of the structure which cannot be seen. Pretty coverings can easily hide cheap, shoddy materials and careless workmanship. Only by knowing what is underneath can you be sure that the furniture you buy will be a good sound investment.

Appearance is important, of course. But the quality of the hidden structure is even more important. You can assure yourself satisfaction on both points by selecting Kroehler Furniture—made by a manufacturer of world-wide reputation.

Yet you will find Kroehler Furniture the most reasonably priced of all fine furniture. This is because huge production and enormous purchasing power reduce manufacturing costs to the lowest possible point. The saving is passed on to you.

See Kroehler Living Room Furniture in the local stores. Ask to have the famous Kroehler hidden qualities explained to you. Learn why Kroehler Furniture lasts for years beyond ordinary furniture. You will find a wide selection of latest styles, in overstuffed, cane and period patterns, in finely carved and finished frames with many coverings to choose from, to match any decorative scheme.

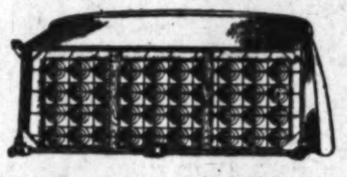
Famous Hidden Qualities of Kroehler Furniture
Guaranteed Spring Steel Understructure



Seat-supporting springs are large wide coils of Premier quality, high tempered steel. They rest upon and are interlocked with a strong yet flexible spring steel understructure. This is a construction vastly superior to ordinary web construction because it is permanent and will not sag or tear loose from the frame. 40 springs are used in the seat construction, 27 in the back.

COVERINGS—Are fine quality. No low-grade mohairs, velours, damasks or tapestries are used. All mohair and wool fabrics are given a special moth-proofing treatment.

HARDWOOD FRAMES—Thoroughly seasoned, kiln-dried, strongly braced, glued, doweled and corner blocked.

FILLING MATERIALS—Are germ-cured moss, flax and cotton—clean and sanitary. No excelsior, cheap hair, shoddy or second-hand materials are used.

KROEHLER MADE CHICAGO NEW YORK STRATFORD CAN.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF THOMAS LAWTON, DECEASED.
LAWTON
-v-
LEACH.

ROBERT MELVILLE TAYLOR LAWTON —Pursuant to an Order of the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Lancaster made in the matter of the Estate of Thomas Lawton, deceased, in an action "Lawton v. Leach," 1925 Letter L. No. 130, whereby an inquiry was directed whether the said Testator's son Robert Melville Taylor Lawton in the Will of the said Testator named is living or dead and if dead when he died and whether he married and if he married whether he left any and what children.

The said Robert Melville Taylor Lawton or his personal representatives or any person claiming through or under him are by his or their Solicitors to come in and prove his or their claim before the Registrar at his Chambers, situate in Duchy Chambers 4 Clarence street in the city of Manchester, England, on or before the 21st day of December, 1925, or in default thereof after the expiration of the time so limited they will be peremptorily excluded from the benefit of the said order.

Tuesday the 5th day of January, 1926 is fixed for hearing and adjudicating upon the said claims.

NOTE—

The said Testator late of Greave Mount Rochdale in the County of Lancaster died on the 21st day of January, 1904. Under his will the said Robert Melville Taylor Lawton if living is entitled as from the 24th day of June, 1914, for life, to one-fourth of the income of the said Trust Estate subject as in the said Will is mentioned.

The said Robert Melville Taylor Lawton formerly resided in or near Los Angeles, United States of America, and was last heard of on or about the 15th July, 1915, in Sydney, Australia.

Any person or persons having any knowledge or whereabouts of the said Robert Melville Taylor Lawton or of the date or place of his death if dead are requested to communicate with the undermentioned Plaintiff's Solicitors.

A. ERNEST STEINTHAL,
Registrar.
TAYLOR KIRKMAN & MAINPRICE,

NEWS OF SOUTHERN COUNTIES

CLEW ABSENT IN MURDER PUZZLE

Mysterious Tool Used in Pasadena Crime

Identity of Instrument Balks Officers

Entire Estate of Victim Left to Friends

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Sept. 5.—Early clews to the solution of the mysterious murder of Lucius Colburn, aged Pasadena rooming-house proprietor, were vanishing rapidly today, and the capture of the murderers seemed a more remote possibility than ever. Detectives have been unable to discover the nature of the one tangible clew left by the slayers—the small instrument which resembles an icepick used by the killers to enter their victim's room by removing the pins from the hinges of the door.

Hardware dealers have been unable to identify the instrument, which is five inches long and brand new. This leads detectives to believe that if the apparently highly specialized use of the instrument can be discovered, it may lead to more definite hints as to the identity of the murderers.

Colburn was found Thursday morning, bound to his bed by strips torn from the sheets, with a large gag forced down his throat which caused his death by strangulation. The room was in a turmoil, and the aged man's watch was gone, encouraging the belief that robbery was the most probable motive of the murderers.

Colburn's will, which was filed for probate today, leaves his entire estate to his two most intimate friends, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Partch, 133 Stevenson avenue, Pasadena. The estate consists of considerable real estate, stocks and bonds and about $700 in cash, $330 of which was contained in a wallet which the marauders overlooked in their victim's room.

Hammer Used by Woman to Lose Evidence

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 5.—Bootleggers have been arrested with liquor in their possession, but few have been found carrying equipment with which to destroy the evidence when accosted by the law. But such was the asserted discovery of Deputy Sheriff Harris, who yesterday arrested E. C. Carson and Gertha Evans, both 30 years of age, on charges of possession and transportation of liquor, which may be changed to a high misdemeanor or a felony charge. Both are held in the County Jail.

Harris charges that Miss Evans carried a hammer with which to smash the gallon demijohn in her possession in the event of an emergency. This she did, Harris said, but the deputy sheriff obtained enough liquor from the bottom of the jug to introduce as evidence when the case is brought to trial.

Miss Evans was arrested by Riverside county officers here July 25, last, and was fined $250 by Justice of the Peace Difani for bootlegging.

McAdoo's Son Heads Suit in Oil Well Case

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 5.—Alfred McAdoo, son of William G. McAdoo, has affixed his signature to the affidavit of a complaint against the Spengler Core Drilling Company, to institute a suit in which judgment of $40,000 is asked against the defendant company. Alfred H. McAdoo is president of the Naval Reserve Oil Company, plaintiff in the action.

In the complaint filed with the County Clerk here, the plaintiff company alleges that the Spengler Core Drilling Company contracted to remove a core from the plaintiff's well, using the Naval Reserve Company's drilling outfit.

Through negligence, the plaintiff company alleges that the defendants allowed the drill stem to collapse and break off at a depth of 2100 feet in theoil well. Now it seems the equipment cannot be removed.

The Naval Reserve Oil Company's property is described as 320 acres of oil and gas leases on the south one-half of Sec. 8, T. 31 S., R. 23 E.

ASKS ACCOUNTING

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 5.—H. O. Smith of Porterville is named defendant in a complaint filed in the Superior Court of Tulare county by the Atlas Vineyard Company, which owns property west of here. Smith is asked for an accounting of certain moneys of the company expended during his secretaryship of the corporation.

Smith was made secretary in 1922 and it is charged that the plaintiffs believe that during his service he used much of the money for his own personal use and has refused to account for it. Farnsworth, McClure, Burke & Maddox are attorneys for the company.

WOMAN DIES FROM FALL

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 5.—Injuries received in a fall three weeks ago today proved fatal to Mrs. Lucia D. Smith, 82 years of age of 1108 North Garfield avenue. Her hip was broken in the accident and owing to her advanced age she failed to recover. Mrs. Smith was a native of New York State and for fifty years lived in Jamestown, N. Y. The body will be sent to that city for interment.

SAN JUAN PLAY CLOSES

Concluding Performance of Mission Pageant Is Scheduled for Monday Afternoon

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Sept. 5.—The mission pageant-play of San Juan Capistrano, which will have concluding performance of the summer run at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and the afternoon of Monday, Labor Day, will be presented again next year on even a more elaborate scale, Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, resident priest of the mission, announced today.

The padre stated, that although dates had not yet been selected, the pageant-play probably will be shifted to the winter months, that winter tourists may view the colorful spectacle of the early history of California.

The final presentations will be gala performances, with numbers of the residents here joining in the gay fiestas which feature the outdoor play depicting episodes in the actual history of their forefathers.

Tomorrow night, the pageant players will celebrate the successful termination of the summer run of the spectacle with a novel vaudeville show in the theater here, to which the general public is invited.

Groups in the pageant-play will compete for the applause of the audience with original skits based on the parts they play in the spectacle. Marta Belfort, Spanish danseuse, and Raphael Bennett, who portrays Gov. Arrilaga, have arranged a novel number, and Walter Moulin, Kenneth Randall and Harold Jones, players of the pirate episode, are rehearsing a unique one-act play.

The presentation of unusual dances and ceremonies in the play has resulted in numbers of the players being sought for other productions. The sixteen residents of San Juan, who present the Contra Danza, colorful Spanish quadrille indigenous to the locality, are engaged for appearances at several festivals in the Southland.

Following the concluding performance, Garnet Holme, director of the pageant-play, will leave to visit Yellowstone and Zion National parks and national monuments in Arizona on a special commission from the government to investigate the possibilities of staging outdoor plays similar to the pageant-play here, based on Indian legends and customs of the regions about the national playgrounds.

Upland Official Loses Daughter Through Illness

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

UPLAND, Sept. 5.—Louise Buffington, 17-year-old daughter of City Councilman Frank C. Buffington and Mrs. Buffington and popular native daughter of Upland, died last night at the San Antonio Community Hospital where she had undergone an emergency operation for appendicitis Wednesday night.

Miss Buffington graduated from Chaffey High School in June. She was a prominent member of the Campfire Girls' organization and it was while on a campfire outing in Ice House Canyon, about a week ago, that she first was taken ill. She also was active in Epworth League and Sunday school circles of the First Methodist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Buffington are among the earliest pioneers of the Upland section, having come here forty years ago. Louise was their only child.

Buffington is an extensive citrus grower and has been prominently identified with the civic affairs of the city for many years, having formerly served as Mayor of Upland.

Funeral services are to be conducted Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the First Methodist Church with the pastor, Rev. Charles A. Kent, officiating. Pallbearers will number the former Campfire associates of the young woman and her former classmates. Interment is to be in Bellevue Cemetery, Ontario.

PREPARE BAHLIA SHOW

Officials in Charge to Invite Editors of Southland

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 5.—Every newspaper editor in Southern California is to receive a special invitation to the California Dahlia show to be held in the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, the 16th, 17th and 18th insts.

Commissioner John A. Morton, who is taking a great interest in the show, is serving as head of the invitation committee and is preparing a letter to the editors which he believes will make it hard for them to stay away from Santa Monica the three dates named.

All committees are plunged deep in preparation for the show, the importance of which grows to larger proportions daily, according to M. C. McKenney, Chamber of Commerce secretary and head of the publicity committee.

If managed rightly, this show is destined to be one of the great Pacific Coast attractions of the fall months and become so known the country over, said Mr. McKenney today.

YELLOWTAIL RUN ON

Redondo Beach Fishermen Meet With Heavy Catches

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

REDONDO BEACH, Sept. 5.—Yellowtail in huge schools are being encountered by local fishermen from the Municipal Pier and from the boats, with prospects of the heaviest season run in several years. The catch today included ninety pounds from one boat alone, with the fish averaging a good, husky size.

Halibut and mackerel, which were also running good today, were abandoned for the yellowtail fishing as the latter is much the choicer fish and scarce except in certain seasons.

Extra boat accommodations were being arranged today to care for the crowds expected over the holidays.

OLD TRAFFIC FIGURES ON PASS FOUND

Thirty-eight Persons in 1901 Used Cahuenga Grade in Day, Census Showed

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

LANKERSHIM, Sept. 5.—According to L. Bateman, a pioneer resident of the Lankershim district, as long as a quarter of a century ago, San Fernando Valley farmers started the fight for the lowering of the grade over Cahuenga Pass, which was so steep in those horse-and-cart days that ranchers were forced to go over the pass in a caravan, doubling their teams in order to make the long pull.

County Road Commissioners turned a deaf ear to all requests and protests, asserting that no one virtually used the road and money expended would be thrown away.

In 1901 Bateman says he sat on a rock and made what he believes to be the first traffic census of vehicles going over the pass. All day he watched. By nightfall he reported that thirty-eight persons afoot, in teams and buckboards had gone over the grade in either direction. Even these figures appeared to surprise the authorities, for Bateman declares he immediately got action, and money was appropriated for the making of a new road.

These figures are laughable when it now is known, according to a recent census made, that in a single day nearly 57,000 motor vehicles passed through Cahuenga Pass, where work is now going on to accommodate the huge tangle of traffic using the pass to get into and out of Los Angeles and Hollywood.

Historic Home is Leased for Hotel Purpose

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ENCINO, Sept. 5. — The historic Amestoy home at Encino, once the scene of brilliant social affairs in pioneer days, and probably the oldest residence in San Fernando Valley, is to be made into a hotel with a cafe and hot mineral baths in conjunction. This is to follow a long lease just made by the Amestoy heirs with Mrs. R. L. White and Thomas C. Ward. Nine acres and a large swimming pool, erected more than half century ago, are included in the lease.

The two main buildings that comprise the old home were built by Indian laborers more than a century ago, and typical of pioneer California structures, the walls are more than two feet thick, and made of heavy shale blocks brought from near-by hills.

Improvements that will total about $12,000 will restore the ancient buildings to their original state. This will be spent by the lessees to make a serviceable hotel property from the long-neglected estate. Plans call for the construction of a mineral bath house and for the renonation of the pool.

The new hotel and cafe will be known as the Encino Hot Springs and will be open for business within two months.

FIRST LIMAS LOADED

Beans Grown in Camarillo Region on Market Early

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OXNARD, Sept. 5.—The first car of lima beans from Ventura county was being loaded today at Camarillo. Henry Levy, local bean broker, will ship the first car. The beans, the first of the season from unirrigated land in the Camarillo section were grown on the Daly brothers and Hartman property. The beans are being handled through the warehouse of the Pacific Milling Company at Camarillo and Daly brothers were the first to place beans in the new building. They were the first to plant, the first to cut and the first to ship.

Limas in irrigated fields will not be cut for some little time yet. The pick of the harvesting season will be about the middle of October.

VENICE GAINS FORCE FOR ANNEXATION VOTE

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

VENICE, Sept. 5.—Nearly 1000 new voters had been registered for the Los Angeles annexation election October 2 when the registration books closed Wednesday night, according to the estimate of Los Angeles County Registrar W. M. Kerr, who said that the exact figures would be available soon. A force of four clerks was sent to the Venice City Hall from the Registrar's office to check over the list. About 7500 voters were on the list in Venice at the time of the recent bond election.

PARALYSIS CHECKED

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

EL MONTE, Sept. 5.—The epidemic of infantile paralysis has been stamped out in this district, which embraces El Monte, Alhambra, San Gabriel and Lamanda Park, according to Dr. S. J. Stewart of Rosemead, member of the County Health Department. There is not now a single known case of this disease in this district, he said.

RIVERSIDE PRESENTS PAGEANT

Colorful Show at Annual Fair

Miss Clarabell Bagwell

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 5.—Members of the cast for the historical pageant to be presented during the Southern California Jubilee at Riverside are being chosen this week by Emile De Recat, director, and rehearsals will begin within ten days.

The march of civilization from the arrival of the first white party led into the Santa Ana River Valley by Juan Bautista de Anza, to the present time in Southern California will be depicted.

A stage measuring 125 feet long by seventy-five feet deep is under construction at the Western Costume Company, where the various props needed for the big show will also be built.

Among the players will be Clarabell Bagwell of Riverside, who has been engaged to present a Spanish dance. Others who have been signed up are Esther Rubidoux, descendant of Louis Rubidoux, one of the first settlers in the San Bernardino Valley.

PARADE FOR CUCAMONGA REHEARSED

Hundreds in Ontario See Portion of Pageant to be Given Monday

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ONTARIO, Sept. 5.—Hundreds of interested spectators lined the streets of Ontario's business district today to view a parade of Indian braves, ancient Spanish caritas drawn by sturdy oxen, Spanish dons and senoritas in gay costume and covered wagons bearing the forty-niners and pioneer Mormons. The parade offered a preview of the Cucamonga pioneer pageant to be presented Monday at 1 p.m. in a great open-air stadium at Lone Hill in the Cucamonga district under the direction of Standing Bear, Sioux chief of the Pine Ridge agency, South Dakota. The setting for the pageant will depict an Indian rancheria with the tepees of the Cucamonga Indians set among the trees, while the women and children busy themselves with basket and bead work.

The first episode is to depict the coming of the Franciscan missionaries under Junipero Serra and the peace treaty between the missionaries and the Cucamonga Indians. The second episode will deal with the Spanish occupation of the country, the third with the stopping of the Mormons en route from Salt Lake City to San Bernardino and the fourth with the camping of the forty-niners.

The pageant is being sponsored by the recently organized Cucamonga Service Club, of which Samuel B. Rowe is president, and assisting with its production are the Ontario Chamber of Commerce and Service Clubs, the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce and Pioneer Society, the Upland Chamber of Commerce and Service Clubs.

The pageant is to be followed immediately by a great rodeo, which will include riding and roping contests, a chariot race and other events. The day further will be featured by a barbecue, sports of various descriptions and a fireworks display in the evening. A grand stand with a seating capacity of more than 5000 has been erected for the event.

PASADENA CHOSEN

School Superintendents of State to Meet in Crown City

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Sept. 5.—Pasadena will be the scene of the annual convention of California school superintendents to be held October 12, according to announcements made today by John Franklin West, superintendent of Pasadena schools, who conferred with Will C. Wood, State superintendent of schools, at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo here today.

Approximately 300 superintendents will attend the session, which is one of the most important events of the year in California educational circles. Policies and plans for the coming school year will be formulated. The Hotel Vista del Arroyo will house the delegates, and will be the scene of their meetings.

RITES TO BE TUESDAY

Frank S. Haywood Funeral Will be at Forest Lawn

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Sept. 5.—Funeral services for Frank Sidney Hayward, former secretary of Swift & Co., meat packers, who died at his Pasadena home, 874 Oakland avenue, Thursday night, will be held Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Little Church of the Flowers in Forest Lawn.

Mr. Hayward had lived in Pasadena for five years. He was 67 years of age, and leaves his wife, Mrs. Ellen Goebel Hayward, and a daughter, Mrs. Paul W. Tatge of Chicago.

BRIDLE PATH PLANNED

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 5.—Plans are now being made for a bridal path along Beverly Boulevard from Beverly Hills to the ocean. The path will be ten feet wide and run through the hills in the Sawtelle district, offering unexcelled opportunities for beautiful excursions on horseback. The Bel-Air estate has staked out a route for a path of this kind to begin in Stone Canyon and continue through the Santa Monica Mountains to the sea.

COURT HITS MAN'S SUIT TO GET BABE

Judge Declares Husband Must Pay Maintenance Costs for Infant

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—Don Lamun of Orange will have a chance to support a child which he claims his wife, Xenia Lamun, tried to hide from him after they had separated at the altar. In fact, Superior Judge E. J. Marks will require him to do so, the judge indicated at a court hearing when Lamun made an effort to get custody of the baby now less than a month old.

Instead of getting custody, however, Lamun got permission to see the baby just once today.

The court indicated that Lamun, in his belief, had not made sufficient effort to see the child before, although Lamun complained that his wife fled secretly from their home in Kansas to Orange before the birth of the baby and refused to let him see her or the child after it was born. Mrs. Lamun also refused to accept assistance from him, Lamun asserted.

Judge Marks ordered Lamun to pay his wife $20 in court, which Lamun did. The court also granted an order restraining Lamun from seeing the child except today at 10:30 a.m. until hearing is held on Mrs. Lamun's cross-complaint for separate maintenance and custody of the baby. At that time final disposition of the case is scheduled.

Lamun brought his custody suit when the baby was 10 days old, Attorney Clyde Payne of Orange representing him.

Mrs. Lamun took up the gauge of battle and retained Attorney D. G. Wettlin as her counsel. In refutation of her husband's statements that she refused to accept assistance from him she asked the court to force him to support the child.

TO REST BESIDE WIFE

Funeral Arrangements Made for Mate Who Kills Self

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 5.—Arrangements were made today for the funeral of John Lanz, retired building contractor who took his own life Thursday by slashing his throat with a razor near his home at 114 North Bradbury Drive in San Gabriel.

The services will be held at the Westwood Memorial Cemetery at Sawtelle, under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias Lodge of Los Angeles, of which Lanz was a member. The victim of his own act will be laid to rest beside the body of his wife, who passed away four years ago and for whom Lanz is said to have grieved constantly. It was his despondency over the loss of his wife, who died suddenly, that led to his suicide, relatives said.

CEREMONY TO ATTEND OPENING OF COMPRESS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 5.—To mark the opening of the new $150,000 cotton compress in Kern county, directors of the Kern County Chamber of Commerce will conduct a ceremony or program, according to tentative plans made today at the regular monthly session in the Tegeler Hotel. The directors will confer with the Bakersfield Civic Commercial Association which is sponsoring the official opening of the compress, the 18th inst., and arrange for a program to be held at a later date, possibly during the Kern county fair week.

DAM-SITE RETRIAL ORDERED

Santa Ana Judge Sets Aside $600,000 Valuation Verdict in Irrigation Land Suit

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—A new trial of the El Capitan condemnation suit between the City of San Diego and the La Mesa Lemon Grove and Spring Valley Irrigation District was granted here today by Judge Marvin W. Conkling, who set aside the $600,000 valuation verdict given by an Orange county jury two months ago at the first trial of the case. Judge Conkling's order granting the new trial applies only to the issues of valuation that were heard before the jury.

The condemnation issues, covering the question of necessity on the part of San Diego to acquire possession of El Capitan dam-site, remain as settled in the first trial in favor of the city. All of the grounds set forth in the city's motion for a new trial were sustained by the court's ruling.

VERDICT ATTACKED

The City Attorneys attacked the $600,000 verdict as excessive, contrary to law and the evidence as inspired by passion and prejudice. It was also contended that irregular proceedings by counsel for the irrigation district prevented a fair trial of the case. Errors of law at the trial were claimed further.

No date for the new trial was fixed, it being understood that the defense will appeal from the court's order, taking its fight to the Supreme Court.

Attorney Charles C. Crouch, of defense counsel, expressed the belief that the case would be thus tied up for two or three years before a new trial could be held, even should the appeal be denied. Deputy City Attorney Arthur Wright, however, stated that the case could probably be advanced on the calendar of the Supreme Court so that it could be settled within a year.

Judge Conklin did not hear the motion for reopening condemnation issues of the case, which the defense sought to present yesterday ahead of the city's motion. With the latter motion granted, the defense motion was precluded from being heard, it was said.

APPEAL FILED IN DAM-SITE SUIT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 5.—Following Judge M. W. Conklin's decision yesterday to grant a re-trial in the city of San Diego's suit to condemn property of the Cuyamaca Water Company at El Capitan, announced late yesterday afternoon, attorneys for the Cuyamaca company today gave notice of appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Judge Conklin decided that the contention of attorneys for the city of San Diego that the jury award of $600,000 for the dam-site was excessive and that in reaching such a figure the jurors were apparently prejudiced. He also overruled a motion of the Cuyamaca attorneys that the case be reopened for trial to establish new evidence as to the necessity of the city's acquiring the El Capitan dam-site, which they contested.

In case the appeal to the State Supreme Court is heard, City Attorney Higgins said he would urge the higher court to hear the arguments as soon as possible.

SIX HURT IN CAR CRASH ON HIGHWAY

Automobiles Collide Near Bakersfield When Girl Dodges Truck

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 5.—Six persons were injured, four seriously, when two cars collided on the highway about ten miles south of Bakersfield at noon today.

The injured are: Mrs. Nellie Richardson, who is at the San Joaquin Hospital; Miss E. M. Cecil, Mrs. M. M. Pauly and Sidney Cecil, 3 years of age, of Visalia, who are at the Emergency Hospital, and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hogg of San Francisco, who are less seriously hurt.

According to Miss Cecil, who was driving toward Bakersfield, a truck ahead of her car slowed down without warning. She turned her car to avoid a collision with the truck and the crash with the Hogg car, which was approaching in the opposite direction, resulted. Mrs. Richardson was riding with Mr. and Mrs. Hogg, who were en route to Los Angeles from San Francisco. Miss Cecil, in company with her little niece, Sidney Cecil, and Mrs. Pauly were returning to her home in Visalia following a visit at Burbank.

Mrs. Richardson is suffering from a fractured shoulder. Miss Cecil is suffering from two puncture wounds in her knees, severely lacerated hands and a large gash beneath her right eye. Mrs. Pauly received a sprained ankle, a serious puncture wound in her right knee and bruises about the head. The child is being attended for a serious scalp wound and many cuts about the body. Many pieces of glass had to be removed from the wounds of the three patients at the Emergency Hospital.

Pasadena Board Head Denounced 'Modern Judas'

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Sept. 5.—"A modern Judas" was the term applied to Chairman Franklin B. Cole of the Board of City Directors by O. D. Hunt, former temporary assistant City Manager, in a vituperative talk before the Independent Voters' League here last night. Charges of trickery, device and unfairness in the manipulation of the city government were a part of the speaker's invective.

Chairman Cole, former City Directors, the City Manager system, the present City Manager, R. V. Orbison; former City Manager C. W. Koiner, and the general condition of municipal administration were all objects of Hunt's attack during the course of his speech, which drew an indignant volley of questions from the audience at Carpenter's Hall, when the speaker shouted his closing words: "F. B. Cole, our modern Judas."

Hunt is one of the chief supporters of a purported recall movement against Chairman Cole which began when Cole refused to indorse Hunt as City Manager, after Hunt had been instrumental in procuring the election of Chairman Cole, William Easterbrook, Carl Newcomer and A. N. Cole as City Directors last spring.

TAKES NAP AT WHEEL AND HEADS INTO TRUCK

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 5.—A little nap at the wheel was said to have been responsible for a traffic crash on Valley Boulevard early this morning in which Frank Remes, 20 years of age, San Fernando, suffered a fractured arm and other bruises. He is at the Alhambra Hospital. According to the police investigation Remes was driving on the wrong side of the street and was apparently asleep when he ran into a truck. Two other passengers of the Remes machine escaped injury. The driver of the truck was exonerated from blame by the local police.

SUES ROCK COMPANY FOR DAMAGE TO AUTO

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—Bautista Cortez of El Modena today filed suit in Superior Court against the Orange County Rock Company, demanding $10,600 damages on account of an automobile accident at Chapman and Prospect avenues, between Orange and El Modena. The wreck took place September 19, 1924. An employee of the rock company, driving one of its trucks, was blamed by Bautista for the accident, which damaged his car and injured him, he claims. Attorney Morris Cain of Santa Ana represents the plaintiff in the action.

DR. LEVENGOOD IMPROVED

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 5.—Dr. Wilson Levengood, Santa Monica physician who was seriously injured in an automobile accident near the Uplifter's ranch last Sunday, was able to sit up today for the first time since the accident. He is still a patient at St. Catherine's Hospital and his condition was reported as steadily improving.

PASTOR OF GLENDALE TO VISIT HOLY LAND

GLENDALE, Sept. 5.—Rev. W. E. Edmonds, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Glendale, has been granted a four months' leave of absence and is planning to make a trip to the Holy Land, starting early in January. The itinerary that has been already mapped out, and on which he will be accompanied by one of his close friends, calls for their sailing from New York to Europe, thence to Haifa, Palestine and then through the Holy Land to all the points of interest, returning to the United States after a visit to the British Isles. Dr. Edmonds has been pastor of the Glendale Presbyterian Church for fourteen years and was largely responsible for the erection of the present church edifice, which ranks among the most impressive in Southern California.

BOOTLEGGER GRANTED DELAY ON SENTENCE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—Another delay in the time for pronouncing sentence upon Alexander Wilson, convicted West Minster bootlegger, was granted by Superior Judge Williams late yesterday when Wilson reported himself unable to appear in court. Wilson was convicted of selling liquor three months ago but asserted illness prevented him from coming into court to receive sentence several days later. His condition caused the court to postpone sentence for a period of three months which expired yesterday. When Wilson failed to appear yesterday and it was reported that his condition was not improved, Judge Williams ordered his bondsmen to produce a medical certificate as to his incapacity.

NARCISSUS BULBS ARE SENT TO EL MONTE

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

EL MONTE, Sept. 5.—The John Bodger Sons Seed Company, located south of here, received a carload of paper-white Narcissus bulbs from France this week. There were 650,000 bulbs. The freight from New York City cost $1150. Three more cars are expected in during the next two weeks, which will make about 2,000,000 Narcissus bulbs to be planted in their fields south of this city this fall. During the past two weeks this firm has shipped out more than 500,000 Spanish and Dutch Iris bulbs, the bulk of this year's crop.

ASKS DAMAGES FOR AUTO

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—Damages amounting to $1096.53 were demanded today by Ezra Westover in a suit filed in Superior Court against the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company. Westover claims his auto was damaged in a collision with an automatic flagman installed by the railroad in the center of the street at its crossing of Center street, Anaheim. The accident occurred April 25, 1924.

"FOOTHILL ESTATE"
GREATLY SACRIFICED
This beautiful Spanish villa is difficult to describe. The living room alone is 28x46. (Think of it.) HUGE 9-ft. plate glass cathedral windows, large ornamental fireplace. Old iron candlestick lighting fixtures are just a few features. French doors from living rm. open on to a spacious patio (10x22) with padre tile terrace. Fish pond & shrubs. A magnificent view of the famous Hollywood Foothills is to be had from this delightful retreat. NOW WAIT: There also is a large pergola. (Summer house) 50 ft. long in the rear yard. Flood lights command the entire grounds for night illumination. NOW WAIT! This home on a beautiful street near mansions is 70x175 (exactly twice the size of a 50x125 ft. lot. 6230 sq. ft.) Protected by a 50-year building restriction. The very large front & rear yard has splendid lawns, with complete sprinkling system. This home, which is only 90 days old, is built of "SOLID SHEATING," 1 inch hog wire, 15-lb. felt & 4 coats water-proof cement stucco. NOW WAIT. The price is not $18,500, but $11,500, and we know that the first sincere buyer out will grab this remarkable BARGAIN. SEE IT TODAY. A pleasure to show you.

MY SPECIALTY
VERY FINEST EXCLUSIVE COUNTRY HOMES IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

One acre to three thousand acres. THE BEST ONLY. I can satisfy any reasonable expectation, any discriminating buyer and I challenge any man to say that I ever misrepresented.

I know Southern California, the popular localities, the actual values. I do the "Sifting" and can save you a lot of time and money by showing you the best, selected from the best. My motto and my principle is A MAN-TO-MAN DEAL.

Here is one of my best: About two acres of comfort, profit and beauty. Majestic shade trees of many varieties. Fifteen year-old fruit trees in full bearing and great variety. Rich, productive land. Water in abundance. Fine vegetable garden and beautiful rose garden. High-class surroundings and faultless environments.

Five-room, cozy bungalow. Bath, large living room, dining room, kitchenette, laundry, two bedrooms and maid's room. Large porches both front and back. Enchanting views, double garage, nice poultry house and shaded yards.

A gem of a Country Home, forty minutes from business center of Los Angeles. Exceptional bargain. Attractive terms. Will consider as part payment, a small, desirable home in the city. Can use good paper for part.

MAJOR H. E. COOK,
670 So. Alvarado st., Los Angeles.

FOR EXCHANGE.
Acre, 400 chickens, 5 rms., chicken house for 800. Brooder house for 1500. Incubator 500. Want house and lot not inflated.

Close in ranches are paying; many families are buying near here because it is closer to L. A. than any other poultry section. The husband can work in L. A. while the wife starts a paying flock. A poultry ranch near here costs you no more than a good 6-rm. home in L. A. with no income at all. Alhambra is 7½ miles from L. A. city hall; 483 ft. above sea level. The best eggs in S. Calif. are produced in this valley; over ½ million happy chickens near here and owners are making money with retail trade at door.

ACRE, 1100 LAYERS, chicken houses for 1500; elec. hovers; 1 blk. blvd., small home. Only $3800; terms. See this today.

2¼ ACRES, 6 rms., 625 layers, part trapnested; 450 pullets, all kinds of fruit trees, nuts, grapes, berries, alfalfa, beautiful flowers and shrubs. Water piped all over, faces 3 streets, near car, bus, business center. A good buy. Good location for you. $9500.

1100 LAYING PULLETS, acre, small home. Modern laying houses, fruit trees, berries, grapes, cheap water. Income $110 per week. Near transportation. Only $3500. Terms.

800 LAYING hens, 600 pullets, equipment for 1200 layers. Acre, 5 rms., basement, a real fireplace, plenty bearing fruit. Brooder house on best street in Arcadia. Fine mountain view near business section and Htg. Drive, schools, stores, P. E.

IN A WALNUT GROVE.
ACRE covered with large walnut trees. Near car and blvd. 30 minutes from L.A. 181-ft. frontage, water costs $1 per mo. Large roomy, almost new 5-rm. house. A dandy buy. Fine poultry, fruit and vegetable soil. The best location you ever saw for a home and poultry ranch. Let us show you this; fine for hatchery.

1000 LAYERS, CORNER, 2½ ACRES 7-rm. new modern stucco, brooder house, incubator cellar, laying house for 2500. Bearing fruit, fine poultry section, near car, stores, school. Hang up your coat and go to work. 4-room house in rear.

7½ ACRES, bearing fruit trees, 5 rooms, chicken house, plenty cheap water, good soil, near school, only $4500. Terms.

ACRE, large walnut, interest with fruit. Own well, 2 blks. car; near blvd., school. 3-rm. house, gas, elec. Only $3300. Terms.

OPEN DAILY TO SHOW YOU.

Real Estate Improvements

REDUCED INTEREST RATES.
We are now in a position to give our clients 5½% money on improved property (residential as well as business) in Los Angeles and immediate vicinity on 3 to 5 year basis, or at 6% on 200 month basis.

PREPAYMENT PRIVILEGE.
$100 or any multiple may be paid on the principal at any interest paying date, without bonus.

6% MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS.
On this plan we make a loan close to 60% of an appraised valuation of the property. The payments required are small. For instance, on a $4000 loan $20 per month is required. More may be paid if borrower wishes.

MONEY READY.
Loans closed with dispatch. We handle our own escrows so as to save time. Money ready at all times for disbursing loans.

BUILDING LOANS.
We are making building loans at the low rate of 7%. Will refinance into one of the above loans according to the nature of the loan. You can start building within 4 or 5 days after application for loan has been made. Call at our office and get advice on refinancing.

CHOW CHOWS
JUST A FEW FACTS.
Although Ch. "Heathen Chinaman" was entered for the last Pasadena and Long Beach shows his owners decided not to show him. Champion Tao Kwang of Kang Shi defeated a dog owned by the same kennels as "Chinaman" at these shows under two different judges who has on several occasions defeated "Chinaman." Again our dogs had the distinction of winning best bitch best dog best of breed and the bitch broke all previous Chow records by winning the great honor of best non-sporting at Stockton show. Puppies for sale. GORDO KENNELS, 3844 W. Slauson ave.

CHOWS—We are not afraid of competition, have made several attempts to meet the greatest Chows at dog shows, but our dogs were not allowed to compete. Harbor Shows Big Increase in Building Building permits issued for the Los Angeles Harbor district for August totaled $908,078, placing the San Pedro-Wilmington area fifth among cities of the State, being surpassed only by Los Angeles, Long Beach, San Diego and Santa Barbara. The month's total represents an increase of more than 50 per cent over the previous month.

September promises to be another banner month, according to C. E. Boltz, building inspector for the harbor district, who reported issuing thirty-seven permits yesterday for a total of more than $70,000. Of this total, thirty-one buildings, costing $69,350, are to be constructed by one contractor.

BOARD GOVERNORS FINISH VACATION

Bringing to an end a vacation period of three months, the board of governors of the Los Angeles Realty Board met in regular session Thursday morning and outlined plans for the winter activities of the organization.

Many important matters were taken up and plans for an active season were launched.

FACT AND COMMENT

It would be hard to find better evidence of the continued prosperity and progress of Southern California than the various business reports showing August gains. Such evidence, summed up, is accepted by economic authorities as a reliable basis upon which to make forecasts. It presages a bright future. Business is good.

For instance, construction activities, always a sound barometer of general conditions, for the first two-thirds of the year show a gain above the corresponding period of 1924. Plans on file with architects for which building permits have not as yet been requested; reports from building and loan companies and deals not completed, but being negotiated, for vacant properties among leading realty firms, presage a record year for the construction industry. This, supplemented by a street and storm-drain program to cost $30,000,000, will provide excellent employment conditions for the remainder of the year.

Bank clearings in August increased 16.8 per cent over the corresponding period in 1924. Retail trade reports a 5 per cent gain over July, which, in turn, was 3.5 per cent greater than June. Harbor tonnages reflect the same condition. Imports were valued at $3,915,000, compared to $2,293,479 in August, 1924; exports increased from $4,173,256 to $6,720,000, and collections advanced during the same month from $385,982 to $463,000.

These indices, compiled from reliable sources, are for Los Angeles proper. Strikingly similar reports from all points in Southern California show the same progressive trend.

Citrus growers received $85,000,000, the highest return yet made for that crop. Banner harvests for other crops are predicted. Among such may be mentioned the peach, pear and grape crops.

Fruit and vegetable canners continue to enlarge their plants to care for increased business. Agricultural experts declare the year will be the best in the history of the State. Realty firms dealing in farm lands report a steadily increasing demand for acreage.

A Greater Harbor

Work on the $3,000,000 mole and breakwater project at Long Beach has started. It is another step in the making of a still greater harbor. Almost in the same breath comes the news that the North Pacific Coast Line will add additional vessels to its service to European countries. Announcement is also made by the Osaka Shosen Kaisha that the Japanese steamship concern is completing three twin-screw motor ships for passenger and freight service out of the port to the Orient. During August, 529 merchantmen, under twelve flags, visited the port. Its popularity gains steadily.

Upkeep Costs

The city fathers at Alhambra have ordered plans and bids called for new paving on streets without waiting for petitions from property owners. Repair work was costing between $30,000 and $40,000 and the bill got too big. They

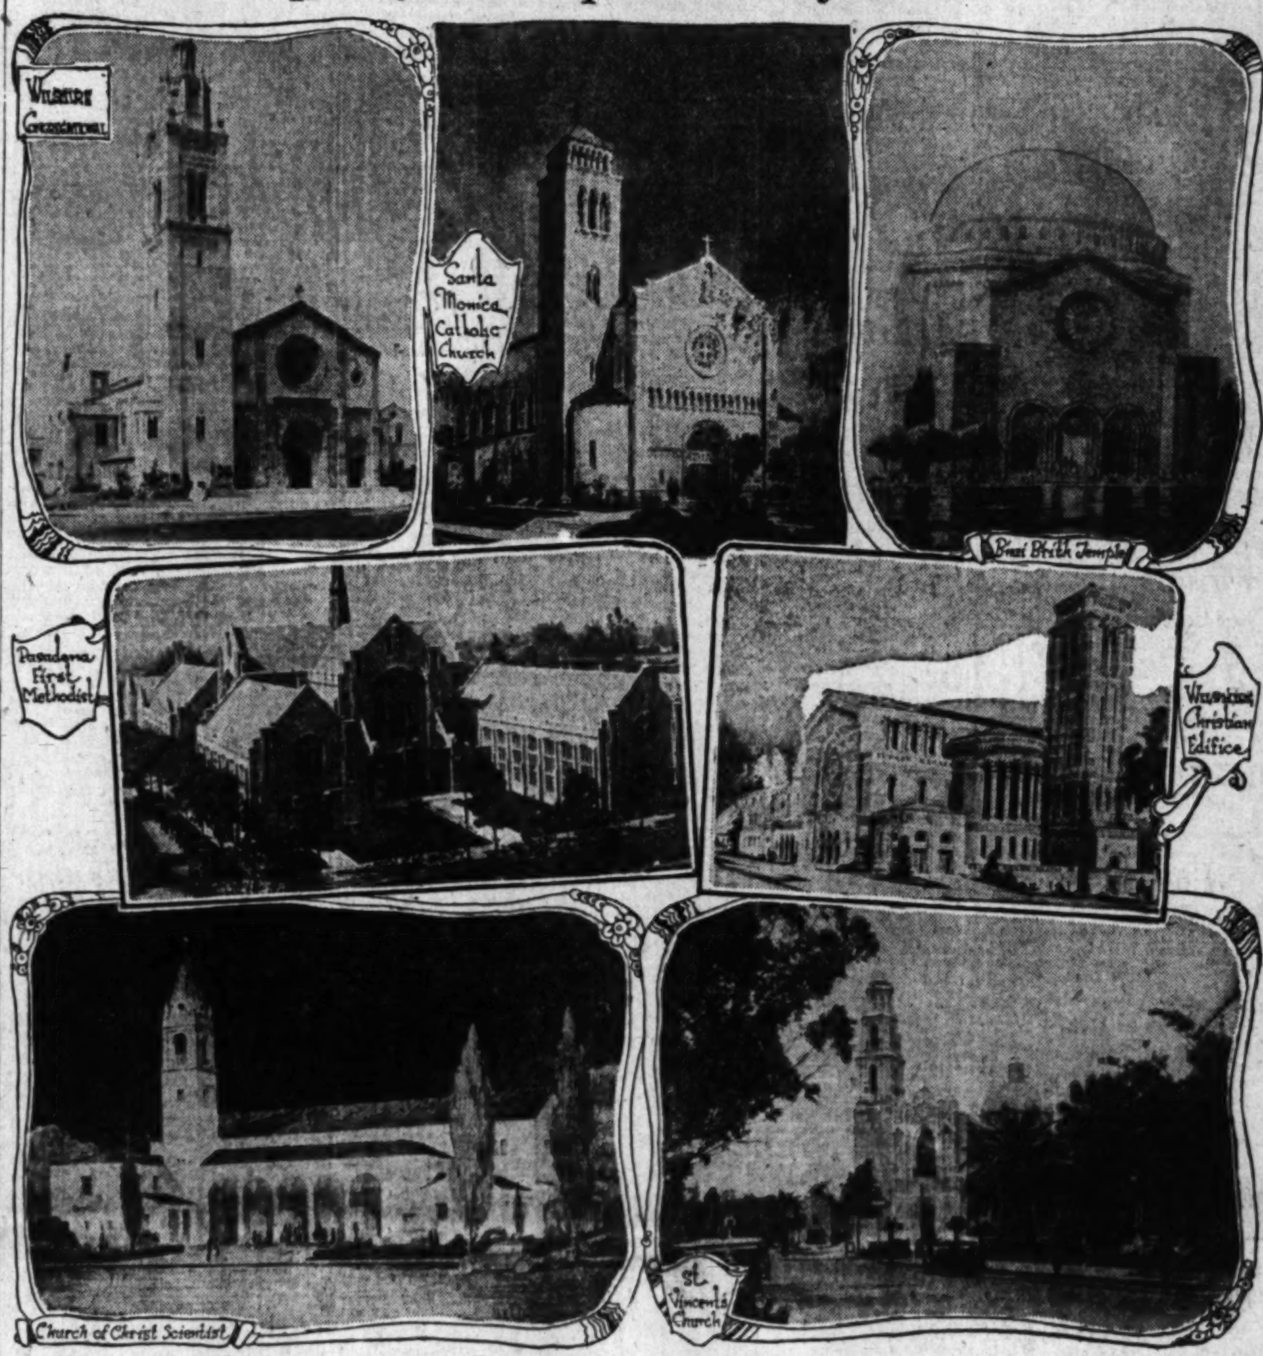
Millions Spent for Sumptuous Edifices in Southland



CHURCHES ARE UNDER WAY

Religious Structures Now Being Constructed Feature Beautiful Architectural Style

Seven beautiful church edifices, representing the total expenditure of more than $4,250,000, are now under construction, have been completed or have been proposed for the vicinity of Los Angeles within the past few months.

While the above illustrations by no means picture all of the church building activity now under way in this city, they serve to give a general idea of the class of construction which is being done for religious purposes.

Outstanding among the churches built this year considering cost, is the First Methodist Church of Pasadena which was completed a comparatively short time ago at the cost of $1,250,000. It was designed by T. P. Barber and was built by John Walvin.

One church costing $1,000,000, the St. Vincent's Edifice at West Adams and Figueroa has recently been completed and following close upon the announcement of its completion, the congregation of B'nai B'rith declared its intention of erecting a temple which would also cost $1,000,000.

The St. Vincent's Church was designed by Albert C. Martin and was built by the Wuster Construction Company. A. M. Edelman planned the B'nai B'rith Temple and as construction is not scheduled to start for a month yet, the contract has not been let.

Another church building under construction of vast importance to the Santa Monica district is the Catholic Church, Seventh and California streets, Santa Monica. This structure when completed will represent an outlay of approximately $250,000.

Plans were by Albert C. Martin and the construction by Wuster Construction Company. This edifice will be completed within the next two months.

One of the most recent completions in church buildings is the Wilshire Congregational Church, the first unit being erected at a cost near $200,000. It is located on the corner of Plymouth and Wilshire Boulevards. The tower rises to a height of 141 feet above the floor line and makes a new landmark in the skyline of that vicinity. On the very tip of the tower a beautifully illuminated cross can be seen for miles. Plans for this beautiful temple of worship were prepared by Allison & Allison, architects, while the construction was executed by Macdonald & Driver, general contractors.

The same architects prepared the plans for the Thirteenth Church of Christ, Scientist, now under construction at 1850 Edgemont avenue by the Pozzo Construction Company. This structure, as well as practically all the new churches, has a tower rising more than 100 feet above the street line. The building will be constructed structed throughout of reinforced concrete. The roof will be Verricolor Granada tile, in pleasing colors.

Ground will be broken tomorrow for the Wilshire Boulevard Christian Church, a $360,000 structure, which will rise on the corner of Normandie and Wilshire boulevards. The building will cover a ground area of 135x100 feet, and will contain a basement, main floor and gallery. A tower extending 150 feet above the floor line will grace the building. Robert H. Orr is the architect, and the Wuster Construction Company has the general contract. The structure will be completed in about one year.

J. S. Metzger & Son have started work on a $90,000 church building at the corner of New Hampshire and Clinton streets, the plans for which were prepared by Robert H. Orr. The structure is being erected for the Melrose Avenue Methodist Church.

All, with the exception of two, of the buildings above were constructed or are under construction by members of the Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America, through whose courtesy the above photographs were assembled by The Times.

EASTERNER BUYS LARGE APARTMENT

Deal Involving Quarter of Million Shows Los Angeles is Favored by Investors

Deals in business property aggregating $350,000 were reported yesterday by Burton & Co., Wilshire realty dealers, following an unusually active week in all departments.

The largest transaction—the sale of the Melwest apartment and store building at the northwest corner of Western and Melrose avenues—indicates that Los Angeles still is favored as an investment place for eastern capital since this property was purchased by Edward Modine of Chicago for approximately $225,000 as an investment.

The apartment and store building was owned by Miss Janette Baldwin of Glendale, who was represented by J. A. Edmunds of Burton & Co.'s business property sales force. The building is two stories high and situated on a site 130 by 80 feet. It was built less than two years ago.

Mr. Edmunds also reported the sale of the northeast corner of Lillian Way and Melrose avenue, a future business site, to Miss Baldwin, for $40,000, the site being 132 by 49 feet, and the southeast corner of Tenth street and Manhattan Place, a store building just completed on a site 135 by 70 feet, for $85,000.

SCHOOL JOB AWARDED

A contract has been awarded at $39,617 to G. E. Penn, Alhambra general contractor, for the erection of an addition to the new school building for the Briggs school district, Santa Paula.

REDLANDS' VALUE MAKES BIG GAIN

City's Assessment Roll Enjoys Eigh Per Cent Increase

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, Sept. 5.—Clint P. Hook, city clerk, is busy totaling up the Redlands assessment roll which has leaped ahead of last year by more than 8 per cent.

The assessed valuation of Redlands will reach a grand total of more than $14,000,000 this year.

Of this sum about $225,000 lies in the newly admitted Terracina district.

Title Brokers Are En Route to National Meet

Fifty title men and their wives, representing the California Land Title Association, W. N. Glasscock of San Bernardino, State president, are at Grand Canyon today en route to their national convention at Denver.

Among the Californians on the program are R. F. Chilcott and Donzel Stoney of San Francisco, Glenn A. Schaefer of Fresno and Senator N. W. Thompson of Los Angeles.

The delegation chartered two cars of the California Limited.

RESOURCEFULNESS.

THE successful man is almost always a resourceful man. The best salesman, the best lawyer, the best business man is the one whose resourcefulness gives him always a new angle, a new line of approach or defense, for each is a new power.

Resourcefulness of another sort is the greatest quality a city can possess, a diversity of interests, charms, potentialities and power. Few cities, if any, in America have the wide range of Los Angeles in this respect. It depends not on any one, but a multitude, of industries. It counts, not upon a single season, but upon all seasons. It lays claim, not to a few charms and unusual advantages, but to a host of them. It has a wide diversification of agriculture, an increasing scope of manufacture and production, a developing power from many different angles, well balanced, many sided—a resourceful city. Have you purchased an interest in this City? We sell them.

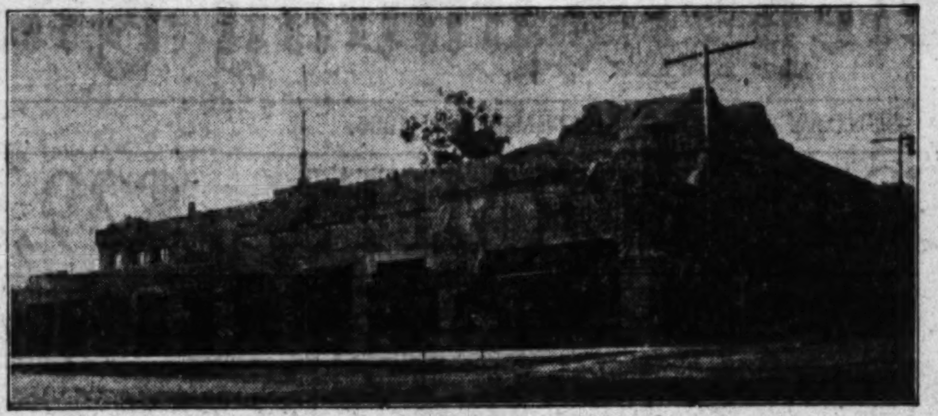
Daring Architectural Attempt in This Model



Harks Back to Civilization of Lost Maya Race

Held to be the only structure of its kind in existance, this modern hotel, recently erected in Monrovia at a cost of $250,000, combines every modern convenience in a setting that harks back to the days of the Aztecs. No two rooms are finished in the same style or color. Robert B. Stacy-Judd, a Los Angeles architect, designed it.

NEW HOTEL HAS OPENING IN MONROVIA

Aztec Hostery, of Odd Design, Dedicated With Dinner-Dance

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MONROVIA, Sept. 5.—The new Aztec Hotel was formally opened Tuesday night with a brilliant dinner-dance in the cafe, preceded by public inspection of the new building which is located at White Oak avenue and Magnolia avenue.

It is held to be the only structure of its kind in existence today and unquestionably is the most daring architectural attempt in Southern California, combining every modern convenience in a setting of ancient splendor known only to the lost Maya civilization.

In furnishing the lobby and rooms, craftsmen with Barker Brothers, Los Angeles, delved into the history of the ancient tribes of Yucatan and the lower Mexican peninsula and designed each piece of furniture specially to conform with some fancy of the Aztecs, Incas or Toltecs.

Although it contains only thirty-six rooms and eight apartments, the structure has cost over $250,000 and required practically one year for erection.

Robert B. Stacy-Judd of Hollywood, was the architect, and W. H. McCune, Jr., of Monrovia, the general contractor.

OUTLINE REALTY COURSES

Subjects to be Covered Range from Problems in Selling Property to Legal Phases

Real estate classes at Metropolitan College of the University of Southern California will begin Monday, September 28, in the Transportation Building at Seventh and Los Angeles streets, according to an announcement made yesterday.

There will be three separate courses on the real estate business as practised in California, the first course specializing on selling and kindred subjects, the second on the technique of real estate practice and the third on the law of real property as applied to realty problems in the Southland.

The first course in general real estate will cover the selling of vacant property, improved property, improved property, business property and the subject of developing salesmen will also occupy one of the twelve evenings. Other subjects are real estate advertising, financing th home, taxation, appraisals, real estate legislation, fire insurance, property management, and also the legal requirements necessary to earn a commission. Special lectures from the business and professional circles of Los Angeles will be invited to speak before this class, the general work under the direction of the instructor in charge, Herbert M. Harwood.

The second course in general real estate covers the technical side of the business, the mortgage and trust deed procedure, being explained in detail while much attention is paid to the drawing of contracts and other related subjects. Legal and business problems connected with the sale, purchase, leasing and management of real property will all be discussed, as well as topics including depreciation of buildings and land, basis of land values, and the operation of the escrow. This course intended primarily for the property owner and the beginner in the real estate business will be in charge of George A. Schneider, widely known Los Angeles realtor.

The third course enters into a deep and exhaustive analysis of the legal side of the real estate business, according to the authorities, and it is considered particularly valuable to individuals actually engaged in real estate practice. Some of the subjects covered will be: Estates in real property; acquisition and recordation; rights and obligations of owners; transfers; uses and trusts; mortgages, liens and homesteads. It will cover the civil code insofar as it petrains to real property, and many of the leading cases will be investigated. Oliver J. Marston, a practising atorney gives the lectures in this part of the realty instructional activity.

The classes are held one night a week for the twelve weeks of the university's fall quarter. The first course is on Monday evenings, the second on Wednesday evenings, and the third on Tuesday evenings. All convene at 7 o'clock and continue until 9:20.

FACT AND COMMENT

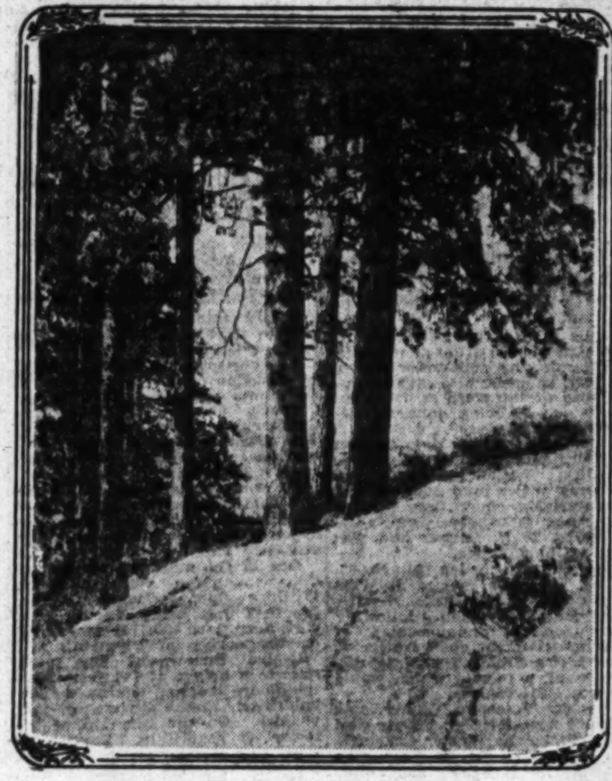
decided it was more economical to lay new surfacing. Similar conditions obtain in Los Angeles. Let's pave and save money.

Safety First

Every careful motorist will hail with joy the new State law banning youthful drivers less than 18 years of age, unless they pass a satisfactory examination. The sudden absence of their road antics in all kinds and conditions of automobiles will be a great relief.

Along this same line might be mentioned a growing need for headlight adjustments on many motor cars. Because of the blinding glare their drivers are allowed to hog the roadways at night. They are a menace to all careful drivers.

Turn in Mojave River Road



Has Reduced Grade

Photo gives picturesque glimpse of new Mojave River road to crest of the San Bernardino Mountains, the remaining link of which is now being completed by the realty firm of Anloff & Houlette, owners and subdividers of Cedarpines Park.

RUSH MOUNTAIN ROAD WORK

What is considered one of the most important developments in the San Bernardino Mountains, west of the City Creek Road to the crest, is the work now under way on the Mojave River road, which when completed will mark the second approach from the desert to the top of the range.

Work is rapidly nearing completion on this road, and it is expected that it will be opened to the public some time within the next three weeks.

Although six miles longer than the Waterman Canyon route, the Mojave River highway will have a maximum grade of 15 per cent, whereas the Waterman Canyon road is more than 18 per cent at maximum. In scenic beauty it is said to surpass all other mountain roads.

The Mojave River road will enter the mountains from the desert side, branching from the Cajon Pass Highway immediately below the camp of that name and after running through Summit Valley, the Las Flores ranch and the Mojave River Valley will turn up Miller Canyon to a point three miles and a half below Job's Peak in Cedarpines Park.

From the Job's Peak road on the mountain top, G. J. Anloff and P. E. Houlette, owners and subdividers of the Cedarpines Park resort, have gone to the expense of building the connecting link that will open the road to the mountain-loving public. But half a mile of this pioneering remains to be completed. Houlette recently reported that the road would be wholly completed within the next three weeks.

Are You Delaying Your Building Plans Until the Ideal Moment Arrives?

It may have been a year ago. Maybe it's today. Or next year. Do you know? Will you recognize it when it comes?

The ideal moment is the best time to build. There is no doubt about it. The question is how to recognize it when it does arrive.

You can't tell by looking at your watch or your calendar. Nor by merely watching building permits, and community development. Even the best architects and keenest construction superintendents won't attempt to prophesy for you.

There are too many important factors to make guessing practical. It requires years and years of specialized training, constant study and continuous experience.

There are several offices in Los Angeles where you can get dependable information. One of them is our own. We naturally pride ourselves on our fourteen years of success as indication of our ability to serve you.

A Wonderful Corner

3 Acres at Pico and Doheny Drive

This fine northeast corner has 196 feet on Pico and 613 feet on Doheny Drive—it is unrestricted and in a "C" Zone.
It will subdivide at a big profit to the buyer! It is reasonably priced.

Here are four things to consider:
1—The corner is good TODAY—a fine location in a fine district.
2—It will be even better TOMORROW—its future is assured.
3—The price is reasonable and more than justified—based on today's values.
4—It is unrestricted and zoned for business.

Here is a chance to speculate on a "sure thing."

CLUB'S EFFORT HALTS CANARDS

Eastern Press Prints Fair Southland News

Advertiser's Survey Shows Changed Attitude

Editors Victims of Vicious Correspondents

There has been a turn in the tide of evil news about Los Angeles and Southern California which up to this time has enjoyed such a vogue in many of the newspapers in the East and in the Middle West.

When the habit of writing slurring, inaccurate and sometime vicious stories about Southern California gained prominence about a year ago the All-Year Club of Southern California started a counter campaign. In co-operation with the railroads and with representatives of the eastern branches of its advertising agency, the club procured every instance of inaccurate stories harmful to the Southland that it could lay hands on.

Some of these were deliberately vicious, published with the full knowledge of the local publishers that the stories were inaccurate. With these nothing could be done. Happily they were in the great minority, probably not more than a dozen such instances being uncovered.

Most of the stories hurtful to the Southland were published where the editor was made victim of an unreliable correspondent. That person disgruntled for some reason would write the most outrageous lies about Los Angeles.

In one instance a story was printed which gave the mortgage foreclosures on Los Angeles real estate at a monthly figure that was almost double the total of all transactions. The story was incorrect in just about the same degree and the figure one differs from the figure two hundred. It was picked up by the paper from an automobile camp tourist. When the matter was called to the attention of the editor he printed the actual story.

There have been many instances of this kind. In the letters to the editors of the papers made the victims of poor news sources, C. G. Milham, executive secretary of the All-Year Club has been able to point out the true conditions here and has been able to apprise these editors that they are likely to be made the victims of inaccurate news through disgruntled persons who failing to reap a harvest of gold in Southern California condemn it without mercy and, what is worse, without the slightest regard for the facts.

An example of the changed attitude or rather the changed knowledge on the part of many editors is afforded by the acceptance and wide use of a story sent out by the All-Year Club on Santa Barbara.

INTENSE USE IS URGED ON FARM LANDS

Realty Firm Head Tells of Cultivation Methods Found in European Countries

There is need for more intensive cultivation of soil in California in the opinion of T. J. Lawrence, president of the T. J. Lawrence Company, realty firm, who has returned from a European tour of six months during which he visited the Vineyard and Chateaux districts in France and Italy. Discussing his impressions he said:

"I was struck with the intensive cultivation of the soil practiced by the peasants and the absence of waste. In Italy, soil on the hillsides is carried up the mountain sides and placed in terraces on which the natives grow grapes and garden truck. The utmost conservation is practiced, especially in the matter of wood.

"According to investigation of the United States Bureau of Agriculture, Bureau of Irrigation, there is comparatively little land in California available with water marked on the bureau's irrigation map. In 1923 the value of truck crops in Los Angeles county was $11,852,014. Only $9,922,500 worth of truck crops were produced in 1924, a falling off of $1,929,514.

"This shortage was due mostly to the fact that many productive truck gardens near Los Angeles became too valuable for gardening and were sold for town lots. Yet the demands for truck produce has increased with attending high prices. For these reasons we have just opened up own income producing suburban farm tract near Riverside, as there is a need for other truck gardens to compensate."

New Plant for Riding School Is Completed

Handsome new quarters for the Palos Verdes riding academy of O. C. Clasby were completed last week and occupied by the string of twenty riding horses which have been stabled near Valmonte on the Palos Verdes Estates for some time.

Work of extending the fourteen miles of bridle trails planned for the estates is being rapidly carried forward, according to Jay Lawyer, manager of Palos Verdes Estates. "The trails have been laid out so that they do not cross the main traveled roads," said Mr. Lawyer yesterday.

"By following the canyons and the ridges, a system of trails has been worked out that avoids motor traffic and at the same time commands a series of magnificent views. Several miles of the trails have already been completed, and the remainder will be finished as rapidly as possible. Many people from Pasadena, Hollywood and Los Angeles are daily coming to Palos Verdes to enjoy the novelty of horse-back riding near the sea shore."

GARAGE JOB AWARDED

J. H. Woodworth & Son, Pasadena contractors, have been awarded the contract for the erection of a one-story public garage at 492 Herkimer street, Pasadena, for E. E. Ambrose, at $19,500.

ORGANIZE HIGHWAY BODY

Association to Urge Improvement Program to Relieve Present Traffic Congestion

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 5.—With representatives present from the Chamber of Commerce of Alhambra, San Gabriel, Baldwin Park and town of Temple, a new organization was formed here this week to be known as the West Arrow Highway Association.

The first object of this body, as expressed in a resolution adopted, will be to recommend to the County Planning Commission that Main street be extended from its present terminus at the easterly limits of the town of Temple to Baldwin Park, there to connect with the proposed new Arrow highway which is being constructed from San Bernardino west.

A. L. Robinson, chairman of the highways committee of the local chamber, is president of the new organization, and D. J. Shultis of Baldwin Park is the secretary.

It was the consensus of opinion at the meeting that several new highways from points east to Los Angeles, to relieve present congested traffic on the Foothill and Valley boulevards, were needed and that the route over Main street in Alhambra to Temple afforded the first means of carrying out a greater highway program for this end of the San Gabriel Valley.

FRIENDS PUT UP HOUSE IN SHORT TIME

Rush Construction of Home at Ventura Boulevard Acres to Completion

In the olden days when a pioneer was about to build a home, the news was broadcast throughout the territory and on the day set people came from far and wide to help erect the new home. In those by-gone days it took a good ten hours' wagon trip to cover the comparatively few intervening miles. A barbecue was always held during the evening and everyone participated in the variety of festivities held.

This last week at Ventura Boulevard Acres, a Butterbaugh and Hunnicutt Land Company project on Ventura Boulevard, a similar scene was re-enacted by P. E. Newstrum, a recent one-acre purchaser there. But what a difference! His friends who were to aid in erecting the house, arrived by motor cars early in the morning, having covered the twenty-two miles from Los Angeles in less than an hour. By 5:30 the house was two-thirds completed. The following Sunday these same friends gathered again and in an additional few hours the house was fully completed, and ready for occupancy.

About this time last year, Mr. Newstrum visited Ventura Boulevard Acres and came within an ace of purchasing an acre. He says he wishes he had. His one-year delay cost him a little over $1200, for that was the increase in property values in this tract during a one-year period.

Gotham Hotel on Ingraham Street is Sold

E. H. Thayer has sold the Gotham Hotel Building located at Kip and Ingraham streets to A. L. Lissner and Charles W. Iverson for a consideration of $200,000; immediately upon completion of this transaction the hostelry was again transferred to Harry J. Wall, who is the present operator of the lodge.

Mr. Thayer has purchased the furniture, lease and business of the Huntington Hotel, located at the corner of Eighth and Main streets for a consideration of $75,000. The lease involves a total rental exceeding $300,000. The Huntington Hotel consists of 225 rooms and is one of the best-known, popular-priced, downtown Los Angeles hotels.

E. J. Hardebeck of the firm of Cason-Whilton & Co., hotel brokers, represented all parties concerned in both the Huntington and Gotham transactions.

Complete Plans for Rebuilding Wrecked Hotel

C. K. Denman, architect, has completed plans and specifications and a building permit has been issued for a 38x109 three-story hotel and store building on West Haley street, Santa Barbara, for Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Hayman. This hotel building is one that was partially damaged by the earthquake.

All exterior brick walls are to be taken down and new reinforced concrete footings put in and new brick walls built. These brick walls will be bonded together with reinforced concrete bond stones the full thickness of the walls.

Heavy reinforced concrete ties will be run at each floor level and coping. Heavy diagonal steel reinforcing has been provided in the first-story construction to take care of the side stresses on the building caused by the earthquake.

Wall Board Man Tells of Wider Market in East

Illustrating the possibilities of extending the eastern market for Los Angeles products, Earl Schmidt, sales manager of the Schumacher Wall Board Corporation, says that sales east of California have increased 60 per cent in the last year.

This expansion of trade, he declared, was due largely to a recent campaign to introduce the product in districts where it was previously but little known.

"Within the last few days we have sent car lot shipments into four Colorado districts, where it was not previous sold. These shipments went to Grand Junction, Telluride, Delta and Cedaredge."

WHEN ROOM FOR DINING IS BUSINESS?

Question Holds Up Building of Hotel at Beverly Hills Till Decided

The new $150,000 hotel planned for Beverly Hills by the Boyce-Seeley Construction Company is held up by the City Trustees of Beverly Hills until the question as to when a dining-room is "business and when it is not business has been settled. City Inspector Barnwell has refused to issue a permit until the question has been definitely settled as to whether or not a hotel dining-room constitutes a business and hence cannot be operated upon residential income property.

Heretofore, former City Attorney Schwab has maintained for the City Trustees that a hotel dining-room providing meals for its guests only is not a business but a hotel dining-room catering to the general public must be classed as such. Revision of the hotel plans call for a steel and concrete structure to replace the first plan for a frame building.

Another development retarded by zoning problems is the granting of permits to O'Neill & Sons, Los Angeles, for the first ten of sixty-four houses in the Speedway tract where the new Beverly Hills High School will be placed at once. The lots upon which the buildings are to be erected are fifty and fifty-five-foot lots and the builders want sixty-foot lots.

This is a hard nut for the City Trustees to crack in that it is a literal infraction of the city zoning ordinance, providing that only one house may be put up on each lot as shown by record maps. It was proposed to deed property to the construction firm, they to make a new subdivision, but this would conflict with record maps on file, and delay for three months while being adjusted. A bond may be put up by the company covering the pendency of solving these legal entanglements if all parties agree.

Tulare Will be Host to Valley Realty Dealers

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TULARE, Sept. 5.—One of the largest delegations since inception of the organization is expected to attend the meeting in Tulare on Wednesday, the 16th inst., of the San Joaquin Valley Realtors' Association.

This meeting, coming in the middle of the Tulare County Fair week, is expected to prove especially popular with the members, who will thus have an opportunity to attend two worth-while events.

J. T. Crowe of Tulare is president of the valley realtors' organization. C. E. Taylor and Harry Perry have been named a committee in charge of entertainment features to be given at the luncheon, under auspices of the Tulare organization, during the convention of the State Real Estate Association in Fresno, October 7 to 10.

Plan Hotel for Site Secured by Lengthy Lease

Involving a consideration of approximately $500,000, a local syndicate has secured a ninety-nine-year lease on the property located at the southeast corner of Sunset Boulevard and Gower street. Plans are being prepared for a four-story hotel and business block to be erected when present leases expire.

The deal was handled through the office of Nathan H. Libott, realty dealer, and the local syndicate is headed by Louis Strauss and William Leslie.

SHOE FIRM WILL OPEN ON FLOWER

Weatherby-Kayser Company Adds Store in Heart of New Shopping District

The two story brick building at 715-19 South Flower street has been added to the chain of shops operated by the Weatherby-Kayser Shoe Company. The deal was negotiated by the W. Ross Campbell Company, according to Robert L. McCourt, vice-president, and the consideration was in excess of $400,000.

The building by Barker Bros., at Seventh and Flower has started a trend of similar development in that area and the demand for desirable locations in that section is increasing Mr. McCourt said yesterday.

The New Fine Arts Building is going up at the northeast corner of Seventh and Lebanon, the Sun Realty Company has announced a height limit store and office building at the northeast corner of Seventh and Flower and The Unique, a high-class cloak and suit firm, recently opened an establishment in the same locality.

The Wetherby-Kayser Shoe Company transaction was handled in its entirety by Marcus L. Godfrey, and Clem S. Glass, vice-president of the W. Ross Campbell Company. Barker Bros., who control the property, were the lessors, Henry McKee being the principal dealt with. Emil Kayser, president of Wetherby-Kayser, was the principal for his firm.

Sales Director Leaves City for Chicago Work

Henry Clarke, who has been director of sales for Palos Verdes Estates ever since the inception of the project, left last week for Chicago, there to assume charge of a large industrial project for a group of Chicago and St. Louis capitalists.

Clarke is widely known in Los Angeles real estate circles. He joined the Palos Verdes organization when the project was first conceived, directed its underwriting, and later the sales of the land itself. Property sales at Palos Verdes under his direction have today reached 67 per cent of the total subdivided area, and aggregate millions of dollars.

A farewell banquet in honor of Clarke was given by the Palos Verdes sales organization on Friday evening at Paulais, and he was given a handsome present in token of his long services with the estates.

Hollywood Man to Hear Board's Former Leader

Members of the Hollywood branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board will be addressed Thursday evening by W. I. Hollingsworth, former president of the realty board. Mr. Hollingsworth, who recently returned from a tour of the Holy Land, will speak on "The Mediterranean and the Holy Land."

The meeting will be preceded by a dinner at the Hollywood Athletic Club and will be the first regular monthly banquet meeting of the branch since last spring.

Jerome Sengel is chairman of the branch and will preside.

FOR EXCHANGE
Clear business and residence lots valued at $40,000 in thriving near-by city. Owner wants business or income property. Also have clear Los Angeles business vacant corner to trade for business income.

Fine Arts Building
West Seventh-Opposite Barker Bros.

The Fine Arts Building is rapidly taking form in the architects' drafting room as the most striking and artistic height-limit building in Los Angeles.

The entire structure will be devoted to high-class specialty shops, and inquiries have already been received from many of the outstanding firms of the country. Formal applications for space aggregating nearly two entire floors have already been made.

The Edwards & Wildey Co., as managers of the building, have established an extremely high standard for occupancy of the Fine Arts. This standard is not based on a high rental rate; on the contrary, the rental scale is exceedingly moderate. The only test required of prospective tenants is that of their business integrity, together with some consideration for the line of goods handled.

In other words, we want every tenant of the Fine Arts to be a distinct asset to every other tenant in the building. No other class of applicants will be considered.

Prospective tenants may, without charge, have individual ateliers arranged by the architects to suit their special requirements.

GAIN REVEALED IN ZONED AREAS

Survey Shows Idea Popular Over Nation

Four-Year Period Increase is Reported

Total of 320 Cities Enact Legislation

There has been an increase of more than 130 per cent in the number of people living in zoned cities and towns in the United States during the past four years. By the first of July of this year more than 26,000,000 people were living in 366 zoned municipalities, as against the less than 11,000,000 people in forty-eight cities and towns in September, 1921. The number of zoned municipalities thus increased more than seven times during the four-year period. The above statistics have been compiled by the Division of Building and Housing of the Department of Commerce.

Twenty-seven of the thirty-three largest cities in the United States, having populations of more than 200,000 inhabitants, have adopted zoning ordinances, the latest being Denver. The advantages afforded by zoning ordinances have resulted in the rapid spread of the zone movement, shown by a comparison of the number of zoned municipalities at different dates. The forty-eight cities and towns zoned in September, 1921, were increased to 159 municipalities on January 1, 1923, while on January 1, 1925, there were 320 municipalities zoned.

An analysis of the forty-six places reported zoned during the first six months of 1925 shows three cities having more than 100,000 population each, namely: Denver, Colo.; Hartford, Ct., and New Bedford, Mass. There are also ten cities having less than 100,000, but more than 25,000 population, and thirty-three cities, towns and villages having less than 25,000 inhabitants.

During the first six months of this year zoning legislation was enacted by Arizona, Idaho, Maine, New Hampshire and Utah, which heretofore had been without zoning laws. Four of these five States used the Department of Commerce "Standard Act" wholly or in large part in drafting their laws. In addition, a number of other States made use of the "Standard Act" in legislation supplementing and broadening the application of their existing zoning laws.

The list of State laws and zoning ordinances enacted reported during the first six months of 1925 may be had by writing to the Division of Building and Housing, Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

MANY TO ATTEND CONFAB

Editor's Trip Reveals That Convention Will Attract at Least 3000 Delegates

Good prospects of 3000 people attending the twenty-first annual convention in Fresno, October 7 to 10, of the California Real Estate Association were reported by Gil A. Cowan, associate editor of California Real Estate, upon his return this week-end from a trip to the northern part of the State.

Actual registration will exceed that of the Pasadena convention last year, Cowan believes, due to the central location of Fresno and the great interest shown by Bay and Southern California cities' boards. San Francisco Realty Board will have two Pullman cars, in which President George C. Boardman of the board and eighty other brokers will be transported to the convention city, in company with the San Francisco Glee Club.

Cecil B. Barker is grand marshal in charge of the San Francisco Peninsula-Santa Clara Valley caravan which will have as many cars in line as the Oakland-Sacramento-Northern California caravan under the leadership of Jack J. Mulvany, Alameda, another grand marshal.

Cowan reports that D. L. Walter, director of the association in San Mateo county, has pledged twenty-five cars to Barker's caravan which will lunch at San Jose. It will have the San Francisco Realty Board's jazz band along.

C. W. Clegg, grand marshal of the Southland caravan of realtors, which leaves Van Nuys at 7 a.m. the morning of October 6, hopes that he will have more machines in line than the two combined northern motorcades. Fresno is expecting no less than 600 cars, according to Cowan, who spoke before the Fresno Realty Board Wednesday noon and outlined the advertising being done by the convention forces.

Los Angeles will contribute a large delegation of real estate men, while Glendale, among other Southland cities, has gone on record for 100 per cent attendance of its board members.

"One thing was noticeable at a luncheon in Burlingame this week," Cowan stated, "and that was the fact that all who had attended conventions of the California Real Estate Association before expect to attend this year and they will bring additional representatives of the real estate profession with them.

"Fresno is entering into the spirit of the convention and with the State hotel men there the middle of next month, the county fair coming in late September, among other events, that city will be more than ready to give a welcoming hand to the realtors.

"J. A. Reiss, chairman of the hotel committee, personally sent a message to The Times asking that all board secretaries, or individuals who expect to attend the convention who are not in a group, to write him for reservations immediately."

Realty boards in Pasadena, Glendale, Long Beach and San Diego have adopted resolutions inviting their newspapers to send real estate editors to the convention.

Packing Plant at Woodlake is Finishing Unit

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WOODLAKE, Sept. 5.—The Sequoia Foothill Packing Company of Woodlake is completing erection of a fine new addition to its local plant in anticipation of the Emperor grape season.

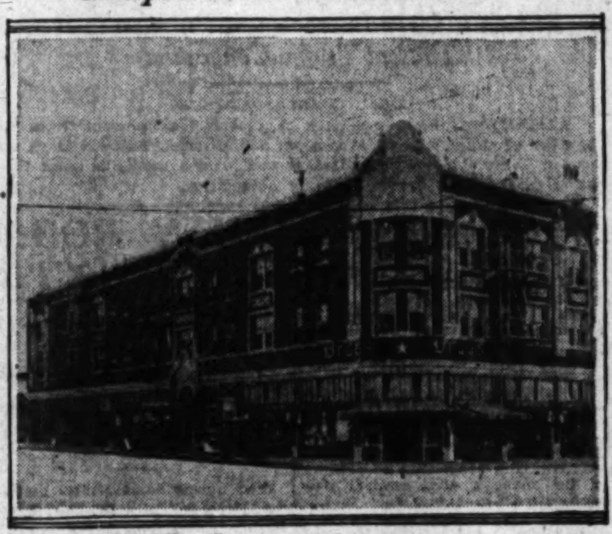
This addition is 36x66 feet and will be used for the receiving of fruit. A new system of elevators and conveyors has been installed and the plant is being made modern in every respect.

New Industrial Plant to Open in Los Angeles

Another factory for Los Angeles was assured this week when A. M. Douglass & Sons took a two-year lease of the property at 2304 East Forty-eighth street, to be used for a vegetable-oil mill. The lease was made through Wilson G. Bingham of Mason, Cole & Co., 207 Edwards & Wildey Building.

The Douglass plant will have a capacity of fifteen tons a day of vegetable oils and by-products. The firm has operated at Parker, Ariz., for the last five years, but found it essential to move to Los Angeles as a central point for the distribution of its products. The new quarters will be occupied September 10.

Completed at "Five Points"



For Stores and Apartments

This three-story store and flat building has just been completed at the southeast corner of Avenue 26 and Daly street, commonly known as "The Five Points." The structure is owned by P. A. English of the United Gypsum Company.

SELLS BARBER SHOP

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 5.—Joseph La Plante sold his barber shop lease at the Orange Pool Hall to F. A. Baker of Taft, possession having already been given. Baker is having the place remodeled and improvements made that will greatly facilitate service.

SMALL RISE IN BUILDING COST SHOWN

Average for 1925 Given as $5.47 Per Square Foot in United States; 1924, $5.06

The average cost of building so far this year throughout the country has been slightly higher than in 1924, according to figures provided the research department of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association of Hollywood by the Department of Labor. The statistics are based on the wholesale price index of building materials. The cost of labor was given as approximately 40 per cent of the total.

The average cost per square foot space is given as follows according to the classes of building:

Commercial, 1925, $5.39; 1924, $5.17; educational, $6.51; 1924, $5.77; hospitals and institutions, $7.92; 1924, $6.83; industrial, $6.91; 1924, $6.78; military and naval, $5.78; 1924, $6.60; public buildings, $7.68; 1924, $6.85; religious and memorial, $8.63; 1924, $7.44; residential, $4.87; 1924, $4.58; social and recreational, $8.22; 1924, $5.62; average, 1925, $5.47; 1924, $5.06.

"Combine Fontana Walnuts With Poultry"

Your Future

IS AT FONTANA

SUCCESSFUL!

Success means profits—a steady and assured income from fruit and poultry at Fontana.

The story of success cannot be kept at home. It goes abroad. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why 267 families purchased sites for homes and poultry plants in Fontana groves and vineyards since March 7 last.

Ten Years to Pay

A small down payment, with ten years on balance, enables every one with a reasonable sum to invest to take advantage of our remarkable offer.

Our land prices are much lower and our terms the easiest for the value we give—

Orange and grapefruit groves—$850 to $1250 per acre.
Vineyards—$550 to $650 per acre.
Walnut Orchards—$550 per acre.

WHY WALNUTS WITH POULTRY?

There is no better paying crop grown in California than walnuts. There are 1400 acres of them at Fontana. Two good reasons for building your poultry plant in a walnut grove are:

(1) Our young walnuts are interplanted with juice grapes, already producing. While you wait for your walnut income you have the income from your grapes, plus the return from your poultry.

(2) You can't beat our price—$550 per acre for young walnuts, interplanted with vineyards. See what others are asking. Then buy at Fontana!

RUSH PLANS FOR SCHOOL NEAR COVINA

California Preparatory Institution Will Erect Plant in Hills

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

COVINA, Sept. 5. — Plans for the $250,000 buildings of the California Preparatory School for Boys have been rapidly maturing since the return last week from the East of Mrs. J. H. Henry, president of the school.

Formerly known as the Pasadena Military Academy the school's growth has been such that last spring it was necessary to find a larger site and 100 acres of hill and mesa land in the picturesque San Jose Hills southeast of Covina was purchased. The plant when completed will accommodate 150 pupils and will consist of four dormitories, five faculty cottages, administration building, dining-hall, swimming pool, gymnasium, stables, dairy and vegetable gardens.

The course of study which will be nonmilitary will constitute four years of elementary and four years of preparatory college work.

C. M. Wood, superintendent of the school, states that the school enrollment for the coming year exceeds greatly that of other years, pupils being enrolled from Europe and many parts of this country. The San Gabriel Valley to which the Girls' Collegiate School has recently come from Los Angeles is fast becoming nationally known as the ideal location for superior private schools.

Glendale Men Give Pledge to be at Confab

The Glendale Realty Board has gone on record pledging 100 per cent attendance at the twenty-first annual convention of the California Real Estate Association in Fresno, October 7 to 10, according to information received by Grand Marshall Cliff Clegg of the Southland caravan.

Other cities are expected to keep pace with Glendale.

WILL ERECT SCHOOL UNIT

The contract for the erection of a brick and hollow-tile addition to the East Broadway Grammar School, Glendale, for the Glendale Board of Education has been awarded to the Hellman Construction Company at about $28,677.

URGE RETAILERS TO BACK MAKERS

Chamber Discusses Welfare of Apparel Designers

Manufacturers Confer With Store Managers

St. Louis Merchant Outlines Co-operation Need

The marketing of a greater volume of locally-made apparel to the Los Angeles public depends upon the goodwill of the retail store buyer, it was developed at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce called by R. D. Sangster, manager of the industrial department, last week.

"The biggest single factor in boosting local wearing apparel manufacturing is the store buyer," said Thomas Garland of St. Louis, Mo., to a group of apparel manufacturers and department store managers at the meeting.

Mr. Garland is a ready-to-wear retail merchant of many years' standing in St. Louis.

"My experience," said Mr. Garland, "is that the distributor of style apparel makes the pace and can, therefore, through his buyers create his merchandise and place his purchases where he will.

"I have no difficulty in St. Louis in employing the local manufacturers for quality merchandise of distinctive style but the time was when my credit had to be used to enable some of the small manufacturers to buy their materials.

"Your manufacturer must absolutely have liberal support in the shape of firm advance orders if he is to produce what the merchant wants, particularly if he is to confine distinctive styles to certain dealers.

"I should like to see Los Angeles become a large source of style apparel so that we in the Middle West would not have to depend so heavily upon New York.

"If we can create styles in St. Louis, only twenty-four hours from New York City, you can very much more readily do so in Los Angeles and I can think of nothing that would give your manufacturing industry, as a whole, so much favorable publicity."

MONROVIA PERMITS MAKE BIG SPURT

MONROVIA, Sept. 5.—Building activities here took a new lease on life as September opened and piled up $21,650 in permits issued the first day. This total included four new residences and three additions to homes.

BANNER YEAR FOR TAMPICO

Students of Mexico Foresee Record Period as Result of Port's Increased Business

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TAMPICO (Mex.) Sept. 5.—Since Tampico is now the leading commercial port of Mexico, exclusive of oil and silver cargoes which made it important even when little else passed through it, the condition of business here is a fair reflection of business throughout the republic—the imports largely going to the interior and the exports largely coming from the interior.

The fact, therefore, that 1925 promises to be the banner year of the Tampico gateway is significant to students of conditions throughout Mexico.

If the remainder of this year holds up to the record already established, more than 560,000 tons of general cargo will be handled through this gateway, exclusive of silver and oil. Oil exports average close to ten times the monthly tonnage of general cargo exported.

With 560,000 tons of general cargo in 1925—and the probabilities are that those figures will be exceeded, as the increase in tonnage is steady—the port will show an increase of 136,000 tons over last year, when the total was 423,932 tons. In 1923 the total was 346,934 tons and in 1922 only 201,622 tons, oil and bullion and supplies for the oil companies then being virtually the only things handled through the port. General cargo business shows a steady increase of more than 100,000 tons annually, in spite of the fact that the needs of the oil companies are diminishing.

1921 BOOM YEAR

In 1921, the great boom year of the oil fields, 453,000 tons of cargo was handled here, virtually all being for the oil companies. Now only about 100,000 tons a year is handled for the companies, while more than 400,000 tons annually is handled for mining and agricultural and commercial enterprises elsewhere in Mexico.

Four years ago insurance companies in New York refused to insure goods consigned to Tampico against theft, as the municipal wharf was in a hopeless tangle. Goods were piled anywhere, left days and weeks unprotected and everything connected with their handling was disorganized and inefficient. Now goods are handled with speed and efficiency, with the minimum of pilferage and damage, and there has been an entire absence of labor troubles on the wharf. The National Railways have co-operated admirably with the wharf and custom house people, and many a shipment consigned to a mining company in Central or Western Mexico is delivered at its destination in a shorter time than similar shipments received in New York are delivered to consignees in the Middle West.

Other signs of increasing stability and confidence are numerous. Tampico can no longer claim undisputed right to the title of capital of the oil world, as it could in 1920-22, as now it is compelled to ship in light oil from California and Texas for its refineries, and only in the production of heavy oil heads the list of producing fields. Yet right now the American business men of Tampico are enthusiastically working for a new country club which would rank along with the best in the United States.

People who expected to spend only a few years in Mexico would not be interested in such a project, but these men in close touch with business throughout the republic foresee a great business future and steadily increasing interstate and international commerce. They consider cotton, rubber and commercial agriculture in their infancy in Mexico and predict a future in those world necessities which will make the silver and oil wealth of Mexico shrink into insignificance by comparison. The Tampico Woman's Club also has a building and grounds which many a famous metropolitan club in the United States would envy.

C.O.D. NOW POSSIBLE

By an arrangement just completed between the postoffice departments of Mexico and the United States, c.o.d. packages now may be sent by mail from either country. This should be a matter of interest to many a merchant in the United States, and also to many a person there who would like to get some Mexican cigars or drawn work or Indian blankets without going after them. C.o.d. parcel post shipments from the United States can be sent to any Mexican postoffice which is a money-order office, which means any postoffice in a good-sized town, and can be sent from Mexico to the United States from any similar office.

Young People's Social Center Being Finished

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

HUNTINGTON PARK, Sept. 5. The new social hall of the St. Clement's Episcopal Church, which has been in course of construction for the past six weeks, is nearing completion and it is expected to dedicate the new building early in September.

The building in dimensions, is 40x65 feet, one story, and of frame. There is an auditorium which is 30x50 feet and a stage in the south end which is 15x30 feet.

The hall will be used for all social functions, and as a young people's social center.

Contract Let for New School in Baldwin Park

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

BALDWIN PARK, Sept. 5.—Woodin & Wilson of Los Angeles have been awarded the contract for the new $77,800 unit of the Margaret Heath grammar school, which will soon be built adjoining the first unit on School street. The school when completed will contain seventeen rooms with latest scientific equipment.

The main building will contain two stories and will be of reinforced concrete and stucco.

Realty Dealers Hire Hall for Value Debates

"Standing Room Only," was the sign hung out at the Figueroa-street auditorium where the Southwest Realty Board of Los Angeles held the first of a series of debates on property values of Western, Vermont and Moneta avenues and Figueroa street.

Two brokers each were assigned to champion the boulevards and it is reported that C. W. Clegg and F. O. Kerth, speaking for Western avenue, won.

Concern Offers Free Inspection of Gas Heaters

To protect against any repetition of the monoxide-gas epidemic of 1924, heating engineers are making house-to-house canvasses to inspect all heating appliances before they are put into use, according to A. J. Hartfield, president of the Pacific Gas Radiator Company, who is placing his entire force in the field for gratuitous inspection service.

Confectionery to be Opened in Porterville

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 5.—An investment of more than $20,000 is to be represented in the fitting up of a first-class confectionery store and restaurant in the Shry Building on Main street by A. C. Jewett and Antone Gomez.

A long-time lease has been secured on these rooms, which were formerly occupied by the Stag pool hall. The new firm will open for business on October 1.

Fixtures and furnishings of the new establishment will be of the latest design and will include fountain service, confectionery store, tea-room and restaurant section. Contract for the fixtures has been let to the Western Wholesale Drug Company of Los Angeles.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

BEACH TRACT TO OPEN FORMALLY

Area Among Last Available Seaside Properties

Visited by Author on Voyage Early in Year 1835

Improvements on Land Cost Sponsors $100,000

(This is the sixtieth of a series of articles being printed in this section which deal with community development in Los Angeles and throughout Southern California in general.—Ed. note.)

Historic Dana Point has fallen before the march of progress; it has been subdivided for the homeseeker, and is to be formally opened to the public on Labor Day.

That particular portion which has been invaded by realty's active courses, comprise 538 acres of land, ninety-eight acres of which has been improved and plotted, and all of which lies seven miles south of Laguna, and two miles from the little town of Serra. The property is reached over the new Coast Highway.

Dana Point, although one of the most beautiful homesite spots imaginable, is one of the last available ocean tracts to be subdivided. Let Richard Henry Dana, Jr., in his "Two Years Before the Mast," describe its beauties as he saw them on his trip to the Point in 1835:

SPEAKS OF BLUFF

"Coasting along on the quiet shore of the Pacific, we came to anchor in twenty fathoms of water, almost out at sea, as it were, and directly abreast of a steep hill which overhung the water, and was twice as high as our masthead."

On visiting the mesa he writes: "The country here for several miles is high tableland running boldly to the shore, and breaking off in a steep hill, at the foot of which the waters of the Pacific are constantly dashing."

And again he says:

"Compared with the plain, dull sand beach of the rest of the coast, this grandeur was as refreshing as a great rock in a weary land."

These words of one of the early visitors to the district paint vividly the charming, historical and romantic atmosphere in which the embryo city of Dana Point is now being developed.

GOOD FRONTAGE

The area has a unique ocean frontage embracing perpendicular bluffs of extraordinary height, rough and rocky at the base and having smooth sandy stretches of beach ideal for surf bathing. Farther out from shore, but still withing speaking distance therefrom, deep-sea fishing from power and sailboats is a popular pastime.

So much for the natural resources of the place.

The developers of the tract, Merrick & Ruddick, Inc., have spent in excess of $100,000 in the way of modern improvements in order to bring the charm of this district to the exclusive homeseeker. An ample water supply has been provided. Wide streets, boulevards, curbing, sidewalks, water lines, electrical wiring and gas lines have all been installed. There is in addition a beautiful golf course and plans are now under way to erect a modern hotel that will meet the requirements of the most fastidious.

The first unit of the property, comprising 500 lots of average city size, has been on the market tentatively for the past month.

SAN GABRIEL DAM SITE IS REQUESTED

Alhambra Would Impound 30,000 Acre Feet of Water Annually

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, Aug. 20.—A supplementary application for a dam site in San Gabriel Canyon has been filed by the City of Alhambra with the State Division of Water Rights, it was announced today by T. B. Downer, head of the water department.

If the application is granted, Alhambra proposes to construct a dam in the canyon to impound 30,000 acre feet of water annually from the San Gabriel flood waters for use in this city. This, Downer pointed out, would solve the city's water problems for many years.

Alhambra has previously filed applications for dam sites in the canyon but no definite action has been taken by the State. "It is expected," declared Downer, "that actual conservation and storage of flood waters of the San Gabriel river will eventually be carried out jointly with other communities by erecting one large dam for all the cities concerned. If this plan should be adopted each city in the district would co-operate in the construction and the water would be dispensed by a meter system."

BRIDGE BUILDING RUSHED

Four Under Construction, Fifth Being Repaired Will Open Way to Ventura Boulevard

Four nw bridges giving access to Ventura Boulevard across the Los Angeles River are under construction, a fifth is being rebuilt and plans for a sixth are finished and awaiting bids, according to a Ventura Boulevard Chamber of Commerce summary of improvements.

The development of the southern side of the San Fernando Valley along the Los Angeles River has long been retarded because of the lack of access to Ventura Boulevard, and the building of the new bridges is regarded as the start of a new era of growth in this territory.

The four major bridge projects which are actually under way are as follows: Sherman Way, $10,637.95, time limit 150 days, W. R. Fontane, contractor; Whitsett avenue, $16,000,000, time limit 125 days, James Martin, contractor; Woodman avenue, $22,343, time limit 140 days, Chalmers & Ford, and Lankershim Boulevard, $31,567, time limit 150 days, De Waard & Son, contractors.

Plans for Foster-avenue bridge are finished and the project will be included in the improvement of the entire highway from Ventura Boulevard to Sherman Way. Bids will be asked upon the completion of final surveys for the rest of the improvement.

Realty Trade in South Gate Shows Activity

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SOUTH GATE, Sept. 5.—The realty business in this section is showing more activity than for some time, according to Hugh D. Lester. The largest deal reported is for approximately $20,000. This is a piece of property located at 8616 Long Beach Boulevard which Lester disposed of to L. H. Griffith of South Gate avenue.

The property has a frontage of 101 feet and is 269 feet in depth. It is improved with a six-room Spanish style stucco surrounded by a well-kept lawn and shrubbery.

Lester also has sold to Griffith a 45 x 135 foot lot in Magnolia Park on Long Beach Boulevard, the consideration being $7000. G. C. Holtz has purchased from F. H. Pohlman, a five-room bungalow and lot at 192 Independence for $5000.

Harry L. Wood of Huntington Park, has purchased a four-room bungalow at 3162 East Ardmore street for $4700, S. P. Ferris being the former owner. M. M. Hilton of Walnut Park has purchased a five-room stucco for $4500. O. O. Kieffer of Huntington Park has bought the Raymond A. Nelson five-room bungalow for $5000.

LUMBERMAN BUILDS BEVERLY HILLS HOME

M. Benson, millionaire lumberman of the Simon-Benson Lumber Company, San Diego and Portland, Or., has a large two-story home in course of construction on a two-acre site near the Pauline Frederick estate, 525 Sunset Boulevard.

His residence is influenced by Spanish architecture, and features a huge ballroom, seven baths, tile floors for all the large lower-floor living-rooms, and many other interesting details.

According to the builder, Welby H. Hudson of Beverly Hills, the residence will not be completed for about eight months.

Theater Men Buy Playhouse in Walnut Park

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

WALNUT PARK, Sept. 5.—The Hansen Theaters, Inc., have purchased The Lyric Theater in this city, and extensive plans for improvement are being made. The plan includes adding loges to the auditorium and constructing a balcony. This would increase the seating capacity about 400 persons. The house is leased by Mark M. Hansen, who is arranging to open a new theater in Sherman this month.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

BELL, Sept. 5.—This city is to have a modern hospital to be erected for the George T. Klipstein interests.

It is expected the new institution will cost $25,000, and work is to be started within the next few days.

SANTA ANA RESIDENCE MART GOOD

Homes Under Construction Bought Before Completed, Builder Reports

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—Fifteen homes, representing an investment of approximately $65,000, will be erected in Santa Ana within the next four months by the Santa Ana Improvement Company, W. Floyd Croddy, president, announced today.

Twenty-five residences, representing an expenditure of about $100,000 have been constructed in this city by the company since January 1, Croddy stated.

In the two years that the firm has been organized, 115 houses totaling $500,000 in value have been constructed by the company here.

"The demand for good, substantial homes is increasing," Croddy declared. "Practically every house that we have constructed has been sold before it was completed.

Croddy estimated that 90 per cent of the residences in Santa Ana and other Southern California cities are stucco construction. Practically every house built nowadays has a breakfast room, in his opinion.

Ed Glavis, home designer, formerly of Pasadena, joined the Croddy firm the 1st inst.

Without Price, Declares Civic Planner

Discusses Value of Rancho Santa Fe Work

eloped at Expenditure of $3,000,000

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DEL MAR, Sept. 5.—"It is impossible to compute the actual value of community beauty in terms of dollars and cents. Southern Californians, as well as eastern comers out here looking for places in which to build their homes, are now realizing this. That's why more and more people every day are seeking out those few charming residential and horticultural neighborhoods where unbroken [illegible] and the highest standards of architectural harmony are paramount to everything else!"

This is the expert opinion of L. [illegible] Sinnard, well-known civic planner under whose personal supervision and management Rancho Santa Fe, seven miles from here, has been developed into what is said to be the finest and most unified artistic rural-estate colony of its kind in America. Rancho Santa Fe is a subsidiary of the Santa Fe Railway and already some [illegible],000 has been expended in bringing this beautiful tract of [illegible] acres to its present state.

"During the past four weeks," said Mr. Sinnard, "we have had [illegible] 800 visitors at the rancho. This is a noteworthy record, first, because it proves most convincingly that the better type of country home and orchard investor is interested in something more than fertile land and the opportunity to build for himself a satisfactory income. Such people appreciate the beautifully planned environment of Rancho Santa Fe and realize that this rare [illegible] will mean much to them, in many ways, during the years which are to come.

"Secondly, this influx of visitors to the rancho is significant because a careful check shows that about [illegible] per cent of these people are from eastern cities and are here in Southern California solely for the purpose of building homes and becoming permanent residents and [illegible] enthusiasts."

Survey Reveals Fewer But Better Buildings Than Corresponding Period of Last Year

The value of building permits for the present year up to the 1st inst., continues to show a greater total than for the same period last year, and indications are that the lead of more than $300,000 will steadily increase until the first of the year, according to the research department of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association of Hollywood, which makes a study of permits issued by the Los Angeles Building Department.

The total value of permits for the year issued up to the 1st inst., is $104,695,610, compared to $104,321,615 for the same period in 1924.

While fewer permits were issued up to the 1st inst., than in the same period of last year, this is considered a good omen by building authorities. It indicates that larger and more valuable structures are being erected. It also signifies that the campaign by city officials and bankers for the use of better materials in home building is bearing fruit. Those sponsoring the campaign directed, in particular, their campaign against the use of inferior materials as backing for stucco exteriors.

During August of this year 3493 permits were taken out, the Guaranty Association reports, with a value of $10,221,257, while in August, 1924, 3825 permits were issued with a value of $13,893,095.

Dormitory at University is Being Equipped

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, Sept. 5.—George P. Cortner is furnishing the new three-story $100,000 dormitory for 100 girls, which has been built during the summer on the university campus. He is buying beds, rugs, tables, drapes, pictures and other articles for each of the rooms. The rooms are double rooms, two girls to each, and the beds are of the latest disappearing type, and are built in.

One rug will cost about $730, but it is expected to bear the tread of satin slippers and sport shoes for many years.

There are laundry rooms and recreation rooms to be furnished, and many thousand dollars will be spent.

Mr. Cortner says that his figures, over a period of several years of furnishing dormitories, show that the cost of furniture and such things is the highest now it has ever been.

Last year there were 1563 exhibits in the Royal Academy; this year the number has fallen to 1419.

STANDARDS FOR LUMBER ANNOUNCED

Dependable Guide Provides Protection for 300,000 Homebuilders

Three hundred thousand of the 400,000 dwellings annually erected in the United States are built of lumber, and the proportion appears to be increasing. At any rate the absolute number of lumber-built houses grows yearly.

Reports to the central committee on lumber standards indicate that the recent national standardization of lumber through the general adoption of American lumber standards is contributing influentially to the maintenance of lumber's position as the leading home-building material.

This is attributed to the assurance these standards give to lumber consumers that they will get lumber of the best utility for customary construction uses, well-manufactured and carefully graded.

Satisfied customers are those who know that they are getting what they specify. Through American standard lumber the lumber industry is providing those buyers of lumber who buy discriminatingly with full opportunity for lumber satisfaction. Three or four hundred thousand home builders can hardly be expected to be expert lumber buyers, but if they insist that their lumber shall be according to American standards they will be certain of getting what they designate, and the local dealer will be glad to advise them as to quality, sizes, dimensions and forms adapted to their needs.

In the past there were about thirty different sets of lumber-grading specifications—at least one for every important species of commercial timber. Familiarity with one set did not insure dependable knowledge of others.

Great confusion and much misunderstanding and disputation resulted.

Now the buyer has only to designate the species he prefers for particular uses, knowing that the same general grading size and rules apply to all.

PLASTOID BUSINESS JUMPS 100 PER CENT

An increase of 100 per cent in business last month over August of 1924, reflecting the building activity in Southern California and the rapidly growing demand for gypsum products, was reported yesterday by Robert Greenleaf, vice-president of the Plastoid Products Company, manufacturers of plaster lath and hollow gypsum tile.

The business increase pertains to the manufacture of plaster lath only, Mr. Greenleaf explained, comparative figures being unavailable on tile because the company only recently started the manufacture of that product. While the made tile is a new material on the market, the company recently was obliged to more than treble facilities of that department of its plant to meet the demand.

NEW BLOCK IS PLANNED AT ONTARIO

Armstrong Nurseries Will Erect Building; Excavation Work Started

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ONTARIO, Sept. 5.—One of the important additions of the year to Ontario's business district is the new two-story office and salesroom building for which the Armstrong Nurseries, of which John S. Armstrong is head, let the contract this week to the Campbell Construction Company. The structure is to stand at the northeast corner of Euclid avenue and D street and is to cost $30,000. Excavation work is already under way.

The new building is to be L-shaped and the main portion will have a frontage of forty-two feet on Euclid avenue and sixty-three feet on D street. It will be two stories in height with full basement.

Norman F. Marsh of Los Angeles is the architect for the new building, which will be of reinforced concrete construction with red brick veneer to conform with the present structure.

The Armstrong Nurseries, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the world, specializes in high-grade ornamentals, rare tropical and semitropical plants and trees, which are produced on more than 500 acres of choice land in and about Ontario. Between 125 and 200 men and women are given employment in the nursery business the year around and large shipments are made each season not only all over the United States, but to many far-distant points throughout the world, as well.

Start Work on Store Building in Lankershim

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

LANKERSHIM, Sept. 5.—Work began this week on the five-store building that is to be erected here at Lankershim and Magnolia boulevards, at a cost of more than $35,000.

The site has been leased by Fred Cyriack for forty-nine years to the Lexington Securities Company, composed of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Forsyth, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Penfield and Charles Crawshaw.

The completion of this structure means the expansion of the Lankershim business district south along Lankershim Boulevard.

Vinegar Plant in Redlands is Bought in Deal

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

REDLANDS, Sept. 5.—The buildings formerly occupied by the Jones Bros. Cider and Vinegar Company have just been purchased by J. M. Cadwell, and he is having some repairs made and will lease the buildings to a local syndicate, which will make cider and vinegar.

The local syndicate is composed of a number of well-known local men and Creel Jones, son of Sam P. Jones, who was one of the heads of the old company. The plant will be operated at full capacity the coming season in the making of cider and vinegar.

Something over seventy varieties of cabbage are known and cultivated. Some species attain a height of ten feet and the stalks are used for canes.

A GREAT PROPERTY comprising fifteen square miles of uninterrupted beauty and symphony of architecture well merits your inspection! There is no similarly sized area in all California which presents such a oneness of artistic upbuilding. Rancho Santa Fe has thus won the name of being the finest home and horticultural community in America!

Fifteen minutes from Del Mar's famous beach, accessible over excellent roads from either Los Angeles or San Diego, brought to its present state of remarkable development through the untiring efforts and money investment of the Santa Fe Railway, Rancho Santa Fe presents exclusive home-building and orchard-planting opportunities which are attracting a host of conservative buyers.

Here are nine thousand acres being brought to a phase of architectural and horticultural perfection so carefully and scientifically that the goal might seem to be almost beyond attainment.

Yet the proof is here! Beautiful colonial Spanish Villas. Thriving orchards of avocados, oranges, lemons, apricots, walnuts, deciduous fruits. 53 miles of graceful, surfaced driveways. An artistic Spanish Guest House. A busy Civic Center. Offices. Store. Grammar school. Garage. Service buildings. Electricity for cooking and lighting. Lake Hodges, impounding 12 billion gallons of water. A steel and concrete irrigation system. $3,000,000 already invested. Some $7,000,000 more to be added.

A new type of residential and orchard community! With beauty of line and color paramount to all else. Do you know of any other tract embracing 15 square miles which has been so perfectly planned?—so ably financed?

Rancho Santa Fe is truly the ultimate step in community building! Home-building restrictions range from $5,000 to $15,000, according to the locations and the individual possibilities for co-ordinating and blending into the general landscaping program.

To still further assure immediate development, there are other protective requirements: Each purchaser must, during the first year, plant one-third of his arable acreage—or build his home.

Yet the prices are most attractive, as are the terms. 15% cash, balance 7 equal annual payments, 6% . . .

. . . See Rancho Santa Fe. You will be delighted. And you may want to live here!

Choicest land $300 to $450 an acre—None higher!

Rancho Santa Fe is located in San Diego County, 5 miles inland from Solana Beach or 7 miles from Del Mar.

Come in or write us for further information. The Sales Office in Los Angeles will be glad to arrange for you to visit the Rancho.

WEEK'S DESIGN COMMENDABLE

Architect Points Out Many Improvements in Plan

Says Relation of House and Garden Needs Study

Arrangement Found Practical When Taken as Whole

BY ARTHUR R. HUTCHASON, Architect

The house published this week is an example of the usual thing done unusually well. The plan is one that has been used thousands of times, but in this case several improvements have been introduced. The entry and coat closet are useful and necessary. Traffic across the living-room has been confined to one end; one may sit before the fire undisturbed.

The bedrooms and bath have more privacy than the ordinary bungalow. A door has been substituted for the customary arch between the living and dining-rooms, which is a great improvement, particularly noticeable when guests are present for dinner.

The breakfast nook and screen porch might be reversed to advantage, giving a view of the garden from the breakfast room.

Having the driveway on the bedroom side of the house gives more light and air for these rooms on a narrow lot, but necessitates a separate walkway, thus cutting the front lawn in two.

The relation of the house and garden needs more study. The garden has all the elements for a fine small suburban garden, but these elements are not well related to each other or to the house. The walkway should have the living-room window and the seat by the garage wall as its termini. Perhaps there should be a door instead of a window looking out into the garden. This would detract in a way from the living-room, but would bring the garden into closer connection with the house and the garden would be more frequently used. The present means of access through the dining-room means dodging about the table to get out of doors.

On the whole, a very satisfactory and practical house. The sketch of the exterior is very nice indeed. It was designed by J. R. Daniels to cost less than $5000.

DIVISION OF REALTY BODY RESUMES MEETS

Luncheons of the Eagle Rock division of the Los Angeles Realty Board were resumed Friday following the summer vacation period. The meeting which was held at the Green Frog Cafe was addressed by G. R. Here Is Old Plan With New Improvements

Small House Plan Service

Plans for this home were furnished under the auspices of the Architectural Club of Los Angeles for the Small House Plan Service located in the building material exhibit on the sixth floor of the Metropolitan Building at Fifth and Broadway. Working drawings of this and other designs may be seen and studied there.

LANDSCAPING SUGGESTIONS

Do you want your home to be one of those charming places that is marked out from the other homes on the street as distinctly artistic and charming? The answer to this will be to make the surroundings about your house in keeping, then, with the type of architecture of the home, and develop the features that will add the most interest to the place.

If you have in mind some particular home that is distinctive and especially pleasing you will notice in almost every case, that the place has been given individual treatment to make the most of every good point in house and grounds.

Commonplace plantings are to be tabooed at the outset but this does not mean that a selection of plant oddities or a bizarre arrangement of the garden is necessary to create an air of individuality. It does not mean, though, that one should strive to get away from the tiresome use of such bedding plants as golden privet and coprosma for any and all locations about the house.

These plants are named in particular as they have been so overused in the last year or two. And there are such a wide variety of shrubs and vines available it seems unappreciative not to make more use of others.

Lantana, for example, makes an excellent showing banked against a house and comes in several colors so that it will harmonize in different settings. Veronica is still another good bedding plant, and pittosporum, and mock orange with their white blooms are attractive. Laurestinus and varieties of eugenia should not be overlooked, either, when filling in a nook or corner about the house.

Flowering shrubs give individuality, too, with a note of color, and among the best are Spanish bloom, snowball, bridal wreath, lilac, crape myrtle, heliotrope and hydrangea.

THEATER CONTRACT LET

A contract has been awarded to Arthur Bard, for the erection of a two-story theater, store and office building at 5919-33 Hollywood Boulevard, for Bard Brothers. Plans provide for a theater auditorium with a seating capacity of 1600 people. The structure is to cost about $200,000.

TIRE COMPANY BUILDS

The Cameron Construction Company will erect a one-story brick shop building at 732-34 East Washington street for the Pat and Ted Tire and Rubber Company. The structure is to cost $5000.

SUGGESTIONS FOR FURNISHING HOME

To give a note of cosy informality a fireside bench is to be chosen as a most practical and pleasing piece of furniture. It comes in mahogany or walnut finish with a covering of tapestry or cut velour and may be matched with the other pieces in the living-room or to give an added touch of color. Another charming fireside piece is the wing-back chair and it is always pleasing upholstered in a plain tone whether the fabric be of deep pile or smooth finish.

CURTAIN POLES

Wrought-iron curtain poles and fixtures are now to be had for rooms furnished in Old World style. They are particularly appropriate for use with heavy rich drapes of velvet and are made in elaborate as well as simple designs.

Silken cords and tassels still find favor for hanging mirrors and pictures, but should not be used on small pictures as they often appear too ornate and overdecorative. For the very large mirror or heavy painting they may be fitting accompaniment, however.

CHINA CUPBOARD

The old-fashioned china cupboard is being seen more and more in the up-to-date homes of colonial style. Luster ware that hints of gold and rose is seen on some of the shelves, while old-fashioned willow ware in delicate pale blue may have a place of honor. Pewter plates and pitchers of this shining metal help to carry out the beauty of this period, placed atop the cupboard or within.

For the children's room, specially designed and woven bedspreads bring "fairy tales" before the kiddies' eyes at bedtime. Imported nursery cretonne also comes in gay colors with ducks and dogs making clever patterns, and may be used for curtains and chair covers as well.

Designers Move Headquarters to Pasadena

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SOUTH PASADENA, Sept. 5.—The Alfred Murray Company, designers and builders, have moved their headquarters from 1160 Fair Oaks avenue to Pasadena, where they are located in the Security Building.

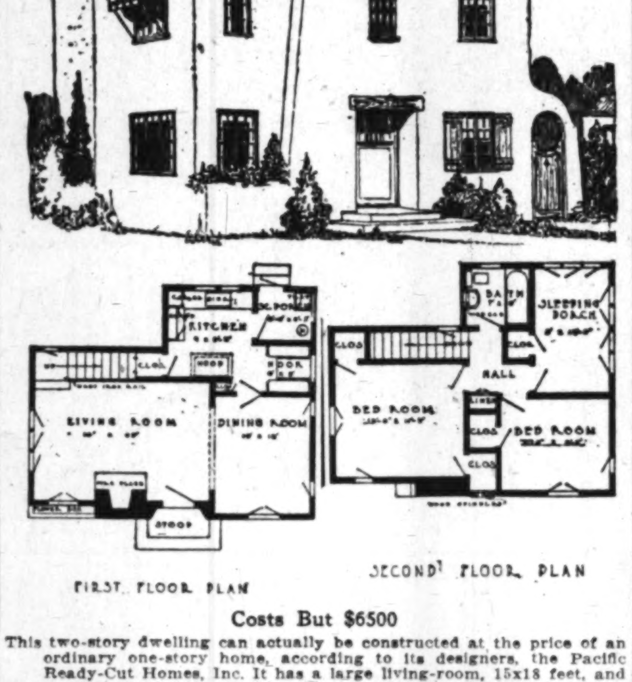
The change was occasioned by the growth of the Pasadena business of the firm and it is expected that the local work can be handled just as well in the new location.

Alfred Murray, head of the organization, will retain his residence at 1621 Spruce street, South Pasadena. Mr. Murray is also president of the local Realty Board.

ACTOR'S HOME PLANNED

Plans have been prepared by Webber, Staunton & Spaulding for the erection of a three-story and basement reinforced concrete residence on a fifteen-acre site in Benedict Canyon, Beverly Hills, for Harold Lloyd. The structure will contain forty rooms, and will also provide accommodations for servants' houses and inn, garage, stables, clubhouse, farm buildings and golf course and will cost nearly $400,000.

Here is Double Value Model



Costs But $6500

This two-story dwelling can actually be constructed at the price of an ordinary one-story home, according to its designers, the Pacific Ready-Cut Homes, Inc. It has a large living-room, 15x18 feet, and two bedrooms and a sleeping porch on the second floor. All plumbing and electrical fixtures are included in the price.

Residence and Offices Under Way in La Habra

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

LA HABRA, Sept. 5.—Henri Clayton has begun work on a handsome Spanish style house and office building and garages on Ocean avenue overlooking the La Habra Valley from the south.

Prof. Clayton, who is a traveling showman, will make this his permanent home. The cost is estimated at $25,000. Mrs. Clayton is the architect for the buildings.

This is the first real handsome structure on this street as the land is mostly in orchards and owned by nonresidents.

Clayton's choice of location was somewhat influenced by the fact that his wife's mother and relatives are pioneer residents of the valley.

Builders' Questions Answered

By Southern California Chapter of Associated General Contractors

Question: Will you please advise me how to cound-proof the partition between adouble bungalow? hTe building was built some time ago. The walls are papered.

Answer: There are several methods of sound-proofing partition walls which will give satisfactory results. You have not stated the construction of the walls, therefore we assume them to be plastered. One method is to apply standard insulating lumber, which comes in boards four feet wide and lengths from eight to twelve feet, over each side of the partition wall and finish to match the other walls of the room. This method, we have been informed, is very satisfactory. Another method, which is universally used, is to apply a one by two-inch nailing strip over the present wall, placed directly over the studs under the plaster, over which deadlining felt is placed. Place another nailing strip directly over the first, using nails that will not penetrate the studs and apply lath and plaster.

Q.: I have completed a home on which I borrowed $3600 to complete paying the contractor. I have agreed to repay the loan in monthly installments of $50 each, including interest at 8 per long will it take me to mortgage?

A.: It will take eight months and ten days to pay mortgage.

Q.: I own a lot forty-eigh wide on which I desire to small bungalow, with a tached. How near to the of the lot can I build the Lot is outside of the city

A.: If windows are req the proper ventilation of the adjacent to the lot line you build closer than three vided there is a side yard other side of the house through from street to rear yard, if there is no on the opposite side, you build closer than four feet.

Q.: Will you please what size panels are an average size room?

A.: Panel strips may be made in a great variety terns. In stock they are plain, one-quarter inch by one-eighth inch and should less than four-sixteenths by one-half inches; three two inches is better.

AN IDEAL HOME

—is a little bungalow, built to your own design, set on a garden acre, looking over fields and orchards toward the mountains. Just across the way are golf and polo fields.

AN IDEAL BUSINESS

—is one acre intensively farmed, with poultry, rabbits or pigeons. Scientific management enables one person to effectively care for an acre. It is employment but not toil.

AN ACRE FARM IN LOS ANGELES FOR THE MAN OF MODEST MEANS

RUNNYMEDE

To appreciate Runnymede you must know of the Runnymede Plan. Mr. Warren C. Daniel, a practical business man, knew of the wonderful productiveness of Southern California land. He knew that every man hungered for a business which he could run himself. He knew that every man wanted to own his own home. He knew that Southern California was an ideal place in which to live and work. He knew co-operative colonies which had been established by visionaries and failed, because they were not founded on good, solid business principles.

Building on this knowledge, Mr. Daniel organized the Runnymede Colony under the Runnymede Plan, providing for co-operation; also for perfect independence. Colonists may buy together in carload lots at a saving of ten to thirty per cent. They sell co-operatively through the Poultry Association, commanding highest market prices for their goods and obtaining weekly settlements. Individual colonists are at liberty to buy wherever they please. They are at liberty to sell in whatever market they choose.

In selecting the site of Runnymede Mr. Daniel inspected land in every part of Southern California. At Runnymede he had six hundred acres of level, fertile soil, ideally suited to year-'round intensive cultivation. Ventura Boulevard, one of the finest of our western highways, ran by the property. The community of Reseda, with town activities, schools, churches, stores, bus and car line, is close at hand. Every acre lies within the city limits of Los Angeles. Every acre has electricity and abundant water supply. Restrictions were placed upon the sales so that every person coming to Runnymede met the standard required of Runnymede Colonists, neighborly folks with a vision, working to attain prosperity.

Of the men and women who wanted to come to Runnymede, very few had any experience. To insure their success Mr. Daniel established the Runnymede Demonstration Acre, which has every modern and scientific labor-saving and profit-increasing device. He bought the best stock, and hired a cpaable man to develop there an institution which has become world famous.

He did not stop with establishing this example. He also hired an expert to visit each acre every week and give aid and advice. From the time he begins to design the houses which are to hold his stock until the acre is brought to production and the profit from the stock is enabling him to bank a neat sum each month, the Runnymede colonist has the most kindly, thoughtful and expert advice and assistance at his command.

The development of Runnymede has been phenomenal. Opened just three years ago, improvements are estimated at over a million dollars. The owner of one corner acre at Runnymede has refused $15,000 for it. Another acre, not on the corner, was sold by Mr. Daniel for $1900. The owner has had an offer of $7500, which he didn't accept.

INVESTIGATE RUNNYMEDE TODAY

POULTRY AND EGGS

Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of poultry produce are shipped from the 321 income-producing homes of Runnymede each year. The big, white Runnymede eggs command a premium of 10c to 15c a dozen in Eastern markets.

One man can care for 2500 hens on an acre exclusively devoted to poultry. The minimum profit is $2 a hen, although many colonists net over $3. Mr. Lindholm estimates his profit as $2.85 a hen. Mr. J. W. Bennett finds that 350 hens on an acre at Runnymede provide a living for his wife, his disabled veteran son and himself. Each month he has money to put in the bank.

RABBITS FOR FOOD AND FUR

The skin of Chinchilla, Silver Gray and Champagne rabbits are sold to fur dealers. Some exceptionally perfect skins sell for as much as $5.00. The Government experts say this fur has practically the same durability as fox or lynx. Every skin has a market value, as damaged skins may be sold for felt.

The flesh of the rabbit is valuable too—and rabbits bred for fur may be sold for food.

Runnymede Rabbitries are on a scientific basis and they find that absolute cleanliness pays. The rabbit is a dainty feeder and thrives on green food. Colonists who raise their feed on their acre, with a cost of little more than cultivation, are able to greatly increase the net profit from rabbits.

PIGEON PROFITS PAY

Because of the facsinating nature of pigeon work and the little labor involved, men who specialize in poultry or rabbits may have a squab loft as a hobby.

A pair of pigeons will produce teen young a year for an average of eight years. The parent birds hatch and feed their young. This does away with any problem of incubation, or special feed for babies. At four weeks the squabs often weigh one pound and they are ready for market.

Colonists may leave food in the squab loft and take a two or three day vacation, knowing that the will not suffer in their absence.

FREE MOTION PICTURE

Rabbits, pigeons and chickens are the star actors in the twenty-minute free educational film which is presented every week from 6:00 to 9:00 P. M. at 618 South Spring Street.

YOU WILL ENJOY PERSONALLY INSPECTING THE WORLD-FAMOUS DEMONSTRATION ACRE AT RUNNYMEDE. THIS IS A SIGHTSEEING AND EDUCATIONAL TRIP WHICH IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY TO THE PROPER APPRECIATION OF THE POSSIBILITIES OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNA.

The best way to drive out is to follow Ventura Boulevard through Cahuenga Pass. Signboard will point the way. The Hollywood Boulevard street car connects with the Ventura Boulevard bus at Highland Avenue. Or take the street car from the Pacific Electric station to Reseda, and walk south to Runnymede.

QUESTIONABLE APPRAISALS HIT

Durnerin Article in 'Realtor' Scores Condition

Public Loser When Inflated Values Are Given

Realty Journal Carries Many Interesting Articles

Evils of dishonest and inaccurate appraisals are forcibly dealt with L. J. Durnerin, former vice-president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, in an article in the current issue of the Los Angeles Realtor, official publication of the realty association.

Mr. Durnerin states that in many instances appraisals on property are given by irresponsible incompetent individuals at almost any figure desired by the owner of the property. It is not an uncommon occurrence, he declares, that bonds are sold on a highly inflated valuation with the result that the public is loaded up with undesirable paper upon which a heavy loss might be sustained should times become tight. The evil is nation-wide, Mr. Durnerin says, and action looking toward alleviation of the condition was taken at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Detroit in June.

WIDE DISPARITY

Instances where appraisals of Los Angeles property have varied as much as $2,000,000 are cited in the article which deplores the practice of property-owners seeking high appraisals and the alacrity with which some appraisers bow to their wishes.

There are many competent and honest appraisers in Los Angeles, Mr. Durnerin asserts, and he urges that they be given support.

Among the other articles in the magazine is one by J. D. Millar of the realty board's park and boulevard committee in which the writer urges that more land be set aside by subdividers for parks. It is altogether too common a practice among real estate men to subdivide the entire property and put it on the market without provision for public parks and playgrounds, Mr. Millar says.

COST INCREASING

He stresses the fact that these parks ultimately must be provided with recreation grounds and points out that the cost of the land is increasing every year.

Mr. Millar declares it is good business for the real estate man to set aside a section of his tract for parks, as the increased desirability of his lots for residence purposes will permit of higher prices.

Frank S. Hodge, an official of the Southern California Chapter, Associated General Contractors of America, is another contributor to the realty journal. He writes an article under the heading of "The Importance of High Type Construction in the Building of a Home."

Charles S. Lindblade, vice-president of the Harry H. Culver Company, writes on "Home Financing and the First Mortgage," outlining the methods employed by his company. E. L. Farmer, vice-president of the Title Insurance and Trust Company, also is a contributor. He has a splendid article on "Homesteads."

SEWER CONTRACT LET

A contract has been awarded by the Board of Public Works for construction of the north outfall sewer to Miagenovich & Gillespie. The work involves the expenditure of approximately $125,000.

QUICK GAIN PREDICTED IN POPULACE

Santa Fe Railway Official Tells of Amazing Progress of Los Angeles

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

DEL MAR, Sept. 5.—W. E. Hodges of Santa Barbara, executive vice-president of the Santa Fe Railway, when interviewed here today on his way to San Diego, made the prediction that Southern California will grow faster in the next three years than ever before in its record-breaking history!

Mr. Hodges fathered the idea of making Rancho Santa Fe, seven miles from here, one of America's outstanding rural estate communities and plans to visit the rancho for a tour of inspection before his return home.

"If any man in the United States doubts that property in Southern California is some day going to be the most coveted and valuable in all the country," said this veteran railroad executive, "I think the quickest way to convince him otherwise would be to take him on an extended trip starting at Santa Barbara, through the amazing progress of Los Angeles and then on down the Coast to San Diego.

"At every turn, almost, he would see factories going up, skyscrapers being builded, thousands of large and small homes of remarkable beauty already here and hundreds of others under construction, then would come the many beautiful residence subdivisions which are now beginning to take form and, still farther out, he would see miniature cities and country-estate projects which, to us here in the Southland, are every-day sights, but to the incoming easterner are almost as unbelievable as biblical miracles."

Manufacturers Secure Space in New Building

Securing the entire fourth and fifth floors of the Angelus Shoe Polish Company's new five-story, class A building, now being erected on the west side of Maple avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets, the George R. Healey Company, novelty manufacturers, recently took an extensive lease on the space and will take possession about January 1, according to announcement by representatives of Metcalf & Ryan, business property brokers.

The George R. Healey Company started business sixteen years ago in a small way manufacturing table napkins only, now known all over the world as one of the leading novelty manufacturers.

Negotiations covering this deal were consummated in the office of Metcalf & Ryan by L. Burkhart.

City Trustees Order Draft on Avenue Work

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

MONTEREY PARK, Sept. 5.—The city trustees have taken the first step toward the widening of Garvey avenue, the principal east and west highway through Monterey Park, to a 100-foot boulevard from Wilson to New avenues.

At their meeting this week a resolution was passed authorizing the engineering firm of Olmstead & Gillelan to draft proceedings for the condemnation of the property required on the south side of the street.

According to present plans the additional strip on the south side will be paved with rock and oil. The avenue was recently paved with cement concrete for its entire length in the city limits.

Contracts for Installing New Lights Are Let

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SAN GABRIEL, Sept. 5.—Contracts for 'nstalling a new ornamental lighting system on North Mission Road, Roses Road and other streets in the Bonita Vista tract were awarded by the city trustees this week. Walker & Martin were the lowest bidders. The improvement will consist of thirty-eight new lighting posts.

A contract has also been let by the city for a lighting system in Bradbury Park and in Rosemont Park, two new subdivisions. George W. Kemper was the successful bidder for the job which will include 117 marbelite posts.

Walgrove Flats Are Bought by Eastern Man

Through the prospects of the early completion of the $5,000,000 Public Library and the opening of West Fifth street, the Del Monte Land Company secured of G. H. Lockhard, through the agency of Frank D. Tatum & Co., the property known as the Walgrove Apartments, 427 South Figueroa.

Total consideration was $265,000.

The Del Monte Land Company is an eastern syndicate, composed of capitalists who recently came to the coast with the idea of acquiring income-producing properties.

Concern Takes Store Location for Ten Years

For a consideration exceeding $250,000 the Myer Siegel & Co. have taken a lease on store space in the Cline-Cline Company's building at the northeast corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Las Palmas avenue, it was reported by George C. Cline, president of the Cline-Cline Company.

The concern taking the lease, which is of ten-year duration, plans to open a branch store in the Hollywood district, Mr. Cline said.

URGES GREATER USE OF GARAGE

Architect Describes How to Make Attractive

Declares More Attention to Design Needed

May Serve Home Owner in Numerous Ways

BY HENRY J. MCGILL

Member American Institute of Architects and of the New York Chapter of the Institute

Other than a place to house the car, the garage generally receives less thought from the home owner than it deserves. The home owner can make his garage most attractive and surprisingly useful not only for the work to be done on the car but, for the entire family. On the average size lot the most attractive results are obtained by relating the garage close to the house, connecting it with walls or trellis or by incorporating it as an integral part of the house. The combined effect gives a sense of greater size simplicity and pretentiousness to the group not possible with small detached isolated units. This make the garage an economical, practical and a desirable addition to the home.

Decentralization does not help the garage any and the owner who seeks to hide the ugliness of his garage by attempting to smother it in a hidden corner of his plot, will soon find that his efforts were worthless.

USE OF ROOF

When built attached, one has the heating problem solved, for there are no pipes that must carry steam several hundred feet to the rear of the lot to heat the garage. In dead of winter one need but go from the house direct to the car in about ten steps. The saving in driveways is not to be overlooked and the conservation of land for other uses is another factor in its favor.

In constructing a garage that is to be a part of the house, the owner can build on the top of it a screened-in room that will serve admirably as a sleeping porch, summer playhouse for the children, a tea room, sewing room, or a score of other purposes. Access to this can be had direct from the second floor of the house or from the attic of a single floor bungalow.

Great high gaping doors, revealing an unfinished, sometimes cluttered interior are not entirely necessary. They could probably be in many instances much smaller and more pleasing. It should be remembered that when one opens his garage doors, he opens one-quarter of his building and it is in making these important openings attractive, that much depends.

ATTRACTIVE DOORS

A virtue can be made of any feature and there is no need to hide it, or allow the appearance of the garage to stagger the owner smack in the face each time he comes or goes. The use of the arched door or other interesting forms will smother a score of evils in this instance. The use of attractive hardware will help the appearance of the doors a lot. Another remedy is to treat the door as a recessed feature of the garage. Thus a screened arbor of Loggia or gates in front of the structure will frequently add to the charm.

The use of double swinging out doors will be found to give the best general satisfaction. These are easy to open and when closed fit more tightly and conserve the warmth. The owner can equip his doors with one of several automatic door-holding mechanisms now on the market, which make their use as convenient as any type of sliding door; which doors are neither so simple nor weathertight.

Resist the tendency to build too small. Each succeeding car bought is larger as a rule.

One will notice more double car garages being built than single car garages. This is desirable for several reasons. In the first place, it is a good investment. The owner, should he desire, can rent half of his garage most any time. On the other hand he will have plenty of room for a work bench, storage for garden tools, etc., should he not desire to keep two cars.

In building a garage the owner will profit from his investment by consulting an architect who will give valuable advice in composing a design that will best suit the house and add to its charm and in consequence, its value.

Burton Sells Three Homes for $60,500

Three fashionable homes sold during the week through Burton & Co., Wilshire realty dealers, brought more than $60,000, according to announcement yesterday at Burton's Western-avenue and Tenth-street office. The residence of Joseph Jacoby at 948 South Longwood avenue was purchased by Earle Foxe, motion-picture actor, for $30,000, Mr. Foxe already having taken possession. Mrs. Alta Brigham of Burton & Co., represented Mr. Jacoby in the transaction, and William Smith of Marion Company' represented Foxe.

Mrs. Brigham also sold the A. W. Sowder home at 839 South Vancouver street to Oliver G. Ward of Long Beach for $18,000. Mr. and Mrs. Ward are moving to Los Angeles to make their home.

The Marie L. Sucher residence at 1086 LeClaire stret was sold to Mrs. John Bullock for $12,500, Frank Baker representing Burton & Co. in the transaction.

Board at Long Beach Okehs Wall Base Use

Official approval has been given by the Board on New Devices and Materials to the use of a wall base at Long Beach as a substitute for sheathing on all frame buildings to be erected in the city of Long Beach.

The indorsement came as a result of tests made before H. A. Anderson, George Adams Roalfe and R. P. Mussetter.

The Board was interested to find that a manufactured material proved to be 241 per cent stronger than lumber sheathing, which was heretofore believed to be the strongest backing or support for frame buildings.

UNIFORMITY IN BUILDING IS PLANNED

Realty Men of San Fernando Valley to Discuss Better Construction Restrictions

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

LANKERSHIM, Sept. 5.—A conference of real estate men of San Fernando Valley, to which newspaper men will be invited, is being planned to take place here or in some other town of the valley. A move is afoot to launch a campaign in the valley for better building and subdivision restrictions in this section. The plan is to reach a satisfactory agreement on uniform development and restrictions.

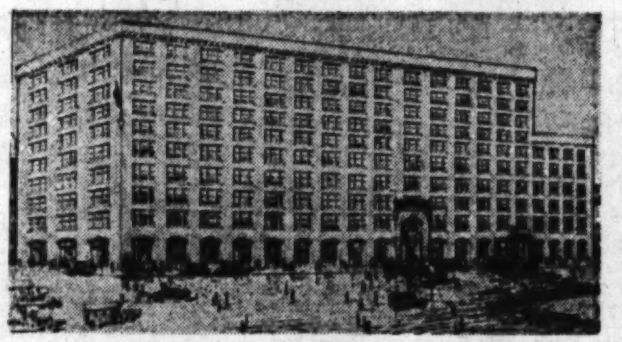
Fortunately the subdividers in a great majority only sanction building on a high scale, but in some localities it has been found that steps must be taken to remedy errors already made in sales to persons regarded as undesirable by neighboring or adjoining property owners.

It is asserted that a number of complaints have been made in the Lankershim and San Fernando districts, relative to the operations of subdividers who have neglected to establish building restrictions and to complete the improvements on new streets promised. The whole plan will be to reach some agreement whereby all building operations in the valley will be under a uniform and standard rule of direction.

DWELLING PLANNED

Plans have been completed by L. A. Bryant for the erection of a two-story, ten-room, stone tile dwelling at 623 Hillcrest avenue for C. L. and Kristine K. Rosenberg. It will cost about $25,000.

Proposed Office Building



At San Pedro

Construction is to start within a month on this ten-story office structure on First and Front streets, San Pedro. It was designed by J. Martyn Haenke and will be engineered by Oliver G. Brown. It is to be built for the Channel Construction Company at a cost of $750,000.

PORT GETS OFFICE BUILDING

Foretelling the emphatic development of Los Angeles Harbor activities and illustrating the marked increase in demand for office space comes the announcement of the Channel Construction Company of San Pedro that it will build, at a cost of $750,000, a ten-story office building on Front and First streets in the harbor city.

Although work is not scheduled to start before the end of the month, more than thirty companies have already bargained for space in the new structure.

The building has been designed by J. Martyn Haenke and will be engineered by Oliver G. Brown. First mortgage bonds for the financing of the project have been underwritten by the Alvin H. Frank Company of Los Angeles.

The new structure is of the Class A type, reinforced construction. The ground floor will be given over almost entirely to store space. The other nine floors will be devoted to offices, and there will be an area of 12,000 square feet of this class of space on each floor.

The site of the building is directly opposite the Municipal Ferry.

Corridors and lobbies of the new building will be finished in tile and marble and the structure will be equipped with the latest type high-speed elevators.

Because of the increased development of all lines of harbor activity and the phenomenal growth of the port's business, the demand for office space in San Pedro has become acute.

Engineers will actually start staking out the University grounds within a few days, it is expected. The locating of sites for various units is fast being completed. Landscape architects are busy finishing their preliminary work. Not a minute is being lost by those who have the success of this great project in hand! A location has already been selected on the property for headquarters of the field engineering corps.

Westwood Hills

The home-buying public is swarming to Westwood. During July house sales increased 100 per cent over last year. During August another 40 per cent increase was made. There are GOOD reasons why:

(1)—Ideal View Location!
(2)—Profit Opportunity!
(3)—Moderate Prices and Easy Terms!

So great has demand become that Los Angeles ACTUALLY FACES AN ACUTE SHORTAGE of Westwood View Homes and Homesites. Hundreds who have put off buying in Westwood during the past two years are commencing to wake up. Many who put off longer will be too late!

Westwood cannot be compared with any other Real Estate Opportunity. In the history of the West no district has ever had its possibilities. From the beginning it has been a gigantic success. And each success has been followed by another. You are fortunate that prices are still within your reach. Action today is the only thing that will save many when prices start jumping as experts predict.

Community Gains Population Since Last of June

Latest Architectural Styles Increase Popularity

Having adopted the slogan, "A Bigger and Better Santa Barbara," property owners and business men of the Channel City have launched a stupendous campaign to recapitalize what at first appeared to be a staggering loss, the damage done by the recent earthquake.

Santa Barbara homes suffered least of all, not more than fifty being completely destroyed. More than fifty new ones have been completed since that time—still residence property is in demand.

It means only one thing, the town, instead of losing population, has gained—gained as much as 10 per cent since the eventful June 29, last.

A few days before the earthquake a new building code went into effect, and a few days after the new zoning ordinance became the law, the latter planned and adopted before the earthquake, but not in effect because of the thirty days' publication required.

Most of the destroyed buildings were not in harmony with the prevailing type of architecture and strangest of all, many property owners were given opportunity to fall in line with Santa Barbara architecture, owing to the fact that only the fronts of their buildings were destroyed.

PROGRESS RAPID

Where two months ago laid only desolation and waste, there now is a long string of scaffolds extending from the ocean to the Arlington Hotel.

With two exceptions, every property owner on Estado (formerly State street) has accepted the new style of architecture except where immediate rebuilding is not required.

Millions of dollars are being spent on highways, plans are being completed for a breakwater, county and city parks are being acquired, while country clubs are constantly improving their sport facilities.

La Cumbre Golf and Country Club has just completed a new course at Hope ranch, with greens around the lake and several water hazards. Miles upon miles of paved boulevards recently were completed, including the drive around the city, which was planned many years ago. An innovation in road building was adopted on King Albert Boulevard, a portion of this drive, where a double system was constructed below homes on the Riviera.

STATE IMPROVES ROAD

The State Highway Commission is widening the road from Santa Barbara to the Ventura county line in preparation for the completion of the Malibu ocean front boulevard in Los Angeles county.

In preparing for the growth of the city, park and beach land is being purchased as fast as public finance will allow.

The city recently purchased Arroyo Burro beach and it is now open to the public. It is located at the foot of scenic Las Positas Canyon, through which a paved road has been opened.

Outside the city limits the county is buying up all beach frontage available, the purchase of ten acres near the foot of Gaviota Pass being the most recent.

Negotiations are underway with the Federal government for the purchase of a popular beach at Goleta.

Out of a $500,000 bond issue voted six months ago the city is taking over all avilable land on East Cabrillo Boulevard and is preparing to condemn what cannot be secured by purchase.

ATHLETIC FIELD DONATED

This will leave a two-mile strip of parked land adjoining the beach when the project is completed. Near the east end will be the municipal athletic field and public bath-house to be built at a cost of $150,000 and donated to the city by David Gray, wealthy Santa Barbara resident.

A small section of the southeast side of town has been set aside for industrial purposes. This, however, will be hidden from view on the south by the city park along the ocean front, while on the north the districts gradually change from industrial to business, semibusiness, apartment-house and hotel, and finally, private dwellings.

Fine districts are being extended on each side of Estado, while the main street will present an array of buildings in Spanish, mission and pueblo architecture.

Many of the large property owners are arcading their buildings looking forward to the ultimate widening of the street.

In one place a full block will be arcaded under present plans.

Plans have just been announced for the reconstruction of the San Marcos, the largest business building in the city. A large portion of the building was destroyed by the earthquake. Workmen are engaged in removing the two top stories and when completed a two-story building in Latin architecture will cover a quarter block with a patio in the center.

One of the largest of the new buildings is to be a structure solely for physicians and surgeons with the exception of the ground floor. Mrs. Pollock Graham is the owner, and George Washington Smith of Santa Barbara, the architect.

William Mooser of San Francisco is completing plans for the new $1,000,000 Courthouse.

Other buildings carrying out the Santa Barbara architectural design are an office and store structure at Estado and Haley streets, to be built by Mrs. West Bates. W. A. Edwards and J. J. Plunkett of Santa Barbara are architects for this building as well as for Johnson's cafeteria, both of which are designed for arcading should the street-widening plan be adopted.

Another typical building designed by Mr. Edwards is for A. C. Postel on Victoria, just off Estado.

Neal Callahan of Los Angeles is preparing plans for replacing the Barbara and Neal hotels in Spanish design, while more than a hundred other buildings are being rushed to completion, carrying out the adopted architectural scheme.

LEASE LAND FOR CITRUS PRODUCTION

Property Bought for Fifty Cents Per Acre Now Valued at $5000 Figure

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

LA HABRA, Sept. 5.—The Bastanchury Corporation announces securing a ten-year lease on 3000 acres of land with privilege to buy, located in the eastern end of North La Habra Heights and west of Brea. The land is now owned by the Union Oil Company. Citrus and semitropic fruit is to be planted and development has been started on part of the acreage.

The original owner, a thrifty Basque, came to Fullerton years ago and bought the land for 50 cents per acre. Under cultivation with citrus bearing trees it is now valued at from $3000 to $5000 per acre.

The Bastanchury Ranch, a few years ago a sheep and cattle range, is one of the largest and finest citrus developments in Southern California, and it is pointed out that the added acreage when producing will make it the largest citrus acreage in the world under one management. The company owns it sown packing-houses and distributing station and controls the output under the Bastanchury name.

This is a big step in the future development of both La Habra and Brea, a sthe acreage lies between both cities.

WIDER MART FOR REALTY IN ALHAMBR

Dealers Declare Prospects for Brisk Season Are Very Bright

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 5.—Marked increase in real estate activity has been evident during the past week and local realty men express themselves as optimistic over the prospects for a brisk season in the local field.

One of the biggest realty transactions of the year is announced by the Baldwin Realty Company, agents in the sale of the Scott-Lothrop store and office building on West Main, between First and Second streets. This two-story structure, erected two years ago, was sold by the owners, Homer B. Scott and C. A. Lothrop, to Dr. S. Levin and George Gillman, both of Los Angeles. The consideration was announced as $100,000. The four stores and eleven office rooms are under lease.

A choice business lot on South Chapel street, just south of Main, has been sold through the office of the Crown-Lorraine Company to a local investor for $8000. The owner was G. Vail.

Another deal, in which an exchange of property was involved, is reported by Ed Spence of the D. L. Warden real estate firm. In this transaction Warren P. Hill has acquired the property of Dr. W. H. Conner, 1629 South Fifth street, a beautiful site with a frontage of 150 feet and an eight-room house, in exchange for this property, valued at $11,500, Mr. Hill transferred a lot at Third and Grand valued at $3500.

"MY ONE ACRE FARM"
A NEW BOOK
By Charles Weeks

Revealing the Marvelous Possibilities on One Acre by THE CHARLES WEEKS SYSTEM OF INTENSIVE EGG FARMING

Showing how to keep 2500 hens on ONE ACRE, making them net not less than $2.00 each per year and still have room for all kinds of fruit trees trained intensively on trellises, family vegetable garden, berries and grapes.

The largest single fact in the welfare of the nation's history today is the fact that a man and his family can earn a comfortable living from so little as ONE ACRE of land intelligently cultivated, out of doors in the sunshine and fresh air, close to nature. This BOOK will be a revelation to you and will be mailed to you upon receipt of ONE DOLLAR. If it is not satisfactory, money will be refunded. I have been living this IDEAL LIFE for TWENTY-ONE YEARS and have a message for you.

BUILDING OF HOMES SETS NEW RECORD

Santa Barbara Building Permits Reveal Activity in All Parts of City

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 5.—Santa Barbara is experiencing an era of home-building never before equaled in the history of the city, according to Mayor C. M. Andera, and building-material dealers, sensing the rising tide of construction have been ordering on a scale without parallel in the city's history. In every line of activity pertaining to the building industry there is evidence that the city's growth from now on is going to exceed all local records.

The demand for a modest homesite has never been greater, and the material men, recognizing that the small home is the backbone of a community's prosperity, are preparing for such a growth as was not thought possible a few weeks ago.

The stucco type of home is leading the entire field by a wide margin, according to a check of home-building permits, the big increase in this type of construction being reflected in the heavy demand for gypsum-centered plaster lath, which is utilized as a backing for stucco exteriors, due to its fire-resisting, waterproofing and insulating qualities. Three carloads of gypsum-centered plaster lath, manufactured in Los Angeles, where 75 per cent of the product produced in the West is manufactured, were received here by local material concerns last week.

The last month has also brought about a steady increase in the building of more expensive residences, building-permit records show.

NAVY HEAD DISCUSSES PORT WORK

Urges Orange County Show Commercial Possibilities at Newport Beach

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—When the commercial possibilities of Orange county harbor at Newport Beach have been demonstrated, financial assistance in developing the port may be expected from the Federal government.

This statement was made this week by Rear-Admiral Ashley H. Robertson, United States Navy, who was conducted over the harbor project previous to his attendance at the meeting of the Adventurers' Club at Newport Beach.

"I have been much interested in this harbor. Undoubtedly this bay has great possibilities," the admiral commented.

Development along pleasure lines will not bring about assistance from the government, the admiral declared.

"Both pleasure and commercial operations possibly may be developed at the same time, but the commercial opportunities must be demonstrated first."

Pixley to Have New Cotton Gin Before Harvest

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PIXLEY, Sept. 5.—Pixley is to have a new cotton gin in time for the coming harvest. Final arrangements for erection of the new gin are said to have been completed with officials of the Globe Oil Mills in Los Angeles, which firm has given assurance that it will have the plant ready for operation in time to handle this year's crop in the Pixley district.

The site secured is just north of the Pixley stockyards and construction work is expected to be started at once.

The Pixley gin is the fourth to be erected in Tulare county this year, others having been built at Tulare, Tipton and Porterville. In addition, both Corcoran and Delano have new gins.

Brokers Have Good Sales in Country Lands

The market for country property or land in the outlying districts that can be developed for home sites of the country-estate type is at present enjoying a healthy tone, according to indications as presented by the report of the Campbell-Joralmon Company.

They report recent sales as follows:

S. W. McComb was the purchaser of 1145 acres in Telegraph Canyon, north of Fullerton, for a consideration of $73,000, expecting to develop the lands to country home sites.

Howard & Smith Inc., bought 135 acres at $4400.

Eighty-five acres was sold to Morris Chernus at $10,600.

Bannon & Webber bought 170 acres for $11,000.

More than 360 acres in Santa Barbara county was sold to C. W. Wilson at $37,500.

Demonstrate New Home to Large Number

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—That Santa Ana and Orange county people are interested in all that pertains to home construction and furnishings is demonstrated by the large number of visitors at the new $15,000 home of W. H. Dixon, local contractors and builder, at Nineteenth and Ross streets.

Mr. Dixon estimates that more than 1000 persons have visited the home since last Saturday morning and that he considers the demonstration has been a success, much interest being manifested not only in the quality of construction, but in the furnishings and draperies as well.

The Dixon family will occupy the residence as a permanent home.

Seattle to be Mecca for City Building Chiefs

The Pacific Coast Building Officials' Conference, of which J. J. Backus, Los Angeles superintendent of building, is president, will hold its fourth annual meeting in Seattle beginning the 28th inst. The conference is sponsoring a set of uniform building regulations for tentative draft of the code, prepared by Mark C. Cohn, San Francisco, consultant of the conference, is under consideration by thirty-one Pacific Coast cities.

Other officers of the organization are the chief building inspectors of the following cities: H. E. Plummer, Portland, vice-president; A. C. Horner, Stockton, secretary. The officers with the following men make up the executive committee: C. E. Jenkins, Alhambra; M. C. Woodruff, San Jose; R. L. Proctor, Seattle; O. G. Knecht, San Diego.

Chimney Work Important to Home Builders

"Nothing is of greater importance to the man or woman who is planning to build a home, than the often-overlooked feature of chimney construction," says Robert Linton, general manager of Pacific Clay Products of Los Angeles.

"Make sure the plans call for a chimney built straight up from the ground, on a substantial foundation, with a good-sized opening for proper draft and a clean-out door at a point near the base of the chimney.

"Insist that the plans and specifications require the use of fire clay flue lining for the chimney. Thus a smooth, inside surface is secured, increasing the draft, extending the life of the chimney and reducing fire hazard to the absolute minimum.

"The common sense man will not only insist upon flue lining in his own building plans, but will promote his own safety by urging his neighbor to adopt this protection against fire."

SERVICE BY FREIGHT IS COMMENDED

Samuel Sproat Says Speedy Schedules Aid California; Passenger Delay is Scored

Freight service between Los Angeles and Chicago and other Midwest points comes about as close to being perfect as it possibly can, and it is all out of proportion to passenger train schedules, according to Samuel Sproat, president of the Ward Heater Company, who recently returned from an eastern trip.

"I found upon investigation that our furnaces reached Chicago twelve days after they left Los Angeles, and that the average time for consignments was twelve to fifteen days," Mr. Sproat declared. "It takes only eight days to get a shipment of our product to Kansas City, three days to San Francisco and five to six days to Portland, Or. This speedy service is a great asset to California manufacturers, and it is unfortunate that railroads are purposely lagging behind on the passenger service.

"It does not cost any more to pull a train 100 miles, no matter how much time is taken. Trainmen are paid by the mile. Is it any wonder that rail officials provide slow schedules between California and Chicago in order to pick up the extra revenue in dining-car and pullman service? These same rail officials would stretch the New York-Chicago schedule another night if it could possibly be done. Inasmuch as there is nothing to be gained by slow schedules on that trip, the service is speeded.

"It is time that some constructive action was taken in California to reduce the running time to the Midwest."

New Hostelry in Hollywood Soon to Open

The opening of the Hollywood Plaza Hotel, Vine street and Selma avenue, Hollywood, on the 20th inst., will give Southern California one of the most up-to-date hotels in the United States. The site of the hotel was formerly the residence of Jacob Stearn, an old homesteader, who had lived there for more than twenty years.

The property consists of 415 feet on Vine street and 393 feet on Selma avenue, one-fourth block from Hollywood Boulevard. The Vine Street Hotel and Investment Company has leased the property from Mr. Stearn for ninety-nine years. This company is composed of Harold M. Stearn, president; Charles Danzinger, vice-president, and Elza S. Jacoby, secretary. The directors are Harold L. Stearn, Elza S. Jacoby, Charles Danzinger and Helen L. Lauder.

Exeter School Contract Let; Six Place Bids

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

EXETER, Sept. 5.—Six bids were submitted for construction of a kindergarten school on the west side of this city. The building will be located about 75 feet from the main school building, fronting south on Chestnut street.

J. S. Hodge, with a bid of $1550, was given the contract. The structure will be of frame, one room with dimensions 26x34. It will accommodate forty children.

Other bidders were George S. Yant, C. E. Pennebaker, O. M. Jackson, Mangels & Jackson.

NORTHERN BOARD PLANS SHOW, DANCE

Plans for the second annual road show and dance of the San Francisco Real Estate Board have been announced. The date is October 1, the place, Scottish Rite Auditorium and the general chairman, Baldwin McGaw.

The glee club and orchestra of the board will be financed by this show on their excursion to the State convention of the California Real Estate Association in Fresno, October 7 to 10.

Illustration shows the Compton High School, which is being moved by the Kress House Moving Company, en route to its new location. The structure weighs several tons and is being moved a distance of nearly a block.

Compton's High School is Being Moved by Firm

Another feat in the successful removal of large buildings from one location to another is being carried out at Compton where the Kress House Moving Company is transporting the Compton High School, a concrete structure weighing several hundred tons, a distance of several hundred feet.

Removal of the building from its present foundation is being effected by means of specially constructed steel tracks, a new method of moving large buildings designed by George Kress, president of the house moving firm. The building is several hundred feet in length and about seventy-five feet deep and is being moved to its new location in one section without the removal of furnishings.

IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED

One of the largest street improvement programs to be undertaken in Los Angeles, under one contract, is about to be started at Girard. This improvement contract calls for the grading of streets, construction of sidewalks, construction of storm drains, culverts and the construction and erection of ornamental lights. The total cost of this work is estimated at $500,000, according to Victor Girard, builder of the community bearing his name.

All of the work to be accomplished under the provisions of this contract are the street improvements in the east valley of the community, known as the Canoga Valley. With the completion of this work, practically the entire street improvements in the residential sections of Girard will have been completed.

This contract is in addition to a large contract that has just been completed, in the west valley by W. E. Peck, Los Angeles contractor, at a cost of $269,000 for similar improvements.

Under this item of improvement there will be sixty-five streets that will be brought to permanent grade and be improved. There will be removed 317,691 cubic yards of dirt in the preparing of these streets and drives for their permanent surface.

Curbing and sidewalks of cement, in conformance with the provisions of the city of Los Angeles regulations, will be built. There will be constructed 162,125 lineal feet of curbing and 555,386 lineal feet of cement sidewalks.

Located in the valley in which this work is to be done are the golf course, clubhouse, swimming pool, tennis courts and other recreational facilities.

Santa Barbara Hotel Addition Plans Finished

C. K. Denman, architect, has completed plans and specifications, and a building permit has been issued, for an 80 x 122 foot three-story addition to the Hotel Virginia in Santa Barbara for Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Maas.

The hotel building will be constructed of reinforced concrete and brick. All brick work is to be tied together by reinforced concrete bond stones and heavy reinforced concrete ties at each floor and ceiling lines; also heavy diagonal reinforcing is designed to take care of side stresses caused by earthquake.

A fire-proof garage building 56 x 85 feet will be built on the rear of the lot for the hotel guests.

Stability

THE Stability of Palos Verdes—Southern California's premier Residential Community—is based on certain irrefutable facts—not on private opinion.

(1) Palos Verdes, with all the land it embraces, together with all its basic improvements already in or yet to come, was financed, bought and paid for before ever an acre was offered for sale.

(2) Every single foot of the subdivided area, the Golf Links, Club House, Hotel, roadways, water system, service lines, curbs, culverts and all improvement work completed or under construction has been paid for in cash and there is no indebtedness of any kind—Street Assessment districts or otherwise.

(3) Every Homesite offered for sale is absolutely free and clear of all encumbrances whatsoever and title to all properties is held by the Bank of America, as Trustee. Titles are guaranteed by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of Los Angeles.

(4) To date a sum in excess of Two and Three-quarter Million Dollars has been spent in improvments on the property. These improvements are being carried steadily forward on a well organized program of development and are being paid for in cash as the development progresses.

(5) The United States Government within the last month has granted the establishment of a postoffice to be known as "Palos Verdes Estates"—a further tribute to the permanence and stability of Palos Verdes.

Next Sunday, September 13th, marks yet another step in the forward march of progress. The Administration Building—the first arcaded building in the beautiful Malaga Cove Plaza—will hold its inaugural opening ceremony. You and your friends are cordially invited. Be sure and keep next Sunday free.

No other community is so delightfully situated, nor so well financed, nor so permanent as Palos Verdes.

Don't you think you owe it to yourself and to your family to come down and see what is being done in this distinctive Seaside City of the Los Angeles area?

Your Homesite may cost as low as $2000.

LEASE BUILDING BEING ERECTED

Rental of Structure Exceeds $2,000,000

Deal Covers Occupancy Over Twenty-Year Period

Plans Call for Finest Loft Unit in State

Involving a rental covering a period of twenty years, which aggregates more than $2,000,000, a lease has been executed between Edward T. Off, local capitalist, and the Klein-Norton Corporation, wholesale dry goods merchants, on the height-limit Harris Newmark Building, under construction at the northwest corner of Los Angeles and Ninth streets.

The building itself, which will contain seven acres of floor space, will be the finest business and loft structure in the West. The Harris Newmark estate, owners of the property, are sparing no expense in its construction. The building, strategically located at the very hub of the wholesale, retail and financial districts of the city, will be twelve stories and basement, Class A, sprinkled throughout, the exterior being red tapestry brick trimmed with artstone.

The building, having 140 feet on Ninth street, by 160 feet on Los Angeles street, and having three frontages, is especially well lighted and well-adapted to the wholesale trade and corporation business. David Norton, who has just returned from his buying trip in the East, is very enthusiastic regarding the future outlook on the general trade and is warm in his praise of the new building, a portion of which will be the future home of the Klein-Norton Company.

Quoting Mr. Norton: "There is a marked demand for high-class wholesale and corporation buildings here in Los Angeles. Trade is cognizant of the advantages of a spacious modern building of high character that will house a major percentage of representative companies centrally in the heart of the wholesale district yet immediately adjacent to the rental and financial districts of the city, and more and more are the eastern merchants acknowledging the purchasing power of Los Angeles by establishing their representatives and agencies here.

"During my visit in the East I received numerous inquiries regarding our trade conditions here, as well as the advisability of establishing the respective Pacific Coast headquarters in Los Angeles. As a whole, the market conditions throughout presage a very profitable season."

Herbert Baruch, Inc., general contractors of the building, report progress ahead of schedule.

Richard T. St. John Company, realty firm which represented Mr. Off in all negotiations, has been appointed agent for the new building. Klein Norton Company was represented by Ellis R. Lewis, real estate broker.

In a list of the causes of the 92,000 forest fires which swept across 29,000,000 acres of public and private lands last year, incendiarism is first and lightning last in the arrangement.

Hollywoodland's Latest

Residence of J. V. Botte

This delightful dwelling is the latest Hollywoodland addition to be completed. It is situated among the oaks and sycamores of beautiful Beechwood Drive.

BEGIN WORK ON WAREHOUS

Work has been started on the erection of a new warehouse, office and salesroom structure at 2334 East Eighth street for L. M. Meade, local manager for the Eby Machinery Company of San Francisco, according to announcement by the Austin Company of California.

The building will occupy the entire lot, 40 by 158 feet; is to be brick with front of tan face brick and plate glass, and equipped with two-ton monorail crane run for the handling of heavy machinery. It is to be completed by October 1 and then occupied by the Eby Company.

L. M. Meade, the owner, is also manager for the Eby Machinery Company, reputed to be the largest manufacturers on the Pacific Coast of all forms of machinery for planing mill equipment, furniture manufacturing and other woodworking enterprises. As indicating the growth of furniture manufacturing and other woodworking industries in Los Angeles, it is mentioned that sales here have doubled each year since the establishment of the local branch eight years ago, making the new and larger quarters necessary.

It is noted in this connection, that a new machinery center is forming in the district extending from Seventh to Ninth streets, between Mateo and Santa Fe avenues, in the general neighborhood of the huge Ford Motor plant; a number of machinery concerns having moved there in recent months from the neighborhood of San Pedro and Third streets, which has been "machinery row" for the past decade.

The new plant represents an investment of about $25,000.

Brick Plants Speeded Up to Full Capacity

The only brick plants in the country idle at the present time are those shut down for repairs, and reports of the month just passed show that orders on books are more than 200 per cent of the amount of brick moved during the preceding month, according to data provided the research department of the Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company and released yesterday.

The report also shows that bookings of architectural terra cotta as reported by twenty-six identical manufacturers who produced more than 95 per cent of that product made in 1923, are gaining each month, but the total for 1925 thus far is slightly less than that for the same period last year. Prospects for shattering the mark made last year before the year is ended, however, are bright.

The total in tons of architectural terra cotta produced in the western district during the first seven months of 1925 was 15,046, this having a value of $1,904,631.

Broker Reports Good Turnover in Trade Sites

Some 61,000 square feet of industrial property has been transferred to various purchasers during the past week, according to reports from the offices of Hugh Blue, industrial real-estate broker, located in the Metropolitan Theater Building.

The sales were divided as follows:

At the northeast corner of Sixtieth and Gramercy streets 34,000 square feet of industrial property was sold for E. G. Hussey, the owner of the property. The consideration was said to be $12,500. Although the identity of the purchasers is withheld, Blue said that they contemplated improving the property with a fireproof warehouse.

The Beck Art Stone Company, through Blue, purchased 12,000 square feet of industrial property adjoining their present site in the Alameda-Slauson industrial tract. They contemplate enlarging their operations. The property brought $5800.

In the Western-avenue industrial center a site of 15,000 square feet was sold to the Len H. Darling Company, who will manufacture battery plates. The consideration was $6000.

Blue is continuing the business formerly carried on by the firm of Blue & Mason.

Contract Let on High School Concrete Work

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TULARE, Sept. 5.—Frank Twaddle of this city was awarded contract for construction of curbing, sidewalks and approaches on the high-school property fronting on Kern street, and also for sidewalks leading from the main building to the shops and gymnasium.

This contract was awarded by the Board of Trustees. The work is to be completed on September 19, next, two days prior to opening of school, and will cost about $2400.

The board voted to call for bids on the Hoyt house, which is located on the property west of the main building and was purchased recently by the school.

Mother of Film Star Buys in Canon Drive

Although Gloria Swanson is looking to the East for future pleasure and profit, having decided to sell her beautiful Beverly Hills residence, her mother, Mrs. Adeline L. Burns, has purchased the home of Mrs. H. M. Edwards, 307 Canon Drive, in that same city.

She selected the property at a financial consideration of about $26,000, strictly for investment, stating that she expected a rapid increase to develop. Mrs. Burns is now in the East with her daughter, expecting to remain indefinitely.

Many Builders and Families Attend Picnic

SANTA ANA, Sept. 5.—More than 500 builders and their families, attended the picnic of the Orange County Builders' Exchange, which was held today at Balboa Palisades. Louis Allen, manager of the exchange, was in charge of the arrangements.

Lynn S. Atkinson, Jr., president of the Los Angeles Builders' Exchange, and Paul F. Langworthy, secretary-manager, were among the officers of the Los Angeles organization who attended. The Orange county exchange is affiliated with the Los Angeles exchange.

BEGIN WORK ON SITE FOR NEW FLATS

Contract Awarded for Removal of Residence from Property

Actual construction work upon the new Brisbane Apartments, to cost in excess of $1,000,000, at the corner of Fifth street and Normandie avenue, will be started within a very short time, according to Dan O'Connor of the local building firm of Tifal & O'Connor which will build, own and operate the structure.

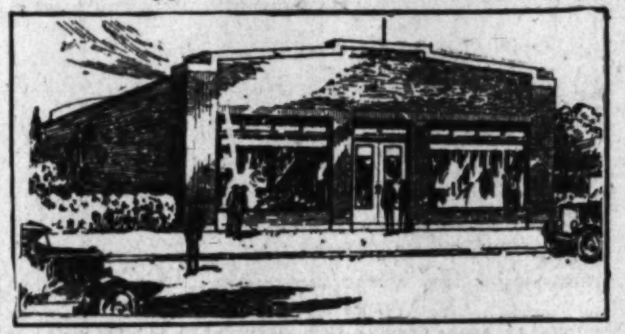
Contract for the removal of the large two-story frame and brick dwelling now upon the building site has been awarded to the Kress House Moving Company, local house-moving firm, and the latter organization has already commenced the work of transporting the building to another site.

The task of removing the house will be undertaken, according to George Kress, president of the house-moving firm which also purchased the dwelling, in a manner similar to a job recently completed at Figueroa and Twenty-first street where the house, constructed entirely of brick, was actually sawed in half and each section moved separately on specially-constructed tracks to a site several miles distant.

The Brisbane Apartments will be of height-limit proportions and embody many novel features entirely new in apartment-hotel construction in Southern California. One of these features will be a subterranean basement-garage where occupants of the apartment will be able to house their automobiles.

Interior decorations in the building will be of very ornate character, while the apartments will be much more spacious than usually found in hotel quarters.

Offices and Salesrooms



For L. M. Meade of Eby Machinery Company

Construction has already been started on this structure, which is to be completed and occupied by the Eby Machinery Company of San Francisco after October 1, 1925. It is to cost $25,000.

INVESTMENT MEN SEE ACTIVE MART

Forecasting an active autumn and winter market for well-built single houses, announcement was made yesterday at the offices of the Los Angeles Investment Company that August was not only the best month of the year, so far, in point of sales, but also recorded a greater volume of business than was reported for the same month in 1922, 1923 or 1924, the former two being considered the "peak years" in Southern California.

HOME TRACT GAINS FAV

One of the recent homes to be completed in Hollywoodland is that of J. V. Botto, broker of Los Angeles, a delightful home situated amid the oaks and sycamores of Beachwood Drive.

The Botto dwelling is but one of the many such beautiful homes that are being regularly built in this exclusive tract as a result of the ever-increasing interest in Hollywoodland. Commenting on this marked interest, Martin T. Hildinger of the tract said:

HOME TRACT

"As predicted early in August, this autumn promises to be the greatest home-building period that Los Angeles has experienced in a long time. In predicting the development of fine homes in the hills, it was taken into consideration that a process of education would be necessary before large numbers of persons would become conscious of the advantages of hillside home building.

"In the first place, the climate of the hills of Hollywoodland is vastly superior to other sections. I say this without reservation, because over a period of two years of personal observation I have found that the perpetual sea breezes which refresh the hills of Hollywoodland throughout the summer, cause this section to be much cooler than other parts of the city of Los Angeles, and in the wintertime the great shouldering bulk of the hill background back of Hollywoodland protects us from the north winds, and splashed hills through ter radiate warmth and not to be found on

"With recreation, ern improvements and other advantages, construction in Holly inevitable; and now of new homes are ing and a tremendous under way, preparing new Spanish-type homes hills, it is with no little that we find our predi borne out."

Pacific Clay Products FLUE LINING Guards You Against Fire

Flames eating through defective chimneys have caused 60% of all house fires, according to the National Board of Fire Underwriters. Yet these fires could be prevented if every chimney were lined with Pacific Clay Products Flue Lining.

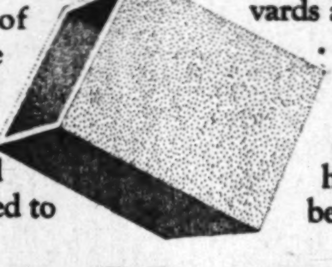
For more than 30 years a steady stream of clay products has issued from this company's big, busy plants to play their part in the upbuilding of Southern California ....

.... thousands of tons of face brick and fire brick for skyscrapers, factories and homes

.... hundreds of miles of vitrified salt-glazed clay pipe for the city's mammoth sewer systems

.... carload upon carload of clay flue lining, guaranteed to withstand 2300 degree of heat, for use in the chimneys of thousands of homes

.... immense quantities of other clay products from three plants, fired and fused into special form to meet the needs of metropolitan growth.



Thus everywhere about the city you live in ... along business streets, boulevards and residence thoroughfares ... above the city's roofs and beneath the ground ... Pacific Clay Products are contributing to the safety, health, comfort and well-being of the Southland.

CANNERY WILL ENLARGE PLANT

Porterville Unit to Double Its Capacity

Equipment to Pack Fruits and Vegetables

Average Weekly Pay Roll to be Increased

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 5.—The Porterville unit of the Neuhoff Cannery Company will be enlarged to double its present capacity following completion of the fall pick, according to Fred B. Neuhoff, president, on a recent visit from Los Angeles. It is the ultimate aim of the company to convert the Porterville plant into its largest establishment, one which will compare favorably with the foremost canneries of the State.

Additions include two more lines with machinery and equipment, making for facility in handling of both fruit and vegetable packs, increasing the maximum daily output to 5000 cases and providing greater reserve capacity.

This will give the enlarged plant six lines, instead of four, and the season's pack will be 300,000 cases of apricots or peaches. This season the weekly pay roll has averaged $4000 and next year this will also be materially increased.

Vegetables for canning will be signed this winter and their packing will start early in the spring, before the advent of fruit, thus lengthening the yearly run by several weeks.

This concern also operates a cannery at Van Nuys, a three-line establishment equipped for packing of fruit and vegetables. The Porterville plant, according to Mr. Neuhoff, is to become the center of his cannery activities, because of its location in the center of a great fruit district.

Mr. Neuhoff and C. M. Gammon, general manager, continue enthusiastic over quality of the local fruit and possibilities of the district as a fruit section.

RECORD FOR BUILDING IS UNDER WAY

Construction at San Diego Promises to Reach Total of $18,000,000

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 5. — With only four months to go and a number of huge building projects in sight, San Diego's 1925 construction record promises to be the greatest in its history and will probably exceed the $18,000,000 mark, according to the city building inspector.

The total this year to date is $10,822,803, almost $1,000,000 greater than last year at this time. For the eight months just ended a total of 5325 permits was issued, 520 more than for the same period last year. At this time last year the total was $10,114,398 for 4805 permits.

The August building record fell short of the same period last year in valuation for the reason that several large permits were issued a year ago when the total was $1,787,956 for 698 permits, while this year the total was $1,254,094 for 704 permits.

Home construction here is continuing at a fast pace. Of the money spent in August on new buildings, $1,002,975 was for new residences alone, the number being 308.

The building inspector figures that the remaining four months of the year should average $1,500,000 a month in permits, which figures are the normal without considering the four large structures to be erected soon at a cost of more than $1,000,000 each. The total for 1924 was $15,115,000 and permits this year presage a total of more than $18,000,000.

Of ramp type construction, with each ramp an easy grade, it is said to be the most modern garage building west of Chicago. This type of construction makes for the safest and most convenient handling of a large number of cars per day, it is stated by Roy R. Meads, the general manager of the company. The fact that there is no street-car line on Hope street makes for safe and easy ingress and egress.

KANSAS CITY BRANCH FOR PLANT HERE

Ward Heater Company to Open Factory to Handle Business East of Denver

The inroads being made by Los Angeles-made products into the eastern markets is reflected in the announcement yesterday by Samuel Sproat, president of the Ward Heater Company, that the local company will open a new branch factory at Kansas City, Mo., on January 1, 1926, to meet the demand for furnaces in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, parts of Texas and other sections as far west as Denver. While orders for the Ward product have been sufficient in the East and Midwest to keep the local plant operating at capacity, Mr. Sproat said that his company was handicapped by freight rates and that the new factory in Kansas City would solve this problem.

The demand for the Los Angeles product also has been stimulated by a new pipeless gas furnace just perfected by the Ward company, and which is designed especially for the coldest climates in this and foreign countries, Mr. Sproat declared.

The fact that orders for the Ward product for the first fifteen days of August are 32 per cent ahead of orders for the same period last year is also partly attributed by Mr. Sproat to reconstruction work at Santa Barbara, where the business has trebled during the past forty-five days, and the establishment of agencies in Chicago, Milwaukee, Baltimore and Houston, Tex. The Ward Company now is represented by agents in virtually every large city in the East and Midwest. The company is negotiating for a large order of furnaces with its Houston agent, where natural gas has just been provided.

NEW PLANTS ANNOUNCED

Three Industrial Companies Make Plans Public for Two Factories and One Expansion

Determined to keep pace with the rapid and steady advancement of Southern California industry, officials of three companies announced late last week that architects' and engineers' plans for their new plants, or additions to their plants, had been completed and that ground would be broken at once.

A new plant and an addition to a plant are to be erected in Los Angeles, and the California Cotton Oil Company, 2301 East Fifty-second street, has announced that its plans are complete for a huge seed house, mill building, and machine shop costing together $50,000 at Corcoran, Cal. The seed house will be 60x100x30 feet, hemispherical shaped, and will contain an elevator and conveyor. It will be used for the storage of cotton seed. The mill building will be 30x160x20 feet, will be of the portable type, and will be used for housing machinery. All the buildings will be of steel construction and the contract for the work has been awarded to the Union Iron Works of Los Angeles, according to C. H. Beucini, president of the cotton oil company.

The American Steel Pipe and Tank Company of 141 South Palm avenue, Alhambra, will erect a steel factory building for the manufacture of steel tanks. It will be 47x80 feet and eighteen feet high, and will be equipped with a huge crane and other modern machinery, the improvements to cost approximately $30,000. Contract for the building has been awarded to the Union Iron Works.

The Rotary Disc Bit Company, 1900 East Fifty-fifth street, will erect a new plant of steel frame construction to represent an investment of $25,000, including equipment. The new building will rise in the rear of the present office building and will be used as a machine shop and warehouse. The structure will be 40x120 feet and fifteen feet high with corrugated iron roof and sides, according to W. J. Holland, secretary and treasurer of the company.

The Union Iron Works has been awarded the contract for the work and workmen for the company also will erect crane runways for a transfer type crane and monorail system.

WINDSOR BUILDERS TO ADD SECOND OFFICE

Increase in business has necessitated the opening of a second office for Windsor Builders. Three months ago the new construction and engineering concern opened an office building at 631 South Western avenue and within thirty days had contracted for more than $200 worth of construction work.

To maintain closer contact with clients in the downtown districts offices were opened during the past week at 1330 South Hill street under the management of Frank Young.

New Industry to be Started in Los Angeles

A new and unique industry has located in Los Angeles.

Charles T. Amend, formerly of New Jersey has organized a new concern, with himself at its head, and will engage in the manufacture of dining cars. These cars will be sold at approximately $6000.00 per car and will be used as small restaurants in the downtown districts in the Coast cities. They will be, in other words, small restaurants on wheels that can be easily moved from one location to another practically without cost.

Amend has had wide experience in dining-car building, coming to this city from New Jersey where he was for many years in the same business. With contracts already on hand, the new plant, which is being equipped with the latest machinery, will soon be operated to its full capacity.

Amend last week leased the one-story brick building at 1516 Slauson avenue, which is owned by Oscar Willett, and will conduct his factory operations there.

J. W. Kinsella of the J. W. Lewis Company, industrial realty brokers, handled the leasing transaction.

Firm Reports Several Good Transactions

A number of important realty transactions have been closed in the offices of the Campbell-Joralmon-Rowley, Inc., recently, according to a report by W. J. Rowley of that organization.

They include the sale of 100 feet south of Sixth street for the account of A. W. Longley for the consideration of $100,000.

They also sold for the account of Mrs. Lillian H. Eustis, to a client of the firm, the property at 626 South Kingsley Drive for the consideration of $75,000.

For Dr. Rex Duncan the same firm sold thirty-five acres of land just off Ventura Boulevard. This property brought $40,000.

Wiley Machine Plant Doubles Original Area

Construction is well under way on the new addition to the Wiley Machine Company's plant at 637 Slauson avenue, according to announcement by Hamm & Grant, engineers in charge of building the factory.

The unit being built at present is to cost approximately $25,000. When completed it will give the plant an area in excess of 20,000 square feet, which is practically double the present area.

The first half of the Wiley factory was erected by Hamm & Grant in July, 1924.

Finish Work on Organ Factory in Van Nuys

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

VAN NUYS, Sept. 5.—Work on the $200,000 improvements to the Robert-Morgan organ factory here is about half completed, and it is stated that as soon as the huge new building now going up is ready for occupancy, the Berkeley plant of the company will be moved to Van Nuys and merged into the large organ factory here.

When the whole improvements are completed, it is stated that this organ factory will be the best appointed in the United States and will have the largest outturn of pipe organs annually. Henry Platt is resident manager of the plant.

New Industrial Plant Locates at Porterville

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PORTERVILLE, Sept. 5.—Porterville is to have a new industrial plant. Construction has been started on the building which will be of tile with an estimated cost of $4000. The plant will engage in electrical repair and pump work. It will be operated by L. L. Warren and Robert Baird, Jr.

The structure is being erected at the corner of E and Olive streets according to plans drawn by Jack Huber of the Mission Building Company.

City Trustees Cut Tax Levy in Beverly Hills

The Board of Trustees of the City of Beverly Hills, in fixing the tax levy for that city at $1.29 a hundred, have cut it down 7 cents a hundred less than last year. The reduction resulted from the increased assessed valuation of the city from $20,371,810 in 1924 to $24,653,410 in 1925.

The general tax levy was fixed at 99½ cents a hundred, and the bonded interest and redemption fund levy at 29½ cents a hundred.

Taxpayers in the Tatum tract will have 27 cents a hundred additional to pay, due to the installation of sewer and water systems recently voted by the residents of that section.

Bay District Reported Good Industrial Area

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE]

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 5.—Appointed recently by the Santa Monica Bay District Realty Board as a committee to investigate the possibilities of this area for increased industrial development, J. B. Davis, P. J. Dudley, Frank Bulling and E. Blenkhorn, comprising the body, have submitted to the board a favorable report on their discoveries.

The report also carried a recommendation that immediate steps be taken throughout the district to locate pay-roll industries there.

Among the advantages to the manufacturer that the district offers the committee included cheaper factory sites, lower rate trackage facilities, reduced harbor freight rates, proximity to the Los Angeles market and a wealth of easy money for loan at reasonable security.

Huge Contract Given to Local Manufacturers

The Louisiana Chemical Company of Baton Rouge, recently placed with the Llewellyn Iron Works an order for acid making apparatus, amounting to approximately 158 tons.

The apparatus is especially built and consists of steel heaters, cooling towers and converters made of a special grade of acid resisting iron. All parts of this equipment are designed to stand a very high temperature; the largest single casting weighs approximately 26,000 pounds.

The Llewellyn Iron Works have established an enviable record in developing this special grade of acid resisting iron and have made shipments of this product, not only to the northern part of the State, but also to Texas and other points.

PREPARE TO BUILD EXHIBITION HOME

Preparations are being made for the construction of a new six-room exhibition home on the grounds of Pacific Ready-Cut Homes, Inc., to replace one of the older exhibition houses.

Under the personal direction of W. P. Butte, president, the firm's architects are preparing a number of exclusive six-room designs from which one will be finally selected and it is expected that construction will begin in ten days.

BUILDS FOR SELF

L. K. Shostack will erect for himself a four-story brick hotel building at 500 South Westmoreland avenue. It will cost about $96,000.

PRISONERS BUILD ROADS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

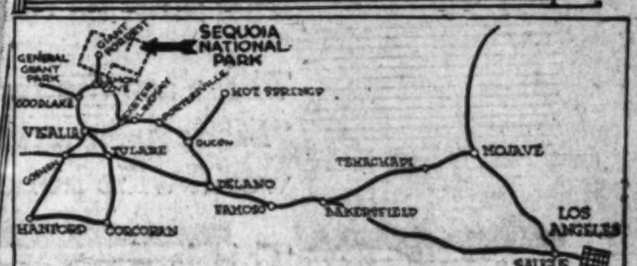
REDLANDS, Sept. 5.—A very considerable amount of work done on the mountain roads in San Bernardino county has been done by the prison camp, that is by the prisoners who are made to pay for what they eat in road work. And recent action of the supervisors indicates that this policy will be followed in the future.

The prison camp is now and has been for some time employed in putting in the best of shape the Cushionberry grade road into Bear Valley. This is better known as the desert road into Bear Valley and is an especially important one because of the fact that it is open in the winter when all other routes are closed by snow.

The work the camp has done there will make it easy to keep the road cleared of snow in the winter months and there will be no difficulty in machines making the trip at all times. The work has just about been completed.

ADD FIFTEEN MILES TO ARIZONA HIGHWAY

SAFFORD (Ariz.) Sept. 5.—Fifteen miles more of completed highway has been added to the Central Highway through Arizona, this east of Solomonville. State forces now are widening the Mule Creek Road from Clifton toward Silver City, giving the traveler direct access to the latter point and an alternative route of excellent sort all the way from Phoenix eastward. A part of the Central route, past Safford, has been paved by the work of the Graham County Highway Commission, which has completed expenditure of about $524,000.



DEDICATE NEW HIGHWAY

Oldest and Largest Living Trees Connected by Government Road

BY MRS. ROBERT A. MACK

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

GIANT FOREST, SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK, Sept. 5.—With completion of the Generals' Highway, dedicated this morning by Stephen T. Mather, director of national parks, in an impressive ceremony in the presence of thousands of California people, the oldest and largest living things—General Sherman Tree in Giant Forest, Sequoia National Park, and General Grant Tree in General Grant National Park—will be connected through man's ingenuity.

While the new highway will not be ready for general travel until next spring, this morning hundreds of cars participated in the monster motor caravan, breaking trail over one of America's most

Long life added to power and beauty

THE new series Packard Eight—in addition to luxurious appointments, super-power and world-famous beauty—is equipped with the most important improvements since the electric self-starter.

The chassis lubricator automatically delivers oil to the 45 chassis points which require regular attention. The pull of a plunger on the dash in an instant accomplishes the proper lubrication of these moving parts.

The oil rectifier, continually distilling the crankcase oil, assures that every drop remains practically pure. The Packard Eight owner changes oil only four or five times a year.

These improvements are found together only on Packard cars. They make it possible to double the previous assured long life of the Packard Eight.

Packard Eight is offered in ten body types, four open and six enclosed. Many purchase their Packard Eights out of income rather than from capital.

NASH

Nash Leads the World in Motor Car Value

The Conquest of Quality

> "Above all, I value public respect for the car that bears my name."
> C. W. NASH

In the heat of competitive effort there inevitably arises temptation to expedient and compromise.

But those who are truly great go resolutely forward; scorning inferiority; holding high-mindedly to high standards; knowing that for them their least must be their best.

These are the men who have won for the words "Made in America" an international celebrity and world-wide honor.

This is the way America has come to her glory as the greatest manufacturing nation of all the world.

And this is the Nash way. For C. W. Nash is not the man to countenance any deviation from the rugged principles of integrity that govern his manufacturing practice.

To him quality is one thing and only one. Anything less is something else; you may give it your own name.

And today in every American town and city, on every boulevard and highway, Nash is demonstrating anew the power and potency of quality.

Week by week, month by month, sales are rising steadily higher and higher.

Production, again and again, has been greatly increased, and still the magic attraction of quality keeps calling up new armies of buyers to take the place of those who have bought, and to swell next month's business above that of last month.

For twelve successive months Nash sales and production have swept far past the records set by the corresponding months a year ago.

Never has the nation witnessed a more brilliant success.

It is a heartening thing to see for every man and woman who believes in the principle and practice of business honesty.

It testifies eloquently to the inherent good judgment of the American automobile buying public.

And now with new models on display everywhere, offering an even greater measure of quality, the response on the part of purchasers is eclipsing everything that has gone before.

All because Nash is Quality and Quality is Nash, and the nation knows it.

Nash sales for the month of August, in the territory of the Troy Motor Sales Company, and for the entire United States, were the greatest ever recorded in a single month

Note: August is not a peak month for automobile sales.

Politics May Imperil Federal Aid for Highways

OAD CHAIRMAN GIVES WARNING

ucial Test to Come Next Winter, He Says

clares Action Necessary to Get Funds

serts Government Aid is Necessary

BY HARVEY M. TOY,
California Highway Commission.

tern politics, plus a miscon- ion of the purpose back of eral aid, may imperil the pres- highway policy of the national ernment. There is every indi- that the crucial test will e at the next session of Con- The West must be united Federal aid for road construc- is to be continued.

This opinion is shared generally Western highway builders who been in close touch with the tion. The time to sound the is now. We must be up and g or we will lose the funds which highway construc- cannot be continued in many west of the Rocky Moun-

CUSSIONS USELESS

The West is not concerned with discussions of State's indulged in by eastern poli- ; it will continue to demand Federal aid in the construction of highways as an income to which it is entitled. These funds are asked of the Federal government because it owns millions upon millions of acres in Western States—mineral lands, national forests, Indian lands, national parks—which are not taxable, from which no revenue comes to the States, but across which they are expected to construct splendid highways for the accommodation and pleasure of eastern tourists, coming westward in ever increasing numbers.

The Public Lands Committee of the United States Senate is about to conduct a series of hearings to inquire into the public land policy of the national government. Officials of Western States should not fail to call the highway situation to the attention of the committee.

The public domain, which in several Western States is considerably greater in area than all New England, is as much the property of New York as it is the property of the State in which it is located. Eastern and Middle-Western States, having squandered their forests, demand conservation of nationally owned timber areas in the West. I do not criticise that policy, but it ought to be taken into consideration in determining highway appropriations.

ANSWERS COMPLAINTS

Eastern Senators are complaining against the Federal aid appropriations because, they assert, their States pay more in Federal taxes than they receive back in Federal appropriations. Are we a nation or a confederation of states? Shall all the taxes paid on Broadway be expended on Broadway, or for other necessary governmental purposes throughout New York City? Where would California be if all the State taxes collected in San Francisco and Los Angeles were expended only in those cities? The State government could not exist under such a plan. And such a policy would wreck the national government.

Federal appropriations for highways are in accord with both the letter and spirit of the Constitution. As pointed out by Mr. Floyd C. Booe, of the Nevada State Highway Department, Section 8 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States authorizes Congress "To levy and collect taxes, . . . and provide for the general welfare of the United States."

Another clause of the same section authorizes Congress "to establish postoffices and post roads." This authorization precedes the authorization for the creation of courts, support of armies and navies and other important powers of Congress. In the early history of the country numerous appropriations were made for the construction of national roads, until the invention of the steam locomotive put highways in the background to await the coming of the automobile.

AUTHORITY UNQUESTIONED

The authority of Congress to make such appropriations has never been seriously questioned. And at this time such appropriations should not be considered subsidies. The States are building the highways, the Federal government is merely helping pay the bill. Some wealthy Eastern States might get along without Federal aid; possibly California could, but many States cannot.

Interstate highway transportation is more important today than ever before in our history. We must fight the forces of disintegration by making it easy for the people of every part of the nation to visit each other. We must become one nation, one people.

Federal aid means continuity in our highway construction—a truly national system of highways reaching into every part of the country. The work of building such a system now well planned under the present policy, will be impeded, probably halted altogether, if Federal aid is not continued. The West must make the nation realize this fact. America does not want many unconnected State highway systems, it needs and must have one great national system of improved roads.

SHIPPING OF CAR TO EUROPE FROM HERE EASY TASK

Motorists who desire to auto tour Europe need fear no difficulties as far as shipping their private cars across seas is concerned, according to the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Cars can now be shipped all the way without crating, if that is desired, at a saving of $85 to $150, and all customs duties and driving license requirements of the foreign countries can be taken care of before leaving American shores.

Every detail of shipping private autos to all parts of the world is handled at cost prices for hundreds of motorists of the West each year by the Automobile Club of Southern California through its car-forwarding department, and a motorist's machine can be sent to Europe by this agency at a minimum of expense.

It Must Be Fine to Be a Director

When Mitchell Leison, technical director at the Cecil B. De Mille studios drives up these days in his new Jordan "Playboy," which he purchased recently from the Lord Motor Company, he gets a lot of attention. Here he is shown getting 100 per cent service from Hillard Conwell, who has been a familiar figure as doorman at the studio for years.

Weller Joins Nathan Staff as Publicist

Interesting news came from local advertising circles during the last week in the announcement by Edward N. Nathan, head of the advertising agency that bears his name; of the association with his organization, effective the 1st inst., of Hal F. Weller, well-known local advertising and publicity man and Southern California representative of the contest board of the American Automobile Association.

Weller has been actively engaged in the newspaper and advertising field in Southern California for the last fifteen years. He resigned as advertising manager for one of the largest automobile distributing organizations in the West early in the present year, and has since devoted the larger portion of his time to special work for the contest board of the A.A.A., which body exercises supervision over all automobile contests and tests throughout the United States.

A member of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, California Yacht Club and other local organizations, he has been active for many years in athletic affairs, and has been an official of the local branch of the A.A.U. for many years.

Prior to entering the advertising and newspaper fields, Weller was engaged in the electrical business, and later as manager of a big contracting and construction company.

MAINTAIN SCHOOL

The Lincoln Motor Company maintains an apprentice school for training tool makers, according to Harold L. Arnold, Lincoln dealer. There are 500 enrolled at the Highland Park plant and 250 at River Rouge. These apprentices put in eight hours a day in the tool rooms under the guidance of the foreman and one special instructor.

Parking Space for 40,000 Cars Exists

Parking space for approximately 40,000 cars has been discovered to already exist in the business district, bounded by Figueroa, San Pedro, First and Pico streets, according to a survey just submitted to the board of directors of the Motor Car Dealers' Association of Los Angeles.

About 10,000 cars can be parked in curb spaces in this area since the Motor Car Dealers' Association co-operated to persuade the authorities that more curb parking restrictions were being enforced than were necessary.

Automobile parks in this area provide room for 20,000 more cars, and garages have room to take care of another 10,000 cars. Of the garages, about 1000 capacity is private, leaving room for about 9000 cars, which space is divided among 103 various garages, all located within the above-mentioned boundaries. About fifteen of these 103 garages have parking space for 100 cars or more. Any of these garages could handle many more cars each day before being filled to capacity, the survey shows.

FASTEST SELLING CAR
of all the One-Profit Studebakers

INCREASED volume of sales—founded on Studebaker's policies of one-profit manufacture, and no yearly models—made it possible to reduce the price of this Standard Six Coach by $100.

Already a wonderful value—a leader of the line—the lowest priced closed car ever sold by Studebaker—its previous low price has been cut one hundred dollars.

Many of the superiorities of this one-profit Coach are hidden until revealed by thousands of miles of usage. You can't see the fine workmanship and materials inside the engine and body which gives excess mileage. But here are some things that you can check against competitive cars to satisfy yourself that this is a Studebaker of the same fine quality as before the price cut—a Studebaker more up to date than the newest yearly models.

EXCESS POWER—According to rating of National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, this is the most powerful car of its size and weight.

WOOL UPHOLSTERY—Durable.

INSTRUMENTS—Including 8-day clock, gasoline gauge, speedometer, oil pressure gauge and ammeter, in single grouping under glass, on beautiful silver-faced dial.

FULL-SIZE BALLOON TIRES—For which the steering gear, fenders and even the body lines are specially designed.

AUTOMATIC SPARK CONTROL—No spark lever on steering wheel, but:

SAFETY LIGHTING CONTROL—On the steering wheel, at the driver's finger tips.

IMPROVED ONE-PIECE WINDSHIELD—Automatic windshield cleaner, weatherproof visor, rear-view mirror, attractive cowl lights and cowl ventilator.

CO-INCIDENTAL LOCK—To ignition and steering wheel, which serves to reduce the theft insurance rates—single key operates this lock as well as that on the door and the clever device on the spare-tire carrier.

COMPLETELY MACHINED CRANKSHAFT—To obtain perfect engine balance and thus reduce vibration to a minimum.

There are only two cars manufactured on the one-profit basis: Studebaker in the fine car field, and the Ford in the low priced field. Only in these two cases does one company in its own plants make all bodies, all engines, all clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, gray iron castings and drop forgings.

Come in and see this coach. You will find it the same fine car as before the price reduction.

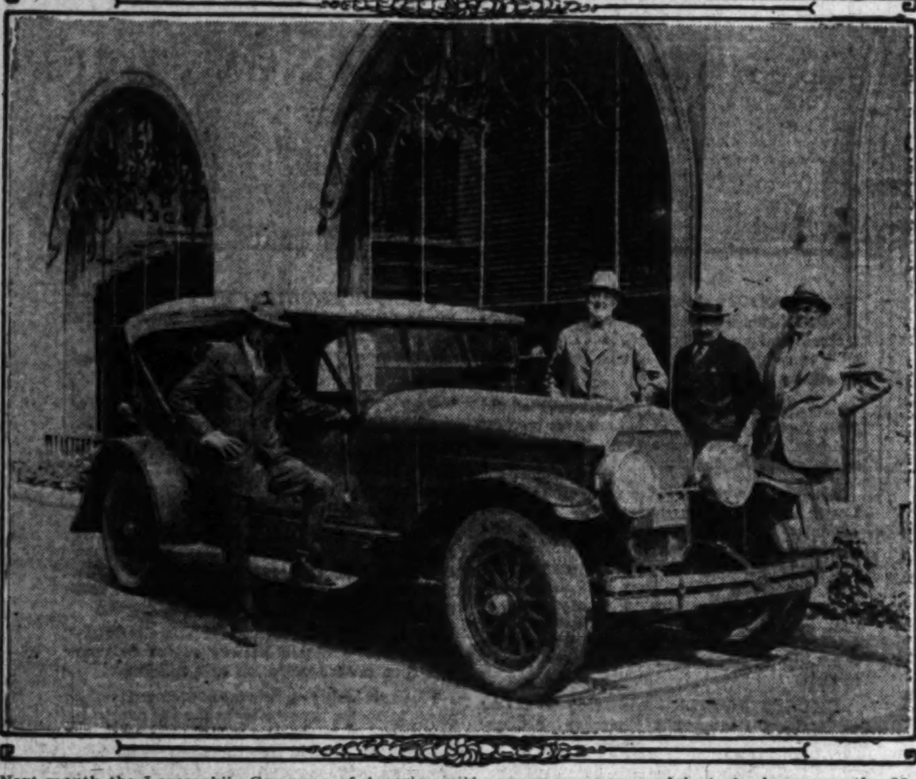
Drive New Car on Test Trip



Next month the Locomobile Company of America will announce a new model—to be known as the 33-90. In the meantime the car is being given extensive tests, one of which was a trip across the continent from the factory at Bridgeport, Ct., to Los Angeles. Here is one of the two cars driven here. Barney G. Roos, chief engineer for the Locomobile factory, is standing with his foot on the running board, while back of the car are Gaylord A. Hoyt, general sales manager for the company; Rene Marx, Los Angeles manager, and G. A. Boyer, manager of the Locomobile distributing organization in Northern California.

NEW MODEL TO BE OUT SOON

Locomobile Driven Here from Factory on Test

Announcement is Planned Sometime Next Month

Executives of Concern Spend Several Days Here

Bringing advance news of activities in the Locomobile factory at Bridgeport, Ct., a party of eastern automotive executives paid a fleeting visit to Los Angeles last week.

Gaylord A. Hoyt, general sales manager for the Locomobile Company of America, Inc., arrived on the train after having completed a swing throuugh the West, visiting Locomobile dealers and distributors.

With him was G. A. Boyer, manager of the Locomobile and junior eight distributing firm for Northern California.

Almost coincident with these arrivals, two factory test cars arrived at the Locomobile company's branch at 1925 South Figueroa street, after a 5200-mile jaunt across the continent.

The test cars were under the personal supervision of Barney G. Roos, one of the best-known automotive engineers of the country, who has been with the Locomobile company for thirteen years, and who is now vice-president and chief engineer of the Bridgeport concern.

Accompanying Roos were J. T. Mosley, assistant research engineer for the Locomobile company, and W. A. Fredericks, vice-president and chief engineer of the Continental Motors Corporation.

After a three-day session with Rene Marx, manager of the Locomobile Company's Los Angeles branch, discussing Pacific Coast sales and advertising problems, the party headed for the East, and after a swing through the Southern States will arrive in Bridgeport again early this month.

Great importance is attached to the cross-country trip of the Locomobile chief engineer and the splendid performance hung up by the two factory test cars. One of these models was the recently announced junior eight. The other was Locomobile's second surprise for the automobile industry this year—a brand-new model which Roos declares will be formally announced to the motoring public within the next thirty or sixty days.

The test cars left Bridgeport on August 10, and on their return to the factory they will have covered approximately 9000 miles, during every moment of which both cars will have been under the close scrutiny of the Locomobile chief engineer constantly.

During a Swansea-Port Talbot cricket match a sparrow was struck by a ball and killed.

AUGUST SALES FOR SMITH NEW MARK

"The biggest month in our history—both in point of cars delivered and from a dollars and cents angle."

In such terms Stanley W. Smith, president of the retail Hudson-Essex dealership which bears his name, describes the business enjoyed by his firm during August. He states that his sales recapitulation sheet for the month just past discloses the sale and delivery of 274 automobiles, by far a greater number than his concern has ever before delivered during a 30-day period.

Mr. Smith suggests that such a record during August, conceded by motor car men one of the slowest months of the year as far as automobile sales are concerned, augurs for an unusually prosperous fall.

FORD PLANT IN MEXICO

The Ford Motor Company of Mexico has been organized in Mexico City and is now turning out assembled Ford cars and trucks for distribution in that territory. In all its essential details, the Mexican plant is similar to Ford plants in other foreign countries and the United States. Production has begun and, while facilities at present only permit assembly of chassis, additional equipment is now being installed. This includes enameling ovens and also facilities for building bodies.

Bridge Across Gila River to be of Steel

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHOENIX, Sept. 5.—Announcement has been made by the State Engineer that the new bridge across the Gila at the Gillespie Dam will be of steel, with nine spans and with a total length of 1700 feet. Bids for the work are to be asked in October.

Save when the Gila is at flood, the crossing at that point safely may be made on the concrete lower apron of the dam. In medium stages, when the water would come well above the average automobile running board, the Highway Department "ferries," without charge, by carrying the car on a heavy truck. It is told that an individual has been reaping a harvest at the lower stages by spotting foreign license and warning the drivers of the dangers of the ford. Traffic at that point is very heavy, from California to Phoenix and eastward.

How Much Bread in this Load?

Trucks every year are playing a greater part in the marketing of grain after the harvest season. Formerly the crops were hauled to warehouses or elevators by four and six-horse teams. Here we have a six wheeled Moreland ten-ton truck in use by Charles Hay of Bakersfield hauling wheat across the desert.

New Record for Month's Business Set

When the last Nash car was delivered Monday evening by the Troy Motor Sales Company the total for the August business of the company showed the highest mark for a single month ever reached in the entire seven years that they have distributed the Nash line in this territory.

"This total did not include Ajax sales," said Robert S. Breyer, vice-president and general manager of the Troy Motor Sales Company. "On Nash business alone our August total went far beyond any previous month in our history. It is good evidence of the public approval of the new Nash models, and is proof enough to us that they are going to exceed even the popularity which last year's models enjoyed.

"August is not as a rule extremely active in motor-car sales, and to have set a record for sales during that month is unusual."

Los Angeles Race Drivers Contest at Monza Today

AUTO EVENT FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Peter De Paolo, Milton and Peter Kreis Enter

American Winner to Drive Foreign Car

"Trick Track" Will Call for Maximum of Ability

America's and Europe's finest and fastest racing cars, meeting like the gladiators of old in a "Roman holiday" of combat, will battle today at Monza, Italy, in a death-defying contest of speed. Or, like the ancient charioteers, they will clash hubs at higher speeds than the toga-clad spectators of the golden days in Rome ever dreamed, and fight for glory, while thousands of emotional Italians awaken the echoes of Italy's placid hills with their cheers.

And the goal will be the "international championship!"

Two American cars—both Duesenbergs will represent America. Three American pilots will participate: Tommy Milton and Peter Kreis, both of Los Angeles, and Peter De Paolo, American 1925 champion, who hails from Hollywood.

FLOOR SPACE IN BUILDING EQUAL TO SMALL FARM

The floor space in the Harold L. Arnold building is equal to a small farm, and if used as such, could easily contain a house and barn, with corrals for stock, pens for chicks, a rose garden, lawn, vegetable patch, etc., and have ample space left for a walnut orchard and an alfalfa field. This space is now devoted to Lincoln sales and service.

DE PAOLO DRIVES ROMEO

De Paolo yielded to the request of his parents' countrymen, Pete's folks having been born in Italy, and will stage his "homecoming" at the wheel of an Alfa Romeo.

Another important "Yankee angle" to today's race, it is pointed out by racing fans here, is the fact that the Duesenberg cars and, perhaps, De Paolo's foreign machine, will be powered by the California-made Richfield gasoline.

The ability of Tommy Milton as a road-race pilot is well known. Tommy has won many such events in addition to his speedway victories. This ability will count at Monza, where the Italian Grand Prix course is described as a "trick track" almost tantamount to a figure eight, and a combination of speedway and road course. The latter is marked by many dangerous curves and right-angle turns.

KREIS HAS RECORD

Kreis has had less experience than Milton, race fans say, but they point out that a man who can drive the 500-mile Indianapolis "sporty" course without a relief driver and average nearly ninety-seven miles per hour, as Kreis did this season, is well able to take care of himself on the Monza course.

Just what De Paolo will do, racing fans hesitate to predict. Though more of a speedway than a road pilot, Pete's Italian car is rated the fastest of the foreigners and is declared particularly built for road-race work.

Overseas, championships are awarded to cars rather than drivers. Since two European cars are tied for the international championship, a victory by either of the American cars would bring the championship of the world for 1925 to the Duesenberg.

Gets Her Music for Exercise by Radio

"Do your daily dozen outdoors with a radio," is the advice of Thyra Le Fort, dainty dancer in the metropolitan revue, "Grand Opera versus Jazz"—and Thyra is a living demonstration of the benefit of her own advice. Here she is with one of the new Willys-Knight coupe-sedans, for atmosphere using an Atwater-Kent set to get the necessary music.

FRANKLIN PRICES ARE CUT SHARPLY

Lower prices on Franklin cars effective the 1st inst., were announced by Ralph Hamlin, Inc., distributor of the air-cooled six in Southern California. The price reduction applies to all Franklin models except the coupe and cabriolet.

In making the announcement the Franklin factory stated that no changes were being made in the car from the Series II announced last March, sales of which, in the six months just closed, have bettered the 1924 records by 60 per cent.

"It is Franklin policy to give the public the benefit of the savings from greater manufacturing efficiency, which are accomplished from time to time," Mr. Franklin, president of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company, stated. "The new prices also reflect the growth in volume output for which the Series 11 Franklin is responsible."

Dancer Takes "Daily Dozen" in Open Air

Given a car, a radio set and a park, or grassy glen, one is ideally equipped to keep in the pink of condition, according to Thyra Le Fort.

Miss Le Fort is an Alhambra girl, who has gained prominence as a dancer and gymnast.

She is a member of the Metropolitan Theater dance review, appearing this week in "Grand Opera vs. Jazz," as an exponent of jazz.

Due to regular training Miss Le Fort has kept every muscle supple and tuned to respond to her every demand.

"My favorite stunt," said Miss Le Fort, "is to hop into my car the first thing in the morning, take my radio set and drive to a secluded spot among the trees, where cooling grasses form a natural carpet.

"All I wear is my bathing suit. I tune in on the 'morning exercise classes' broadcast from one of the central studios, and go through my daily dozen to radio count and melody."

For purposes of demonstration, Miss Le Fort used one of the new Willys-Knight four-cylinder coupe-sedans, furnished by the Willys-Overland Pacific Company, and a model 20 Atwater Kent radio receiving set and radio speaker from Ray Thomas, Inc.

A stretch of lawn in Exposition Park was her gymnasium, and the accompanying picture attests what this healthful system has done for her.

WHEELS HUM IN AUTO PLANTS

steps," said Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler corporation. "The same number of cars that cost the public approximately $2,000,000,000 at the old prices will cost the public about $1,750,000,000 at the new prices. These lower costs mean in turn that about $150,000,000 less credit will be required to handle the financing. This virtually means an addition of $150,000,000 to the fund available for financing motor cars and should be reflected in the sales the next six months."

Despite the unprecedented demand for cars during July and August, usually the lull period, dealers in every section of the country report further sales increases the past week, indicating that the farmer demand is under way. Companies which have launched new models report a flood of buying orders stipulating fall delivery.

The outlook on the Pacific Coast is especially bright, dealers reporting a gain of approximately 15 per cent in new car sales as compared with the previous week. Used car sales also are up. Sales of new cars are up to 25 per cent as against last year. An improved demand is noted in the Northwestern States where sales are 20 per cent higher than at this time a year ago.

The announcement of the new Ford models without changes in price has resulted in an avalanche of orders from all sections of the country that insures capacity employment at the two big Detroit plants until the end of the year at least.

Production of Nash cars has been boosted to 450 daily. Despite this capacity schedule the company is six weeks behind in orders. It is understood that production of Ajax cars at the Racine plant is running about fifty-five cars a day.

August broke all monthly records for sales of Oldsmobile cars, those on hand this week insuring capacity schedule for the next three months. Every effort will be exerted to keep up with orders and it is probable that new monthly output records will be established during the balance of the year.

The Packard Motor Car Company this week announced the distribution of $7,282,440 to its preferred stockholders to retire at $110 a share the entire issue of preferred stock in the company.

With retirement of this stock the Packard Company has no outstanding securities except common stock, and no obligations other than current liabilities on the company's books. After paying off the preferred stock it is announced the company has on hand approximately $14,500,000 in cash and marketable securities, and all future earnings will be available for payment of common stock dividends.

During the last four years the Packard Company has repaid $11,000,000 in bank obligations and has paid off and retired $15,500,000 of outstanding preferred stock.

August sales of the Hudson-Essex exceeded 30,000 and this figure brought the total sales for the third fiscal quarter to approximately 87,000. Indications are that fourth-quarter sales will approach, if not equal, the third quarter.

Rumors that the General Motors Corporation had purchased the Austin Motor, Ltd., of Birmingham, Eng., subject to the acceptance of its offer by stockholders of the British firm, where this week confirmed by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors.

Proposals made by representatives of the Detroit corporation have been accepted by the directors of the Austin corporation.

"The desirability of General Motors entering the English field has been under consideration for some time," said Mr. Sloan. "In order to intelligently deal with the subject a group of General Motors officials went abroad in July to study this and other phases of the corporation's export activities. As a result a proposition has been made and accepted by the directors of Austin Motors, Ltd., and will be submitted to their stockholders in due course. If favorable action is taken the result will be that General Motors will obtain control of Austin and will be responsible for its operation in the future.

"The Austin company has an extensive manufacturing plant near Birmingham. It manufactures the Austin car, which is well regarded wherever known. The assembly operation of General Motors, now located at Hendon, near London, will be consolidated with the Austin plant at Birmingham.

"Through such co-ordination and with the addition of the Austin car to the General Motors line, the position of General Motors in Great Britain and other countries, particularly those under the British sphere of influence, will be materially strengthened."

DEALER ANNOUNCED

Another new dealer has been added to the Gardner wholesale organization. It is the Lukavsky Motor Company located on the Los Feliz Boulevard. They report seven sales the first week.

No Car meets the Better BUICK in value per dollar—and here's

Why

THE Better Buick steps far ahead of all previous standards of motor car performance.

75 Horsepower!

The Buick Valve-in-Head engine has been made still more efficient by Buick engineering skill. The Master Valve-in-Head engine now delivers 75 and more horsepower. And there is 60 and more in the Standard models.

Triple-Sealed Engine!

And this new Buick power is protected. Three new seals for the famous Buick sealed chassis result in decidedly longer engine life, noticeably lower operating costs—an Air Cleaner, a Gasoline Filter, an Oil Filter protect the engine.

4 and 2 Door Sedans!

Real sedans with Fisher Bodies. Upholstery and fittings according to Buick's luxurious standards. Real sedans ... at "coach prices."

Duotone in Duco!

New beauty! The latest, smartest, most striking color and finish combinations for motor cars.

Safe Night Driving!

The Better Buick introduces the Controllable Beam Headlight, without glare and without dimming.

Light Pedal Clutch!

Buick's new sawtooth, ten-plate multiple disc clutch has 212 square inches of driving surface as against 30 to 80 inches in the average single-plate type.

Lower Prices!

And while Buick has raised Buick quality and performance even higher than before, it has also been able to make substantial reductions in prices.

• • •

Better acquaintance with the many 1926 advancements and improvements in the Better Buick will convince you that: "Again Buick Has Built a Better Automobile!"

TRAVEL TO PARK SETS NEW MARK

Autos for This Year So Far Total 44,380; Last Year 30,917

With the close of the 1925 travel season less than a month away, all previous records for attendance have been left far behind by the remarkable influx of visitors to Yosemite National Park this year.

No better figures for comparison can be selected than the 44,380 automobiles that have entered Yosemite to date as compared with 30,917 for a similar period last year. In keeping with this sensational motor-car increase, statistics reveal that 141,294 persons registered at the park gates in their own machines, an increase of 43,260 people for this class of travel over 1924, when only 98,034 persons came into the park in private cars.

A general summary of travel figures for Yosemite National Park for this season shows a lead of 13,463 private automobiles, 43,260 passengers in private cars, 3736 railroad visitors, 5168 by miscellaneous travel, such as stage, horseback, foot, etc., making a total gain to date of 52,164 people over a similar period for last year.

Park authorities are optimistic over travel to Yosemite for the month of September, which will conclude the 1925 travel year. They predict the remarkable increase in visitors will be maintained throughout the month, and the total number of visitors for the season will approximate 210,000 by the end of September, concluding the greatest travel year Yosemite has ever recorded.

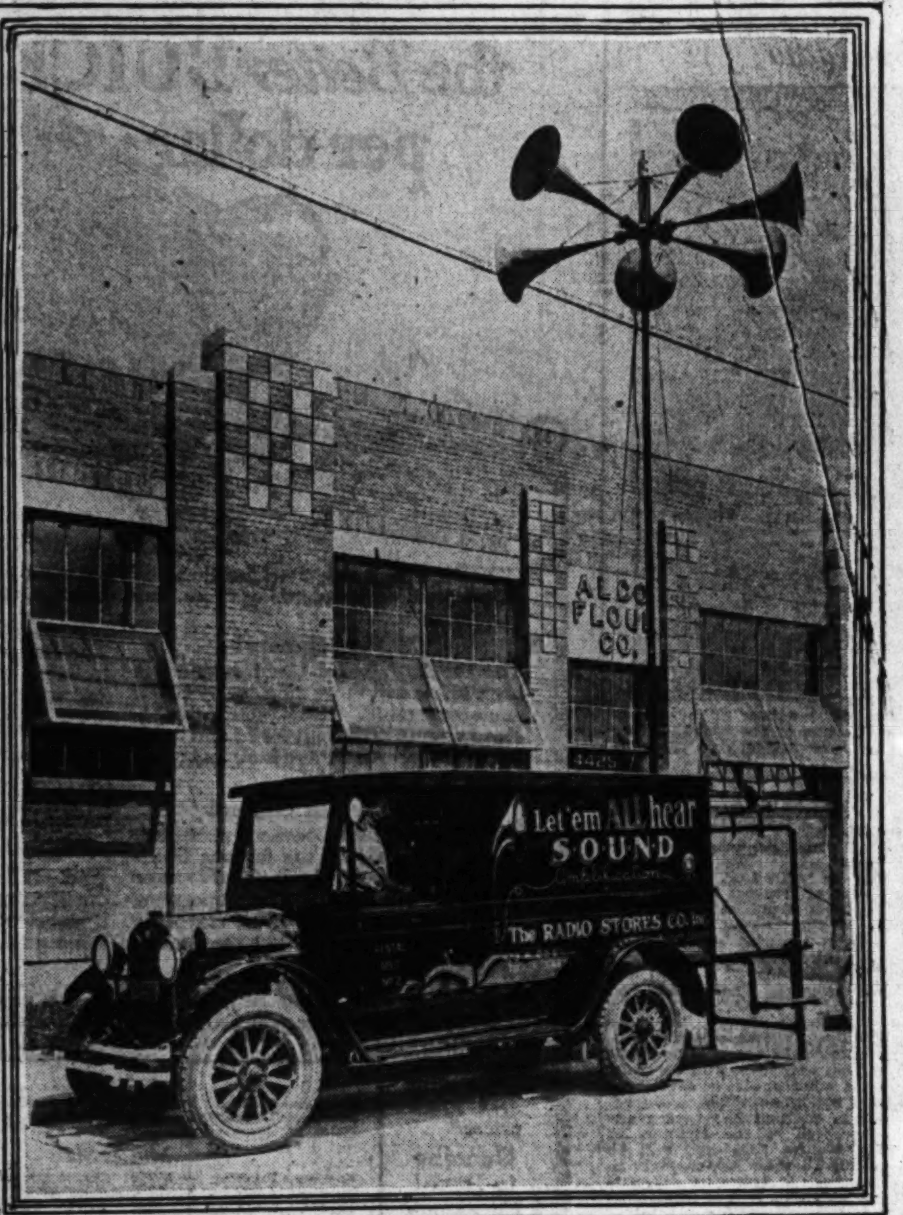
SEES DEMAND FOR SHORTER AUTOS

During the next few years there will be created in this country an entirely new demand for motor cars, according to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Company.

"This demand," says Jordan, "will come from people who already drive automobiles, but who have discovered the necessity of having a second or even a third car in the family.

"Because the second car will be used almost exclusively for running about town, its size will be dictated by traffic conditions, which make shorter wheel base and shorter turning radius essential."

Use Truck to "Tell the World"



Folks who attend political outdoor meetings and can only tell the speaker is orating because they can see his lips move can hear now—that is if the speaker uses one of these. It is equipped with a public address system that amplifies the human voice so that everyone can hear for 1000 feet on each side of the truck. This Reo truck, so equipped, is one of but four in the country, and the other three are in the East.

Soap Box Now Passe as Stand for Oration

The soap-box, the platform and the convention hall are all rendered obsolete for the purposes of anyone who has an oration to deliver by the appearance of a novel truck that made its appearance last week on the streets of Los Angeles. When you talk into the microphone of the Reo Speed Wagon of the Radio Stores Company, Inc., everybody within a thousand-foot circle around the truck can hear you plainly. For directing mob scenes in the movies, for political meetings, and for such big gatherings as some of the annual State picnics, the truck promises to be in great demand. It is a new departure, so new in fact that there are only three others like it in the United States, and all of these are in the East.

"The Reo is equipped with the No. 2 public address system built by the Western Electric Company," said Bert Hall of the Radio Stores Company, Inc., last week. "Magnifying the voice is by no means its only use, however. It can be used as a portable 'input' equipment for a radio broadcast station. If a concert is to be given in a hall where there is no remote control station established, the truck can be driven to the hall, its microphone equipment placed on the stage, and through the use of the equipment on the truck the music can be transmitted over telephone lines to the broadcast station just as is done from a regular remote control station.

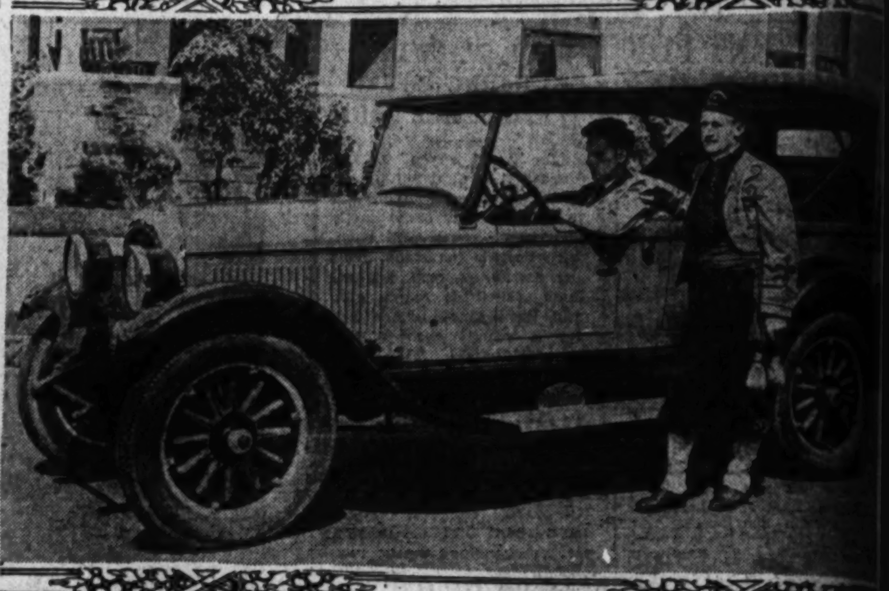
"There is also an extremely sensitive Western Electric superheterodyne receiving set included in the equipment of the truck. It will receive radio broadcast programs and transmit them in great volume from its ten horns.

"The horns are carried on a collapsible mast of steel tubing which is raised some twenty feet above the truck. As many as ten horns can be used, but this number is not ordinarily necessary. The entire installation was made by Western Electric engineers, and is really a marvel of compactness and efficiency."

SHUTTERS PRACTICAL

The shutters on the radiator of the modern automobile are put there for a very practical purpose. With the low-grade gasoline being sold to motorists, it is necessary to heat the motor to its most efficient temperature quickly and maintain it there. The Lincoln accomplishes this in a very simple manner without attention from the driver. The shutters are operated thermostatically, that is, by the temperature device installed in the water-cooling system. They are closed when the water is cool and open automatically when the water reaches the proper operating temperature.

Uses Speedy Car for "Grand Marshaling"



When J. H. Murat, Grand Marshall of the Fraternal Brotherhood picnic, availed himself of the use of a Chrysler for his duties last Sunday he didn't go wrong, he avers. Here he is in his uniform in the car that was a big help to him on the job.

Parade Chief Keeps 40 Cars in Procession

Greer Robbins Company and the Chrysler had a hand in making a success last Sunday of the most successful Fraternal Brotherhood picnic ever held in Southern California.

Grand Marshal J. H. Murat, past master of the local chapter and one of the hardest workers in the entire membership, selected the Chrysler car as his mode of transportation to and from Orange County Park.

En route to the park he had more than forty automobiles that had to be kept in procession and it was part of Murat's job to dash back and see that everything was O.K. and if not to fix it up pronto.

"I picked the Chrysler because it is speedy and dependable, besides having the kind of an appearance that makes you proud to be in it. I didn't make any mistake, either, unless it was in choosing a car that is so popular. After we arrived at the park I had a hard time keeping the picnickers from monopolizing the car all afternoon. Everybody wanted to try it out and the Greer Robbins driver gave more demonstrations in that one afternoon than most cars get in a week."

Delegations were at the picnic from San Diego to Bakersfield, and Murat was assigned the task of seeing that everything went smoothly.

NEW ABSORBER IS INTRODUCTION HERE

No matter how much a person pays for his motor car, he wants the maximum in riding comfort.

Styles change, new models are introduced; but the demand for increased ease of riding goes on, growing greater from year to year.

The person whose income limits him to the ownership of a low-priced car is ever scheming to make that car ride as well as the one he would like to own and drive.

With this inevitable attitude in mind, engineers of the Stromberg Motor Devices Company have perfected the Stromberg Super Shock Absorber, and the Electric Equipment Company have taken the contract for Southern California distribution.

It is designed on a new and better principle, according to Harry S. Mason, general manager of the local distributing organization.

...ontagious smiles exhibited by Alice Cavanaugh and Lester Cole as Miss Cavanaugh is seen emerging ...m her new Buick coupe, bought from the Howard Automobile Company on her arrival from ...ew York, may be due to several reasons. What they are, however, the couple didn't tell the photographer. Miss Cavanaugh is to be starred in George M. Cohan's musical comedy, "Little Nellie Kelly," opening in the Playhouse, September 14. Lester Cole has the feature juvenile part in the comedy and has also placed his order for one of the new better Buick coupes, which they have named the "Little Nellie Kelly" model.

MOTORISTS FAILING TO OBEY LAW

New Right-of-Way Act is Ignored by Many Drivers

Motorists in California are not observing the change in the right-of-way rule that became effective late in July. A check by the Automobile Club of Southern California indicates that drivers either do not understand the change made in the State law or else are deliberately ignoring it.

The rule, which became effective July 24, provides: "When two vehicles approach an intersection of public highways at approximately the same time, the vehicle approaching from the right shall have the right of way, provided such vehicle is traveling at a lawful speed."

Unless motorists observe this rule they will find it impossible to recover their damage in the event of a collision and may be compelled to pay the damage to the vehicle on the right. Also, it should be remembered that to fail to yield the right of way to one entitled to it is a misdemeanor and arrests will shortly be made for this violation.

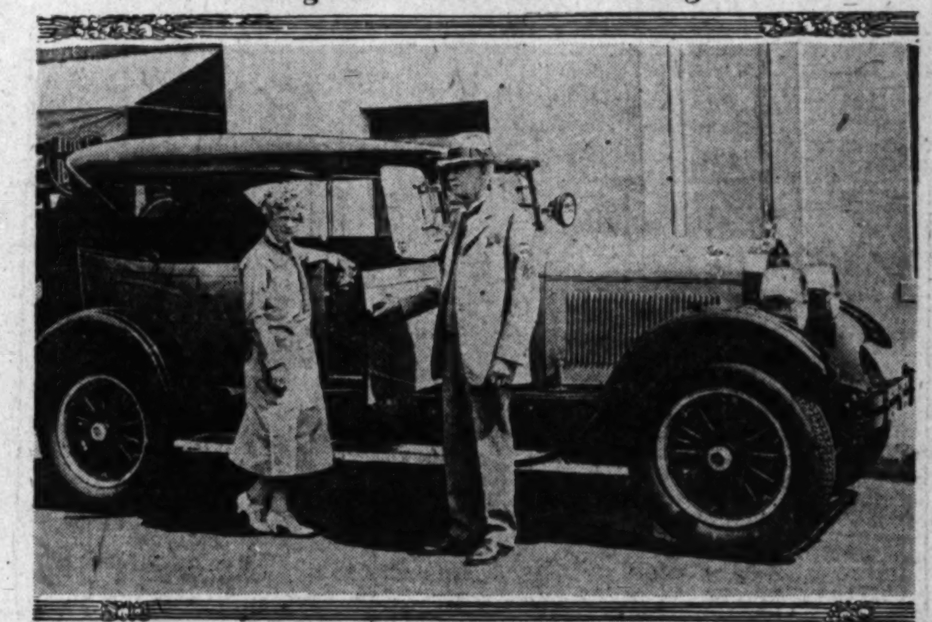
NEW ZEALAND OWNS BIGGEST GEYSER

By all means the greatest geyser known is in New Zealand, called Waimangu, which has been known to throw black water, stones and mud to a distance of 1500 feet in the air. This eruption takes place with more or less regularity every thirty-six hours, but its schedule is subject to variations and it sometimes starts off unexpectedly with terrible fierceness so that visitors to the spot must keep at a very respectable distance or they may be caught in the great flow which issues from the vent. The lives of two girls and a guide were sacrificed because of their defying the advice that had been given them and they were all swept into the hole where their bodies were afterward found terribly burned by the hot material which was thrown up by the geyser.

RUST IMPOSSIBLE

The rustless radiator shell of the new Chevrolet is of white metal all through, according to Chevrolet officials, and Chevrolet owners need not fear the expense of renewing the brilliant finish, as is often necessary with nickeled jobs.

Octogenarian Likes Motoring



Well-meaning friends of A. M. Haynes of Riverside told him he was too old to "gallivant" off on a long motor trip, driving the car himself. But he told them they were wrong—and proved it. Here he is shown with his daughter in their latest Peerless bought from the J. W. Leavitt Company. Mr. Haynes is 81 years of age.

THE BRAKE SHOP

This shop makes a specialty of careful and correct brake adjustment.

Your car should be carefully inspected every thirty days and your brakes tested. A nominal charge is made for each adjustment, and if The BRAKE SHOP relines your brakes, monthly checking and adjusting is done without charge.

YOU OWE YOURSELF THIS PROTECTION

1. Do your brakes squeal?
2. Do you skid your rear wheels when bringing car to stop?
3. Have you noticed that the brake on your right rear wheel seems to take hold more quickly?
4. Does your right rear tire show evidence of far more wear than the left tire?
5. Do your brakes grab or seize when you have made a heavy application?
6. Does a sudden application of your brakes cause the car to swerve to one side?

If your car does any of the above mentioned little stunts, then your brakes are out of adjustment.

It does not necessarily mean that you should have your brake relined, but for your own protection you should have the brakes carefully adjusted.

You will appreciate the service rendered at

New Policy for Financing is Announced

...e of the most enthusiastic ... meetings in the nostiry ... Star organization held ... week at the Biltmore Hotel, ... Curtis, director of sales and ... for the Durant Motor ... of California, announced ... "war had been declared on ... interest and handling charges" ... the enormous resources of ... Durant interests had been ... back of a new low financ... for the purchasers of new ... cars.

... new plan, according to Cur... that Star cars will be ... the future on long term contracts with the lowest interest ever charged.

At the dealer meeting, which was attended by Star car representatives from all points in Southern California, officials of the Star Motor Company, Los Angeles branch gave talks on sales and service problems. Among these were T. E. Herlihy, manager of service; Robert P. Fite, manager of sales; Dick Munroe, manager of used cars.

James Houlihan, advertising counsel, gave the dealers a report of business conditions all over the Coast, pointing ou that on his recent swing through the Northwest territory, there was every indication that "this would be one of the biggest years in the history of the Star and of the entire automobile industry."

Capt. Al G. Waddell of the Houlihan organization gave an inspirational talk, bringing home some of the salient features of the Star national program with references to the solid progress that is being made by the W. C. Durant group of companies.

Curtis's tall. was replete with merchandising ideas designed for the benefit of the dealer organization.

One of the interesting features of the meeting was the presentation to Curtis by the dealer organization of a magnificent Gladstone bag as a token of appreciation for his co-operation with them during the past six months under the present plan of sales activity.

DOUBLE PRODUCTION

Chevrolet production for 1925, according to Chevrolet factory reports, will be practically double that of 1924. The total production figures for 1924 were exceeded early in August of this year. The tremendous demand for the new Chevrolet models made necessary the great increase in production, they claim.

Riverside Man Buys New Car at Tour End

It is seldom that one finds a man who is past his eighty-first birthday an enthusiastic motorist, but J. W. Leavitt & Co., report a recent Peerless sale to A. M. Haynes of Riverside, who answers to this description.

Mr. Haynes, who, with his daughter, was on his way home after a month's touring in the Canadian Rockies, stopped in at J. W. Leavitt & Co.'s headquarters. Mr. Haynes liked the looks of the new Peerless so well he decided then and there to trade in his old Peerless for a new one.

He took delivery the same day, and proceeded homeward, driving his fourth Peerless.

It was in 1919 that Mr. Haynes first became a Peerless owner and he has never been without one since that time. For the last fourteen years he has been court recorder in Riverside, and each year he manages to get enough time off for an automobile trip.

He was up to Northwestern Canada a couple of years ago in his car and liked it so well he decided to return again this vacation season.

So he and his daughter loaded a few clothes in their Peerless phaeton and started out. He drove all the way and declared to Clair R. Savage, sales manager for J. W. Leavitt & Co., that he enjoyed every minute of it.

"They tried to tell me I'm too old to go gallivanting off across the country like that," he said, "but I'm never going to be too old to drive my Peerless. It's one of my pet peeves if anybody ever gets behind that wheel except myself."

SON FOLLOWS FATHER

Charles Chevrolet, son of the original designer of the Chevrolet motor and the organizer of the Chevrolet Motor Company, is engaged in selling Chevrolets for an eastern dealer, it is reported. Chevrolet, according to the reports, has well demonstrated, by his mechanical and sales ability, that he is due to follow in his father's footsteps.

AUTOS IN SOUTH SEAS POPULAR WITH CHIEFTAINS

Maurice Tourneur, Anita Stewart and Bert Lytell, who recently returned from the South Sea Islands, where they filmed the Cosmopolitan picture "Never the Twain Shall Meet," which starts at Loew's State Theater the 5th inst., all have some interesting comments to make on automobiling down in Lotus Land.

"There are very few automobiles in the South Seas," states Director Tourneur, "and most of them are galloping Fords. The roads while poor, are being constantly improved, and the steamship companies are working hand in hand with local authorities to so improve the roads, that the islands will appeal to tourists who may wish to bring their automobiles with them.

"In several of the islands which we visited, native chiefs have acquired used Buicks, Dodges and Chevrolets, and have great fun riding them up and down the hard beaches.

"There is only one automobile on the island of Moorea, and this was turned over to Miss Stewart, for her use during her stay, but owing to the poor condition of the roads, she used it but little.

"We gave some of the far-famed hula-hula girls, who appear in "Never the Twain Shall Meet," their first ride, during our stay in Tahiti. This was in a Studebaker car, which we took with us. One of the native Kanaka boys ran the Studebaker off the end of the dock, and it lay under water for more than a week, before we could recover it, but at the end of that time we pulled it out, and it ran as well as ever.

"Several of the American missionaries on the islands, as well as the French government officials, own little Citroen cars, imported from France, but American cars are favored above all others."

DENT REPAIRS EASY

"Few motorists know that body damages and dents can be taken out of closed cars in the same manner as they are removed from open machines," says C. C. Eichenofer, proprietor of the Atlas Auto Works, 1338 South Hope street, body workers and topmakers. "Many owners of limousines, sedans, coupes and other closed cars seem to think that once the body has been dented, the dent is there for good. Science, combined with expert knowledge of body repairing, can take a badly smashed car and return it with all trace of damage removed, and looking like new."

Enthusiastic Preference

Whole-hearted approval has greeted the New Oakland Sixes from the start. Good words have travelled from lip to lip—now the demand for the cars is spreading like wild-fire. And with good reason:

The New Oaklands are beautiful beyond comparison. They reveal unequaled performance qualities. They incorporate more than 100 improvements including Air Cleaner, Oil Filter, Four-Wheel Brake refinements and, above all, the Harmonic Balancer, an exclusive feature which renders the Oakland engine unmatched in freedom from vibration—yet prices are $70 to $350 lower.

Is it any wonder that buyers are enthusiastic? Is it any wonder that they are forgetting Fours and other Sixes? Is it any wonder that they are placing orders for this car in a volume which is taxing Oakland's capacity to supply?

USED CAR SALES MUCH HIGHER

Reduced Stocks Are Due to Better Understanding

Dealers Appeal to Element of Fair Play

Salability is Factor Now Considered

Used car sales in the first six months of 1925 were about 17 per cent in excess of used cars for the first six months of 1924. This estimate made by the National Automobile Dealers' Association, is believed to account for the fact that the dealers had used car stocks on hand July 1 this year of 40 per cent less than the same time a year ago.

Reduced stocks and greater sales for the same period, National Association merchandising authorities believe, are due to the closer understanding that is developing between the car-using public and the car dealers. In placing before the public the facts that are involved in the handling of the automobile business, the automobile dealer has appealed only to the well-known element of fair play in the American people.

The public is rapidly beginning to understand, say national business leaders, that in using an automobile, the owner of it is wearing out value which he must be willing to lose when he is ready to talk about getting a new car. Automobile owners generally, too, are recognizing that if they are going to dispose of the old car on the basis of what they can get for it, regardless of what new car is selected, they are in a fair way to be the buyer of a potential "orphan automobile," or pay a higher list price for the new car than is justified to the quality of the car finally selected.

Salesbility of the used car as merchandise is a point the dealers are considering more closely. Thousands of automobile owners are going to find in the remainder of this year and throughout next year, that the car they chose a year ago, on the basis of the old car allowance, has no market demand and is not wanted in dealer stocks at any price.

CARS RECOVERED

More than 75 per cent of the automobiles stolen last year in Southern California were recovered by the theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, the police, and other official agencies.

They Boost Ambassador Radio Show

Folks on Los Angeles streets have stopped and looked many times in the last few days at the sight of a Moreland six-wheel truck bearing several eye-filling members of the gentler sex who occupied vantage points on the miniature of the Ambassador Hotel. They were advertising the National Radio Exposition, which opened there for a week yesterday.

Truck Carries Replica of Auditorium

The third annual national radio exposition, a large percentage of which is a Los Angeles products show, was exploited last week on downtown streets by another product for which Los Angeles is famous, the Moreland truck.

Waldo T. Tupper, managing director of the show, when he wanted a replica of the Ambassador auditorium, the home of the show, hauled through the streets, arranged for a Moreland truck to do the job. As a result the huge Ambassador auditorium model, with radio antennas on its roof and an easily heard loud speaker connected to a receiving set within, may be seen in all parts of the city, telling Los Angeles and any of the rest of the world that happens to be within ear shot, that there is a radio show now going on.

Pretty girls in generous numbers take turns accompanying the truck on its way through downtown streets.

Managing Director Tupper said the Moreland truck, like scores of Los Angeles made radio products, was a thing of which the city should be proud. The radio exposition, it was said, will act as a builder for greater Los Angeles industries, as several score eastern manufacturing experts are here to attend the event, and look over the city with a view to establishing factories here.

In this particular, it was said the Moreland truck factory at Burbank may act as a lure to the easterners, as it shows conclusively the success that can be made of the right kind of manufacturing in this locality.

DISTRIBUTE MANY MAPS

More than 8,000,000 road maps have been distributed to motorists since the first of the year by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

FAHY BACK FROM LONG TRIP EAST

A new face was seen at the Ford and Lincoln Agency of J. Benjamin Fahy a few days ago; it was Benjamin himself, who has just returned from a few months' trip throughout the East. Mr. Fahy spent most of his time in and around New York City, and he says that even though New York is a wonderful place, he is only too glad to be back.

VET DRIVERS CARELESS

Out of 4073 drivers involved in automobile accidents in New York State during May, 93 per cent had been operating motor vehicles for two years or more, according to statistics received by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Also about 82 per cent of those involved in fatal accidents had been driving for two years or more.

De Vaux Named as Director of Flint Company

An announcement of the greatest interest to members of the motor-car industry on the Pacific Coast and to followers of the automotive trades throughout the entire West, was made by Norman DeVaux, active head of the Star and Durant organizations throughout the western territory, upon his return from New York. R. H. Mulch, one of the best-known automobile sales executives in the United States and Canada, former general sales manager of the Star Motor Company of California and a veteran member of the executive staff of the Durant Motors, Inc., has been appointed to the position of vice-president and general manager of the Flint Motor Company and has already assumed complete charge of the great factory at Flint, Mich.

Another announcement, one of equal interest to close followers of matters automotive in the West, was made by DeVaux upon his return from the New York conference. At the time Mulch was elected to the board of directors, the vice-presidency and general management of the Flint factory, DeVaux was placed on the board.

The chief executive of the Star and Durant interests in the West was reticent regarding his election to the Flint directorate; but a wire from Mulch to R. C. Durant, revealed the fact that Mr. DeVaux was named a member of the board while in the East and that he assumed the added responsibilities with the Durant interests at the same time Mulch accepted his new post.

Another Pacific Coast man occupies a place on the Flint board of directors. R. C. Durant, son of W. C. Durant and himself well known in automotive manufacturing fields through his association with his father, is a director of the Flint as well.

W. C. Durant remains as president of the Flint company; but will be active in an advisory capacity rather than as a manufacturing and merchandising executive actually engaged in the activities of the plant.

Oil Company Head Returns

After an extended trip of over two months through various eastern centers, C. M. Fuller, president of the Richfield Oil Company, returned to Los Angeles this week. He is shown (at right) being greeted by C. W. Cumbers, one of the Richfield branch managers. Though not sold in the East, President Fuller says that the "gasoline of power" is widely known through the almost unbroken string of Richfield speedway victories during the last five years.

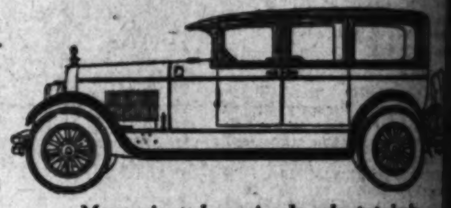
ONLY MARMON can give you
THIS PROTECTION

UNDERNEATH the extraordinary beauty of the New Marmon lies a supporting and protecting skeleton of steel, which, coupled with Marmon's unique "side bumpers," gives it a degree of safety that no car ever before possessed.

Distinctly a Marmon feature, these "side bumpers" many times have been the means of saving human life, as testified by messages from grateful owners.



Marmon's steel running boards, popularly known as "side bumpers," form an armor plate which protects both car and passenger against side collisions

The steel running boards of the New Marmon are, in truth, "side bumpers," forming bumpers for the side of the car in the same sense that bumpers in the ordinary sense protect the front and rear of the car.

The New Marmon "side bumpers" are an integral part of the Marmon frame, being hot-riveted to it. In collisions from the sides these steel running boards bear the brunt of the impact, warding off blows which would crush wood running boards to splinters and probably do further damage.

At no time does this mean so much as when your family is out in the car.

No conscientious man or woman purchasing a motor car today can afford to overlook this vital extra protection which they can get in a Marmon.

Marmon also has other exclusive safety features:

The emergency brake, which is really an emergency brake, is located just at hand's breadth—just an "octave" from the steering wheel, ready for instant use, without stooping over or groping around.

Due to its low center of gravity and perfect balance a Marmon has "the hang of the road" and avoids slipping.

A shallow ditch—a stretch of loose gravel—a pavement greasy from the first fall of rain—it's all the same to Marmon. You will be amazed by the car's cat-like ability to keep on its feet and stubbornly stick to perfect balance.

Ask any Marmon owner about this, or, better still, drive the car yourself.

No sudden emergency of traffic can surprise it—due to the instantaneousness of its powerful brakes and its lightning get-away.

When you realize that the unique and exclusive safety features of the Marmon are available in luxurious standard, four-door closed cars at practically open car price, you will understand why the Marmon factory has never been able to catch up with orders since the announcement of the New Marmon —and why you, yourself, should immediately look into the advantages of buying this remarkable car.

Grant of Fan Francisco, chairman of the league, who recently returned from a trip of inspection to the new grove. Commenting upon the unique combination of natural features which makes the Graves Grove a valuable addition to the present nucleus of tracts forming the State redwood parks, Mr. Grant said that the redwoods of the Graves Grove represent one of the finest stands so far secured, both in the height and in the unusual symmetry of the trees. An accompanying growth of Douglas fir, tanbark oaks and rhododendron, with a dense carpet of ferns of many varieties, enhances the [illegible] impressiveness of the tall trees, he added. Summing up his description, Mr. Grant declared:

"Seen through the symmetrical brown shafts of the giant trees along the steep slopes of the Graves Grove, the sweeping vistas of irregular coast line and the panorama of rugged coastal mountains, bounded by the limitless open sea to the west, the scenery is of a [illegible] magnificence never to be forgotten by the motorist who pauses to feel its thrill.

GROVE ON HIGHWAY

"I am glad that the Graves Grove is situated directly on the highway, accessible at a turn of the steering wheel to the thousands who travel by automobile along the Redwood Highway daily. In viewing the splendor of such forest as that seen in the Graves Grove no verbal appeal to preserve a few of these trees for posterity is needed. Louder than any proclamation of those who urge moderation in our past policy of destruction of great scenic assets, these trees speak in their own forceful language of our obligation to the present and to the future."

Plans for the purchase of various additional tracts for the belt of redwoods contiguous to the Redwood Highway are going forward rapidly, according to Mr. Grant. The Save the Redwoods League now has a membership of more than 5000. The contributions from these, added to special donations from time to time similar to that of Mr. Schwarz, make possible additions of redwood tracts to the State redwood park system originated by the league. Much of the redwood forest along the Redwood Highway is still owned by lumber interests. Through its efforts the Save the Redwoods League expects to purchase a sufficient number of groves to form a continuous chain in a unified park system which will insure for all time the beauty of the Redwood Highway, now recognized as one of the great scenic drives of America.

New Redwood Grove is Beauty Spot

These are a few of the views caught by the photographer in the Henry S. Graves Grove, dedicated today. Mr. Graves was formerly chief of the United States Forest Service and now provost of Yale University. The trees in the two upper photographs are part of those found in the grove while below is one of the numerous scenes observed on the way to the grove, which is ten miles south of Crescent City in Humboldt county. The stream is the south fork of the Eel River.

BUS EQUIPPED AS TRAVELING OFFICE

Los Angeles realtors have repeatedly won the "blue ribbon" for being the livest wires in the country. They have been using fine busses to carry their prospects to their tracts and subdivisions for some time, but it has remained for a Chicago firm to convert one of the new Pierce-Arrow motor coaches into a combination sight-seeing passenger bus and portable office.

According to the story told William E. Bush, Southern California Pierce-Arrow distributor, the H. O. Stone Company of Chicago found that weather conditions often prevented them from arousing sufficient enthusiasm in prospects to persuade them to travel out into suburban districts to look over new property.

They overcame that difficulty by fitting up a Pierce-Arrow motor coach as a comfortable, portable office. Three offices were installed and furnished with reed furniture, desks, drapes and even electric fans.

HUGE TOTAL FOR AUGUST!

Murphy Organization Announces $2,225,000 Gross Hudson-Essex Sales in Month

Smashing to smithereens all previous high records for volume motor car wholesale and retail business ever done by their own organization or any other organization, the Walter M. Murphy Motors Company, Hudson-Essex distributors, hung up a grand gross total for August of approximately $2,225,000.

This was the official treasurer's report given General Manager Richard F. Carlson at the month end and transmitted to Walter M. Murphy, president, as "greeting news" on his arrival home from Detroit this last week.

TOTAL IS 1947

The total number of cars—all six-cylinder closed cars—represented in this huge volume, it is stated, was 1947, most Hudson and Essex coaches with a generous sprinkling of sedans and broughams.

Walter M. Murphy

The two and a quarter-million mark, it was estimated by officials of the Murphy bookkeeping and treasury departments, will exceed the former high mark made in June by about $200,000 and is directly traceable to two things—the Murphy "low terms" plan announced early in August; the recent sharp slashes in the prices of all Hudson-Essex models.

"I am deeply gratified at the immense business done by the company during my absence," commented President Murphy on his return. "It proves that Southern Californians appreciate low prices and easy terms when combined with high quality in motor merchandise.

"My visit to Detroit was made so that I might personally impress on factory officials the necessity of an increased quota of Hudson and Essex coaches for this territory. I found the factory in a production of over 1500 cars a day, making the best cars they ever have made, and I was fortunate in securing the added allotment I wished. Thus, even with this monster and unceasing demand, we are going to be able to make immediate deliveries in general, though buyers should order at once in order to help us insure these."

The action early in August of the Murphy organization in cutting the Hudson and Essex down payment and extending the time payments so as to put cars within the reach of all, started the first flood of buying increases. This resulted, before the middle of the month, in Hudson-Essex sales in Los Angeles and Hollywood, exceeding those of any other car on the market.

While no official registration figures as yet are available, it is believed at the Murphy headquarters that these, when they ppear, may show Hudson-Essex registrations for the entire month in excess of all other cars, just as they did for the August 1-17 period.

Lithographed Map Ready for Distribution

Representing the latest wrinkle in road-map making in this section, a new lithographed map of Los Angeles and vicinity has just been completed by the map department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The map is considerably increased in size and includes in its scope Los Angeles and Orange counties and the major portions of Ventura, San Bernardino and Riverside counties. All of the main motoring roads and important points of the territory are accurately and clearly shown, and the alphabetical index columns on the reverse side give the locations of the cities, towns, postoffices, stations, camps, resorts, ranches, roads, boulevards, canyons, passes, grades, rivers, lakes, reservoirs, mountains, valleys, forests, points, coves, islands, country and sporting clubs and the thirty branch offices of the Automobile Club, parks and auto-camp grounds, schools, universities, public buildings and a host of miscellaneous points on the map.

Recent road changes throughout the vicinity are accurately recorded in the new motoring guide. Preparation of the map has been going on for practically a year. The lithograph process is a departure from previous map printing by the Automobile Club of Southern California, which makes more road maps than any other organization in the world, and the most minute details are brought out with remarkable clearness.

Approximately a six months' supply is now on hand, so that the new guides are now available to members and visiting motorists in all the thirty-one offices of the big motoring organization.

WOULD PLEASE OWNERS

The fact that Alemite has been adopted by many of the leading automobile manufacturers as standard equipment on their merchandise is only a partial indorsement of the system, in the opinion of C. A. Roesch, president of the Alemite Lubricator Company of California. Mr. Roesch says that without the added indorsement of the ultimate consumer, or the purchaser of these Alemite-equipped cars, the system would not be able to hold its own.

Another Sales-Balloon Punctured

Improvements introduced by progressive, smaller companies, such as Auburn, have completely upset motor car fashions.

New engineering advancements, the superlative qualities of the Straight Eight and original new body designs set new standards of value. They give the public a new motoring appetite; new beauty; new comfort; new luxury; and a new degree of efficient performance that introduces a totally different, better motoring era.

And the public always has and always will demand what it wants when it wants it!

Every one knows the day of reckoning comes when you buy any car. That day is when you want to sell it as a used car. The more out-of-date it is when you buy it, the more out-of-date and the less its resale value when you want to sell it, regardless of what make of car it is.

The resale value of an automobile is determined by several factors. Two of the most important are—
1. Permanency of the company behind the car and the knowledge of that permanency on the part of the public.
2. The up-to-dateness of the merchandise itself.

No automobile factory in the world combines these two requirements in a higher degree today than does Auburn.

Auburn will continue its present ahead-of-the-times models through 1926, not because their business has been so poor that we have sold below the production schedule required by high finance ambitions—

Not because we have been caught with inventories and commitments that make such a move necessary—

But because the new Auburn models are the patterns for others to imitate. Because these advanced, improved and most up-to-date cars are far ahead of competition and are enjoying such unprecedented public favor.

Our business has increased to such an extent that it shows the public realizes the new Auburn models will not only be leaders in 1926 but will still be ahead in 1927.

Here again is conclusive evidence of the ability of the small manufacturer of a fine car in Auburn's class to lead in improvements and give better value for less commensurate cost.

Proof for these claims is found in the Auburn car itself. It is found by making comparisons!

Mass-production factories cannot afford to immediately change. Their manufacturing programs are too large and involved. Their commitments for material are made too far in advance. Their accumulation of inventories and finished cars is too great to be "scrapped". It must be sold—sold at any price. But "selling talk" never has and never will substitute for modernity.

The public is motor-educated. When buyers exchange their dollars for a car they want the newest, finest and biggest measure of value. And they know the test of this is not the car builder's past reputation alone. It is the car's present reputation.

Since the new Auburn models, conceded by many, even by competitors, to be the most beautiful cars on the market, were announced at the last New York Automobile Show, there have been many imitators. Auburn's strikingly original color schemes have been imitated. Auburn's new, low, improved, body designs have been imitated.

Imitators have tried to cash in on the great public enthusiasm of Auburn's success in pioneering and perfecting the Straight Eight type of motor.

But they remain what they are—just imitations!

Auburn's sales growth has been phenomenal and an oversold condition has prevailed in our factories throughout the entire spring and still prevails.

That is the public's answer, so far as Auburn is concerned, to the "no change of models" propaganda.

That is why the increasing number of discriminating people are turning to Auburn's custom-built exclusiveness.

You cannot mistake the Auburn for any other car—it is different and distinctive! And you will seek in vain for all the things in other cars which the owner of the Auburn enjoys,

In contrast to the propaganda of "big" companies Auburn says to the public—"See the new Auburn, compare it point for point with any car, make your own tests, and if the car does not sell itself we will not ask you to buy.

20 YEARS AGO IN MOTORDOM

FROM THE FILES OF THE AUTOMOBILE CLUB OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Editorial comment in a newspaper of twenty years ago read: "For some time John D. Rockefeller has been devoted to motoring, and recently he purchased a buzz wagon for his wife. Mr. Rockefeller's machine is of forty horsepower, and is capable of making forty miles an hour, but the Standard Oil magnate will not permit his chauffeur to drive faster than eight miles an hour. Golf and motoring have wrought wonderful changes in his health, and it is said that he is now in no terror of the richest concoctions of his chef.

Some drivers of the "chug-chug wagons of the early days in auto history had to resort to wily tricks in order to go faster than the low Los Angeles speed limits allowed, and yet not be caught by the police. They oiled their number plates so that they would catch the dust and prevent detection. It was proposed to place number plates higher on the cars in order to foil the lawless drivers.

In support of an antispeeding movement of twenty years ago, the Automobile Club of Southern California adopted resolutions condemning those automobilists who drive their cars at speeds prohibited by law. The board of directors recommended to the Los Angeles City Council and Chief of Police that a number of bicycles be equipped with speedometers for the use of the police department, so that officers may determine to a certainty whether motorists are going at prohibited speeds. The Auto Club also tendered the use of one or more machines so equipped to the police.

Records state that the first automobile was made in France in 1769, and was the steam carriage of M. Cugnot. It was, of course, an extremely crude vehicle. Cugnot's ideas were a century in advance of the mechanical means by which they could be realized. It was not until 1885 that the auto next came in evidence. This was another steam vehicle. In 1889 the appearance of a petroleum motor with quarternary explosion features, gave the impetus to the motor vehicle of the present day, according to the old records.

Highest Links in Country Aids Appetite

Golf—away up above the clouds.

That was the kick enjoyed by this Star car party of golf bugs.

Learning of the Big Bear Golf and Country Club near Big Bear Lake in the San Bernardino Mountains, said to be the highest elevated links in America, a Star car party with a weakness for the famous Scotch game drove up there to try the course.

And what an environment in which to play; pine-covered slopes, clean, crisp mountain air, a beautiful shimmering lake and a congenial foursome!

Everything seemed to add zest to the game, and a lot of good fun was enjoyed chasing the little white pellet around the course.

After the game was over an attack was made on the commissary department at the country club. But the chef had had previous experience with the ravished golf bug and was all prepared for the onslaught. With appetites appeased the Star car party fell to commenting upon the fine golf course and the ease of access.

As one of the party put it, "I have always understood the control road up here is a lulu, what with all the stiff grades and the many curves. Why, with my Star coupster I didn't notice any grades at all. I just whizzed along and was all set for the game on arriving."

A cart that may be collapsed and stored in a small space has been invented.

Whose Rubber Boots Are These?

Hundreds of things, some valuable and some not, are lost every day by motorists on the highways. Of course, they are always found—by some one. If the finder is one of the drivers of the patrol for the Automobile Club of Southern California he turns what is found into a department where it may be claimed by the owner. A pair of boots, a lunch pail, a rosary, a pair of gloves and other articles have found their way to the lost and found department, where they await claimants. Here we have Miss Phyllis Barthels holding up a pair of first aids to duck hunters.

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

The Gardner Motor Company is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary this year. Russell E. Gardner started in the carriage business in 1875, and has been connected with the manufacturing of vehicles ever since.

TRACTORS INCREASING IN EUROPE

Shipments 71 Per Cent More to July 31 Than for 1924 Period

That the farmers of Europe and South America are developing crop-producing land through use of motorized equipment to a higher degree at this time than ever before in history is indicated in Fordson tractor foreign sales reports just made public by the Ford Motor Company. Shipments of tractors during the seven months of 1925 ending July 31 were more than 74 per cent greater than during the corresponding period of 1924.

Foreign deliveries of tractors reached the new high record of 13,140 during the first seven months of 1925, and in view of the rapidly mounting demand for power farming machinery in the old world, the outlook is bright for an even greater increase in foreign sales, it was stated.

A feature in connection with the European shipments is the fact that in many instances the farmers have advanced three or four generations in progress in turning to the tractor for motive power. On many picturesque farms in France, Belgium, Russia and the Slovak nations, the Fordson is taking over work which was heretofore done by oxen. In other instances the new tractor is merely being added to a fleet on some of the larger farms.

Foreign deliveries of Ford cars and trucks as well as Lincoln cars set a new record during the first seven months of 1925. Sales of Ford cars and trucks totaled 124,345, or 22,000 more than were delivered in foreign countries during the corresponding period of 1924, not including foreign and domestic sales of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., which totaled 52,300 during the same months this year.

CHRYSLER SIX

Women Are Quick To Sense Chrysler Quality

The Chrysler Six taught the American public that neither high cost nor cumbersome size is necessary to the superfine motor car.

That's the reason for the ever-strengthening hold of the new Chrysler Six upon the great numbers of discriminating men and women who are not satisfied with anything short of the utmost in motor car quality, comfort and performance.

Women especially find the Chrysler Six the ideal personal car—easy to handle, carefree, smooth running and delightful in its ease of riding.

The situation today is perfectly plain. Chrysler Six engineering, achieving even more revolutionary results, has simply made it unnecessary to pay a huge premium for motoring luxury.

In roadability, in generous seating capacity, in every phase of performance, in dependability and in long life, this new Chrysler Six equals, or surpasses, all the other fine cars.

Yet its new purchase price is far lower. Its upkeep cost is far lower. Its operating cost is far lower.

Add to this, the irresistible riding and driving appeal of the Chrysler Six to the man and woman who know motor cars—and you have one conclusive reason why new Chrysler Six sales mount month after month to new high marks.

Try this Chrysler Six performance yourself. We are always eager to have you prove the car's unprecedented results to your own satisfaction.

Two Famous Racers Entered in Hill Climb

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

COLORADO SPRINGS, Sept. 5. Two of the world's oldest racing celebrities will attempt to add the laurels of the Pike's Peak Hill Climb Race at Colorado Springs, Colo., to their list of victories on Monday—Ralph K. Mulford and Ralph De Palma, who have fought it out in many a race, are both contenders this year in this contest which has become of international interest not only among racing followers but among automobile owners.

However, the contest will not be confined to these two alone as the list of entries includes several western drivers who have proved their nerve and ability; among whom are Charles H. Myers who, in a Studebaker, missed the record last year by only two-fifths of a second; Glen Shultz, who is classed among the topnotchers, will pilot a Stutz car and is one of the favorites; Floyd Clymer and Harold Brinker have each won a number of races in the West.

This year cars of all classes will compete with each other being handicapped only by weight; cars with a piston displacement of 183 cubic inches and under will have to weigh not less than 1600 pounds; cars with piston displacement over 183 and up to 300 piston displacement, will have a minimum weight of 2400 pounds.

The growing importance of this contest is evidenced by the fact that the International News Service will send a man from New York to cover it this year.

SHERIFF GETS NEW AUTOS

Now the bootleggers of Los Angeles county will have to "leg it" pretty rapidly if they want to get away from the Sheriff's deputies. The Sheriff's office has a lot of brand new, fast Hudson and Essex coaches which will be used specifically for chasing gentry dealing in un-Volsteady liquids.

This was the announcement yesterday of County Mechanical Superintendent Davidson, under whose supervision Wallace Hodge, superintendent of the county garage, accepted delivery of a fleet of twenty-seven Hudson and Essex coaches, purchased for the county by Jack Bean from Fred H. Schreiner, one of the Walter M. Murphy Motor Company's metropolitan dealers.

This fleet of cars sold to the county totaled $32,385.

Sales Boosted by New Model After Showing

Sales of the new Cadillac during the first week following its introduction were 40 per cent higher than during the first week after the introduction of the V-63 models in 1923 and surpassed by a wide margin any preceding week in the twenty-three years of Cadillac's sales history. Orders for future delivery obtained during the week were also 86 per cent higher than any previous week.

Ample justification for the great expenditure of time, effort and capital involved in creating the new and improved Cadillac and the lower price is seen in these figures by Lawrence P. Fisher, president and general manager of Cadillac Motor Car Company.

"Few people realize the great amount of time, capital and effort required to bring out a new and improved model," he says. "Our investment of $2,500,000 in jigs, tools and dies necessary to incorporate the improvements was only a part. In order to reduce the price, great forward strides in manufacturing and changes in factory equipment were also necessary. Our new foundries have just been completed at an additional cost of $2,250,000. They were built chiefly to give us closer control of Cadillac quality. They also make possible greater economy in manufacturing. The new car is the first one for which all of our foundry work has been done at the company's main plant."

SHORTER CAR FORESEEN

facturers to Bring Out "Bug" Type Soon, is Forecast From Detroit

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

DETROIT, Sept. 5.—Little motor cars on wheelbases ten inches r than the Ford and capable of giving fifty to sixty miles on a of gasoline will be introduced to America by Detroit manu- rers soon after the new year. It may be possible that some of will be exhibited for the first time in the national automobile at New York and Chicago. This development follows certain ictions made earlier in the year that the automobiles of the future steadily decrease in size and eventually bring Americans to cars about the size of a small kitchen table.

This, of course, is the European idea which the United States is going to copy and to that end Continental Motors Corporation, largest of the engine makers, has imported from England a standard model of the type of small or "bug" car widely used in Europe, and contemplates designing engines which will go into smaller cars for this country.

This car is the Austin, which has been found best adapted to redesigning for use here. Such cars, it is pointed out, will be built and marketed here chiefly for city or interurban driving over smooth paved roads and they will be two and four-passenger jobs.

IS ECONOMICAL

The makers who will introduce them calculate that the "bug" cars will fill a distinct niche in motoring service for city dwellers.

First: Because of fuel economy.

Second: They can be parked in a ninety-inch space.

Third; Our cities are now practically all paved; so much so that there is a new field for runabouts of a smaller and more refined type.

These new runabouts, or "bugs" as they have been called through their diminutive size, will be exact miniatures of the larger cars that we are familiar with. Most of them will be closed jobs and their body lines will be every bit as snappy as those of the larger models. They will be equipped with baby balloon tires, disc or wire wheels, gear shift, instrument board head lamps, four-wheel brakes and practically every standard accessory now in vogue.

Some idea of the specifications that the little cars will embody may be gathered from the Austin, which has a wheelbase of 75 inches, and a 46-inch tread. It weighs about 750 pounds and is hung so low that a person sitting at the wheel can reach over and touch the ground without much effort.

The engine is four-cylinder, water-cooled with 2.2-inch bore and 3-inch stroke. It is rated at 7.8 horsepower.

Steering gear is worm and wheel type and there are four brakes, two operated by hand on the front wheels, and the regular foot brakes on the rear wheels.

The Austin will travel from 30 to 35 miles an hour with ease and has three speeds forward.

The tires are balloon cords 26 x 3 1-2.

The gasoline tank holds four gallons and the engine is said to give 40 to 45 miles to each gallon.

The American designs, when they are brought out will reveal body lines of smarter contour than those of the English car. Chassis, engine and general equipment will be revamped to American standards.

1,352,000 CARS IN STATE

There are now more than 1,352,000 automobiles registered in the State of California, according to late records of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Car Without Driver Threads Busy Streets

Word has just been received by officials of the W. P. Herbert Company, Chandler and Cleveland six distributors, of a remarkable wireless demonstration that was held on busy Broadway, New York City, when a radio-controlled 1926 Chandler threaded its way through that city's heavy traffic.

"In the press of the dense traffic of busy broadway, New York City, there was recently staged a wireless demonstration that bids fair to go down in history as the most remarkable radio demonstration that New Yorkers have ever seen," states J. A. Carlin, vice-president of the W. P. Herbert Company. "A new 1926 stock Chandler touring car was piloted safely, and solely by radio control, through the maze of traffic on that most crowded of all metropolitan thoroughfares—Broadway.

"This radio-controlled, driverless Chandler was made to turn corners, shift gears, blow the horn, stop and start by a system of wireless relays. It obeyed perfectly the will of the driver, as expressed in another Chandler which followed some fifteen feet behind.

"The Chandler was driven down Broadway to Fifty-seventh street, across to Park Avenue, north to Eightieth Street and back again to the starting point, a distance that covered every possible traffic condition and emergency hazard.

"The inventor of the radio-control apparatus, Mr. Francis P. Houdina, rode on the running board of the Chandler solely as a precaution, but did not at any time touch the steering wheel, gear-shift lever or brakes during the demonstration. The Chandler was propelled at between five and ten miles an hour—this low rate of speed being used because of the extremely heavy traffic through which the car was piloted.

"The Chandler in which the control apparatus was carried contained a small continuous-wave transmitting set which employed four five-watt tubes as oscillators. The wave-lengths used in the demonstration were 109 and 120 meters.

"By a system of dots the operator in the controlling Chandler could make any desired relay act in the Chandler which was being driven by radio control. When caused to act by radio, the relays started motors which brought about actions necessary to control the car.

"While considerable credit for this remarkable exhibition is due to Mr. Houdina's marvelously intricate apparatus," says Mr. Carlin, "the ideal ease with which the 1926 Chandler can be steered and its marvelous facility in gear shifting undoubtedly had much to do with the success of the demonstration."

Price of Moon Cars Slashed by Factory

The wide acceptance by the public of the Moon Series-A cars and the tremendous sales of these cars during the first seven and a half months of this year, coupled with the effective program of economy in manufacturing, has made possible a general price reduction in Moon cars, according to Don P. Smith, Southern California Moon distributor.

This price reduction took effect the 1st inst., and applies to all Moon Series "A" cars with the exception of the sport roadster.

"The new Moon Series "A" sixes represent the greatest automobile values ever produced considering the prices and the numerous improvements included in the design of these cars," said Smith.

"This fact is clearly borne out by the way the motoring public has bought them. The motoring public today is getting more real value for the dollar invested in motor cars than ever before in the history of the industry."

FISHING PROMISED IN GLACIER PARK

Good fishing in the waters of Glacier National Park is promised in the future, according to advice received by the outing bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. An informal survey of the waters indicates there is a great deal more fish food than was formerly believed to exist.

The Department of Interior and the Bureau of Fisheries now will co-operate in the heavier stocking of the lakes and streams in the park.

The Coach $695 F. O. B. Flint, Mich.

The Public Acclaims this the finest Low Priced Coach

Built on the new Chevrolet chassis with construction typical of the highest priced cars—powerful motor; a new disc clutch, the easiest-acting you have ever handled; extra strong rear axle with banjo-type housing; long semi-elliptic springs—this car provides a remarkable combination of strength, power and comfort.

But in addition it is a beautiful car. Its fine Fisher body meets your ideals of fine appearance and comfort. It is finished in sage-green and black Duco whose lustre and color last for years. For such a coach to be priced so low is truly an achievement in motor car manufacture. See this car today.

CAR FROM HERE MAKES RECORD

Running Time to New York 104 Hours 40 Minutes

Seven Days' Trip Ends With Time to Spare

Studebaker is Given High Praise by Driver

BY M. H. (MIKE) NEWMAN,
Veteran Showman and Aviator
[SPECIAL TO THE TIMES]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The Christie Studio-Studebaker standard six coach which left Los Angeles a week ago on an experiment for the moving picture producers of the Pacific Coast to preview films across country arrived in New York and checked into the Western Union offices on Broadway at Fifty-second street Wednesday, fifteen hours and twenty minutes ahead of schedule. The actual running time of the car was 104 hours and forty minutes. The car traveled 3501 miles and made an average of 33.5 miles an hour. This is a record for a closed car.

The Studebaker coach was escorted into New York by the officials of the Studebaker Corporation of America and the Producers' Distributing Corporation, with sirens screaming, bands playing and the crowds cheering wildly. Everywhere the car stopped crowds blocked traffic and special police had to be called several times to disperse crowds who were blocking the traffic arteries. New York knew the car was coming and received it royally.

TAKEN TO THEATER

After checking in to the Western Union the coach was taken to the Colony Theater, where the writer turned over to Mr. B. S. Moss, the owner, a preview film of the latest Christie film, "Seven Days," which was previewed personally by the writer in the distributing centers of the country. Mayor Hylan of New York met the car, and was given a letter of greeting from Mayor George Cryer of Los Angeles. Mr. Moss was presented with letters of greeting and congratulation from Al Christie, Cecil B. DeMille, Sid Grauman, Frank L. Newman of the Paramount organization, Sol Lesser of the West Coast Theaters and John P. Goring of the Forum Theater in Los Angeles. The letters congratulated him on being the first theater owner in New York to receive a preview film delivered by automobile from the Pacific Coast.

New York is talking about this car today—a closed car loaded down with an extra gas tank and a heavy load of baggage, which did not start from the West Coast to make a record, but which because of its endurance, dependability and performance, was able to pile up a record for automobile performance in traveling that it will take some time to equal. The writer rode in the car all the way and drove it most of the way, assisted by Studebaker dealers across the United States who acted as pilots and relief drivers.

PRAISES STUDEBAKER

Each night we slept in a hotel after previewing the film. But we did step on the gas when we hit the road, and the Studebaker gave performance such as I have never seen equalled in all my years in experience with automobiles and airplane motors. To my mind, the Studebaker is the most miraculous car that I have ever driven. It outmasters everything I have ridden in. We hit sand, wind and rain storms, had to go through three bad washouts when detours were impossible, and detoured a total of 372 miles because of cloudbursts, bridges gone and road construction. We traveled over very rough roads, but the going was made easier and the car was able to make good time because of the Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers which ate up the bumps and helped the car hold the road. We used Pennzoil for lubrication all the way through and Firestone balloons carried us.

GET ROYAL RECEPTION

In every city through which we passed we were given a royal reception. To the Studebaker dealers as well as the theater owners and managers who came in close contact with and rode in the coach, the performance of the car was a real revelation. The stamina it showed in going through more than a hundred miles of gumboed roads in Kansas when other cars were stuck makes the trip an outstanding one. I have made tough motor trips in China, India and the tropics, but some of these American roads are in very bad shape and certainly need paving to help promote more transcontinental travel, especially at this time of year.

The Studebaker Corporation officials and the officers of the Producers' Distributing organization in New York were handed a letter from E. R. Carpenter, president of the Paul G. Hoffman Company in Los Angeles, who worked out the idea of sending the Studebaker on this trip. The letter carried the phrase: "We just wanted to show you what kind of a car Studebaker builds. How do you like the results?" I would give a lot to be in Mr. Carpenter's office when he gets a reply to that message—for I know they are going to be some of the most enthusiastic he ever received.

After remaining in New York for about five days the Studebaker coach will start on a ten weeks' trip through the East and Middle West, previewing the film for all the theaters that are going to run the film "Seven Days." And when these theater men and the public learn about my trip in the Studebaker, they'll realize that New York is not seven days away from good old Los Angeles. I only hope that I will be able to ride all the way home in this car.

My hat is off to Studebaker.

"SHAKEDOWN" OF MANUFACTURERS SEEN IN OUTPUT

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

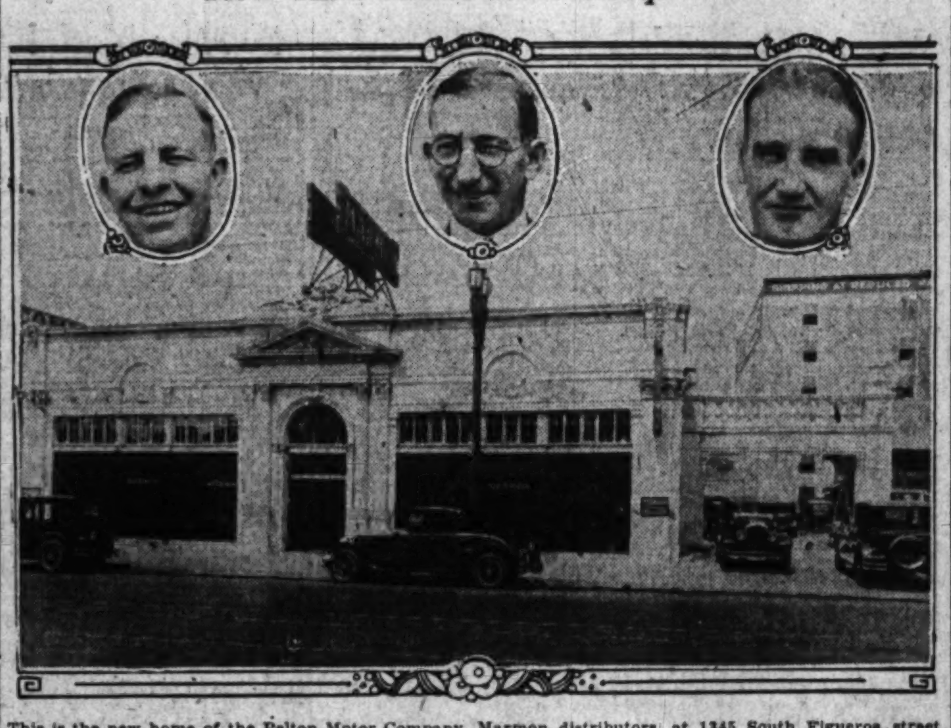
CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Seventy automobile makers in the field, with eighteen of them doing 94 per cent of the business, marks the final phase of the shaking down of the motor industry, according to the monthly Business Bulletin of LaSalle Extension University published today.

"Price cuts of 10 to 20 per cent, with many improvements added to make cars more attractive in addition to the lowered prices, are the latest features of the operation of the biological law of the survival of the fittest," the bulletin states.

"Bonanza rush of the automobile industry a score of years ago saw 356 makers in the race for fortune. In 1920 seventy-seven makers remained. In 1924 there were seventy-four, with fifty-six of them fighting for 4 per cent of the business.

"The eighteen principal makers, however, have turned out during the first half of this year the largest production of automobiles ever recorded. Exports for the year are 30 per cent more than last year."

New Auto Home Now Completed



This is the new home of the Pelton Motor Company, Marmon distributors, at 1345 South Figueroa street. The service department has just been completed, although the company has occupied the building for some time, and now the entire activities of the concern are under one roof. In the ovals above, from left to right, are George S. Pelton, president of the concern; Herbert E. Pelton, service manager and secretary-treasurer, and Lincoln G. Andrews, sales manager.

Sales Chief From East is Visitor Here

HAROLD S. VANCE

Making a swing around the United States presiding at dealers' instruction conferences, Harold S. Vance, general sales manager of the Studebaker Corporation of America spent several days in Los Angeles, spoke to more than fifty Studebaker dealers of the Southwest, and saw Los Angeles.

It was his first visit to the City of the Angels in more than three years, and like other easterners he expressed amazement not only at the financial, industrial and realty growth of Los Angeles, but also at the tremendous increase in the sales of automobiles.

"Everywhere, and especially in the West, we are finding that the public is beginning to realize what the Studebaker policy of one-cost in manufacturing, without any outside profits to pay, means to the motor-car buyer. Sales are certainly reflecting it. Los Angeles demonstrated it for the month of August, when the Paul G. Hoffman Company sold more Studebaker cars than it had in three years for a like period. Arizona has crashed the market with the announcement that out of every four quality cars sold in that State, one is a Studebaker. Other Western States have almost a like report to make. Without question, this is going to be another 'Studebaker year,'" Vance declared.

He spent several days in Los Angeles as the guest of E. R. Carpenter, president of the Paul G. Hoffman Company, and A. W. Maxwell, Studebaker branch manager here. He has held meetings of dealers in San Francisco, Los Angeles and El Paso, and is now swinging through the extreme south, and will then go back to the Studebaker factory at South Bend, Ind.

OPEN BIDS FOR WIDENING ROAD

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 5.—The California Highway Commission today opened bids for the widening and straightening project on the Mountain Springs grade in Eastern San Diego county, on the State highway, between San Diego and El Centro. The grading will be done in preparation of the paving as part of the 1926 program.

The grading will be done over a section of 6.90 miles in length. Sharp curves will be widened to provide for a high standard highway when the paving is placed a year hence.

Ed W. Dahl of Santa Ana was the lowest bidder. His offer was for $49,950; engineer's estimate was $60,000.

The work will be financed from Southern California's share of the 1925 Federal aid.

The award of contract will be considered at the next regular meeting of the highway commission.

Company Now Occupying All of New Home

Announcement has just been made by Herbert S. Pelton, secretary-treasurer of the Pelton Motor Company, Marmon distributors, that the service department at the new building, 1345 South Figueroa street, has been completed and will be occupied tomorrow.

Although Pelton Motors have been in their new home since May 23, it was not until last week that the finishing touches were put on the back end of the building where service and parts departments will be maintained.

The delay on this section was due to the inability of the occupants of the old building on this portion of the property to move into their new headquarters until after the front part of the Marmon building was all ready to occupy. As soon as they vacated, however, work was started on the rest of the Pelton establishment and by rushing things along it was rapidly completed.

"Now that all Marmon departments are back under one roof," says Herbert Pelton, "we are in a better position than at any time in our history to render the last word in service to Marmon owners, and we are anxious that all our patrons, whether their cars are in need of attention or not, shall drop in and look over the establishment."

Lincoln G. Anderson, sales manager, echoes that invitation and extends it to anyone who is interested in fine automobiles.

Mr. Herbert Pelton has recently returned from a visit to the factory where he picked up many new ideas regarding the equipment which should be in all modern service departments, and says that he has already ordered the latest types for Marmon.

Velie Makes Changes in Line Leader

Velie Motor Corporation of Moline, Ill., has made certain changes in the appearance of the Royal sedan, leader of the Velie line.

This body now has a full streamline effect, heightened by a double molding about the body which meets a single molding extending from the full-nickeled radiator shell across the hood and cowl. The curved steel visor is built integral with the roof.

The car is finished in Duco, two-color options being afforded, duotone gray and duotone blue, each with a hairline molding stripe of imitation gold. Upholstery is of Chase velmo with head lining and trimming of matched broadcloth. The rear seat accommodates three. Arm rests, carpet-covered nickel-mounted foot rail, leather-covered chain robe hanger, dome light operated from toggle switch in right door pillar and combination compact and smoking-case located on back of front seat are provided. Hardware is of Butler satin finish with ring-type pull-to handles on all doors. Door handles are rotary self-locking type with outside locking handle on right front door. Four-turn window regulators are provided on doors, with Clement single-lift regulators on rear quarter windows.

Instrument board is of black walnut in natural finish, matching garnish rails. Speedometer, oil gauge, gasoline gauge, ammeter and clock are inclosed under glass in a single panel of satin silver finish. For night driving instruments are indirectly lighted by a cleverly concealed lamp contained within the instrument panel.

STANFORD PLANS HIGH VOLTAGE EXPERIMENT

Plans for a 2,000,000-volt testing laboratory at Leland Stanford University, Palo Alto, Cal., as recently announced, are taken as an indication that the Pacific Coast may retain for a long time its present leadership in high-tension commercial transmission of electrical energy. Two great systems in Southern and Central California, respectively, already employ 220,000 volts, the highest in the world for commercial practice.

The Leland Stanford laboratory, in which the largest power companies of the Pacific Coast have an interest, is intended to make experiments in transmission. It is regarded as preparatory to the time when electrical energy in the Pacific Coast region will have to be transmitted much greater distances than the 250 miles now in effect, and consequently at even higher voltages than 220,000.

The bank of six transformers intended for this laboratory, the first of its kind for commercial use, are already being completed in shops of the General Electric Company at Pittsfield, Mass. It is at that same plant at Pittsfield that transmission at one and two million

REASONS ARE GIVEN FOR PRICE SLASH

"The new low schedule of prices, announced last week by Reo, has been made possible by increased production, following several months of unprecedented demand for Reo products, standardization on one passenger-car chassis and one ton-and-a-quarter Speed Wagon chassis, and the sound condition of the Reo organization," says Herbert E. Woodward, president of the Reo Motor Car Company of California.

"For several years Reo has been building one passenger-car chassis with a six-cylinder, fifty-horsepower engine. This chassis has been regularly, but gradually, refined. Continual experimentation has kept the unit apace with the most modern developments in automobile design and manufacture, although not a single startling departure from conventional practice has been made by the company."

AUTOIST DIVIDES DOLLAR

"According to carefully compiled statistics it is authoritatively stated that the dollar which the average motorist spends for the maintenance of his automobile is divided into five parts," states A. H. Harris, service superintendent of the W. P. Herbert Company, Chandler and Cleveland distributors. "The largest part of the dollar, 43 per cent, goes toward depreciation; 35.5 per cent is for tires and insurance investments; 10.5 per cent for gasoline, 10.4 for repairs and 2.6 per cent for oil. It was in view of the large amount of money which motorists were obliged to pay in the way of car depreciation, due to lack of proper lubrication, that prompted Cleveland engineers to continue the "one shot" lubrication system as an integral part of the 1926 Cleveland models.

Four Advantages of The New CADILLAC Radiat

While the new Cadillac radiator, with its thermostatic shutters, is very much worth while for its appearance alone, it is, in fact, a distinct engineering improvement with a direct bearing on economy and efficiency—in these four ways:

1. The entire engine is quickly warmed to the temperature of operating efficiency.
2. The carburetor and air entering being directly heated—perfect vaporization is assured and power consequently increased. During winter the Cadillac thus starts with a minimum use of the choke.
3. Crankcase and cylinder blocks are also quickly heated to normal operating temperature which, with Cadillac crankcase ventilation, prevents oil dilution.
4. More energy is used as power, and less wasted as mere heat.

These shutters, furthermore, are integral with the radiator, not a mere accessory for winter. They function in summer as well as winter.

From a background of 23 years of continuous success, the new Cadillac emerges as the masterpiece in the fine car field. It is the ultramodern version of motor car perfection. It is complete verification and vindication of Cadillac's leadership.

ster Park: There are available routes between Los Angeles Ventura—either by way of Co- Grade, Santa Susana Pass, or way of Newhall, Saugus and Valley. Paved road is had on of the three. Located north of Ventura seven at the junction of the Ven- River and Coyote Creek, one find camp ground, store and the conveniences necessary to a day's outing. It is a to- distance of seventy-eight miles way of Conejo Grade, and is the test route.

Los Angeles to San Diego: Pave- is continuous over the Coast by way of East Seventh and Whittier Boulevard or graph Road to Fullerton and by way of Anaheim, Santa San Juan Capistrano and side to San Diego, with the ption of several detours—one Montebello and Pico, five in length over paved road; entering Whittier, one and tenths miles long over paved another two miles in length fair dirt road just north of Juan Capistrano; another due bridge construction just south of Juan Capistrano; and still an- at San Onofre. There is also very small detour at the Santa Railroad crossing on the Tele- Road.

optional paved road is avail- from Los Angeles by way of ington Park, Bell and Downey Fullerton. Due to shoulder con- tion at several points along route south of San Juan Capistrano, motorists should use care. It is a distance of 132 miles from Los Angeles to San Diego over the Coast Route.

An optional return route offers itself, by way of the Inland Route. Due to construction work on the Macy street bridge leaving Los Angeles, it is necessary to use Aliso street. Pavement is continuous by way of El Monte, Puente, Pomona and Ontario; thence via Wineville, Riverside, Perris, Elsinore and Temecula to the San Diego county line, with the exception of a short stretch of dirt road north of Elsinore and another two miles in length just south of Elsinore. The pavement is next followed by way of Bonsall, Fallbrook, Escondido and the Poway Grade to San Diego, with the exception of 2.8 miles of good dirt road just south of Bonsall.

From Los Angeles to San Diego by way of the Inland route is a distance of 177 miles.

Los Angeles to the beaches: Paved road will be followed by either Wilshire, Pico or Washington Boulevards to Santa Monica and Venice, with the exception of a detour of .9 of a mile in Carthay Center on Wilshire Boulevard, and .2 of a mile on Pico Boulevard in the vicinity of Pruess Road. Paved road will next be followed south along the ocean by way of Playa Del Rey to Redondo, Long Beach, following along the coast to Newport and Balboa retracing by way of Santa Ana and the Whittier Boulevard to Los Angeles. Should the trip prove too long, paved road may be followed from Long Beach by way of Long Beach Boulevard, Truck Boulevard or the Harbor Road, to Los Angeles, with the exception of a detour on the latter route between Manchester and Sixty-sixth street, making it necessary to use San Pedro.

Popularity of Leverless Gear is Predicted

Within two years leading automobile companies will be advertising their product as having the leverless mechanical gear shift, in the opinion of Harris Hanshue, manager of the Apperson Motor Car Company distribution headquarters here.

Hanshue's predictions are based upon information contained in a recent bulletin from the Apperson factory which stated that the Apperson Motor Company had obtained the manufacturing and sales rights to the mechanical shift which has been one of its exclusive features for the past three years.

These rights were the property of the Cutler-Hammer Company up to July 1 of this year, when their contracts expired. The Apperson factory obtained the rights and will manufacture the shift for the trade.

"The factory has had many requests from other motor-car manufacturers for the gear shift," says Mr. Hanshue, "and it has been decided to sell them. D. C. McCord, president of Apperson, told me on my recent trip east that he had communications from several of the leading manufacturers stating that all their numerous and expensive experiments with gear shifts similar to the Apperson's had failed to produce anything nearly so perfect as our shift. Up to now we were powerless to supply the demand, as we had the rights to the entire output of the Cutler-Hammer Company and needed all they could make for our own cars. But with the manufacturing in our hands we can enlarge the production facilities and give the shift to the trade."

The Apperson mechanical gear shift is located on the steering wheel. A small lever is placed in a notch representing either low, second, high, reverse or neutral, and upon the next depression of the clutch pedal this gear is engaged.

PLAN GAS TAX

Charles Deland, secretary of the State of Michigan, proposes the abolition of the yearly automobile license plates and the levying of a three-cent gasoline tax to carry the entire expenses of maintaining and constructing State highways. He believes that the elimination of the yearly license tax would "save the disposition of car owners" and cheapen the cost of highway revenue collections. He would issue plates at a nominal cost, to last the lifetime of the car it identified.

HALT AT WHISTLE

Under a new ruling in New Orleans, La., all vehicles must come to a complete stop when a police whistle is sounded. This system is for the purpose of catching pay roll bandits and other hold-up men who use automobiles to escape through the downtown districts.

Latest Marmon Model is on Display Here

Holding the center of the stage at the Pelton Motor Company is the latest model to be produced by the Nordyke & Marmon Company.

It is the Marmon victoria coupe, seating four people.

George S. Pelton, president of the Pelton Motor Company, says that the new car is the result of a recognized demand for a model distinctly new and different.

"We believe it is unquestionably the best looking Victoria type car the industry has ever produced," he says. "It is a stylish, practical car for four people with rounded rear corners, sun visor which blends into the sweeping lines of the top, and a really comfortable folding seat with coiled springs and upholstery the same as the main cushion."

The driver sits slightly forward of the main passenger seat and the driver's seat is sufficiently wide for relaxed comfort. The main seat is commodious for two passengers and the seat for the fourth passenger folds neatly under the cowl when not in use.

There is a handy package compartment six inches deep with an opening 22 by 14 inches. A large golf or baggage compartment is accessible through the rear deck.

The Victoria Coupe is mounted on the standard Marmon 136-inch chassis.

CITES VEHICLE LAW

"Few drivers of automobiles know that they are breaking a law when they are driving closer than fifteen feet to the car in front," said Don P. Smith, Moon distributor. "The State law reads, 'the driver of a motor vehicle shall not follow another vehicle or an animal or a person closer than fifteen feet when upon any public highway outside of a business or residence district.'"

FRIDAY START BRINGS LUCK

Thirteenth Day of Month Has No Terrors

Los Angeles Couple Finish Long Trip

Veteran "Hoghead" Pilots Car 12,103 Miles

Starting on Friday, March 13, for good luck, Mr. and Mrs. William Woods of Los Angeles set out on a half-year's tour that carried them to nearly every section of the United States and rolled up 12,103 miles on the speedometer of their Franklin sedan. They recently returned.

Just what model Franklin theirs is would be difficult to state, for it is a 1923 chassis with the motor converted to the new high-power standard and has a 1918 sedan body, which combination was a puzzler for many motorists on the road driving what they considered were peppy cars when the seemingly years-old Franklin sedan passed them up on the hills.

SLEEP IN CAR

Mr. and Mrs. Woods, both more than 60 years of age, started out on the trip planning to sleep in the car every night on the road (the principal reason he had the old sedan body mounted on the newer chassis was because it was arranged for this purpose) and prepare their own meals. They were successful in doing this and state they got the making and breaking of camp down to such a fine science it was no trouble at all—in fact, thoroughly enjoyable.

Leaving Los Angeles, they traveled to Florida by way of Yuma, Tucson, El Paso, San Antonio (with a side trip to Galveston,) New Orleans, Mobile, St. Petersburg and Miami. Deserting the car for a few days they made a trip by boat to Havana, Cuba. From Florida they drove to Washington, Gettysburg, Erie, Cleveland, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, Chicago, Des Moines, Sioux Falls, Fargo and Winnipeg, Brandon, Medicine Hat, Calgary, Banff and Lake Louise in Canada. Recrossing into the United States from Kings Gate to Idaho, they visited Spokane, Seattle, Portland and Yosemite on the way home.

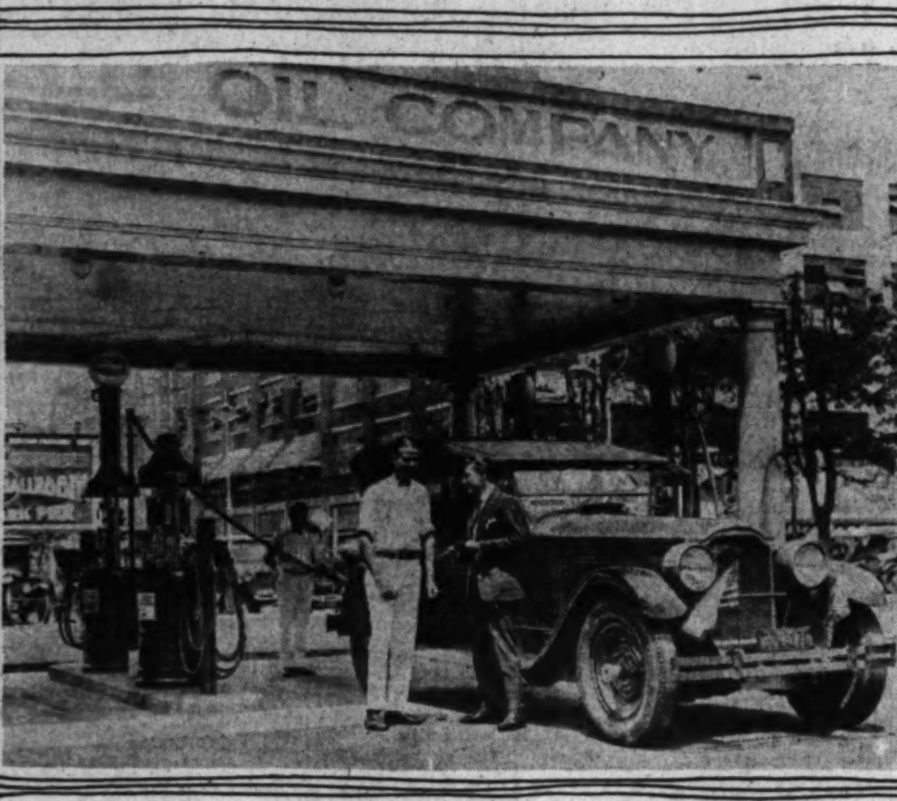
"Daddy" Woods, as he is affectionately known, says they had remarkable luck in avoiding bad weather on the trip, for they did not encounter rain in any section of the country while traversing the roads, just missing heavy rainstorms by being before or behind them. The cyclone that messed up things in a part of Florida in the spring didn't bother them any—they missed it by just a day.

KEEP CAREFUL RECORD

On this run Mrs. Woods kept a careful record of road mileage, gas mileage and all expenses, and it was gratifying to hear the gasoline average was twenty miles to the gallon, which included the gasoline used in the cookstove. But the remarkable feature was that Mr. and Mrs. Woods set out on their vacation trip with an even $800, planning to start for home about the time their funds dwindled to a certain predetermined amount. But so inexpensive was their tour, with hardly any car expense in the way of service, that they stayed longer than originally intended and took in more territory. They started out with old tires and were forced to buy a full new set after leaving Gettysburg, but even so they returned to Los Angeles with $30 remaining in their vacation fund.

Mr. Woods was a railroad engineer in Illinois for fifteen years, and his special pride was Engine No. 331, so nothing would do but the Franklin must carry the number of the crack passenger locomotive. "Daddy" says he gets a kick out of driving a car because he is not only the engineer, but fireman, brakeman and conductor as well.

Not "None-Guesser" but "Noo-Ja-Say!"



At least that's the way Capt. Charles Nungesser explained it to a Richfield station man last week when the famous ace, piloting his Packard eight, drove up to the station and filled with Richfield gasoline and Richlube oil.

NEW HIGHWAY IS DEDICATED

scenic mountain roads in what is now become one of the most important chapters in National Park history.

With Mr. Mather leading the trek, this long line of machines was a most impressive sight, their coming being a realization of ambitious dreams of the National Park Service, authorities at Washington, farvisioned Californians and Col. John R. White, superintendent of Sequoia and Gen. Grant National parks.

Mr. Mather himself has been an ardent advocate of development of Sequoia and Gen. Grant parks, agitating their possibilities in Washington and the East. Last spring a party of Congressmen and other national officials, personally inspecting the parks and proposed improvements, including the Generals' Highway, were much impressed and enthused.

DEDICATION HAPPY MOMENT

The dedication was a happy moment for Resident Engineer W. M. Austin and his crews of workers. Services were conducted at 10 a.m. at the park entrance nine miles above Three Rivers, where the new road leaves the present State Highway. Construction has been in progress on the Geenral's Highway, or Middle Fork Road as it has been called as it follows the middle branch of the Kaweah River, for four years.

It is believed it will be permanently open to the public in April, 1926, although for this Labor Day week-end it will be open for up travel from 10 a.m. the 5th inst. until 3 p.m. the 7th inst. Down travel will be over the Giant Forest Road via Cedar Creek and Kaweah.

About an hour's time will be saved the motorist in reaching Giant Forest over the new twenty-four foot two-way road, which is built of crushed and rolled granite and clay. Every precaution has been taken in its construction making for safety and preserving natural charms of the region. Curves have been banked and the maximum grade is 8 per cent as compared with 17½ per cent grade on the old road, which is now being used. Traffic is being checked at Alder Creek station.

ROAD LIKE BOULEVARD

Continuing west from Three Rivers, a picturesque mountain hamlet, the Generals' Highway separates from the north road just slightly over a mile from Three Rivers. From there to Alder Creek it is like a boulevard in smoothness and is perhaps the best portion of the entire road. At Hammond the Mineral King Road branches to the southeast, while the Generals' Highway passes over a splendid new concrete bridge over the Kaweah River continuing to Alder Creek checking station, where Col. White maintains administration quarters for both Sequoia and Gen. Grant National parks. This spot has been developed into a small city with modern conveniences and comforts.

The Marble Fork of the Kaweah is crossed a short distance from Alder Creek and a short five mile ride leads to Hospital Rock, famed for Indian carvings. Altitude at this point is 2500 feet and the picturesque winding road, with its numerous hairpin curves, rises another 1500 feet before reaching Deer Ridge. Here is where the 8 per cent grade is appreciated as the old road is 17½ per cent at this point.

From Deer Ridge a magnificient view is afforded east of Moro Rock, the Castle Crags and higher peaks of the Sierras commanding attention.

OLD SHACK OF INTEREST

Of special interest at this point is an old shack in which snowshoes have been stored for hikers during the winter season, making the last nine miles into Giant Forest. With completion of the Generals' Highway this will no longer be necessary, as the traveler can go in comfort with a motor car. Giant Forest will then be a year-around resort, where snow sports will be a delight.

The new highway joins the old Smith road a short distance from Deer Ridge, the final shot of powder linking the two having been fired shortly after midnight on July 24. Two miles further on the highway connects with the present road to Giant Forest at the Old Commissary, and within a short time rolls into Giant Forest.

From Los Angeles to Giant Forest it is 250 miles, and 275 miles to Gen. Grant Park. At Delano, beyond Bakersfield, the Orange Belt Highway can be taken via Terra Bella, Porterville, Lindsay, Exeter, Lemon Cove and Three Rivers, or from Bakersfield the State highway leads through Tulare, Visalia, Lemon Cove and Three Rivers.

TRAVELERS HAVE CHOICE

En route to Grant Park from Los Angeles by the old route travelers also had choice of two roads, either via Visalia, Klink and Badger, or Porterville, Exeter, Lemon Cove, Woodlake and Badger.

From northern points the highway leads direct from Fresno through Fowler, Selma and Goshen, where the road turns east to Visalia, Exeter, Lemon Cove and Three Rivers to Giant Forest. To Gen. Grant a northeast turn is made at Sanger after coming out of Fresno, this leading to Badger and on into the park.

Visitors at either Sequoia or Gen. Grant parks can drop over to the other park with much greater ease following completion of the Generals' Highway, save many miles of travel and also have the privilege of traveling through two of America's most scenic national parks.

The Gen. Sherman tree in Giant Forest, Sequoia National Park, is declared the oldest and largest living thing. It is 279.9 feet high, with a diameter of 36.5 feet, although the 3200 acres in Giant Forest have half a million sequoias, of which 5000 exceed ten feet in diameter.

PARK SIX MILES AWAY

Six miles away, across the mountain, valley and forest, lies Gen. Grant National Park. In this grove are 10,000 sequoias, 190 of which exceed ten feet in diameter. The Gen. Grant tree, second only in size and age to the Gen. Sherman tree, is 264 feet high, with a diameter of thirty-five feet.

Both the Gen. Sherman and the Gen. Grant trees are almost 4000 years old.

Hale D. Tharp of Three Rivers is said to be the first white man to discover and explore the Sequoia National Park region. Going after cattle in the upper meadows and curious to ascertain if tales of the Indians concerning the "big trees" were true, Tharp made his way into the Giant Forest section in the summer of 1856, going in by the Middle Fork of the Kaweah, and visited Moro Rock. It is interesting to note that much of Tharp's original trail is now embodied in the Generals' Highway.

CREATED PARK IN 1890

General Grant National Park, California's smallest and newest national playground, was created a park in 1890 through efforts of Col. George W. Stewart of Visalia and D. K. Zumwalt of Tulare, and others. Its four square miles lies entirely in Tulare county and is surrounded by devastation created by man in former logging and lumbering days. General Grant Tree was named by Mrs. Lucretia P. Baker, a member of a party who camped near the tree in 1876.

Sequoia National Park has five unexplored caves which are to be developed and explored when funds are available. They offer intriguing interest to adventuresome spirits but no entrance is permitted except under certain conditions imposed by the park service for protection of visitors.

These caves are: Palmer Cave, Clough Cave, Paradise Cave, Marble Cave and Crystal Cavern. The latter is a limestone cave of remarkable size with many and varied chambers. Its decorations are most fantastic and alluring.

PACK INTO VALLEYS

From General Grant and Sequoia parks sportsmen and nature lovers pack back into the beautiful lake-studded valleys, among them the valleys of the Kings and Kern rivers, the Tehipite Valley and the Kern Canyon. Paradise Valley, Hockett Meadows, Garfield Grove, Franklin Lakes, Roaring River, Boulder Creek and the Ten Mile Creek are among important points of interest in the two parks. Mt. Whitney is the mecca for many back-country expeditions.

Sugar pines, firs, cedars and other monarchs of the forest lend their stately charm to the regions. Imposing peaks, tumbling streams, meadows, birds and wild animal life are part of these virgin forests. All are protected by Uncle Sam that his children may see and enjoy.

Now with the autumn tang in the air, suggesting approach of Jack Frost and his paint-pots, many consider this the most appealing time of the year in the parks. Cool evenings make the camp fires even more enjoyable. Entertainment programs given at the lodges are ever popular. The sharp morning air gives zest to the appetite and here "near to Nature's heart" comes fresh vigor for duties in the cities below. The rustic cabins and tents are still filled with happy vacationists and camping grounds in each park ring with merry sounds from many parties.

COMPLETE SURVEY

Engineer Austin recently completed an airplane survey of the proposed route from Giant Forest on over to General Grant Park. The plane came from Mather Field and was piloted by Capt. Potter with Austin as a passenger over the Kings and Kern river canyons. This plane was loaned by Paul Reddington, forest supervisor of the district, to the Park Service.

On another trip to be taken soon by plane, Engineer Austin expects to secure more data and pictures of the proposed route. The nineteen-mile roadway will be constructed by Federal money, $288,000 of which will be available next year to complete the first unit and start work on the second. Total cost of the road is estimated at $409,000.

AUTO THEFT LAW UPHELD

Chief Justice Taft Asserts Taking of Car to Another State Misuse of Commerce

Verbatim copy of the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in re Brooks vs. United States completely establishes the constitutionality of the National Motor Vehicle Theft Act, according to C. A. Vane, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers' Association. The constitutionality of the law was the sole point involved in the case and the Supreme Court in a unanimous decision handed down by Chief Justice Taft held that the act is constitutional.

Thus after nearly six years the effort of the National Automobile Dealers' Association to thwart automobile thieves is given final sanction of the highest American court and all question removed as to the nation's right to punish those who move stolen motor vehicles in interstate commerce.

GETS PRISON TERM

In the particular case which went to the Supreme Court, Ray Brooks, a Sioux Falls (S. D.) garage owner, was convicted of removing two stolen automobiles from Sioux City, Iowa, to Sioux Falls, S. D., in September, 1921, valued at $1000. He was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment. In sustaining the constitutionality of the law (which was introduced in Congress by L. C. Dyer of St. Louis at the request of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, and which became effective October 29, 1919) Chief Justice Taft declared: "It is known of all men that the radical change in transportation of and goods effected by the introduction of the automobile, the speed with which it moves and the ease with which evil-minded persons can avoid capture have greatly encouraged and increased crimes.

"One of the crimes which have been encouraged is the theft of the automobiles themselves and their immediate transportation to places remote from homes of the owners. Elaborately organized conspiracies for the theft of automobiles and the spiriting of them away into some other State and their sale and other disposition far away from the owner and his neighborhood have aroused Congress to devise some method for defeating the success of these widely spread schemes of larceny. The quick passage of the machines into another State helps to conceal the trail of thethieves, gets the stolen property into another police jurisdiction and facilitates the finding of a safer place in which to dispose of the booty at a good price. This is a gross misuse of interstate commerce."

"Congress may properly punish such interstate transportation by anyone with knowledge of the theft because of its harmful results and its defeat of the property rights of those whose machines, against their will, are taken into other jurisdictions."

DECISION IMPORTANT

According to General Manager Vane, the Supreme Court decision is of tremendous importance to the automobile trade as a final indorsement of a very valuable weapon in the hands of peace officers against organized bands of automobile thieves. "Car ownership in cities like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and other large centers but a few miles from boundary lines of other States suffer heavily from theoranized raids of interstate motor thieves." Vane declares. "Prior to the passage of the Dyer law, we found it extremely difficult to get local peace officials to take any concern in the theft of automobiles from cities outside their State.

"With the Dyer law to rely on, however, we no longer have to suffer in silence, but can seek our indictments in Federal district courts, where justice is fairly speedy and more important, more certain."

AIRMEN APPRECIATE COURTESY AUTOS

Members of the air force connected with the San Francisco-to-Honolulu flight were very busy individuals during the last few days, before the hop-off, and in order to save as much of their energy as possible for the actual vicissitudes of the trip, Greer-Robbins Company's San Francisco headquarters turned over to the men a couple of Hupmobile eight phaetons, with drivers.

That this courtesy was greatly appreciated is seen in a letter full of praise for the Hupmobile that has been received by Greer-Robbins officials here. It was mailed just prior to the start for Honolulu and is signed by all of the men connected with the flight.

GREENLAND BUYS CARS

During the last five months American automobile manufacturers shipped sixteen motor trucks to Greenland and seven passenger cars to Iceland, while Belgian Congo, in the heart of Africa, took twenty-nine passenger cars and eighty-seven trucks.

Gartzmann is Back From Trip to Factory

The new series Oakland six which was announced last month is contributing its share toward the increase in production of motor cars this year over the same period last year, according to information that Reeve Gartzmann, distributor for the Oakland, brings with him after a protracted stay in the East during which he visited the large automobile distributing centers and the factory in Pontiac, Mich.

"The new series Oakland has staged a hit throughout the country," says Gartzmann. "Everywhere I went I found the Oakland dealers buried under a veritable avalanche of orders. These same dealers were burning up the wires urging the factory to liveries at once. They swamped with busines eager to take care of it. cases the dealers repor buyers are willing to would indicate that knows a real bargain biles when it sees it.

"In spite of all the all this clamoring for production, the Oakland Company goes serenely turning out each Oak much care and precision car was all they would year, and it had to be piece.

"The policy at the tory is 'how good can them.' It is not conce 'how many can we make

CAR ENGINEER BOOSTS TOUR

Auburn Executive Declares for Its Revival

Glidden Event Has Champion After Long Drive

Closed Car Permits Tourists to Pass Through Storm

"Why not revive the Glidden tour?" This was almost the first utterance of J. M. Crawford, chief engineer of the Auburn Automobile Company, upon his arrival in Los Angeles after a cross-continent trip from the Indiana factory town with the same name as its chief product.

"I'd sure like to pilot a new Auburn in the tour which formerly was an annual event of national interest and which served as a wonderful check on the year's progress in motor car designing," the visitor told O. R. Fuller, president and general manager of the Fuller Auto Company.

"And I'd certainly like nothing better than to take a trip like the old Glidden event afforded," the head of the Auburn distributing organization here replied.

Accompanying the visiting automobile engineer were his wife and daughter. Here as elsewhere throughout the country he is known as "one of the Crawford brothers of motor car fame." His brother, J. M. Crawford, holds a corresponding position in another automobile factory, likewise sponsoring eight-cylinder cars.

TRIP IS PICNIC

The Crawfords' trip to Los Angeles, which followed the Santa Fe trail, was pretty much of a picnic all the way, except for the rather tough going in Missouri and Kansas while returning from the Indian snake dances in New Mexico the Auburn was caught in a cloudburst. For more than thirty miles the car traveled hub deep in a lake formed by the deluge.

The Auburn engineer declared that he tried without success to take a vacation this year, on account of the fact that the factory is working steadily on an overtime schedule.

"Back at the factory we got so many letters telling what a wonderful time Auburn owners were having on tours here, there and everywhere throughout the country that the pressure got too strong for us, and I decided to take a long-contemplated trip out here," he remarked.

"And I am glad I did, for it has given me the same kind of a chance to check up, as the old Glidden tours provided, the performance of the Auburn on the road.

COURTED TROUBLE

"Of course, I don't expect anyone to believe that I would admit having had any trouble, but that is exactly what I courted all the way out here, without finding it. Rainstorms were our daily portion through parts of Missouri and Kansas. We sought out the high altitude and made a trip up Pike's Peak, and then there was the cloudburst and temperature through Arizona that must have just naturally fried Dick Wick Hall and his frog.

"The trip was an eye-opener in more ways than one, as it pertained to comfort on the road, and I am now more convinced than ever that for touring the touring car, so-called, is no longer in it with a closed car. Why, during that cloudburst in New Mexico we just closed all windows and sat calmly through it all as snug as could be. Dust storms we baffled in the same way."

Of interest to the distributors here was the visitor's assurance that the Auburn factory is exerting every effort to keep production somewhere close to demands and that with an overtime schedule in steady operation it will not be long until Los Angeles can get the cars called for under the allotment to distributors here.

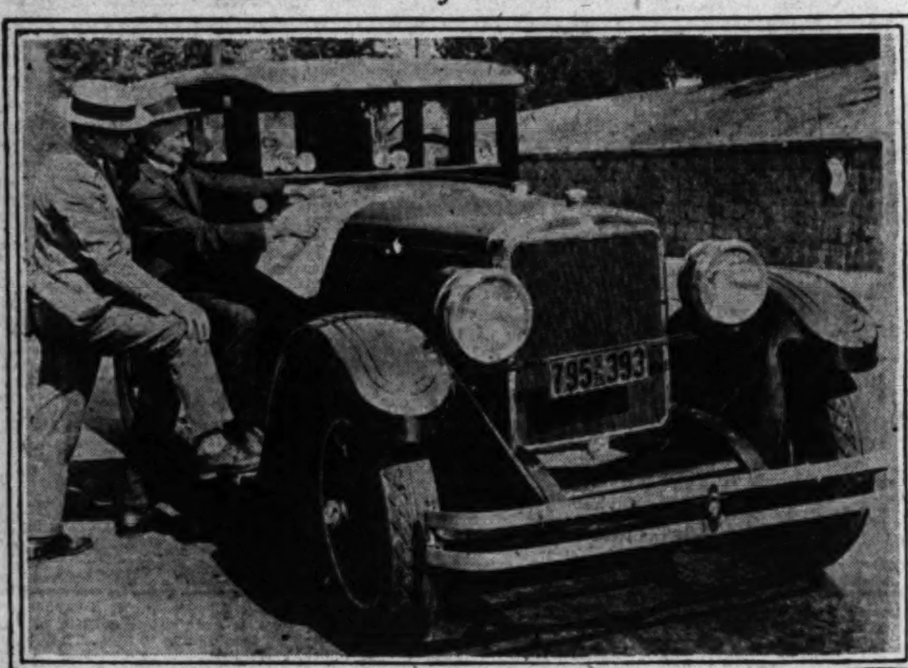
PASS 600,000 MARK

Automobiles in Canada have passed the 600,000-mark for the first time in history, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics announces.

Motor vehicles in Canada number 652,121, compared with 593,323 on January 1, 1924.

Ontario was the leading automobile owner among the provinces with 308,693 cars to its credit. The prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta combined accounted for 166,234 automobiles. More than 60 per cent of the cars in that area are owned in rural districts.

Makes Tour of National Parks



When C. F. Hartman and his family returned from a tour of the national parks a few days ago it was with a recollection of a very pleasant time, although he received a thrill or two. In the Gardner super-eight sedan the family enjoyed the entire trip. Here Mr. Hartman is seen showing a salesman for the Southwest Motors a map of his trip.

Los Angeles Family Makes Tour of Parks

Just a little over a month ago C. F. Hartman and his family started with their Gardner super-eight sedan on what proved to be a national parks tour, for they visited practically all of the large parks in the Western United States, except Yosemite, which they had previously seen.

Mr. Hartman, who owns a pattern factory in the southeast part of the city, left his home in Huntington Park on August 1 and drove 400 miles the first day, arriving in Searchlight, Nev., in time to camp comfortably for the night.

On the fifth day the Hartmans arrived at Yellowstone Park and camped at Old Faithful. It was here that their 14-year-old daughter Agnes made a discovery about bears. She saw a large black bear near the road, and snapped its picture, after which she offered the bear some raisins. The bear didn't hesitate to accept the invitation, but instead of eating the raisins thrown on the ground or held in the young lady's hand, he grabbed the whole box and made away with it.

After three days in the Yellowstone the party drove to Glacier National Park. While traveling in the mountains after leaving Glacier Park for Seattle, Mr. Hartman took the wrong turn in the road and came suddenly to a deep hole. It was only due to the very efficient working of the Gardner four-wheel brakes, he said, that the car avoided a wreck.

A complete list of the parks visited includes Zion, Yellowstone, Glacier, Rainier, Crater Lake, Lassen and Gen. Grant. The whole trip took just twenty-four days. An average of sixteen miles per gallon of gasoline was made, with about 800 miles to the quart of oil. Not a tool was touched to the Gardner on the trip, in spite of fast driving over rough roads. The average day's run was 226 miles, including stopovers, and the highest run was 540.

Distributor Gives Idea of Perfect Driver

What is a perfect driver?

J. M. Sterling, manager of the Paige Company of Southern California, Paige and Jewett distributors, says that there are five important elements in driving.

The first and most important of these elements is skill. Skill includes a knowledge of the mechanical operation of the car as well as the principle of steering. But skill alone doesn't make a perfect driver, he says.

"Citizenship is another important element," declares Mr. Sterling. "This includes a knowledge of the law and a respect for it. No one can aspire to perfection without these attributes.

"Capability is important. This includes health, normal sight and hearing and nerve to encounter and solve difficult problems. Without the capability to drive which implies the physical background, no driver can be adjudged skillful.

"Courtesy is of prime importance, too. The good driver must be a courteous driver. He must be considerate of the feelings of others on the road, whether they be motorists or pedestrians. Be courteous if you would be a good driver," warns Mr. Sterling.

"Caution includes concentration, responsibility and judgment. The cautious driver sticks to his job and doesn't act as sight-seeing guide for the other passengers in the car. He feels the responsibility which rests on him while he is operating the car and he possesses sufficient judgment to take proper care before he reaches a zone of danger.

"The driver with all these attributes probably won't be encountered every day in the year, but an ideal is worth shooting at anyhow."

USE LESS RUBBER TO CUT PRICE, ADVICE

"For every cent advanced in the price of crude rubber, American automobile owners will pay $7,000,000 more for tires. This estimate is based on the total consumption of 385,000 tons of rubber for 1925. The average car owner using three casings a year will pay from $18 to $27 more, if the present price of rubber is maintained," says C. Fred Thompson, head of the firm which bears his name, McClaren Tire distributors throughout this territory.

"The only way to bring the price of rubber down immediately is for America to use less rubber. We can use less rubber by building the maximum possible mileage into tires. The McClaren factories have been doing this."

Resort Notes

Labor Day holiday crowds are finding a full program at Lake Arrowhead over this week-end. Maj. H. R. Carter, city swimming supervisor of Los Angeles, is staging afternoon water carnivals at the mile-high mountain lake. Lake Arrowhead resorts continue to cater to full houses, including the Lake Arrowhead Lodge, Camp Fleming, the Raven Hotel, the Screen Club Inn, Cottage Grove and the auto camp grounds.

Santa Barbara Hotels

In Santa Barbara the Miramar Hotel, El Encanto Hotel, El Mirasol Hotel and the Upham Hotel are all reported open to the public, and in full operation. The Samarkand Hotel will reopen November 15, according to Manager Bennett. The Carillo Hotel is undergoing some repairs, and will be closed indefinitely. The Arlington Hotel is also closed.

Valley Forge Lodge

Ernest De Vore, proprietor of Valley Forge Lodge, in the West Fork of the San Gabriel Canyon, five miles from Mt. Wilson, and seven miles from Mt. Lowe, writes that they are anticipating a big crowd over the Labor and Admission Day holidays. Valley Forge Lodge is reached by trail from Alpine Tavern and from Mt. Wilson Hotel and Cottages.

Qualifications for Lubrication Expert Cited

What are the qualifications of a lubricating expert?

Someone asked that pointed question of D. R. McBryde of the McBryde Lubricating Service here, the other day. And "Mac," who by his own serious confession almost makes a religion out of proper car lubrication, came back with the following reply:

"In the first place," he said, "a man must know lubricants. He should be familiar with oil and grease 'from the ground up'—up through all the different stages of filtration, refining and blending. He has to know the relative heat resistance and viscosity of the several grades of oil. He has to know the peculiar virtues of fiber grease as compared to ordinary cup grease, for instance. And he has to be able to judge the merit of any lubricant so well his very fingers can distinguish its degree of quality.

"But that is not all. A man has no rightful claim to any such title as 'lubricating expert' unless he is equally familiar with the mechanics of the different makes of automobiles. He must know the type of bearings used, the kind of transmission, the lubricating system used in each particular engine, and where every wearing surface is located. He must know the effect of mileage on the car as well as on the lubricants. He must know when to change the character of the lubricants, as well as when to replace the worn oil or grease with new. And he must know how to apply the lubricants thoroughly, when needed."

GOES ON TRIP AS GUEST; SOLD ON CAR

E. W. Milburn, manager of the San Francisco Greer-Robbins establishment, and president of the Down Town Association, was one of the out-of-towners on hand last week when the new Hupmobile building here was dedicated.

Milburn drove from San Francisco in his own Hupmobile, and brought with him a prominent San Franciscan, who had been thinking of buying a Hupmobile for a long time.

At every dealer point between here and San Francisco Milburn stopped, he told Greer-Robbins officials, and after talking business with the proprietor for a while, would ask where the toughest test hill in that district was located. Nine times out of ten the dealer would get in and show Milburn and his guest the way to the bad hill.

By the time the San Franciscan had reached Los Angeles Milburn had climbed more hills than he thought were in the State, he told Greer-Robbins officials here, and his guest was finally convinced that the Hup would perform.

In a communication received yesterday, Minturn reports that he sold two Hupmobiles as a result of his hill-climb tour, one of them going to the man who accompanied him, and the other destined for the wife and daughter of the family.

ONE OF A SERIES OF THE MOST POWERFUL ADVERTISEMENTS EVER PRINTED FOR ANY CAR

Stutz value is built on satisfactory service

THE CAR THAT MADE GOOD IN A DAY
STUTZ

"Words Cannot Express It!"

Compare this statement of fact with the "super-superlatives" of the ordinary automobile advertisements. Words are inadequate to express the satisfaction of Mr. James McGuinness of Philadelphia. Here is what experience has taught him about Stutz value:

"Words cannot express my satisfaction and today I would not exchange my Stutz for a new medium priced car. The performance of my car has been remarkable. It has made several trips to Nova Scotia from Philadelphia, and return without delay, due to the perfect construction of the car. The car has not been in the repair shop in three years and is very easy on rubber."

Multiply this owner's statement by that of thousands of Stutz owners. Add the fact that four out of five cars ever built by this factory are still in service at proved lower upkeep costs. Then with these FACTS in mind—try STUTZ for yourself. The proof awaits you—here and NOW!

NO, COMPANY'S NOT COMING

If you drop a dish cloth, company won't come, save as a matter of coincidence. Popular superstitions like this are losing ground; so is the superstition that there is something mysteriously better about "eastern" motor lubricants, merely because they cost more and are made in the East.

The Right Way to Judge Motor Oils

More than ever, motorists are discovering that the test of an oil is not where but how it is made, and how it lubricates. That's why Zerolene—refined from selected western naphthenic base crudes—is today successfully lubricating more cars in the Pacific Coast states than any other oil made.

An Exclusive Process—What it Does

Lubricating qualities have never been more carefully or successfully preserved than by the processes used at Standard Oil refineries for the refining of Zerolene: —the Zerolene high-vacuum process, the Zerolene process of filtration through 40 tons of Florida Fuller's Earth, the refineries' 15 positive checks for quality!

Zerolene will give your car better lubrication: it increases the gasoline mileage, reduces carbon-removal and maintenance costs and lengthens the life of any engine in which it is used.

Insist on Zerolene—even if it does cost less

True Oil Economy

True motor oil economy is not a matter of price per quart, but what the lubricant does. Why pay tribute to a superstition? Insist on Zerolene. Always ask for Zerolene by name.

Get the Facts!

A series of independent and impartial reports showing the experience of large users with Zerolene motor oil has been collected in our booklet, "Why Pay Tribute to a Superstition?" Ask any Standard Oil Company representative or Zerolene dealer for a copy.

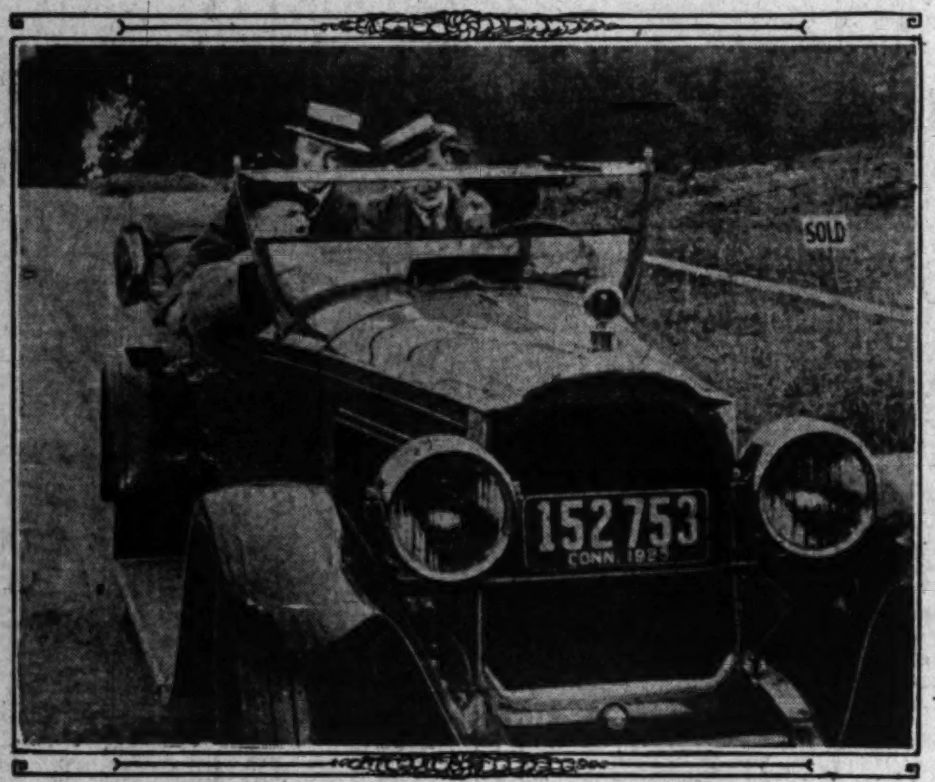
Car Aids in Happy Ending



This Packard car was one of the principal "props" in D. W. Griffith's latest picture, "Sally of the Sawdust." The star comedian, W. C. Fields, owns a Packard.

Auto Plays Big Part in Late Film Classic

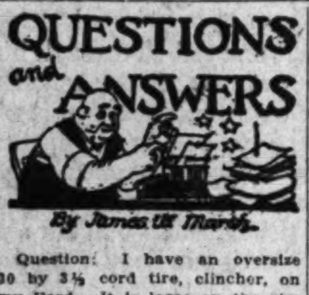
At a recent preview of D. W. Griffith's latest picture, "Sally of the Sawdust," now at the Rialto, George R. Bury, vice-president of Earle C. Anthony, Inc., Packard distributors, was greatly pleased to see that Griffith had brought about a happy ending, symbolized by a Packard car.

"W. C. Fields, noted comedian, who has starred in so many of Flo Ziegfeld's glorifications of the American girl, portrays on the screen the character of one J. Eustace McGargle, who rises through various struggles to the commanding position of a realtor, his lifelong ambition. To absolutely fill his cup to overflowing, Griffith, wise director that he is, chose a Packard eight for McGargle's triumphant finale," Bury said in describing the picture.

"Off the screen, Fields is also a Packard owner," he continues, "as is Carol Dempster, who plays the name part of the circus classic. Miss Dempster, according to Griffith, has toured throughout New England in her car.

"It is significant that a Packard was the car selected to demonstrate perfect luxury and ease, purchased by a man whose wealth brings every automobile within his means. In doing so, Griffith paralleled in the mimic life of the screen what is actually happening every day not only among realtors, but among other discriminating motorists."

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS



By James W. Marsh

Question: I have an oversize 30 by 3½ cord tire, clincher, on my Ford. It is loose on the rim and rolls off occasionally or the tube blows out. I cannot get a replacement on it. Is there any remedy for this trouble.

S. H. F., Valleybrink Road.

Answer: There are several causes for this trouble. The rim of the wheel may be flattened by running on it without a tire. If this is the case, you should have a new rim put on the wheel, or just about as cheap, have a new wheel put on. The rim of the tire may have stretched from misuse and faulty construction. Probably you are trying to use some cheap, unreliable tire, which is neither standard in size nor make-up. If you are using a standard make of tire, if you have not misused it, and your rim is in perfect order you should get an adjustment because it is evident that the tire is imperfect. There is no known method of making a tire which has stretched give reasonable service.

Q.: I am submitting a list of 100 per cent Pennsylvania brands of oil which vary in price from 78 cents to $1.25. Are all of these oils as they are represented? Is there any justification in this wide variation in price?

C. H., Monrovia, Cal.

A.: The oils you name are all oils put on the market by an association using a label stating that they are made of oil 100 per cent of which is produced in Pennsylvania. This, in itself, is no recommendation for an oil to be used in a gas-engine cylinder. The value of an oil depends almost entirely upon its refinement and not upon its base. Some of the very best oils in use today are made from western crudes, the oil in some cases being shipped to the East for refinement. One of the leading brands of our present market is a straight western base oil, but it is commonly considered paraffin base oil, although the refiners do not make any such claim. The consuming public is altogether too much concerned about the base of an oil and not sufficiently interested in the state of refinement. I think my statement so far has answered your last question. The actual value of an oil depends upon its refinement and the wide range in price may be the result of this cost, which far exceeds the first cost of the crude oil from which cylinder oils are made.

Q.: What causes the coil of my 1922 Dort to continually give trouble? I have had three new coils and several extra condensers. It is a Connecticut outfit.

A. B., Los Angeles.

A.: Your trouble is caused by high resistance in the battery or battery connections. This prevents the normal drop in potential from the generator and a high voltage is impressed on the coil, which causes current enough to flow through to burn it up, and puncture the condensers. You will find the high resistance at some of the circuit contacts. Probably the connection of the battery to the frame of the car is badly corroded. Remove this connection and polish up both the copper terminal and the steel surface under it. Clean the entire circuit, including the battery terminals.

Q.: I have a 1919——, it has always vibrated badly, but has given fair service. I would like to eliminate vibration by installing one of the new balancers. Do you advise it? Could I put in an automatic spark control and do you think it would be worth while? Also, do you recommend installing a new Thordarson coil in place of the old one?

A. M. S., East Third street.

A.: An obsolete car which was never as good as it should have been and approximately seven years old is not worth the money it will cost you to make the improvements. I doubt very much if any of the balancers represent the best of engineering. An engine should be balanced when manufactured. An engine which is not so balanced should be let alone by buyers. All of the higher-class engines run silently and smoothly, and are free from vibration; many of the cheaper engines are just as well balanced. The automatic spark control is a device which should be on every automobile, large or small, and the cost is not excessive. The coil you mention is a good one, but unless the old coil is defective in some way I would not recommend the substitution. You do not ask for advice, but I recommend, most emphatically, that you get rid of the old car and bring your investment up-to-date.

Q.: Do you recommend using straight castor oil in a 1925 Rickenbacker coach? Is it better to break in a car with than common cylinder oil? Which are the best oils and gasolines in the lists?

A. E. M., Oregon street.

A.: Under no circumstances use straight castor oil as a lubricant in your car, whether new or old. In breaking in a car about a pint of pure castor oil in ten gallons of gasoline will give excellent upper lubrication and prevent any cutting or scoring. If you use it, it is well to put a tankful of plain gasoline through the engine before applying any more castor oil. This will have a tendency to keep down the accumulation of carbon in the combustion chambers, which is always excessive when castor oil is used in any manner. For gasoline I prefer Nos. 2 and 3. For cylinder oil I recommend Nos. 2 and 1. The others are good.

H. P. G., Puente: The oil you ask about has been greatly improved in the last couple of years. I cannot say that it is as good as the oil you are using, although it may be. There is no reason why you should not make the change under the circumstances. Your new Buick roadster should be broken in the same way, with the same brand of oil, as I recommended for the first car.

R. A. S., West Forty-fifth street: I feel that your best buy is 1924 car, No. 1, providing that it is in first-class mechanical condition. No. 3 is the next best proposition. I prefer No. 5 to No. 6 by all means. I do not believe it will.

M. W. E., Sunland: I would recommend, according to place, Nos. 4, 1 and 2. I have published a book on storage batteries, but not on the automobile as yet.

W. W., South Vermont avenue: I greatly appreciate your letter. No. 1 will give wonderful service. Among the larger cars Nos. 4, 6 and 8 are all long-lived machines. No. 2 is making good surprisingly fast.

F. LaF., Long Beach: I believe that the car named second will give you the greater satisfaction. I have not found any inherent weaknesses in the car. Of course, the cheaper car cannot give the service nor comfort of the more expensive.

J. L. W., South Plymouth: No. 1 is by all means the car which I prefer.

J. B. H., West Twenty-first street: No. 1 is the best car for your use in the list.

R. H. B., Atlanta, Ga.: No. 3, eight-cylinder, is my first choice; No. 9 in the eight-cylinder model is very fine.

B. D. H., Hollywood: I am satisfied that No. 2 will give you the greater satisfaction. It is one of the best eights.

W. M., Paso Robles: I can recommend No. 7 after a year's careful observation.

P. R., Orange, Cal.: I do not believe either of the two cheap cars you name will give satisfaction and service after driving a high-class six. Probably the first mentioned will give the greater satisfaction.

M. I. T., L. A.: I recommend No. 1. It is strictly a high-class car.

N. A. P., Santa Monica: Select your car from Nos. 6, 3 or 1.

D. L. T., Santa Paula: Mobile A is an excellent oil for your Marmon. I recommend that you continue its use.

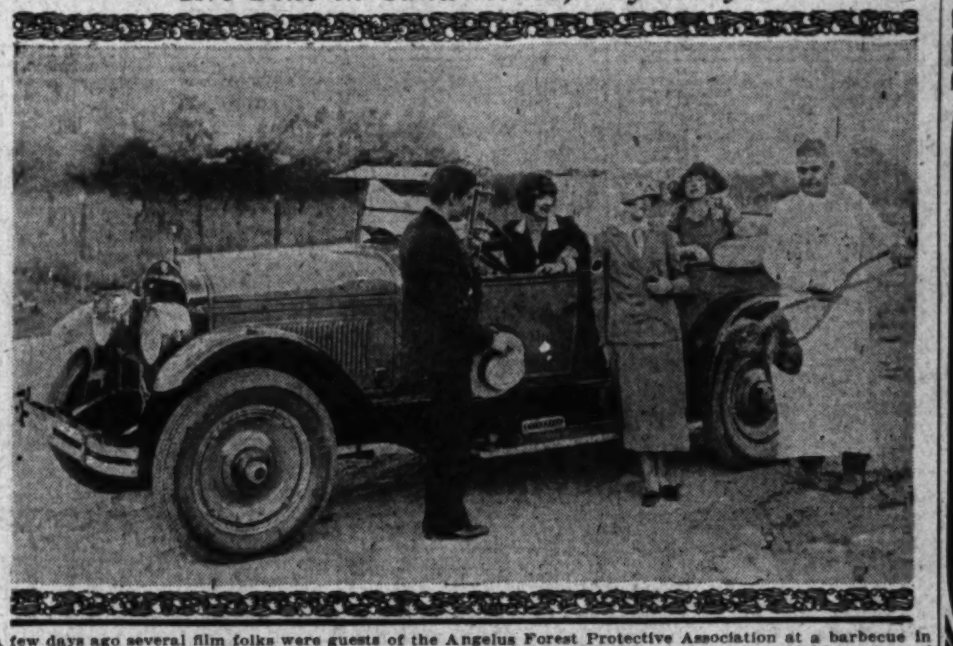
French motorists recently honored the birthday of their patron saint, St. Christopher, at his burial place in Jajolet. Five thousand cars were blessed as they paraded the streets, bedecked with banners or miniature statues of the saint.

PLEASANT VALLEY TO BE OPENED

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Sept. 5.—Pleasant Valley, notorious as the haunt of outlaws in the days of the Tonto Basin war and later the haunt of movie companies in their search for the remote and unusual, soon will be wide open to the public. By the middle of September is to be completion of the McFadden Peak-Young section of one of the most scenic highways of the Southwest, that leaves the Apache Trail near Livingston and that passes over the forested Sierra Ancha Mountains by way of Carr's ranch and Lewis Lodge. This road is planned for extension to the Old Trails Highway at Winslow or Holbrook, climbing the Mogollon Rim on a new route said to afford a good gradient.

It's Fine in Sandwiches, Say They



A few days ago several film folks were guests of the Angelus Forest Protective Association at a barbecue in Whiting Wood at La Crescenta. Jose Romero, barbecue chef de luxe, is here shown with a piece of sandwich material and, from the hungry looks of the movie folks, he won't have it long. They are in one of the Flint touring cars provided by R. C. Durant, Inc., for the occasion.

Film Folks as Guests at Big Barbecue

Burning chaparral in the mountains is one thing, while burning oak logs in a barbecue pit is quite another, according to the testimony of a party of film folk who were guests of honor at a barbecue held by the Angeles Forest Protective Association, Saturday, August 22, in Whiting Wood at La Crescenta.

Narrow escapes while on location during the recent forest fire stimulated the interest of the actors in forest fire prevention, and the work of the Angeles Forest Protective Association, a volunteer forest fire fighting organization, whose work they had occasion to witness.

Jose Romero, famous Southern California barbecue chef, did the honors at the pit, and turned out a feast for 2500 or more, which was in keeping with the legends of the ancient fiesta.

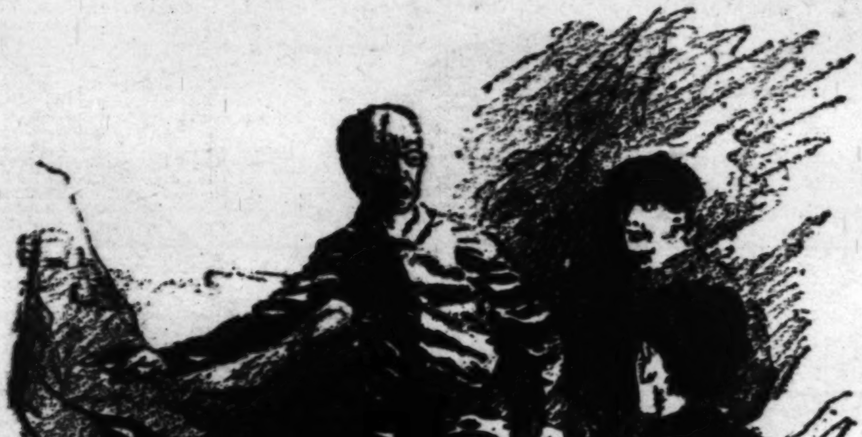
WHEN GHOSTS OF ANCIENT CLIFF DWELLERS SPOKE

BY FRANK A. SECORD



"Hear it? Hear those hollow voices? Awful. We must not dare the wrath of the dead."

"Boys," exclaimed Professor Brown, as he wiped the sweat from his face, "I knew we'd find a tough trail hereabouts; but I never believed that to get to Mesa Verde we'd have to blister in the sun, besides doing all this climbing!" The man hastened to add, however, noting the disgusted looks upon the faces of his two companions, Frank Barton and Billy Long. "I like the experience, though!"

"And if you do not make good at finding what we are after, Prof.," growled Billy, "here's one boy who will never have anything more to do with you.

"Think of it!" the professor, warming up to enthusiasm, cried. "Imagine what we may discover in the cliff-dwellers, a people long dead and entirely extinct. Their handiwork is covered by the debris of ages and it remains for someone who has studied the question, to give to the world startling evidence that these ancients were as far advanced in civilization as are the peoples of today. I expect, fullly, to unearth evidence of electrical progress, of steam power and modern art. I—"

Prof. Brown gazed with rapture over the seemingly impassable stretch of rock-bound country ahead and towering above them. The two lads giggled. Frank Barton took a better hold on the bridle of his pack-mule and winked to Billy. Whispered the latter, "Have to watch the step of this little runt of a mule," at the same time placing a half-closed hand to his mouth, imitating a trumpet. Frank laughed silently and made a few mysterious signs.

When darkness fell over the almost silent heights of the Rockies, camp was made, a hasty meal was prepared and the three adventurers lay down to rest "At sunrise," explained the professor, "we shall start, and if I am not badly mistaken we shall reach the first pile of ruins before the heat of the day. There we shall pass as much time as it appears necessary in the prosecution of our quest."

"Mighty silent and spooky country, I say!" observed Billy.

"Sure!" Frank laughed. "Do you want or expect some of the dead ones who have lain for centuries among the ruins, to wake up and talk? Do you look for a lecture on ancient progress or something?"

"The silent rocks and what they cover and hide will talk in their own language to us and in their own way!" eloquently declared the professor.

"In other words, we are going to visit a graveyard something over 5000 years old. Is that it?" Billy ventured.

"Yes; the graveyard of a people wiped out of existence by some dire cataclysm, the cause of which I expect to discover!" majestically said Prof. Brown, waving a hand ahead of him as if by the act he would remove all obstacles.

"Just so we don't hear any queer noises," grumbled Frank.

"We will hear the beatings of our own hearts in the still of these solitudes, and no voices save our own," declared the man of learning.

"Ought to be plenty of bats and owls hereabouts!" Billy exclaimed, even then dodging a silent flitter that seemed to be making straight for his head.

"Sunlight and shadow!" exulted Prof. Brown, next morning, when the little party moved on.

After a very laborious climb and a hazardous one, the travelers arrived at their first objective—a pile of forbidding ruins of the ancients that towered hundreds of feet above the rock-bound canyon stretching below like a gigantic gray snake.

Prof. Brown, eager to begin his quest for knowledge of the ruins, delegated the boys to set up a snug camp, prepare the morning meal and, with as much enthusiasm as a boy might display on his way to a prolific fishing-hole, set out to explore the vicinity.

Feverishly Frank and Billy unloaded the animal carrying that portion of the equipment not immediately in demand—strange to say.

"Now wiggle!" Frank cried.

"Where?" inquired Billy.

"Anywhere! There are lots of places. Take a flashlight and see that no varmints are where you go to work—but I hardly expect to find snakes or such things up here."

Billy, lugging an arm-load of stuff, scooted into a small cavern nearest the spot selected for camp, and presently scooted out again. "The first thing I found in there," he gasped, "were pieces of a skull and other human bones!"

"Good!" exclaimed Frank. "That's bully. What do you care for little things like those?" He turned attention to pitching the main tent, and gingerly Billy again tackled the job before him. With his flashlight glaring before him the youth disappeared in the gloom of the cavern.

Later Frank climbed a pine tree that had grown in a rocky crevice throughout the years. Frank dragged something with him and then, accompanying Billy into the cave, looked around, expressed his approval of what had been done and both boys turned further attention to their real camp duties.

Through a megaphone Frank bellowed for Prof. Brown to come in for breakfast. "Sow-bosom, hen-drops, gum-cakes with nigger-head 'lasses!" the megaphone bawled. "Hot off the fire!"

"Yoo, hoo!" an echo in the far-away answered.

Prof. Brown arrived greatly excited. "Down the mesa, about half a mile," he cried, "I picked up a clew that will lead to startling things! Guess we'll remain here indefinitely, for I must—positively must—follow the clew."

"Any bones?" Billy inquired.

"No; but I'll find plenty of them later."

At breakfast Frank, after a studious silence, blurted, "Say, Prof., is there such a thing as a departed soul coming back to evidence itself? Could one of those long-dead Indians, for instance, throw a scare into a fellow?"

The man dropped his bacon-laden fork to vehemently declare his surprise at such a question. "I thought I came here with the two most level-headed boys of the class!" exclaimed he.

Billy Long rose and, carelessly yawning, stated he would take a turn to settle his breakfast. When out of sight the lad hurried to the professor's "location" and was back again before either of the other two had finished their coffee.

"Hours passed. Prof. Brown was deeply engrossed in his work. So closely was he applying himself that he forgot all about eating a scant lunch he carried with him. When the sun grew red and round over the neighboring peaks, and Frank at the megaphone bellowed an announcement for supper, the professor "yoo, hooed" in reply, adding "I'll stay until darkness chases me in, boys!"

"He will, eh?" giggled Frank Barton. "Just so darkness and nothing else, chases him in, it won't be so bad!"

"What else could chase him?" Billy roguishly inquired, as he shook the coffee pot gurgling over the mesquite fire.

"Ghosts," hissed Frank furtively glancing about the spot which was now and then fitfully lit up over the blinking suspended lanterns, by the camp fire.

Billy edged away. As he moved he remarked, "They say dead men tell nothing, Frank Barton. The dead hereabouts, however, may be women or girls, for all we know; and—well, women and girls like to talk, in the flesh, and it may be that after they pass hence they still gab—"

Before Billy could finish his words a cry of distress or fear rose in the distance and just at exactly the moment that Frank emerged from the little cave near camp, where Billy carried the material off the pack-mule upon arriving at the spot. The boys looked at each other and slightly grinned.

In a few moments Prof. Brown arrived at camp on the jump, his face blanched and his legs trembling. "Boys," he gasped, "it has been said that the buried ancient Pharaohs of far-away Egypt have an eerie method of protecting their tombs. I have just had an awful experience yonder, although the dead of these parts are not Pharaohs. The ancient dead of the cliff-dwellers, as surely as I stand here telling it, warned me in my own language to quit digging!"

"What?" Frank Barton demanded, rising.

"Voices, more hollow in sound than those that might come from a grave, spoke to me and I've enough!" again gasped the man.

"Imagination!" both boys declared; and at the heels of the man leading the way carefully, they proceeded to the scene of the digging. Once there the professor exclaimed, "Hear it? Hear those hollow voices? Awful! We must not dare the wrath of the dead."

"I hear nothing!" laughed Frank.

"I hear an owl and my own blood circulating, is all," declared Billy.

"You do not hear human voices from the tomb?" inquired the man.

"Nix. You are overheated or the altitude has affected your mind," Frank solemnly said.

"Hear! Hear!" wailed the professor. "Listen. Voices are crying in hollow tones, their wrath at our presence! Do not tell me you cannot hear them!"

Kindly Frank Barton led the man of learning from the spot and back to camp, followed by Billy Long. Prof. Brown wept and sought his medicine chest, from which he took a nerve stimulant and then straightened. "Boys," said he, "I heard—there's no mistake about it. If you heard nothing, then I am a clairvoyant—and that's all there is to it. We will pull out right now; over the back trail."

"Professor," quickly cried Billy Long. "I never thought this of you! I am only a boy, but I'm not afraid of your dead men or women, as the case may be. Thought you didn't believe in such stuff."

"I believe in what I hear with my own ears," was the deliberate answer. "I am justified in the action we will take."

"Well," grouched Frank and Billy together, "if you are determined, professor, we will leave; but our going will have to be by daylight, for we cannot gather up our wireless stuff in the dark, very well. Your graveyard voices are those of some of the boys back home at WOAW. They've put on a few extras for your benefit tonight."

"Boys," faltered Prof. Brown, "I'd not believe you'd show me such disrespect. If this were school time I'd be compelled to suspend you both."

"We'll suspend the loud speaker at your 'diggings' and let it go at that!" giggled Frank, as he edged away to the nearer cave and turned off the control-switch that held the action of the extension loud speaker half a mile away.

CLUB'S PUZZLE PRIZE WINNERS

Following are the names of the first five readers to solve Glynn Reger's "T.J.C., Puzzle," which was printed in The Junior Times, August 23:

Charles B. Underwood, 221 South Broadway, Los Angeles.

Elaine Andrews, 453 North Avenue 52, Los Angeles.

Mary June Wood, 1522 Colton street, Los Angeles.

Helen E. Snyder, 2196 North Kirkwood avenue, Pasadena.

Lucille Lenz, 1719 South Bronson avenue, Los Angeles.

Each one of these puzzle experts will get a check for $1 as a prize award.

Payment of back salaries and debts by the Mexican government last spring resulted in so many satisfied creditors buying new automobiles that it boomed the automobile business.

The Persian government may send agents to this country to establish a direct market here for its tobaccos, which before the war came indirectly from Turkey and Europe.

POET'S CORNER

What can be this torturer's name,
And where, of where, its bane?

With restless step, now here, now there,
Across the floor I'm pacing.
From seat to seat moving 'round,
My thoughts always chasing.

My eyes are closed,
I pause to rest,
My troubles all forgotten
For I have found my quest!

Silent and still the room,
As slowly the pen writes,
Fast and thick the writer breathes
As the way ahead lights.

At first—a word—a sentence,
Two sentences and a line,
Quicker and quicker they pile,
And ever they combine.

A page—and then another,
And swiftly losing track—
I write, and ever faster
The leaves before me stack.

At last the light before me fades,
The pen writes e're more slow;
The throbbing in my heart is quiet,
The torturing flames burn low!

THE WHEEL

By Elise Stearns, 1179-A West Twenty-ninth street, Los Angeles.

It is a turning, seething mass
Of changing, incoherent things,
Binding the poor man on his way,
Claiming the bitter wrath of kings.
'Tis colorless and colorful;
It involves both the dull and sad;
It clasps within its clinging whirl,
The laughing careless youth and glad.
It holds upon its grimy breast
The pious man and criminal, too;
Its colors flash from red to gray,
From stainless white to sad'ning blue.
It never ends and like the sea
It holds its secrets to itself,
Hiding away grim mysteries
Of mighty power and hideous pelf!
And often times 'tis calm and still,
Yet thunders loudly in the night,
Breaking the castles on the shore;
Then calm again when dawn brings light.
It sings and laughs, it cries and weeps,
This life, this life, we cannot pass;
And it is cruel and hard and sweet,
A changing, incoherent mass.

Yet, is this all we truly find?
Find we there only whip and rod?
No! There's a thought that conquers all,
The overpowering thought of God!

MY COUNTRY

By Winifred Louisiana MacNab

America! My country!
How lofty is thy name.
America! Your country!
A wonder is thy fame.
America! My country.
This flag belongs to you.
It is the flag for you and me
That stands on land and sea.
America! Your country,
Your flag true, through and through.

WAIL OF THE FAT

By Edwina Hooper, Route No. 10, Box No. 112, Hermosa Beach, Cal.

My folks are always picking on me,
And for what do you suppose?
Oh! What a worry it gets to be—
But it's only the fat fellow knows.
You see, it's because I'm so big and fat,
And that "skinny" girl next door
Always must call me the kewpie doll,
Though I prefer fat by far.

And when I go to town with my ma
And want some candy or pop,
She says, "You know it will make you fat.
So Timmy, all sweets you must stop!"

"And you must not eat so much," she says,
"And if you could see your face!
You're getting so fat, in a cake-and-sweets shop,
You seem actually out of place!"

But though they all say I must reduce,
And tell me I'm oversize,
When I grow up to be a man
I'll prove myself quite wise.

I advise little boys who are getting fat—
To whom diet's a misery—
To eat all you want; don't worry a bit
Just 'cause my folks pick on me.

THE RIVER OF THE SOUL

By Reba Flicker, 1606 West Twelfth Street, Los Angeles.

Bubbling, blowing, laughing, going,
On its way it rushes,
In its very gladness showing,
How all other things it hushes;

Like a very madcap of delight
Sweeping everything away within its sight;
Tearing rocks and rushes from their hern,
Like a ship without its stern;

Wildly, madly, fast it goes,
Always onward, never slows,
Sun and shadow, wind and rain,
The light and bubbling surface cannot stain;

And in the end it wends its way,
Straight to the ocean, come to stay;
So like a daughter of the wild,
A laughing, joyous, happy child,
Rushing here and rushing there,
With laughing eyes and flying hair,

Always running, always going,
Never stopping, never slowing;
Sweeping all resistance in her way,
A torrent of vitality to sway;

Yet in the end, at set of sun,
Back to God, when life is done.

LITTLE AND MORE

By Mildred Girne, 6752 Fourth Avenue, Los Angeles

Just one little smile
But it goes a long way,
And many a while
It cheers the whole day.

Just a single kind word,
But its utterance brings joy,
Like the song of a bird
Will some sorrow destroy.

Just a kind little deed
But its ray will spread far,
As one little seed
Will bring forth a flow'r.

Just a bit of true love
Given straight from the heart,
Like a message above,
Will much comfort impart.

Just some faith in a soul
Which has tried hard and long,
Will strengthen his goal,
Make him fight with a song.

So if such a bit
Gives that much succor,
Think the marvel of it
If you give a bit more.

J. M. Barrie says: Life is a long lesson in humility.

TEN-DEGREE CHANGE WOULD END LIFE

Were the sun's heat to vary 10 deg., all life would perish, according to a scientist, who says that life here will continue indefinitely as it has existed for hundreds of millions of years. From the color of the rays given off, the temperature of the sun is said to be about twice that of an electric arc. If the earth were a ball of ice, this solar heat would melt it in a little more than fifteen minutes.

Doors made in America are so popular in England that nearly 400,000 of them will be hung there this year.

Gasoline production of this country this year will be nearly 10,000,000,000 gallons, six times that of ten years ago.

LITTLE WILLIES DIARY

Friday wuz the day of fate, wich in other wurds meens the day we would know if we got permoted to a higher grade in school or not.

We allus put on our Sunday cloes on the last day of school. Wen we got there they wuz just passin out the report cards. Wen I got mine I wuz kine of scared to look at it, so I tole Joe to look at it an tell me the pews.

Sure you passed, he sez, and I breethed a sigh of releef, cause I aint forgot the surprise Paw promised me if I would pass. Joe got his card an he got permoted, too, so we wuz glad cause we would still be in the same room wen school would begin agin.

Wen I went home I wanted to surprise Maw, so I went in the house with a sorta down-hearted expresshun on my face.

Wot, sez Maw wen she saw my expresshun, after helping you with all your home wurk, you didn't pass? Then she picked up my report card an wen she saw I did pass, she brightened up, considerbly.

Weres Paw, I sez. He's at the offise, sez Maw, and I put on my cap an took my report card an beet it for Paws offise.

As soon as I cum into Paws offise I sez, I passed Paw. Thats fine, sez he, and I promised you a surprise. Well heres a dollar, an Paw handed me a crisp dollar bill.

Is this the surprise, I sez sumwot disapointed, but not showin it. Well, no, sez Paw smiling but wait till Sunday an I will tell you the real surprise. Sure, I sez, an I went away happy.

Joe wuz waitin outside wen I cum out an he sez, my Paw gimme a dollar for passing. You aint got a thing on me, I sez, an showed him my dollar. Thats a coinsidense, sez Joe, to wich I replied, I dont know wot that meens, but I guess it is.

Golly, we wuz pretty well off. We had a buck beside we got free tickits to the circus.

We didn't do any thing till it wuz almost time for the circus to start an then we started for the circus grounds. The first thing we done wen we got there wuz, to buy sum drinks at a stan. Then we eat sum hot dog sanwiches wich were sure good, an I dont meen maybee. We went in the circus after that, an golly, there sure wuz sum real wile animals there.

Soon the circus started an we didnt know wich ring to look at, hein as how there wuz severul there doin diferent acts. I guess I'd kine of like to wurk for a circus, because the acters get all the peanuts they want for nuthin an ride in the parades.

Wen we got outa the circus we wuz hungry an got sum more hot dogs. Then we bought 4 bags of peanuts apiece, cause we didnt know wen we would see the circus peanut man agin. After eatin 3 bags of my peanuts I begin gettin sick in the stumik, so I give the other bag of peanuts to a little boy.

Wen I got home, Maw sez, Cum in an eat your supper. I felt like the way a guy feels wen he takes a trip on the ocean an a feller offers him a pie.

I tole Maw I wuznt hungry an I went to bed. It wuz a long time before I looked a peanut in the face agin.

Aunt Dolly's Letter Box

Dearest Aunt Dolly: I am a constant reader of The Junior Times, and have not missed a single copy. I even remember reading the very first copy, so today I made up my mind and told mother that I was going to join your famous organization. She was very pleased, as she is a firm believer in the club and reads The Junior Times every Sunday. I am 14 years of age, and am in high school here.

I am also sending an answer to one of your puzzles in The Junior Times.

Please send me my badge as soon as possible, for I am very anxious to get established and working in your famous club.

Lovingly,
[Signed]
RUTH OLSON.
Atascadero, Cal.

Dear Aunt Dolly: I have been reading The Junior Times for a long time, and just can't wait any longer to join.

My home is in Phoenix, Ariz., but I am over here for the summer visiting my aunt. As school is now out, I would like to devote all my time to your club. I don't believe anything else could please me more than to join your happy band of workers and wear your T.J.C. pin.

[Signed]
ADELE GALLIVER,
438 South Olive street, care of Hotel Munn, Los Angeles.

Dearest Aunt Dolly: I have been reading The Junior Times, and I think it is wonderful; so does my mother, for she has been reading it too. I would love to have one of your famous T.J.C. buttons, and I would be very proud to wear one, Aunt Dolly, and I would be very happy if I could be an active member of your world-famous T.J.C.

[Signed]
LUCILLE DAY,
928 1-2 West Forty-ninth street, Los Angeles.

Dear Aunt Dolly: I am sending you, under separate cover, four comic strips, entitled "Willie Wilkins." Hope that they are good enough to use in The Junior Times. I want to congratulate you upon the fine bunch of cartoonists that the club has; they certainly can produce a professional brand of work. I know personally several of your prominent cartoonists around Chicago, among them Abe Lubovitz and Earle S. Harvey.

Abe Lubovitz is the fellow who induced me to join the club, and a finer fellow than he would, indeed, be hard to find.

Earle Harvey I have never met personally, but he and I have corresponded for quite a while, and he also sounds like a fine fellow.

Well, if those strips are good enough to use, you will find them coming in regularly; if not, I will turn my thoughts to another idea and try to work on that until that is good enough to use. In either case, you will find that I will try to be an active member, and not let this part of the country seem dead.

[Signed]
Sincerely,
CARL SKYTTE,
3618 Rokeby street, Chicago, Ill.

P.S.: Take good care of "Willie," Aunt Dolly, and don't let him go too near Hollywood or Pola Negri might vamp him.!
CARL.

AUNT DOLLY'S QUESTION BOX

name means to the very young, the medium young, like myself, and, I do not doubt, to the extremely old, for it seems that we at these particular ages are caught wondering about all things, and it does seem a pity that so few of us have a pal to straighten out this big old jumble called life. I am a boy of 17 years of age who has been shifting for himself since the age of 9. Dad died and I've been helping mother until she, too, was laid away. At the age of 14 I started to buck the world with my two fists, and very little hope of winning. I've tried nearly everything, farming, picking fruit, laboring because I lacked education to do better things, but now I've a smattering of learning and have climbed into an office job in one of the wholesale firms. I've dreamed of this move for years, dear Aunt Dolly, and thought I should be happy as a king, but I'm not. I don't understand myself at all; everything seems amiss and I have no one to turn to. Success should be sweet after the bitter toil I've been through, but I find myself homesick for the orchards, the month of May, when almond blossoms first begin to bloom, all the things I loathed when I had them I want now.

Am I ungrateful or restless or what? It worries me. I feel as though I am caught in a giant machine that is crushing the best out of me, but you, dear pal, who laugh like a boy, and seem to understand them so well, will, I am sure, be able to throw some light on the subject. Devotedly yours, [Signed] KENNETH V. G.

Kenny, dear, life is beginning to take its first toll, so the average person would tell you, but I've always discarded that theory. I simply refuse to think of this world as anything but a merry old spot I can have a lot of fun in. You see, dear, we all long for things that are past; that's human nature, and we dream of future achievements, which is natural, but why not be content with the present and make the most out of what we have.

It's pretty much the way we look at things; that's all. I've had to do lots of things I fairly hated in life, but everything turned out right, because I stopped hating them. I said to myself, "Now, look here, if you've got to do it, buck up and grin, and have a good time while you're doing so and so, because it must be done; so quit frowning, because a grouch is a public nuisance."

Life isn't so disappointing as it is confusing. Probably, your old peaceful work in the orchards calls you in the spring, but how about the rainy days and the cold winter days when the wholesale house will be warm and cheery. I tell you what to do, Kenny, dear, you just try your job a while longer and if you still feel an insistent calling to go back to the open, go.

If I felt I'd be happy washing dishes I wouldn't care a rap what anyone thought, I'd be a dishwasher. Hold this in mind all your life. Do what you want and you'll be a success, but be sure you want to go back to the fields before you give up a good job in the city. Life, as I said, is confusing, but not so complicated as people would have us believe, so don't let it scare you, Kenny, dear. Take the bull by the horns, and you'll win every time. Lovingly yours,

AUNT DOLLY.

Founder Tells Why "Junior" Club Was Formed; Results to Date Summarized in Human Terms

Once upon a time, as all good tales begin, there lived a little girl who, although surrounded by material luxury, seemed sadly discontented. Perhaps, it was that few people understand her; often she would sit for hours in her nursery peopling its dim corners with characters of her own imagination.

At the age of 9, many hours were spent writing about them, while her family laughed amusedly and wondered what would become of her. They were not kept long in doubt, for later, as girlhood claimed this same determined child, they began to realize her ability to write. However, they did not know of the heartbreaking periods that followed.

For six long years she wrote incessantly, without sign of success, until one fine morning in June a slim envelope was mailed her containing a check and the startling announcement that her animal series had been accepted. Instantly the world seemed gilded with roseate hope and beauty, for she had at last won recognition in the literary field, but despair still insisted on dogging her steps, manuscript after manuscript being returned with a polite "We regret to say your contribution was found unsuitable for our present needs, etc."

But she never gave up, and for two long years struggled incessantly, happy as a lark when her stories sold, but plunged into despair when they did not. No matter which way the wind blew, there was a cry in her heart, a wish to save others from experiencing such doubt and discouragement. So, the first thing she did when she gained permanent success was to establish a club that would give youngsters their big chance without the hurts and heartaches she herself had suffered, for this dreamy, silent little girl who seldom played with other children, was none other than your own Aunt Dolly.

This, then, is how The Times Junior Club came to be founded. She wished to save others from years of torturing doubt and despair, but it was not long before she discovered there were many other wants to be supplied. Poverty in its stark ugliness faced her, tots without clothes and shoes began to swarm into the clubrooms until she found herself in the same predicament as a man who builds a house for three children, but finds he must accommodate ten.

Just as he would build on an east or west wing, we have added various branches to our already hustling, bustling club, for The Times Junior Club takes pride in establishing a new standard of perfection. Slipshod work and work half done has no place in our organization. It is the same way with the leaders and people who surround us in our daily work; they must be 100 per cent, bright, loving and cheerful helpers or we immediately fill their place with others better adapted to our special line of activity.

We aim to supply just wants, to encourage and help our members win success, but we also build solidly. Fly-by-night schemes are not adapted by The Times Junior Club. This is what makes our club so distinctive. Home atmosphere of the best surrounds our members; they must behave courteously while in the clubrooms during our social hours. The result is surely gratifying, for everywhere in this great city of ours, numberless firms are writing in to us saying, "We have so and so employed in our bank and thought you would be interested in knowing he has had two promotions. Your boys are solid, hard workers and may we add, extremely courteous." This is what our club means. Already our members are making their mark, singled out as "coming men and women." But no matter how busy they may be, in they come for an evening's chat, proud of their progress, eager and full of desire to tell of this or that happening in the day's routine.

The T.J.C. builds character and gives a boy his chance, that's your answer when anyone asks you what our organization stands for. Lift your head high when you say it, for anyone may well be proud of a club boasting close to a half-million memberships. Besides, we've established a sort of home, a resting place for the tired and weary, where they can drop in any time of day and leave their troubles behind them.

A clearinghouse for unhappy children; a place where dreams come true, that's what our T.C.J. stands for.

A LITTLE BOY'S PRAYER

BY NADINE BOOE
929 Eighth Street
Alhambra, Cal.

Dear God, I went to church to-night
Just like Mom said I should.
I broke a plate an' teased the cat.
But I tried hard to be good.
I started to run way off from school,
An' 'nen I changed my mind:
Cause I thought 'twould hurt my mumsey so
An' I hope I ain't that kind.
Dear God, please bless my Auntie Sue,
An' dad and mother dear—
An' me, an' help me not to say
Things she'd not like to hear.
Help me to be just awful good
Like daddy used to be.
Help me to be loving, true,
An' help me to love Thee.
An' make that nice man that I met
Have what he wanted so.
Make little Jamie strong an' well
An' make his legs to grow.
Help dearest Ruthie sing an' play
So she'll bring "joy to men"
An' cheer the people who are sick,
For Jesus's sake,
Amen.

Then as a tired little boy
Crawled into his wee bed,
There were tears in the angels' eyes,
But only of joy, it is said.
And as they gathered 'round the throne
And joyful anthems sang—
I think tears filled the Father's eyes
As through His glad great heart
The happy echoes rang.

SPRING

By Imogene Brogdon,
3.01 McKenzie Street,
Fresno, Cal.

What is that most peculiar thing
That makes the world with gladness ring?
That makes the sunshine sparkle and dance,
And flowers blossom at a glance;
That sets a fellow's head awhirl,
And starts him dreaming of a girl?
What is that most peculiar thing?
Why, folks, it's nothing else but spring!

EVENING

By Evelyn Sherrill,
602 East Third street
Santa Ana, Cal.

I wander about, in the evening;
The sky is crimson and cool,
The sun reflecting its glory
In a crystal, placid pool.

A bird warbles low in the twilight;
The flowers bloom bright 'neath my feet;
The wind blows in cool, gentle zephyrs,
What beauty on earth is more sweet?
To walk in the colorful twilight,
While mem'ries of life and of love,
Sooth me: and brings me much nearer,
To God, in His Kingdom above.

"MOTHER"

Lucille Sloss, 2641 Armstrong avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

I know a fairy queen,
Who is always to be seen.
She has sweet and loving eyes
From which tenderness flies.
2
Each night she tucks me into bed,
And all the night is overhead.
She gives me sweet and pleasant dreams,
In which the light of love always gleams.
3
When I tell her of my sorrow,
She comforts me and says
Things will be better, dear, tomorrow.
When I am gloomy and sad,
Her sweet voice makes me glad.
Ah! She is a friend indeed,
Always helps me in my need.
She is always to me true,
Helps me all my tasks to do.
5
Many of you know her name,
But I'll tell you just the same.
Sent from God from his throne above,
Her name is "Mother, heart of love."

MY DOGGIE JOE

By Reba Flicker, 1606 West Twelfth street, Los Angeles.

His eyes were large, and big, and brown,
And sad and glad, and saucer round;
He liked to eat, that, you could see,
By the hungry way he looked at me,
And when his foot upon the chair
He put, he sat and watched with care,
My every move, however small
'Til with a whistle I did call
Him to my side, and then bestow,
Some meat, upon my doggie Joe.

MY HOUSE

By Bradford W. Shaw, 1011 Isabelle street, Los Angeles.

Let me built my house on the mountain,
High in the cloudless sky.
Let me live in my house on the mountain
And watch the world go by.

Each man has his trials and troubles
As he journeys along life's way.
To keep his head above the water
When the boat begins to sway.

And as he climbs along the mountain
To the pinnacle where I sit,
Let me reach out my hand in kindness
To help him lest he quit.

For so many fall by the wayside
And follow the down-hill track,
That leaves them lonely and wretched
To face a doom, so black.

Then let me climb higher and higher
Till I reach the mountain-top land.
And live in my house on the mountain
To give all a helping hand.

ATTIC FUN

By Laura Simmons, 73 Pinckney St., Boston, Mass.

Right haughtily she swept about, the Lady Ermyntrude,
And twined her jewels in her hair, and vowed in lofty mood
She'd never wed the belted Earl, for all his titles clear.
Quoth she: "What say you, Hildegarde?" and I replied, "My dear,
I weary of those castle walls; let us proceed outside.
Pray order our gold coach-and-four, that we may take a ride!"

"An old romance," I hear you say, perhaps you'd never guess
The "castle" was our attic room; the dames, myself and Bess—
With rows of beads, and shaving curls for jewels rich and rare,
And grandma's dresses from the trunk, the "robes" we had to wear!
And for the real, true Hildegardes and Ermyntrudes, I grieve
Because they never had such fun—I truly do believe!

DON'T FORGET CLUB PARTY

MUST HAVE A CARD, AS THE CAPACITY OF THE HALL IS LIMITED

Saturday, September 19, 1925.
Wilshire Dance Hall, 425 South Western avenue.
Time, 8 p.m. sharp.

Paste these three lines in a corner of your mirror so you'll be sure to remember when and where we are giving our big masquerade ball. It's to be the sensation of our fall activities, so you had better apply at once, as tickets are going like hot cakes. Remember this party has been planned as a special treat for our officers, backers and representatives, so we advise you to hustle. Our stack of cards is rapidly diminishing, and as we must limit the number of people to the capacity of the hall, we urge you to ask for your ticket at once. We are not sending personal invitations, so please do not expect one. We simply haven't time.

Our hall will be beautifully decorated with low-hung lamps and colored streamers. As for jazz, you couldn't have anything snappier or better than that supplied by the famous Times Junior jazz band, which has promised to furnish us our music for the evening. Then there are prizes, dozens of them for youngsters who draw the lucky numbers. We'll also have a turn or two of clever vaudeville, just to make the evening unusually peppy, and refreshments, of course. This is just a sketchy description of what it is going to be like; in reality our masquerade will totally eclipse anything we have ever given, so hustle up! you T.J.C. members; get your card, and remember to come early so you won't lose a moment of glorious fun!

THE LITTLE PARK BY THE WAYSIDE

By Maxine Stickle

The little park by the wayside lies
Where travelers tired and weary
Find peace and rest beneath its shade
And all is cool and cheery.

Flowers blooming by the path
In prim and colorful row
Of vivid pinks and softest blues
And violets all aglow.

Roses fresh and dainty
Climb the latticed wall
And into the fountain's waters
Their scattered petals fall.

While large drooping trees, o'er the rolling lawns,
Their long dark shadows fling
And the birds in the treetops carol their joy
In blithesome songs of spring.

And the silver waters of the fountain play
Soothing lullabies through the day
In the little park by the wayside.

"AMBITION"

By Mildred Gruber, 14 years of age,
1006 Irolo street, Los Angeles.

A throbbing in my heart does lie,
A burning, torturing flame,
A restless itching impulse—
Driving onward a high, noble aim.

To write, or read, or make
Some perfect, priceless strain,
A song, a story, a poem,
Oh! What will ease the pain?

Perplexingly I guess in vain,
Carefully I search my brain;

(If you have any questions regarding flowers send your queries to Daffy Dill, care of The Junior Times. Daffy Dill also is offering a prize to the boy or girl who sends in the best story or poem on their favorite flower.)

"I think," said the Cone Flower, "I had better read the program so you will know the characters as they appear. First, there are Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter, immortal players who, each year portray the same parts: Mother Earth, the wardrobe mistress, who presents all the lovely costumes to the flowers, and the Sun, who calls them for their act as he is the prompter. Father Time then directs the act and sees that no one is late. Prof. Frog furnishes the music and Jack Frost is the scenic artist. If you miss any of the performance you may remain in your seats, as it is a continuous show. There also will appear a large chorus of Painted Ladies, Tumble Weeds, Bee's Bugs and Butterflies, and I hope this play will enter your hearts and not go over your heads. However, if you are not satisfied go to the Box Elder and Honesty will refund your money from the Shepherd's Purse. "Please do not tip the Glowworms, as they escort you to your seats. I hope the Wind will cease whispering through the trees as it is very annoying to the audience."

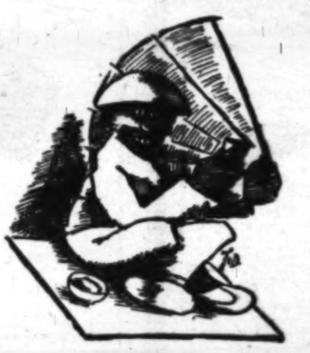
SUNSHINE TWINS SEE THE WORLD

Verse by Laurence Collins, Jr., Nogales, Ariz. Illustrations by Ted Skinner, Los Angeles.

JAPAN

Fiery red the crystal glowed.
Then to the Sunshine Twins it showed
All the wonders of Japan
That are painted on a fan!
To the Twins the homes seemed bare
Not a table or a chair
For the Jap has always sat
Cross-legged on a silken mat!
A wooden pillow holds his head
When he is stretched upon his bed.
And all his children small drink tea
A thing the Twins were shocked to see!
And though they don't eat any bread
They have white, fluffy rice instead!
"A charming land is this," said Bet,
Really quite the nicest yet!"



AUSTRALIA

The Twins went to Australia
Where dwells the Kangaroo,
Said Bob to Bet: "There's Chester Gump!
And Uncle Bim's here, too!"
Oh, 'twas a merry meeting
With happiness replete
For Uncle Bim refreshed them all
With sunshine things to eat.
The Twins soon learned the secret of Chester's Uncle's wealth.
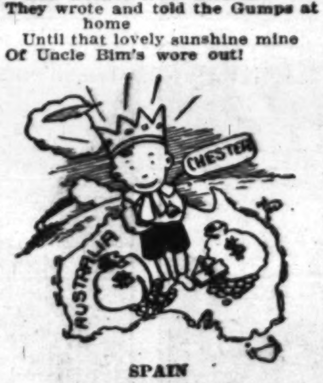
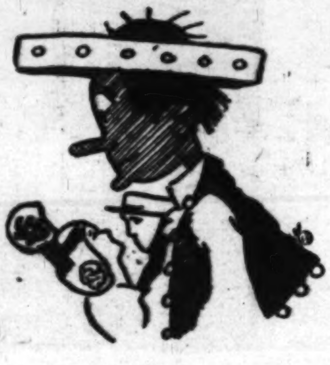
He owned a wondrous cookie mine
And worked it all himself!
They wrote and told the Gumps at home
Until that lovely sunshine mine
Of Uncle Bim's wore out!



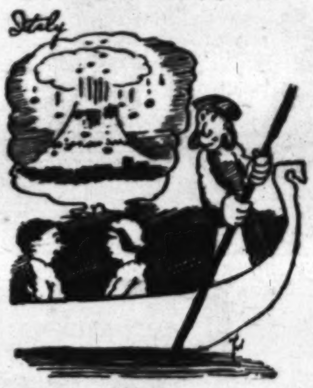
SPAIN

The crystal shimmered clear again
Then in a moment showed them Spain!
"Life in this land should be great fun,"
Laughed lazy Bet, "for everyone
Seems just to hate the thought of work,
It's quite the fashion here to shirk!"
They met a herdsman sauntering slow,
As herdsmen did long, long ago,
Ringing aloud a cracked old bell,
And crying: "Fresh goat's milk to sell!"
And when a housewife bought his ware
He milked the goat right then and there!
Which made small Betty laugh until
She very nearly had a spill!
Many such sights they saw, and then
Took up their journey once again.



ITALY

The Sunshine Twins in Italy!
On every hand queer things they see.
"Just think," cried Bob, "in this old street
The soldier Romans used to meet!
Just over there lies old Pompeii
A city once all bright and gay
Until Vesuvius one night
Covered it o'er with lava quite.
Now men have dug it out to see
Just how it used to look and be!"
In gondolas the happy pair
Sailed through the streets of Venice fair
And laughed to see the gondoliers
With large gold rings set in their ears!
'Twas with a very heartfelt sigh
The Twins bade Italy good-by!



RUSSIA

In Russia next the Sunshine two
Found lovely pictures spread to view.
First the great palace of the Czar
Showed them how winged great honors are.
They saw those Cossacks of the snows
Who, scorning buttons, hook their clothes,
And ride so well that they can best
The bravest cowboys of the West.
They visited the city's mart
Where Betty gazed and then gave a start:
"Oh, see," she cried, "the pigs and sheep Sold frozen whole! They'll surely keep!"
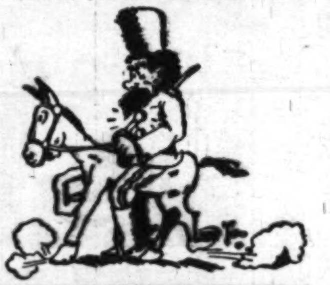
They even rode a curious sled
Dog-drawn and by a peasant led
And then left Russia's snow-bound strand
To visit yet another land!



Playground Balls

Aunt Dolly's Question Box

Dear Pal:

This is how I picture you: a Peter Pan that peeps into the furthest corner of a human being's heart, and leaves, in place of dull care and sorrow, a shaft of sunshine. To me, anyway, your paper has been an inspiration and a never-ending source of delight, for I am one of those boys who suffer from self-consciousness to a painful degree. What will ever cure my falling over other people's toes? How can I learn to leave a room without blushing red as a tomato? I feel like such a fool I hate to go anywhere.

Please do not cast my question aside. It may be very ordinary, but important to me. Please help me.

[Signed] "UNHAPPY."

It might surprise you and many other members to know I was so sensitive and bashful I couldn't recite in school. My tongue remained glued to the roof of my mouth and I turned, alternately, every color of the rainbow when anyone asked me a question. When I had to walk down the aisle in my schooloom to reach my desk hot prickles ran up and down my spine, and often my forehead would be moist when I sank into my seat. I simply could not gain poise, so I thought at least, and as each day passed, with new horrors to be met, I used to wonder how I could live through it. In addition to my extreme bashfulness I stuttered, yet today I do not feel the slightest qualm when addressing thousands of people. How did I do it, and how can you do it? Not by studying a correspondence course or exerting will power. I decided to forget all about it, and thought hard of something else when my bashfulness laid hold of me. Then, too, I just naturally grew out of it. All children do. It is a phase of youth. Highly strung youngsters, especially, suffer in this way.

Don't think about yourself when you feel that furious blush mounting. Repeat Cicero or Caesar, or count chairs, or anything to down that foolish feeling, and the first thing you'll know you won't ever feel like that again.

Lovingly yours,

AUNT DOLLY.

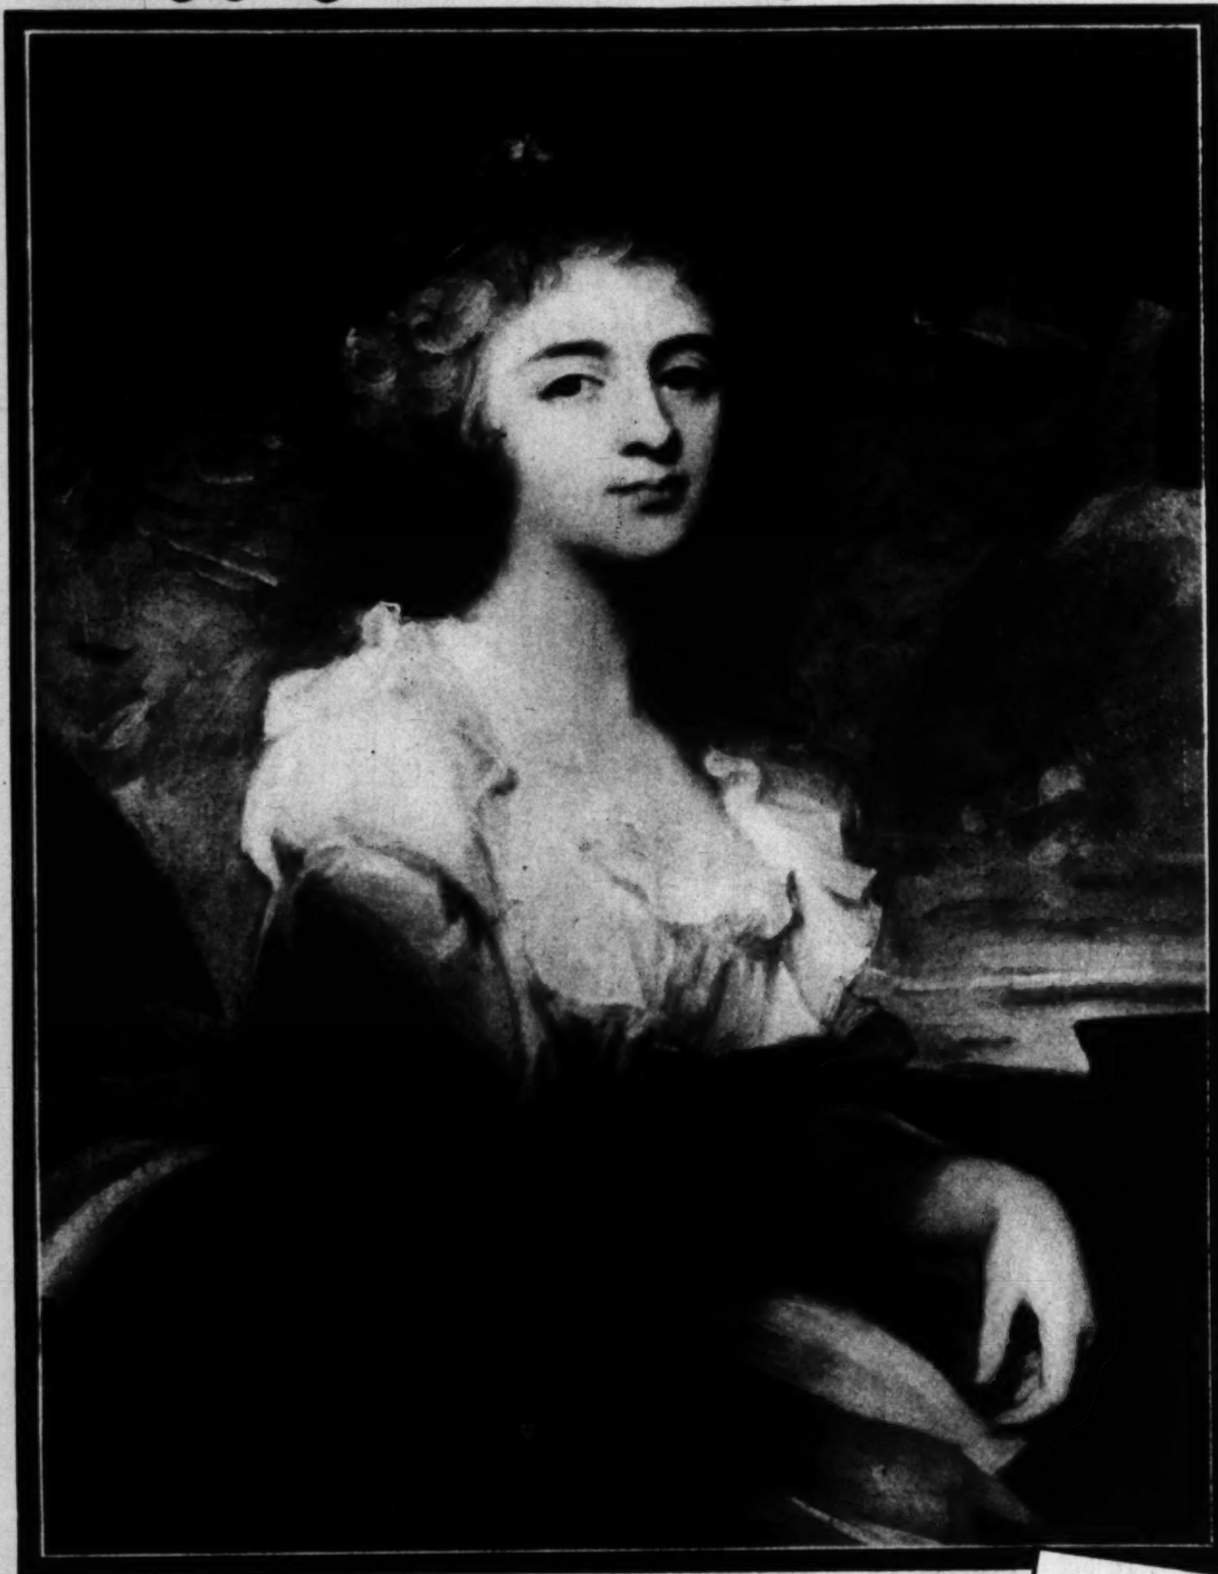
Added to Famed HUNTINGTON ART COLLECTION



"Mrs. Burton," by George Romney, 1734-1802.

Augmenting a collection which is world-known, the canvases reproduced on this page have just been hung by Mr. Henry E. Huntington in his San Marino home. Eventually these masterpieces, with all the other cultural relics with which Mr. Huntington has surrounded himself, will pass to the control of the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery. The photographs of the canvases here reproduced are used through the courtesy of Duveen Brothers, Inc., the concern through which Mr. Huntington purchased them. For an article regarding these masterpieces see the news section of today's issue of The Sunday Times.

How I Got Thin This Easy Way

New French Discovery Works Wonders

If you are one of many who has tried everything to reduce without success—if you are suffering from a weak heart, high blood pressure, tired feeling, shortness of breath, all due to obesity, AT LAST YOU CAN BE RELIEVED — If your figure is such that you are embarrassed to appear in public with your husband or your smart-looking slender friends, you can now entertain new hopes. Perhaps it is your bust, your thighs or your arms that you want to reduce, or maybe only one or two rolls of fat have lately appeared. Whatever your case may be, if you are ten pounds too heavy or one hundred pounds, you owe it to yourself to go today to any good drug store, ask for a package of "SAN-GRI-NA Tablets" (do not accept any substitute, as SAN-GRI-NA is the only thing which ever reduced me. I was a very stubborn case, and I had tried everything else advertised without any success). SAN-GRI-NA is the formula of a French physician, and until you try it, you cannot say that your fat cannot be removed. It is the simplest, easiest and safest way to reduce. Take two small tablets before each meal and watch your fat disappear. Not only is SAN-GRI-NA GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS, but its use should greatly improve your general health and appearance. On sale at any good Drug or Dept. Store

If your druggist does not carry SAN-GRI-NA in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C., and one full sized box SAN-GRI-NA will be mailed you direct.

The Knit-tex Coat
T M REG U S PAT OFF

SOLD BY GOOD CLOTHIERS IN EVERY TOWN

THE Knit-tex Coat is different from any topcoat you have ever worn. It is guaranteed for three years.

Light as a feather, warm as toast, soft as velvet, never wrinkles, never gets out of shape, and can be worn ten months in the year.

Knit-tex is knitted — but you wouldn't know it. It looks like a fine imported fabric. The yoke and sleeve lining are of Skinner's satin.

In every city and town in the United States there is a clothing store with this Knit-tex photograph in its windows. Look for it. That store will show you Knit-tex in many beautiful new shades of grey, tan, blue, blue-grey, lavender-grey, fawn, mode, heather, and Oxford.

If you are shown a knit coat without the Knit-tex label, beware! If the Knit-tex label is not in the coat it is not made of genuine guaranteed Knit-tex cloth.

To keep you lovely
—all day long

The girl who prides herself on her attractiveness calls Bathasweet her favorite luxury, not only because it entrances her senses, but because it adds so greatly to her loveliness thruout the day.

With it she bathes in water as fragrant as a flower garden, and so soft it cleanses the pores as no ordinary water can, leaving her skin radiantly healthy and smooth as velvet to the touch. Then for the rest of the day an almost scentless perfume clings about her, keeping her always sweet and lovable.

Yet Bathasweet is inexpensive. In cans: 25c, 50c and $1.00. In beautiful glass package: $1.50. At drug and department stores.

Your tooth-brush can go only so far—
after that it is up to your dentifrice

IT IS physically impossible to brush every surface and crevice of your teeth where decay may begin. It is also impossible for any tooth-brush to protect your gums from irritation or infection. The real work of protection on the grinding surfaces of your teeth, and especially at that vital place, The Danger Line, is up to your dentifrice.

Where is the Danger Line?

Your gums thin out to a very fine, delicate edge where they come in contact with the teeth. If you look closely, you can see the tiny V-shaped crevices formed by this union of your gums and teeth. You will find these crevices on the outside of your teeth, in between your teeth and in back of your teeth. They form The Danger Line.

What happens there

Particles of food and germs collect in these tiny crevices of The Danger Line. Acids form which cause Acid Decay of the teeth and irritation of the gums. In time the gums break down. Such conditions are favorable to Pyorrhea and loss of teeth. Many serious diseases are often traceable to Acid Decay and infection at The Danger Line. People who lack energy, who seem constantly on the verge of ill-health, who are pale of skin and dull of eye, should attend to their teeth and gums.

How to protect The Danger Line.

Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, is a safe, scientific means of neutralizing the acids in the mouth, which, unless neutralized, cause Acid Decay and often Pyorrhea.

To give your teeth and gums proper care and really lasting, effective protection, use Squibb's Dental Cream regularly at least twice a day. Tiny particles of this ideal protective dentifrice will reach all the pits and hidden crevices of your teeth which are inaccessible to any tooth-brush. There they will remain, neutralizing acids as they form, protecting the teeth from Acid Decay, lessening the peril of Pyorrhea, at the place where Pyorrhea begins—The Danger Line.

Remember then your tooth-brush can go only so far. And be sure that you select a dentifrice that will go the rest of the way to safe, effective protection. Ask any druggist for Squibb's Dental Cream.

Squibb Educational Contest

Each advertisement of E. R. Squibb & Sons has an educational purpose. It gives information which, if followed, will lead to better health. To help accomplish this purpose, we will distribute $25,000.00 in cash awards among 508 contestants who give the best answers to eleven questions.

Ten of these eleven questions appear in this column. The eleventh and last question will be announced on Saturday, October 24, 192

The Questions

Notice that none of the contest questions is difficult to answer, nor does the answering of them require professional or technical knowledge. You can get the information you need to answer these questions from Squibb advertisements—follow them regularly.

1. What is "The Danger Line" in the mouth? Why is it so called?
2. How can you best guard your teeth against Acid Decay and your gums against Pyorrhea and thus maintain your general health?
3. What is the important constituent of Squibb's Dental Cream? Why is it so important?
4. Why should a dental cream be free from grit or similar abrasives?
*5. Of what value are antiseptics, germ-destroying chemicals or astringents in a dental cream?
*6. Why should a dental cream be free from substances that would be harmful when continually used in the mouth?
7. Why is a correct dentifrice of the utmost importance in the care of children's mouths?
8. Why should you have in the family medicine cabinet only such products as are approved by your physician?
9. State one or more points of superiority in each of the following products: Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, Squibb's Castor Oil, Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil, Squibb's Epsom Salt, Squibb's Bicarbonate of Soda.
10. Why is it important to consider the "Priceless Ingredient" before you buy?

Typifying The MODERN—

La Plante

Vera Reynolds

Eleanor Boardman

Flappers? Yes, sometimes—even now. But the girls on this page have acquired popularity because they have been able to give more character to their portrayals than mere jazziness. They are representative of a classier modern type of heroine that is now in vogue. They are helping to introduce a new style of youthful personality—more reserved and perhaps more sincere. Dorothy Mackaill is now featured in "Joanna with a Million"; Eleanor Boardman in "Memory Lane"; Laura La Plante in "The Midnight Sun," and Vera Reynolds in "The Road to Yesterday," virtually all major productions.

Dorothy Mackaill

New ROLES, New FACES, New BOB

Mary Philbin is the latest rival of Gloria Swanson. At least, she will have the chance to make a picture in France just as Gloria did. The production is "The Man Who Laughs," based on the Victor Hugo novel, which Universal is to film in cooperation with a foreign company.

Again Betty Bronson is a Barrie heroine. "A Kiss for Cinderella," the delightful Barrie whimsy is being made by Paramount with Betty in the role made famous by Maude Adams on the stage. There is little of the fluffy-haired Betty in the drab edition of Cinderella seen in this view.

Adolphe Menjou has entered the servant class. His suave sophistication is garbed in a waiter's uniform in "The Grand Duchess," now being filmed with Florence Vidor in the title role. Miss Vidor introduces a new bob in this feature.

The stage has brought still another recruit to the cinema. Basil Rathbone, who is appearing with Mae Murray in "The Masked Bride," acted in the spoken drama in England. He also played in the footlight version of "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," with Elsie Ferguson. This play is now being filmed as shown elsewhere on this page.

Since the arrival of Constance Howard in Hollywood the Charleston has increased in popularity. Miss Howard is the younger sister of Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn, and she has been teaching the film colony all the latest steps. She appeared last year on Broadway in "Dancing Mothers."

For a long time Mabel Ballin resisted the short-hair craze—if it can still be called a craze instead of a convention. She may have lost a little of her old-world charm because of the bob, but there is no doubt that it enhances her personality in a more modern way.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" are jingling again. This is the second time George Cohan's famous comedy has been filmed. Douglas MacLean is the star, and Edith Roberts the leading lady.

Syd Chaplin is again turning an old favorite into new laughs. "Charley's Aunt," in which he was starred, was one of the popular comedies of the year, and now he has just finished "The Man on the Box."

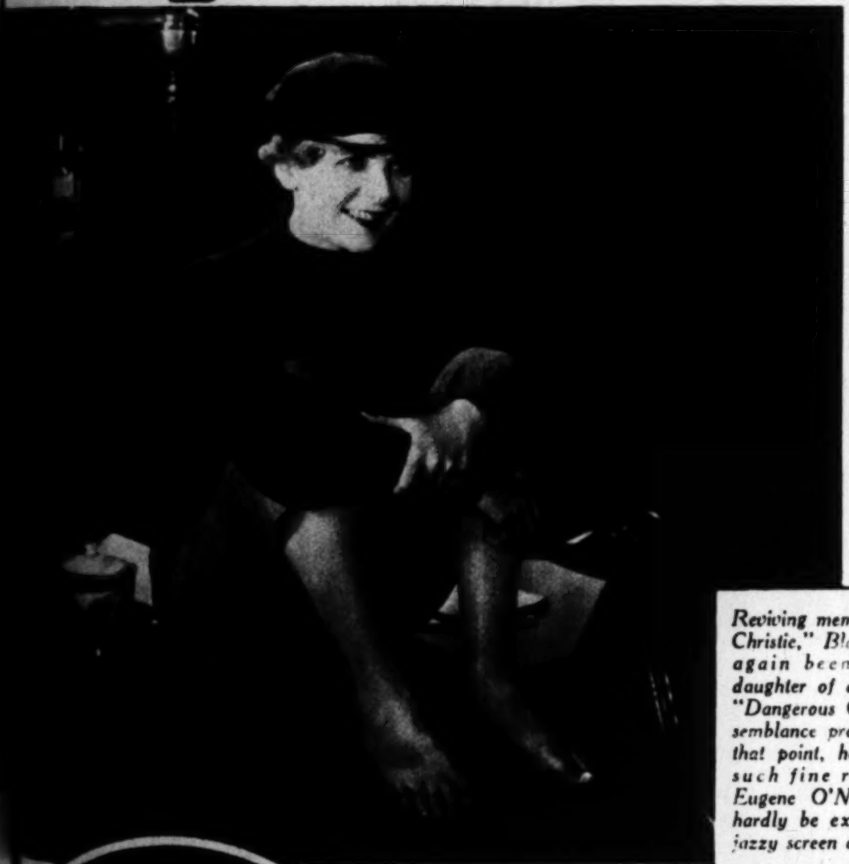
edies of the year, and now

They Must Stay TRUE to TYPE!

Whether he stars or appears as featured player, Charles Ray is himself only when he is playing the bashful country boy. Like the photograph of Miss Tashman this is also a glimpse from that ultra-glittering feature, "A Little Bit of Broadway."



Reviving memories of "Anna Christie," Blanche Sweet has again been playing the daughter of a sea captain in "Dangerous Currents." Resemblance probably ceases at that point, however, because such fine realism as the Eugene O'Neill drama can hardly be expected on the jazzy screen of today.

Mary Pickford has settled her mind at last. Two pictures right in a row show her as the little urchin girl. This is a view from "Scraps," her latest, and Mary will again be the comical little Irish lass full of mischief and heart appeal of the same general type that she made famous in the past.

Colleen Moore can't get away from flappers. She has affected an interesting variation, though, this time by appearing in "We Moderns" as the English view of the young set.

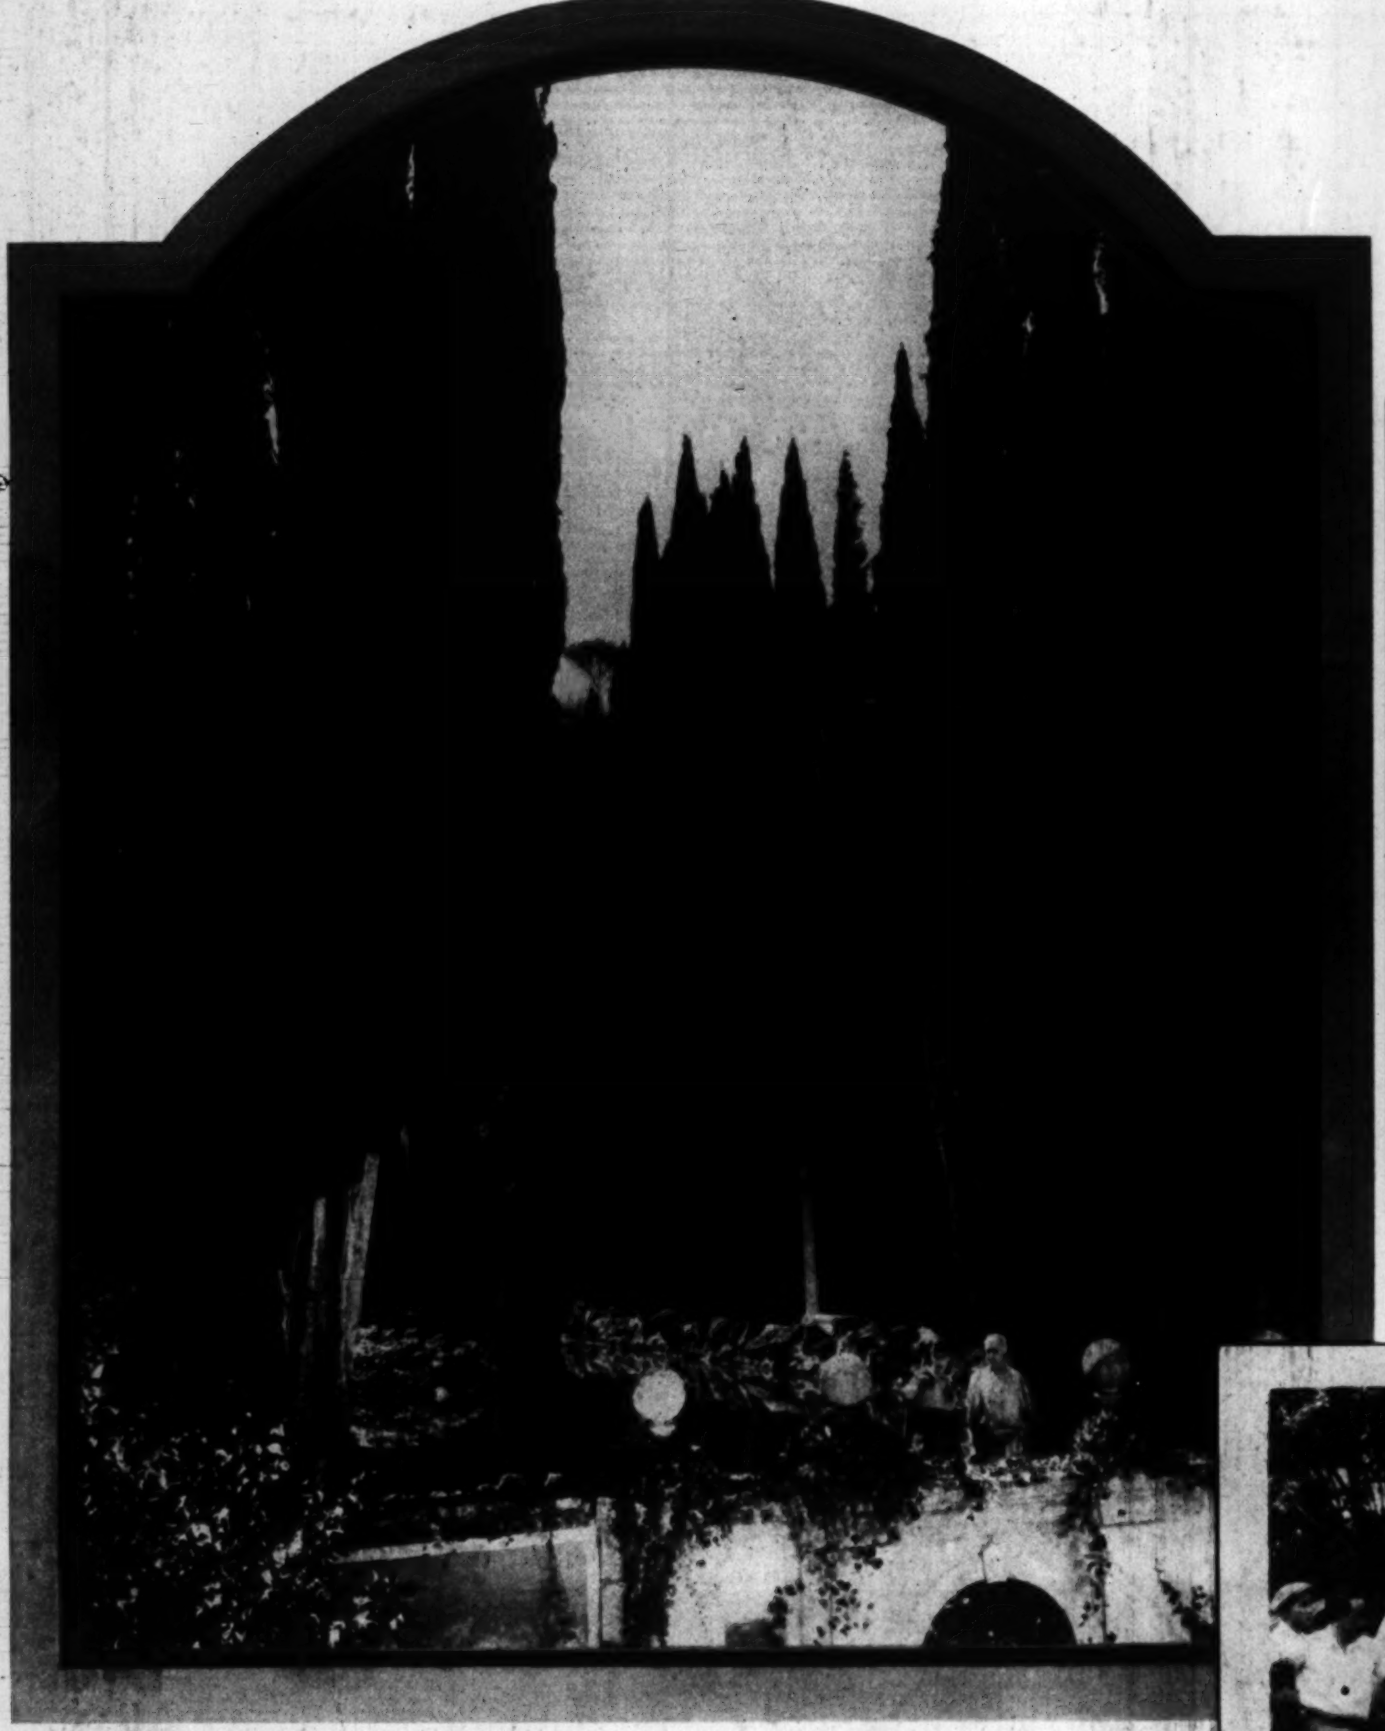
...ine appears fast to be becoming Alma ... Arabian is the setting for her latest ...deavors in "The Winding Stair." In ... recently she was a tango queen.

The eternal Follies girl. Lilyan Tashman qualifies to perfection. She is doing a Broadway chorine in "A Little Bit of Broadway," starring Pauline Starke. She was similarly classified recently in "Pretty Ladies."

As a type for royalty, Willard Louis seems to have a permanent wave in his popularity. He portrays a Balkan king in Lowell Sherman's starring picture, "The Love Toy." Everyone has a happy remembrance of his Prince of Wales in "Beau Brummel." It was his best role.

The Roaming, Rovi CAMERA

Were the movie camera to be reincarnated at some future time in human guise, there is doubt that it would wear the garb of a tramp, or at any rate that of a world traveler. The is no such thing as staying at home consistently for this apparatus. It is invariably caught by the spirit of wanderlust. Sometimes, the distant scene in Europe is the one that lures, again the setting is comparatively close to Hollywood. But at any rate, the work accompl by the camera is, as a rule, most interesting and attractive when it goes on tour, whether be for the dramatic or comedy type of picture.



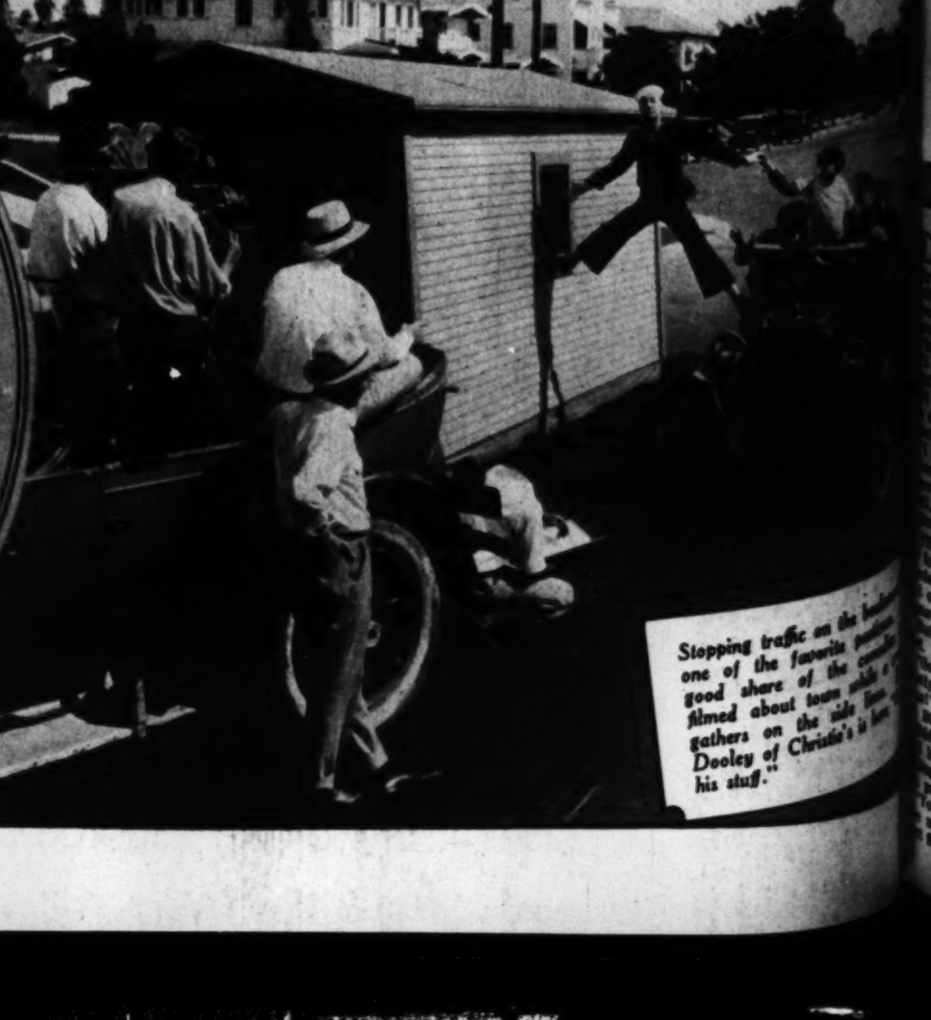
Many beautiful exteriors like this were secured during that portion of "Ben-Hur," which was filmed abroad. Some of them will be seen, too, in the finished feature, we hope, if they are anything like this. Ramon Navarro and Frank Currier are the actors in the foreground.

From Southern France and Italy will come new visions of historical wonders in Rex Ing "Mare Nostrum." The temple of Apollo (right) in Pompeii, used as the backgro scenes in which Antonio Moreno and Alice Terry appear. The other player here Frau Paquerette, a foreign actress.

Cecil De Mille found an appropriate setting for the historic scenes in "The Road to Yesterday" at Golden Gate Park in San Francisco. Note the regiment of technical assistants! What chance has an actor anyway? Joseph Schildkraut and Jetta Goudal at right.

Location means ruinations—sometimes. In "Recompense" an expensive car was plunged into a green oozy swamp for the sake of a dramatic climax. Raymond McKee and Pauline Garon are in the scene.

Finding a river of the type of the Mississippi near Hollywood was the task of technical men for James Cruze's production, "The Pony Express." It was easy though. For the Sacramento has doubled many times. The ferry boat was specially constructed.



Stopping traffic on the boule one of the favorite pastimes good share of the comedie filmed about town while a gathers on the side lines. Dooley of Christie's is ha his stuff."

BEBE DANIELS and her sweet mother, Phyllis Daniels, entertained Stella and me at dinner, the other night. Bebe looked awfully pretty in brown and gold chiffon—oh, of course, with a waistline!

Stella says it is the greatest wonder in the world to her how everybody is growing a waistline these days—with every other phase of the feminine form the name implies!

We had heard that since leaving the wild and woolly West for the effete East and South, Bebe had become quite a heroine. While she was out here, Bebe played society drama, and as soon as she went east, she did stunts!

We told Bebe about hearing of the time in Florida when she was in a pool of icy water all day making scenes for her picture, and how she wouldn't have a double, but finally keeled right over in the water and was taken out barely alive. She admitted that was a tough experience.

"And then there was the time," she said, "when they sent me up in an airplane over Fifth Avenue in New York. I said to the pilot, 'Why, it looks as if we could easily fall right on to one of these buildings if anything went wrong.'

"'So we could,' said the pilot, 'just pick out your building!'

"'I haven't,' I told him faintly, 'any preferences in buildings!'"

Nevertheless, Bebe is going to make another seaplane story. It seems that once you take to skimming the air and the water, nothing can stop you.

Norma Shearer is the center of a new romantic rivalry, Stella thinks, that has suddenly developed between Jack Gilbert and Irving Thalberg. —Photo by Waxman

The smartness of Bebe Daniels' clothes is a great attraction in Hollywood just now. This glimpse of her was taken recently when she paid a visit to the set where Rudolph Valentino is filming "The Lone Eagle."

MRS. CLARENCE BROWN gave her usual Wednesday luncheon, and looked too sweet for anything in a tan silk gown and broad black hat, while Mrs. Jack Ford, who always looks as though she had castles and coaches-and-four in her ancestral background, was beautiful as ever in a yellow georgette with a wide yellow lace picture hat trimmed with yellow roses.

Katherine Kerrigan was there dressed in Alice blue, and looking very handsome with her white bobbed hair. She told us about brother Jack Kerrigan:

"He's lost his bee-keeping bee," she laughed. "You see Jack got it into his head that he wanted to raise bees. So he imported a lot to our home on Cahuenga Avenue, against all our protests. He went out yesterday to do whatever is supposed to be done to bees at this time of year—and you should see his face!

"Whatever it was he was supposed to do, evidently the bees resented his technique. So now if you know of anybody who wants to buy some bees cheap, they will do well to call us up."

REX LEASE gave a spaghetti dinner party at his apartment, the other night, and Helen Ferguson came and told us of all the wild circus riding she had been doing up in Wyoming, where they made the circus picture.

"I thought I could easily ride a horse bareback," explained Helen. "It did look so simple, but it turned out that it was I who was simple. I refused a double, stood up on the horse's back, and as soon as he moved promptly fell off backward!"

Rex reminisced about his lean first days in pictures, and confessed how he lived once for several days off his photograph money!

"It was during that hard time," said Rex, "when all the studios were idle. I found myself absolutely without a cent to eat on.

"One morning it occurred to me that maybe some fan had sent to the studio asking for a photograph and enclosing a quarter. I dashed over to the studio, and sure enough, there were two letters enclosing money and asking for my pictures! I had plenty of pictures but nothing to eat, and that day I lived on my photograph money!"

"MY dear, there is Nazimova! First time I've seen her since she came back from Europe. And she's with Paul Ivanow! You know they say she is engaged to him! I'm going to ask her!"

We were having lunch at the Montmarte, and Stella dashed over to say hello. Mme. Nazimova laughed:

"What?" she demanded, "engaged to a keed like that?"

The "keed" laughed, too. Still, as Stella stoutly maintains, you never can tell. Especially as, since Nazimova came back from Paris, she looks like a kid herself.

NAZIMOVA appeared awfully smart in an apricot dress of soft silk with silver embroidery, and a broad white hat.

Harold Lloyd devours a weighty subject in the cause of romance! In his latest picture as yet unnamed he falls in love with the daughter of a slum missionary. However, even the allure of pretty Jobyna Ralston is hardly equal to the strain of the mission diet.

Everyone else has a leading lady—so why not Jackie? This question has evidently been answered, for Lucille Le Sueur is to appear opposite young Master Coogan in "Old Clothes," his new picture. However, they will not be wed in the final reel.

Another beauty contest winner arrives. Dena Hill of Miami, Arizona, is now appearing in "The Last Frontier." She is a typical western girl in the feature and so Harry Carey is showing her the way of a gun.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California

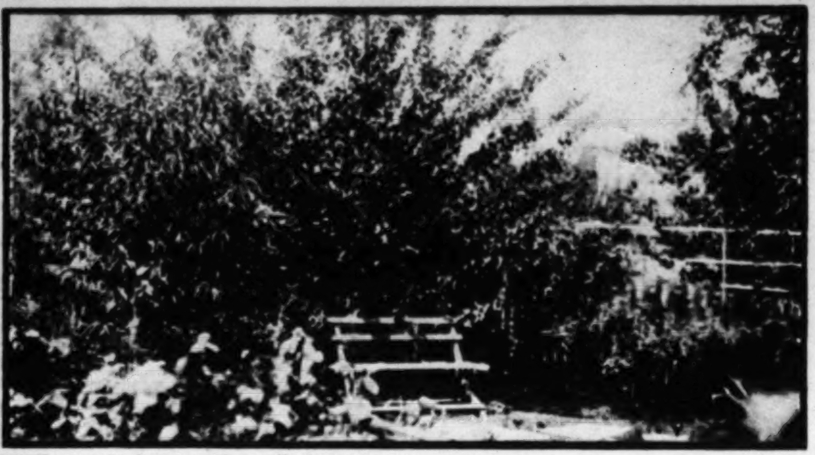
INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON



WE must feed our garden soils if we are to have fine plants and flowers. The farmer long ago found out that fertilizers purchased were not an expense, but an investment and we of the garden cannot expect returns unless we invest. The writer in his own garden has had wonderful returns, over a long series of years, for all fertilizers used, check plots receiving no plant food having shown by comparison that money spent for fertilizers was a profitable investment.

While garden owners are satisfied with feeding plants, very few have any check to prove the measure of benefit derived. Farmers leave a small portion of each field unfertilized and by crop comparisons prove the per cent of profit derived from feeding. Money lenders are content to receive a maximum of eight per cent for money invested, but E. D. McSweeny, the largest grower of potatoes in Southern California told the writer that every dollar he invested in fertilizers had returned him four dollars. Recent experiments with potatoes at the famous Rothamstead Station in England showed that complete fertilizers paid three to one and Frederick H. Rindge (a Los Angeles "boy") at Stockton beat the world's record yield of potatoes with an application of one ton of commercial fertilizers to the acre, giving a financial return greater than the McSweeny and Rothamstead crops combined "and then some."

The record is the same with all crops, whether tubers, cabbages, fruits or flowers. We of the garden have more to learn than the modern farmer for the latter knows that commercial fertilizers are the best commodities in which he can invest his money, nearly the only investment that never fails of profit. Last spring the writer made three light feedings, a month apart, to a plot where Amaryllis bulbs planted three years ago were just sending up new leaves at time of first feeding. The last results in August blossoms were little less than wonderful. On three clumps of bulbs there were more than one hundred spikes or heads of flowers and a large per cent of the heads contained a dozen or more flowers in each. The writer has had these bulbs just twenty years, dividing them every three to five years. They have always borne so well they were never fed before, but this year the crop had three times the number of spikes seen in any previous year, more flowers to a spike, larger flowers and longer and larger stems. Hereafter they will be fed every year.

Bamboo Hedges

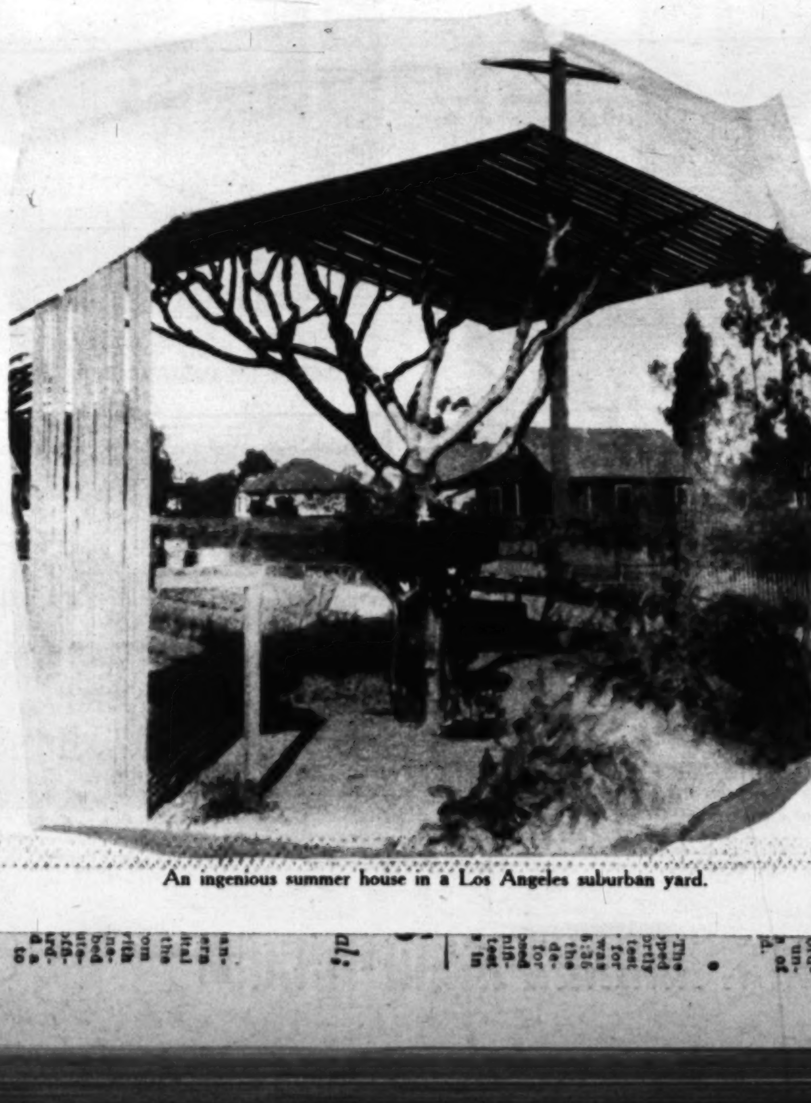
Of late years the demand for bamboos to be used for hedges and screens, mostly between city lots, is constantly increasing, as no better plant can be found for such purpose. The only drawback is that the varieties generally employed, Chinese and Japanese Phyllostachys, have a tendency to send out runners in every direction, which in many cases soon become a positive nuisance. There are also two species of Arundinarii, from the Himalayas (A. Falcata and A. Falconeri) which always grow compact and in clumps, but on account of not being easily propagated, they have always remained scarce and too high priced for general use. We have been fortunate to obtain from Darjeeling, at 7,000 feet altitude in the Himalayas, a new species, Arundinaria Hookeraiana, which is much superior to the above named because it grows much more rapidly and has richer foliage, which keeps better in winter. Those who have tried it say it has many points of superiority for use as a hedge.

Trees Bring Health

Trees add greatly to the healthfulness of any city by cooling and purifying the air; the foliage evaporates large quantities of water, and the reduction of temperature in this way is greatest during the hottest and driest weather. The foliage also absorbs impure and therefore harmful gases. Trees also promote circulation of air, due principally to unequal temperature.

MAKING THE CITY BACKYARD BOTH ATTRACTIVE AND LIVABLE

Not all town lot backyards lend themselves to prim, orderly treatment and not all householders want them that way. A bit of lawn, some flowers, some bushes and shrubs and a tree or two, with a shaded sand pile for the kiddies, suit many home owners to a "T," and such places might well be copied by the owners of the untidy and uninteresting yards that are all too common in our cities and towns. Here are three photographs of backyards that are intended to be first of all "homey," but which have succeeded in being good to look at as well. That at the upper left shows a shaded seat that is a joy to its owner. Beside it is pictured an extremely plain garage that has been vastly improved in appearance by one of the wide-spreading roses that thrive so well in Southern California. The kids in the lower photo would quickly veto any garden formality that would deprive them of their sand pile.



An ingenious summer house in a Los Angeles suburban yard.

Improvement Work

The giving of prizes as an incentive to the improvement of home grounds, street planting, school gardens, etc., appears to have become an efficient means to this end and is growing more and more popular among improvement workers and organizations. This is far better than not offering prizes at all, but all who seek for the advancement of art in outdoor surroundings are watching and hoping for something still better from the men and women who are interesting themselves in improvement work.

It is greatly to be wished that such organization shall become the leaven from which a clearer understanding of outdoor art, as exemplified to the work of landscape gardeners of the highest grade, shall be diffused. The standard of the leading landscape gardeners should be their standard. It is by a study of the best paintings, statuary and buildings, that education in such things is brought about, and this rule is quite applicable to the art that has to do with fitting every piece of ground for the purpose for which it was intended. No one could be expected to really know good art in the treatment of ground without training for it any more than one could expect appreciation of the best paintings by the untrained mind and eye.

Position of Street Trees

On the whole, the ideal location for a line of street trees is between the property line and the traveled walk. When they are planted between the traveled walk and the curb they are nearer the dangers which menace them from the street. The roots are nearer the influence of escaping gas, both illuminating and sewer, and large vital ones which may have extended into the roadway are liable to be cut off whenever the streets are dug up. On the other hand, if placed between the traveled walk and the property line these dangers are pretty well eliminated, and there is the advantage that the roots can readily find their way into the adjoining land, and do not have to contend with the asphalt, macadam or other unsuitable material which may be in the roadway.

Street Tree Control

Undesirable conditions will always exist as long as street trees, although standing within the limit of the highway, are considered and treated as the property of the owners of the adjoining grounds. The property owner looks upon the street trees principally in their relation to his own house and grounds and loses sight of their importance as an ornament to the street.

That municipal ownership alone can remedy such conditions is obvious and the more the value of street trees, as being beneficial and helpful to the general public and ornamental and useful to the community at large, becomes recognized, the more will the public be convinced that city authorities should control the shade-giving street trees. Such trees are as essential to the welfare and attractiveness of a city as the roadways and sidewalks are important to its traffic.

The first step in the work is to bring the property owners along a street to a realization of the immense importance of any contemplated planting. This can probably be done best by calling a public meeting for the purpose and having stirring addresses from good talkers who are interested. Enthusiasm counts for everything in this work. Every property owner, more especially those whose property already has street trees, should be won over. All existing trees, unless suitable, should be taken out and the avenue planted for the whole distance with one kind of tree. After thoroughly discussing the different trees, a vote should be taken (by the property owners only) and the tree receiving the highest number of votes should be used. If this is found impossible, agree upon another one. It is not so essential that any certain tree should be used as it is that there be but one kind planted.

An Easterner's Views on Lemon Marketing

He Relates His Experiences During the Torrid June Weather—He Locates a Fly in the Retail Market Ointment—He Suggests One Way to Remove It

By S. F. PARKER

This article from New York State is not one of plaintive fault finding, but contains a friendly, thoughtful criticism of existing conditions, and a constructive suggestion that deserves the serious consideration of our educational institutions and marketing organizations. The spirit in which it is presented commends it to Farm and Orchard readers.—[Ed.

AFTER what I have seen in the past few days in Central New York State, the best investment for me in the whole world would be a California lemon grove—if only—

Now here is where everyone is entitled to three guesses. All the cynics will say, "Yah, if only he had the money to buy one. They say them groves out there cost you a thousand an acre up, mostly up, an' then you gotta buy water at bootleg prices, an' the trees all got a better appetite for moisture than a Detroit mechanic turned loose across the border."

But you will never find the answer to that big if in the country where they grow lemons. In fact, before you could even see it you would have to spend months and months in close touch with distributing and marketing in those great States where our politicians are so fond of pointing out that one finds concentrated, a preponderance both of population and of wealth.

The States where they are so busy producing so many necessities and luxuries in great factories that they have no time to spend on the more vital problem of the economics of the nourishment of the human body—these are the States where one has to look for a barrier to the progress of the lemon industry. The real existence of such a barrier must be apparent to every thoughtful orchardist. That it is a removable one should be a source of utmost encouragement. That agencies already exist which can be adapted to grapple with the problem can hardly be doubted by any who are familiar with the achievements in scientific development which already have made a world-wide reputation for the marketing skill with which the co-operating citrus fruit growers of California have made their product available in almost every city block and even almost every village and hamlet. Available? Yes, to be sure. The lemon is almost as penetrating an article of merchandise as the postage stamp.

IF IT WERE STAMPS

Did you ever go to the postoffice and have the man at the window say "Ten stamps. That will be seventy cents today. Having a big run on stamps this week. The big fiesta celebration is making a tremendous demand. Yes, the postoffice is doing a fine business this week, Mr. Jones."

Suppose, just for a change, you should have this experience and everybody else in your city. Would it take long before a third topic of conversation would be added to those unfailing old reliables, the day's auto accidents and bootleg news? Would not everybody begin to say, "and there we had just got ready to answer all our correspondence that had gotten piled up on our hands, and that postmaster takes it into his head to raise the price of stamps that he bought weeks ago, at the regular price, just because he can get the money during fiesta week. Imagine such a thing! Well, we know better than to buy stamps during a fiesta week from now on. But really, the people at Washington ought to have something to say about the prices we pay for our stamps. They make them, and surely they don't want to have to throw away a lot just because the man here tries to take advantage of a situation that he never did a helpful thing to create."

Can you imagine such a thing going on in the postage stamp business? "Why, that is absurd," you say. Yes, and you are dead right about it. Then we must admit, also, that the economics of distribution have been pretty well worked out in the postage stamp business, time-tried and proven to be satisfactory to all concerned.

Now the lemon business is different from the postage stamp business in a thousand particulars, and what will work for one would choke the other. But, actually, one finds that in the heavily populated industrial States, outside of the very largest receiving centers, the whole fruit and vegetable business is greatly underdeveloped, and susceptible to vast improvement to bring its efficiency up on a par with, say the business in women's ready-to-wear clothing, in haberdashery, in furniture, to say nothing of automobiles and gasoline.

A CASE IN POINT

Now, to get down to cases, here is an actual example located in Syracuse, metropolis of the central part of the Empire State, university city and manufacturing and jobbing point, with 200,000 population.

Early in June all over the East there was a prolonged, severe "hot spell." Lemons came in for a suddenly increased demand. Dealers could sell all the lemons they could get their hands on, and did. They began, individually and collectively, to experiment with prices. The effect of the collective experimenting brought the lemon very prominently into public notice. It was the week's notable example of a really old-fashioned working of the law of supply and demand. It was in fact a harking back to a truly primitive working of this law, such as was found in the days of the ancient Phoenicians, or the clipper ships out of Salem, or the price of flour during sudden accessions of population of new mining camps in gold rush days.

The Syracuse Journal of June 5 carried the prominent headline "Price of lemons jumps from $7 to $12 per box wholesale." The same item carried a hint that California growers were reported to have "produced so many lemons that they feared the country could not absorb the year's crop."

Now the retail price situation was much more complicated than is suggested by the wholesale quotations. A consumer on the two-mile circle, recalling that lemons had been selling for 30 cents a dozen before the hot spell, thought that her local grocer was overcharging when he asked her to pay 48 cents. Driving in toward the city in her car, as she stopped at various places she was quoted all the way from 50 cents to 75 cents and finally gave up in disgust and anger when the last place asked her 7 cents a lemon, which she characterized as outrageous. She observed that as she went into districts of more active demand the price increased proportionately. There is no doubt of the actual temporary scarcity of lemons in this district during that hot spell. Many dealers were fully sold out through practically the whole period. But, oh, the carloads they could have sold, had they been available at a price that suited the public purse and public mind.

As it was, thousands learned from their grocers for the first time that there was available on the market a tinned product known as "powdered lemon juice," sold at a standard price, and purchased this substitute. No doubt many of these customers will become repeaters on the item, and correspondingly less frequent purchasers of fresh fruit.

When such variations in the merchandising of a popular and necessary article are found, it is a rather probable indication that there is a reason to be found in facts related to the management of the industry.

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITY

Nowhere that you go in these populous and prosperous industrial cities of the eastern and central States, will you see the numerous, well-located and finely displayed fruit and vegetable supply depots that a true realization of public demand would cause to be established.

Another thing—somebody in a group of business men commenting on this situation remarked that the tariff had put the Italian citrus fruit people out of the running, and left the business where the folks out in California could do as they pleased with prices. "What do you mean, put the Italians out of the business?" snorted another. "Why that Italian who runs the stand below our house loads a big new sedan full of kids every Sunday and off they go. And every Italian that comes around to see him, that is in the fruit and vegetable business, has a big car. That doesn't look as if the money is all going to California."

It is a fact that the extreme tip of the distribution network in this section is usually in the hands of gentlemen who came not so very long ago from somewhere in Southern Europe. And it seems to be a fair generalization that according to anybody's standards they are prospering, and doing so without making any particular progress along the lines of public service. In other words, the retail business is in the hands of a class of dealers who are skilled in the knack of barter, and of extracting the ultimate penny from each small transaction. It might not be unfair to say that they are of the same degree of development in business matters as are the men who have so managed affairs of their own across the water that year after year they are unable to pay important debts. Yet, when they come to America, the land of boasted managing ability, such an important industry as that of purveying fruit and vegetables, the very source, as we are coming to know, of health and energy in our lifeblood, is turned over to these gentlemen, because they are both polite and agreeable to their customers and willing to do long hours of dirty and laborious work.

The Grains That Help to Feed Owens Valley Herds and Flocks

By J. P. HERTEL, Agricultural Extension Service, San Diego County

BISHOP.—Owens Valley is famous for its rugged scenery and alluring mountain streams, for its splendid orchards and its herds of live stock, but nothing is said about the alfalfa fields and the grains that are required to support and feed the cattle and sheep that thrive there. A word is due not only to the quality of these grains in particular, but to the varieties which have been tried out and have proved their adaptability to the conditions here.

Oats, wheat and barley all do well, and an average yield of a ton up to a ton and a half per acre can be expected with confidence. Better than two tons of oats have been grown on more than one of the farms of Owens Valley. On account of the cool nights, all grains ripen slowly and as a result the seeds are plump and heavy. Small grains are seeded any time between February 1 and April 1, and the harvest comes between July 5 and 25. The grains that are seeded earliest seem to be the heaviest yielders as a rule, but there are limiting factors of heavy frosts, cold, wet ground and varying temperatures at the time of seeding.

A great many varieties have been tried. Up to four or five years ago Sonora and Early Baart were the ones most commonly planted. About that time L. A. Gillespie of Bishop secured some Dicklow wheat seed from Idaho and planted it to test it out. It has proved to be such a good yielder that this year about 75 per cent of the wheat some seed was secured from the University Farm at Davis. In the lot were the varieties known as Bunyip, Onas and Federation. Sown side by side with the Dicklow, the Onas yielded two and a half sacks per acre more than Dicklow, and Federation beat Dicklow by a sack per acre. Bunyip did not do as well as Dicklow. The Onas and Federation had another quality of value to the Owens Valley wheat growers. Not only were the yields superior, but they matured earlier. The Onas ripened first; Federation came about seven days later, and Dicklow after another seven days, being two weeks later than Onas. When a man is seeding grain down to a new crop of alfalfa he wants a wheat with as short a straw as possible, early maturing and with a heavy yield. Onas seems to be superior in all these particulars. It is a soft wheat, but as all the local wheat is utilized for chicken feed and then is not sufficient to fill the demand, this is not a serious drawback.

In barley, California Common and Tennessee Winter have proven to be the best-yielding varieties and are most extensively grown here. They yield from a ton to a ton and a half per acre. Both beardless and hull-less barley have been grown successfully, but the varieties named above predominate. All the barley grown here is used in feeding, whole barley for hogs and chickens, and rolled for horses, cattle and sheep.

Oats make a desirable crop in any locality where they can be grown, as they are excellent feed for young growing stock. No other grain contains the good qualities of oats. It is the grain of grains for growing calves and pigs, while barley and corn are more important factors in the fattening stages, and all are produced abundantly in Owens Valley. Two years ago Victory oats were brought from Idaho for seed. They yielded better than two tons to the acre on a ten-acre tract last year and will do as well or even better this season. Wisconsin No. 7 was imported at the same time from that State. This grain was developed by the experiment station in Wisconsin, and it appears to be doing as well as Victory.

War on Frosted Fruit Aids Industry

SANTA ANA.—California with a much smaller citrus crop this year will get a great deal more money for it than for the 1924 crop. This is due principally to the war waged on frosted fruit shipments, according to County Horticultural Commissioner A. A. Brock.

The navel orange crop has borne out expectations, said Mr. Brock, quoting figures compiled by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange. The 1925 State navel crop up to April 1 amounted to 7,523,655 boxes which brought the growers $21,794,646. The 1924 navel crop up to the same date amounted to 8,253,495 boxes and returned the growers $10,458,177. The Valencia season, now about to the halfway mark, has piled up returns almost as great as for the entire season of 1924. It may not double last year's returns, but it will pass it by a big margin, according to Commissioner Brock. In his opinion the favorable market this year is due largely to the elimination of frosted fruit. General Manager E. G. Dezell of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange agrees with him. While the shortage naturally stimulated demand, the chief reason for the soaring market is the confidence of the consumer in the quality of fruit offered. This is indicated by past experience. In 1922 the California crop was short because of frost damage and yet the California growers averaged but $2 a box. Florida secured an average of $2.30 a box that year. In 1923 California had a crop much larger than that of the previous year and secured an average of $2.10, while Florida dropped down to an average of $1.35.

This leads to the conclusion that the culling of damaged fruit and the building up of confidence has had more to do with prices than even supply and demand, according to Commissioner Brock. Strict attention to elimination of damaged fruit last year would have added 50 cents per box to the returns, he believes, and that would have added something like $5,000,000 to the returns had the growers faithfully culled their fruit.

This year Mr. Brock and his aides have been more alert than ever to protect the industry from its own shortsightedness. From the opening of the season they have kept a keen eye on all shipments and enforced the State regulations. More than a dozen arrests had been made at both association and independent packing-houses. Fines of as much as $50 have been levied and sixty-day jail sentences given. The jail sentences have been suspended with warnings against future derelictions. So far there have been no second offences. This unremitting vigilance has placed Orange county in a class by herself. Not a single car from Orange county has been dumped by Federal or State authorities this season, which is more than any other orange-shipping county can say. Mr. Brock reports to the State and Federal officials all cars containing more than 10 per cent of damaged fruit. The limit is 15 per cent.

TUCSON (Ariz.)—The University of Arizona has invented and is patenting a new inverted filter designed for desilting the waters of the Colorado River. Details of the invention have not been made public.

FARM NEWS

The entire patch of thirty acres produced at the rate of about six tons per acre, he said. Last year Mr. Gibson began planting about September 20, but this year, if weather and water conditions are favorable, he will begin ten days earlier and have cabbage ready to cut by the last of December. Besides the forty acres in cabbage, he will put forty more to lettuce, peas and other winter vegetables.

TOMATO DISEASES SERIOUS

SANTA ANA.—The agricultural extension service of Orange county has laid tentative plans to hold a tomato growers' field day to discuss tomato diseases. If possible M. Shapovalov, tomato disease expert of the United States Department of Agriculture, will be present. If he is able to attend, the growers will be assured of getting the latest and best information available on the various diseases, it is declared. According to the agricultural extension service the tomato disease problem is the most serious which the growers face in Southern California, western blight and fusarium wilt being the worst.

EXPECT AMPLE WATER

EL CENTRO.—Officials of the Imperial Irrigation District are optimistic regarding the water situation and say the valley will experience no water shortage this year, due to heavy rains throughout the State of Colorado. The Grand Canyon gauge is above what it was at this season last year and it is believed there will be ample water until the result of the rains in the upper reaches of the river become effective here. Officials state that it requires a month for rainwater in Colorado to reach the valley.

MEALY BUG ON BEANS

MONTALVO.—Ventura county's horticultural commissioner recently found some mealy bugs on lima beans in the Mound district. The vines were promptly destroyed. The mealy bug seems to be making his presence very generally known as he is found on weeds, garden shrubs, etc. The ladies of the Garden Club of this county are inaugurating a campaign against the Argentine ant, which, as is well known, protects the mealy bug.

REPRESENTATIVE NAMED

HEMET.—C. G. Hamilton of Pomona has been named purchasing representative for Rosenberg Brothers and Company, reputed to be the largest handlers of dried fruits in California. Mr. Hamilton has been connected with the handling of orchard crops in Riverside county since 1917 and is secretary of the Southern California Apricot and Peach Growers' Association.

THE EARLIEST APPLES

YUCAIPA.—E. M. Marks picked the first box of apples of the season in this district, King Davids fully colored and ripe, early in August. This is about a month earlier than he has ever picked apples before. He received $2.22 for the lug box and it sold on the Los Angeles market for 10 cents a pound. He expects to get 1500 boxes from his five acres across the river this year.

SELL GRAPES DIRECT

SHAFTER.—Last season Fred Mettler marketed several cars of Thompson seedless grapes direct to the consumer in South Dakota. The profit was so pleasing that this year he repeated the experiment and has sold several cars there in the same way. His example has been followed by Guenther and Enns, who have shipped two or three cars which are being marketed for them by relatives. William Newman has taken grapes to Nebraska, Jacob Baerg has tried North Dakota with his and Z. C. Bartel is trying out the "direct to the consumer" idea with a car of grapes in Kansas. They sell direct to wholesalers and retailers in smaller towns and cities. It is said that in many smaller communities there are no grapes, carlot shipments reaching larger centers and being marketed there.

SWEET POTATO RETURNS

VISALIA.—Harvesting of the sweet potato crop has been under way recently near Visalia. The crop has been good and the price of around 10 cents per pound has resulted in returns as high as $1000 per acre. This has not been average, but at least one Visalia man with an acre patch within the city limits has banked that amount. The sweet potato acreage in Tulare county is relatively small.

OLIVE CROP ESTIMATES

LINDSAY.—The yield of olives in Tulare county will be good, according to the growers. About 4500 acres are planted to this fruit in eastern Tulare county, along the foothills from Exeter to Terra Bella. There are about 1000 acres near Terra Bella, 2000 around Lindsay and Exeter and 1500 at Strathmore, according to estimates. The crop in the southern part of the State is said to be very short, amounting to practical failure in some districts. Some reports state that the California crop will run from 79 to 86 per cent of normal but these reports are believed to have been excessive, according to surveys in the various districts. Present reports indicate that the crop this year throughout the State will hardly exceed 60 per cent of normal.

SPUDS FOLLOW MELONS

POPLAR.—Planting of the new fall potato crop has started in the southern end of Tulare county. Indications point to a considerable acreage. Late plantings will mature about Thanksgiving ahead of the frost, and if water is available as needed, should, according to horticultural men, result in a very good fall harvest. A number of these potato planters have just taken off a melon crop

TULARE.—The Tulare County Cooperative Cow-Testing Association, recently formed here with forty charter members and representing 1131 cows, will begin active operations September 1. Joe N. Gill, C. H. McKelvey, Frank Hopkins, Henry Skidmore, James Storm and E. O. Dyer were named as directors. It is believed the association will enroll 1300 cows, which can be handled by one tester.

Farm and Orchard Magazine

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Orchard Magazine is the only farm journal in the West printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

On Our Frontier

THE piedmont district at the northerly base of the San Gabriels and the Santa Barbara Mountains may be considered the agricultural frontier of Los Angeles county. For nearly forty years attempts were made to farm this district and for twenty years the result was defeat. With the lands in the southern portion of the county being rapidly claimed, settlers again turned to Antelope Valley and within the last two decades they have succeeded in firmly establishing a line of farming cononies along this frontier, from which there will be no retreat. With such districts as Little Rock and Palmdale settled by people who have demonstrated by years of labor that the district is one of the best horticultural sections of the State, who have backed their faith by the building of a giant storage dam and the sinking of many wells, and who are connected by paved highways and railroads with a city of over a million less than a hundred miles away, the district may be considered as established on a firm foundation.

At the Pear Show held in the district a few weeks ago there was exhibited a splendid variety of pears, for which the district has achieved a world-wide reputation, with grapes, figs, peaches, apples, prunes and other fruits and a good display of vegetables and field crops shown in test to prove the area's versatility in production. The best exhibit unquestionably was the showing of hundreds of acres of orchards with trees full of fruit, for fruit on the tree is more convincing than any packed product. Even in a year when their great reservoir could give them but little water the Antelope Valley folk have produced impressive crops.

Of all the problems that western men have had to meet as they pushed back the frontier, that of converting a land of sand hummocks and Joshua trees into productive orchards would seem one of the hardest to solve. The problem has been solved in our own county and in other places in the Southwest. When population pressure in the West becomes acute, perhaps the Joshua tree will meet the same fate as overtook the black walnut of the East.

Our Live-Stock Revival

SENSIBLE business men have learned that the price-and-production pendulum swinging from the heights to the depths is not economic. The more we can reduce the peaks and fill in the valleys, the better off it is for producer, manufacturer, dealer and consumer. Our livestock industry is recovering from its ebb, but its best friend is not the glowing enthusiast who stirs up such a fervor that the revival is overdone.

There was a time when the hog-raising fever swept like a tidal wave across the Southland. Then the bottom dropped out. Now the porker seems to be "staging a comeback." There is a great opportunity in hog raising here. With but 10 per cent of the pork we eat produced in the State there is no reason why we may not profitably increase production very greatly. But we must not deceive ourselves with any assumption that present prices are going to continue. It is the fear of stockyards, packers and government authorities that hog raisers may increase production to such an extent that the inevitable result—prices dropping to unprofitable levels, loss, discouragement and another era of underproduction—will follow.

Let us restore our depleted live-stock industry in Southern California, but let us do it quietly, steadily and conservatively lest we create another dismal swamp of depression.

TRIUMPH LEADS AGAIN in the FIGHT AGAINST BLACK SCALE

During the past season another sprayer was purchased by our company and 55 per cent of the stockholder's groves were sprayed, only 35 per cent fumigated and 10 per cent received no treatment. Approximately 85 per cent of the sprayed groves were treated with the Triumph Oil-Lime Sulphur and Kayso combination. After making a careful check in this district it was found that the average results or kill with this combination was considerably better than other spray materials on the market. We had very few cases of burn although the Company's sprayers have used the combination spray througout the summer months for two seasons.

FROM 1925 ANNUAL REPORT, GLENDORA CO-OPERATIVE FUMIGATING CO.

Frank Sherman, manager of the company, in addressing the meeting, stated that by far the greater portion of the work done by the company during the season was spray work. Only forty per cent of the acreage (58,418 trees) were fumigated. While the results derived from fumigation were generally good, he said, the results from spraying [illegible] far better. Of the various sprays the scale-kill obtained from the [illegible] of lime-sulphur and Triumph oil [illegible]ceeded all others. The best results obtained from spraying were in the months of October and November.

R. S. Woglum, entomologist in the field department of the Exchange, substantiated many of Mr. Sherman's statements in an address he made to the meeting. Much of what Mr. Sherman found to be true in the area which he was concerned has, also, been found to be true by Mr. Woglum in a much larger area. It seems that spraying has shown the best results, during the past season, in all parts of the citrus belt. Mr. Woglum maintained that of all sprays, lime-sulphur and Triumph oil is "number one" as a scale killer.

FROM COVINA ARGUS, MAY 1ST 1925

These men who know say

"Spray with Triumph"

Because—combined with Orchard Brand Lime Sulphur and Kayso, it has proved a good and economical way to control Black and other scales.

Because—it has stood first during the last two seasons in actual scale-kill.

Because—it has a long record of successful protection to citrus orchards.

Because—it insures a high run of clean, fancy fruit in addition to killing scale.

Because—it is the only patented spray combination which contains a standard insecticide and a reliable fungicide.

Farm News of the Great Southwest

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

DELANO.—The outlook for a big cotton yield grows more promising every day, and all the growers are most optimistic. The acreage in this district was increased by almost 100 per cent this year, and there is evidence at this time that a very material increase will be made the coming season. Devanney and Turner have let the contract for the leveling of an entire section of land, which is merely the first unit of their additional planting for the coming season. This firm has over 1000 acres in cotton this year, and expects to plant about 2500 acres next year.

MORE WALNUTS COMING

POMONA.—During a recent visit here, Carlyle Thorpe, general manager of the California Walnut Growers' Association, stated that although the world production of walnuts has not increased in the past fifteen years, there has been a considerable increase in California during the past few years. He stated that production in this State would double in the next ten years. Twenty-one per cent of California walnut trees are in full bearing, 30 per cent in partial bearing and the rest too young yet to bear, he declared. The walnut holdings in Pomona and Chino valleys are in good condition and the growers expect to duplicate last season's satisfactory financial returns.

FIGHT PUNCTURE VINE

RIVERSIDE.—Farmers of Riverside county are in the middle of a vigorous drive against puncture vine. Various associations and the farm bureau have joined in the campaign, and an educational program in an effort to prevent the spreading of the weed by automobiles is being broadcast. Among the most active of the organizations in the work is the Hemet Growers' Protective Association.

TO HANDLE ALL APPLES

YUCAIPA.—The Yucaipa Valley Fruit Company is building a storage plant for transient holding of cider. It is enlarging its dehydrating plant and will dry, make cider and pack the best grades of fruit. It expects to be able to utilize all the apples of the growers this year.

OCCUPIES HIGH PLACE

VISALIA.—In retaining seventh place in the United States for value of farm crops and fourth for the value of farm lands, Tulare county has done all that could be expected, in opinion of A. E. Miot, secretary of the Tulare County Board of Trade. Tulare county also maintains its State lead in the number of swine, having 43,000 listed for 1925, which is greater than any other county in California. The success of the Farm Bureau Marketing Association sales twice each month is credited with having built up the hog industry.

RAISIN ADVANCES

FRESNO.—The Sun-Maid Raisin Growers of California announce advances of 2 and 2 1-2 cents per pound on standard and extra-standard Thompsons and muscats, 1925 crop. Standard sultanas will receive a 2-cent advance and sub-standard muscats, Thompsons and sultanas, 1 cent a pound. An advance of 2 1-2 cents will be made on hand-sorted clusters. Advances on currants will be 3 1-2 cents, extra-standards, 4 cents, sub-standards 1 3-4 cents. Sulphur-bleached Thompsons will receive on delivery 4 1-2 cents for extra fancy, 4 cents for fancy and 2 cents for choice. Extra-standard, soda-dipped Thompsons will receive 3 1-2 cents standards, 3 cents, and sub-standards, 1 1-2 cents. Oil-dipped Thompsons will be received on the basis of 3 cents for standards and 1 1-2 cents for sub-standards. Oil-dipped sultanas will be 2 1-2 cents for standards and 1 1-4 cents for sub-standards. No advances are made on inferior deliveries of any variety. The advances are the same as for 1924 except that they are larger on the bleached pools.

HARVESTS TWELVE SECTIONS

HANFORD.—Chester Wolfsen, one of the big Kings County grain operators on the old Tulare lake bed, has just completed the harvesting of 40,000 sacks of wheat. Robert Ryan, of Merced, superintended the harvesting, in which he used a big combined harvester with a twenty-four foot cut. Mr. Wolfsen's twelve sections of grain were harvested in 51 days. He states that with a few good late rains on the crop, it would have harvested far more than it did.

TO STUDY BEAN PEST

VENTURA.—At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Ventura Farm Bureau, Horticultural Commissioner Albert Call reported that there is a possibility of a study of the lima bean pod borer here. The borer has been increasing its infestation and probably will be responsible for the loss of at least 10 per cent of this season's bean crop. As yet, no study has been made of this insect and no control for it has been determined. A resolution was passed by the board asking that an investigation be made by the United States Department of Agriculture, and if an entomologist from the department cannot be detailed for this work, that one of the local entomologists be appointed as a collaborator. Mr. Call stated that the directors of the Saticoy Walnut Growers' Association have consented to allow Stanley Flanders, its entomologist to do this work in connection with his other duties.

GINS ARE ALTERED

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Several years ago, when long-staple cotton appeared in the discard, many of the valley gins were transformed to handle the shorter staples. Reverse action is being taken this summer, as the Pima acreage in the Salt River Valley is about 40 per cent of the total. At Mesa a special long-staple plant is being erected.

BIG CABBAGE YIELD

CALIPATRA.—A. A. Gibson, a rancher on the Highline canal southeast of Calipatria, expects to increase his vegetable acreage from forty to eighty acres this fall. Last season he put thirty acres in cabbage. He planted five acres of the earliest and then planted from one to two weeks apart. He plows deep and works the ground until a good seed-bed is prepared, and then plants the seed thickly in rows. After the plants are up they are thinned. He thinks this is the quickest and most economical way to get the crop started. The plants are irrigated and cultivated regularly until ready for cutting. For his earliest patch last season he cut nearly twelve tons to the acre.

Trapnesting Year Over at Ontario

ONTARIO.—A gain of 6 per cent in the number of pullets that have produced more than 200 eggs in a year is noted at the end of the present trapnesting year in Chaffey district. On the first of August 27 per cent of all the pullets entered had produced 200 eggs or more. On the same date last year 21 per cent of all entered had made a similar record. The average production of the pullet pens this year is also materially better than the average production was last year. The average for last year was 178.7, while this year it is 193.7.

Two hens belonging to Harry V. Pond are high with 253 and 250 eggs, respectively; one belonging to Charles R. Peach of Fontana is third with 249 eggs; while those belonging to W. P. Hodge and Harry M. Thompson are tied for fourth place with 246 eggs each. From the records to date B. S. Smallwood has high place with a total production of [illegible] eggs from his hens. W. B. Hodge is second, Mr. Peach third, and J. A. Alexander and E. A. Richel are tied for fourth.

A Pedigreed Cockerel Sale Date Set

PORTERVILLE.—Practically every dealer in pedigreed poultry in the United States will be invited to list cockerels for the pedigreed cockerel sale to be held in Porterville, November 19. This was decided upon at a meeting of the Tulare County Farm Bureau poultry committee, the committee from the Porterville Chamber of Commerce and C. M. Conner, Tulare county farm adviser. Through solicitation of M. A. Lindsay, head of the livestock department of the farm bureau, names of dealers of practically every State in the Union have been secured.

Birds to be consigned must be of pedigreed stock with high trap-nest records on both sides. White Leghorns will be required to show a production of 250 eggs a year, official trap-nest records both sides; Rhode Island Reds and Barred Rocks, a record of 225 eggs per year.

Says Poultry Raising Beats Office Work

That a poultry plant to be successful requires constant attention, is quite generally conceded. That the work necessitates being on the job three hundred and sixty five days in the year, or hiring help when one takes a day's vacation, is the opinion voiced by Georgia Redway, a Redlands poultrywoman, who further states that she remembers one day that required eighteen hours' work, and a few others when the incubators needed her attention all night long. In spite of the uncertain hours and constant attention required in the work, however, Miss Redway says she likes it better than office work, as it allows her to get out in the sunshine and work at something she really enjoys.

In February, 1922, Miss Redway and her father left Washington, D. C., to come to Southern California, both having resigned government positions, to raise chickens and grow oranges in this section. Miss Redway's present venture in the poultry-breeding business began in Redlands, although her experience with poultry dates back to her childhood days when she had a flock of Light Brahmas, while she says she has always been situated to indulge her fancy for different kinds of fowls. When she came to California she brought a few White Leghorns with her, and these, she says, are still alive and vigorous.

Her present flock consists of 200 hens, of which 150 are White Leghorns and the rest Rhode Island Reds. Because of a considerable demand for White Plymouth Rocks she has also added a few of these to her flock this year.

"Primarily, mine is a breeding establishment," says Miss Redway, "which means trapnesting, pedigreeing and keeping records. It means more work, more expense, and, of course, larger returns per individual fowl. My incubators have consisted of four hot-water electrics with a total capacity of 1000 eggs at a setting, but finding that my flock could supply four times that number, and with a demand for chicks far in excess of this hatching capacity, I have recently purchased two 1000-egg incubators which will occupy the same space in the incubator house. My success in building up a trade has been modest but satisfactory, with customers usually coming back for more chicks. I have never bred a 300-egg hen, but I believe that with proper care a large number of my chicks hatched this spring will lay 200 eggs or more, and some of them 250."

Since coming to California Miss Redway has won several prizes in the showroom with her exhibition Leghorns. The poultry business in California is much more pleasant than back East in the winter time, she says, for there at times one must dig the snow away from the chicken house before feeding the hens. And while there may be a good reason for work in offices, she says she is glad she is no longer shut up in one. The job of breeding good chickens, trying every year to improve their exhibition and productive qualities, seems to her more worth while.

PORTERVILLE.—The pig club of the Burton-Popular districts, holds the banner for the entire United States for the conduct of the work, condition of stock and the number of boys and girls enrolled, according to Tulare County Farm Adviser C. M. Conner, who has returned from a year's leave in which he toured agricultural districts of the United States. There are fifty-six members in this club, their gilts being furnished by Tagus Ranch near Tulare. The pigs will be shown at the Tulare County Fair, in Tulare, September 15-19. Half of each litter will go to the Tagus Ranch and half to the pig club members.

VIEWS ON LEMON MARKETING

of one of the big nationally known companies, does it ever occur to you that the men at the head of the enterprise have succeeded in finding and training to definite duties hundreds and thousands of young men who daily demonstrate a willingness to work through difficult hours, at laborious and dirty work—and still keep themselves clean, alert, interested and agreeable? Then who can truthfully say that "American labor"—realizing the breadth of the term, not restricted by original nationality of parent stock—cannot be found to manage the fruit industry's details in accordance with some broadly conceived and economically sound plan of merchandising?

—AND A SUGGESTION

California has educational institutions, and huge property interests in fruit and vegetable products. The growers and business men have built up a machine for the merchandising of dried package and canned fruits and vegetables that puts most of them into most places in the Eastern and Central industrial centers at prices the ordinarily well-paid worker (who, be it remembered, actually draws down from twenty-five to thirty-five a week, and not the bloated pay envelope of the sensational magazine and newspaper writer's paragraphs) at prices the bulk of the food consumers can afford to pay. It is a plain fact of everyday observation that present-day facilities, methods and personnel of the fresh fruit and vegetable industry in the eastern cities, outside the very largest, constitute a barrier against effective distribution of soil and orchard products in sufficient volume to satisfy either the demands of public health or public taste. Local seasonal products are totally inadequate to meet the situation.

It is distinctly an opportunity for California. It is rather surprising not to see enterprising young students from the great California universities diligently engaged in some practical work connected with the fruit marketing industry in many of our great consuming centers. What an opportunity such work would give to supplement with practical knowledge well-conceived university courses in the economics of distribution and marketing!

Can the sweltering East ever look forward to the day when a hot spell will once more find the small boy operating a lemonade stand on every corner? Or will lemons always be a luxury here, while growers sigh for markets?

Junior Features at the Pomona Fair

POMONA.—Features for boys and girls at the Los Angeles County Fair September 22-26 will consist of more than "hot dogs," balloons, merry-go-rounds and Ferris wheels. The Junior Fair, under the superintendence of Gerald Hall, will be a very considerable part of the entire exposition. Boys and girls from all parts of Southern California are entering their best products in the exhibits.

Paul E. Kennedy, superintendent of the fair poultry department, reports numerous entries of great interest. D. Goddard of Gardena will exhibit a full brother of a famous Austrolorp hen of New Zealand said to hold an official record of 342 eggs in a year. The poultry show will be featured by a five-day egg-laying contest for pullets which is exciting attention among commercial poultrymen. The contest is limited to fifteen pens of six pullets each.

Entrance by El Monte and Antelope Valley Farm Bureaus in the farm bureau section of the fair indicates the interest awakened by the liberal bureau division prizes, which total $600. The Los Angeles County Farm Bureau will conduct an educational booth not in competition, which will be shared with the county agricultural extension service. From it agricultural questions will be answered by staff experts and bulletins will be distributed.

Orange County Fair to Feature Pageant

SANTA ANA.—A pageant bearing the title of "The Birth of an Empire" will be one of the features of the Orange County Fair held September 22-26. Over 100 persons will take part. It will be an artistic-historical allegory, picturing the story of the commonwealth, with lessons in agriculture and irrigation.

The departments of the fair are being filled with displays, and each section promises to be crowded with interesting and educational exhibits arranged with the idea of beauty as well as utility.

Pear Standard Revision Is Given Out

California does not establish legal grades for pears but requires a certain quality in shipped fruit. The United States pear standards revised for 1925 have been issued and set a higher standard than last year's rules. They are as follows:

United States No. 1—Pears of one variety which are mature, clean, well formed, free from decay and from damage caused by bruises, limb rubs, spray-burn, sunburn, hail marks, drought spots, rusting, broken skins and other damage caused by disease, insects mechanical or other means. Not more than 10 per cent by count of any lot may be below requirements for this grade; not to exceed 5 per cent shall be allowed for defects causing serious damage, and no part of this solerance shall be allowed for decay.

U. S. No. 2—Pears of one variety, mature, clean, not badly misshapen, free from decay and serious damage caused by bruises, broken skins, limb rubs, spray-burn, hail marks, drought spots, disease, insects, mechanical or other means. Not more than 10 per cent by count may be below this grade and no tolerance is allowed for decay.

U. S. Combination—When U. S. No. 1 and U. S. No. 2 pears are packed together, pack may be designated. "Combination No. 1 and No. 2." In this grade at least 25 per cent by count must meet requirements of No. 1. Pears not in conformity with these grades may be designated "unclassified."

Big Peach Crop Canned at Ontario

ONTARIO.—More than 8000 tons of peaches were used by the three canneries in this district up to the peak of the season, and it is believed that at least as many more will be canned by the end of the season, the first of October. The crop is larger than last year's and the quality is regarded as excellent. The California Co-operative and Cutler-Lobingier plants operate here and the Golden State at Cucamonga.

The California Co-operative Cannery, said to be the largest in the world, is not working capacity, although it has cared for 4000 tons of peaches already and will use as many more. It started on peaches July 20 and the season will be ten weeks long at least. It employs 450 workers in the cannery proper and 250 more in the dry-yards. Its weekly payroll runs from $10,000 to $12,000. It has used 1000 tons of pears in addition to the peaches, these being shipped in from the north.

The Cutler-Lobingier canneries in Ontario and Pomona have used over 3000 tons of peaches and probably will use from 2500 to 3000 more. They began work July 11 and will continue on them well into October in the Ontario plant at least. The Pomona plant will begin work on tomatoes soon. These plants employ 400 people and the payroll ranges from $12,000 to $16,000 a week.

The Golden State Cannery at Cucamonga has used 528 tons of clings and 500 tons of freestones and expects to use 1000 tons more during the season. Its employees vary from 300 to 400 and the weekly payroll averages about $5000 a week. It does not expect to run into October, but its season will be about the same length, ten weeks.

Hard to Heat Orchards in Florida

POMONA.—Floyd D. Young, meteorologist of the United States Weather Bureau here has returned from a recent trip to Florida citrus districts. He advised the growers there to prepare for orchard heating although he made it clear to them that it was a more difficult job there than in California on account of their frequent high winds and generally lower temperatures. He says that little has been done in the line of frost protection there, but it can be done if properly started and followed up. Many Florida citrus growers are preparing to equip their orchards with heating apparatus as a result of his advice.

According to Secretary-Manager Reginald L. Knox of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange of Pomona, an average crop of oranges is maturing in this district which should equal in quantity the past season's yield. The "June drop" did not materialize this year because of early summer coolness, though some groves suffered from the heat in July. In groves which have been properly irrigated, fertilized and fumigated the setting of fruit has been satisfactory. Mr. Knox says the members of the Exchange for the 1924-25 season had the best financial returns in the history of the organization. Receipts from oranges, lemons and grapefruit from its seven packing-houses amounting to nearly $6,500,000.

DIRECTORS ELECTED

HEMET.—The following directors of the Hemet Orange Growers' Association for the coming year were elected recently: William Bruce, John A. Faull, G. F. Fricker, Louis M. Jackson, Samuel Jewell, George R. Sawyer and F. W. Stetson. There was a good attendance of orange growers at the meeting. H. J. Ramsey and C. S. Milliken of Los Angeles, and Jacob Funk, of Riverside, representatives of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange gave interesting talks on the operation of the organization. H. A. Lynn and Robert Asbury of the Riverside Arlington Heights Exchange, were present and spoke on marketing.

NEW FRUIT CANNERY

TULARE.—It is announced that George T. Wood, San Diego capitalist, has leased the condensed milk factory on the highway north of Tulare and will remodel it into a fruit and vegetable canning plant. The condensed milk plant was built in 1919 by the Alpine people and was taken over later by the Nestle Food Company.

The Livestock Bulletin

By ROBERT T. LYANS.

Word has been received by Manager J. W. Snodgrass of Billiwhack Stock Farm that Berylwood Prince Johanna Segis, a son of the world famous Holstein bull, Prince Aaggie of Berlywood, has won first place in his class at the recent Missouri State Fair. The Holstein show at the Missouri fair is said to have been the largest ever seen in that State, so the honor recently won by this bull, which was sold some time ago to A. J. King, an eastern breeder, reflects much credit to the transmitting qualities of his sire who now stands at the head of the Billiwhack Stock Farm, owned by August A. Rubel of Santa Paula.

The great Jersey bull, Pogis 99th of Hood Farm, owned by Randleigh Farm, Lockport, N. Y. is reported to have died recently at the advanced age of fifteen years. This bull has been awarded both a gold and a silver medal by theh American Jersey Cattle Club, while his daughters have won twenty-five silver medals, nineteen gold medals and one medal of merit. He was sired by Hood Farm Pogis 9th., and out of the famous cow, Sophie 19th of Hood Farm. During her lifetime she produced eleven records totaling 7545 pounds of butterfat.

The Boys' Agricultural Club of the Kern County Union High School will exhibit the Kerndale Herd of pure-bred Holstein-Friesian cattle at the Kern County Fair October 6 to 10, according to announcement made by John L. Knight of the faculty. Mr. Knight directs the activities of the club and is helping the boys prepare their stock for the exhibit. The club will have cattle entered in all classes but four this year. Ten of the thirteen head have been bred by the members of the club. One of the entries will be Sir Buffalo Ormsby Pietertje. Edwin Deuel will enter his cow, Fayne Spring Farm Pontiac Veeman, who has a 3-year record of 710 pounds of butter from 14,503 pounds of milk with an average butterfat test of 3.9 per cent.

After a year's trip in Euprope studying veterinary research, Dr. C. M. Haring, Prof. of Veterinary Science in the University of California, reports that Europe offers no system or practice of prevention, treatment or cure of the foot-and-mouth disease that warrants a change from the slaughter method of the United States. Former claims that German scientists had discovered and photographed the virus of this disease have proved to be groundless. Stating that he could see no reason for changing the present policy in America, Dr. Haring says "It would be a calamity to permit the disease to become endemic in America as it is in Continental Europe, where it causes losses reaching into millions of dollars every year."

To the Downey Calf Club goes the honor of staging the first livestock show of the season. This enthusiastic group of junior live-stock breeders had a nicely fitted group of pure-bred Holstein heifers on exhibition at the Tenth Annual Downey Fair which was held at Downey, August 27-28-29. First prize honors went to Elizabeth Brown, Downey, on her entry, Paragon Pontiac Princess 2d, a daughter of King Pontiac Tola Ormsby, and out of Paragon Pontiac Princess. Leslie Edmondson, Compton, took second place with his senior 2-year-old Holstein heifer, Beauty Segis Pietertje Ormsby. This heifer is a daughter of the famous Holstein sire, Sir Pietertje Ormsby Merecedes 37th and as a junior 2-year-old produced 404.5 pounds of butter from 10,817.5 pounds of milk in seven months and nine days on twice-a-day milking. Third place went to August Accarias, Montebello, on his entry, Sue Lucy Hengerveld, a heifer which he recently acquired from F. F. Pellissier of Whittier.

In the opinion of L. A. Johnson of Mesa, Ariz., Ayrshire cows are ideal for Arizona dairies. He says that after thirteen years' experience with this breed, he is convinced that the Ayrshire eats less than cows of other breeds, stands the heat well, and can be depended upon for uniform production. He reports that his herd of thirty-five head of registered Ayrshire cows in one year averaged, $122 worth of butterfat each, above the cost of their feed. Incidentally, he says, the feed bill was not large, for the cows had nothing but alfalfa and other pasture. Ayrshire steers are also in demand, says Mr. Johnson, while the bull crop from the registered cows brings a good return.

A warning against overstocking the range country of the Southwest is sounded in a recent bulletin published by the United States Department of Agriculture entitled "Saving Live Stock from Starvation." It says that frequent drought constitutes the chief menace to the livestock industry of this section, and points out that careful management, and planning in good years is essential to meet emergencies and place the industry on a more stable basis. Overstocking, it claims, has been one of the main factors in starvation losses and to remedy this suggests that the range should be so stocked in average years that 10 to 15 per cent of the palatable herbage of range plants be unused, thus allowing some leeway in lean years. By limiting the size of the breeding herd to the actual number of animals that can be supported in the lean years, any excess forage in good years can be used by surplus livestock, and which can be disposed of readily in time of drought. Losses during the critical spring period may be offset to a large extent by reserving some winter range for the use of poor cattle during that period, while the ideal arrangement, according to the department, would be a division of the range into summer and winter grazing areas. Other factors which would help cut down losses, as set out in this bulletin, are: (1) The weaning of calves in the fall at six to eight months of age instead of allowing them to follow the cows all winter; (2) watering places should not be over five miles apart on level range, or one and one-half to three miles apart on rough range; (3) practice supplemental feeding when necessary to tide over an unfavorable year, and (4) segregate the weaker animals from the rest and feed according to their needs.

Consumption of whole milk has increased in the United States 2,332,000,000 pounds during the past year, according to Sam H. Greene secretary-manager of the California Dairy Council. Milk for manufacturing purposes gained 1,961,353,000 pounds. For household purposes nearly fifty-three billion pounds were used; for manufacturing, nearly fifty-four billion. The average consumption per individual was fifty-five gallons of fluid milk and the equivalent of that amount in addition in butter, cheese and other dairy products. It takes about ten pounds of milk to produce one pound of cheese, and twenty-one pounds of milk to produce one pound of creamery butter.

Brampton Sweet Marie B, an imported cow in the Jersey herd owned by D. Eyman Huff, Orange, recently dropped a fine heifer calf, and one week after freshening was producing at the rate of forty-five pounds of milk daily. This excellent individual, now eleven years old, is a daughter of Village Knight, and out of imported Golden Fern's Marie, a former prize winner on the Island of Jersey, and also the dam of the Famous Jersey sire. Masterman of Oaklands. Mr. Huff reports that he will have eight head of Jerseys on exhibition at the Orange County Fair, Santa Ana, September 22-26, while one show heifer from his herd, will be shown at all of the big forthcoming fairs on the 1925 circuit, having already been sent north with the La Lomita Ranch herd of Jerseys from Palms, and is now on exhibition at the California State Fair, Sacramento.

The Los Angeles County Fair Draws Near

POMONA.—Described by J. M. Paige, superintendent of the agriculture-horticulture department, as the "annual shop window of Southland products," this section of the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona, September 22 to 26, is practically filled with exhibits. The exhibit of farm and orchard products by individuals, organizations, farm bureaus, chambers of commerce and associated growers will hold perhaps the chief serious interest of the coming fair. Indivative of the wide variety of products is the geographical range indicated by an exhibit from Lassen county in Northern California and San Diego county on the south. Associations which will be represented include the Chino Apple Growers' Association, Walnut Growers Association, Gladiola Association, Lancaster Valley Association, Mutual Orange Distrubutors with headquarters in Riverside, Southern California Honey Association and the Southern California Avocado Association.

Interesting to ranchers will be the State Department of Agriculture's pest control educational exhibit and the Los Angeles county horticultural department's showing. The Lancaster Valley Association will occupy three spaces illustrating "Redemption of the Desert." Los Angeles will be represented by the Chamber of Commere display showing a country home and garden built of fruit and Kaffir corn.

The Chambers of Commerce already entered for the show are El Monte, Puente, San Fernando Association; San Dimas, Los Angeles, La Verne, Pomona and Sacramento. El Monte will feature potatoes, San Dimas, forestry conservation; La Verne, fruit; Pomona, as hostess of the fair will have information, telephone and telegraph and headquarters booth, and Sacramento, general products typical of that valley.

Plans for the horse show, to be held each night at the fair, are practically complete, according to Jack Afflerbaugh, general manager of the fair. The thousand-dollar stakes include those sponsored by Ben R. Meyer, Irving Hellman, W. W. Mines, Marco H. Hellman and the First National Bank of Pomona.

Big Horse Show at The Kern County Fair

BAKERSFIELD.—A $5000 prize to be awarded the ten best saddle horses of Kern county in the horse show at the fair in October has been given the Kern County Fair Association by the Kern County Cattlemen's Association. Through the efforts of Roland Hill of the Tehachapi Cattle Company the stake was arranged at a meeting of the cattlemen's association.

The horse show promises to be one of the finest ever held in the valley and horses from all over the United States will "be here. A number of local horse lovers have signified their intention of entering their saddle horses in the exhibition.

A. C. Ruby of Portland, Or., who is showing a splendid exhibit of draft horses at various fairs in California, has notified Secretary P. G. Clarke that the Ruby exhibit will be in Bakersfield for the fair. There are forty-four head of Percherons, Belgians and Shires in the Ruby exhibit. Included in the forty-four horses are two splenid six-horse teams. The horses will be be viewed at the Sacramento, Ventura, Pomona and Riverside fairs before arriving here.

Dairy and Poultry Show at San Jacinto

SAN JACINTO.—San Jacinto will hold a dairy and poultry show on Saturday, September 26. A free barbecue will be conducted in the city park, for which the dairymen's association will supply free milk, cream and beef. It will have charge of the live-stock exhibit also. It is planned to put on a very fine poultry show. G. W. Jones, chairman of the poultry committee, is to be assisted by O. S. Hoffman.

T. W. Murray is chairman of the agricultural committee and has on exhibition in the office of the San Jacinto Improvement Association some unusual good specimens of squash, onions, cantaloupes, and other products of valley ranches. Ranchers are bringing in their samples and the best of the lot will be on exhibit at the Riverside County fair the week following.

Crown City Widow Shows What a Lot Can Be Made to Produce

BY CLYDE C. HURLEY

PIGWEED and lamb's quarters salad is good, a mixture of alfalfa, nasturtiums and carrots makes an excellent appetizer, and the healthful qualities of these alleged weeds are equal to those of the ordinary cultivated vegetables. This quotes Mrs. Arizona Garrison, 705 West Washington street, Pasadena, veteran vegetable and fruit grower. Mrs. Garrison has been making a good share of the living for herself and daughter off her city lot for the past ten years. She does it growing vegetables, "weeds," fruits, berries and goats.

A few moments' conversation with Mrs. Garrison convinces one that she knows her stuff. I also learned that she was of a scientific turn of mind. By years of experimentation she has produced an extra large string bean and a prolific green corn that may be called her own creations—this in addition to growing commonly known products to perfection.

She does not commercialize her garden in the larger sense. She says she loves the work, and appreciates the better health which has come to her through work among her trees and plants. It is true she sells the product of her toil, but she does not go beyond the confines of her arbored "city-lot farm" to sell it.

Arizona Garrison was raised in the woods of Northern Michigan. She was frail from birth. Her father was a lumberman. All around their place at Grand Traverse Bay dense woods invited the adventurous, and she was that. A lover of nature, she spent many hours exploring plant life beneath the tamaracks and pines. She discovered a plant-breeding book in her father's library and began to experiment at pollenating and grafting. She is still at it.

Mrs. Garrison moved to Pasadena about a quarter of a century ago, but her first location was too close to the big hotels to suit her, so she bought the lot in Northern Pasadena, in what was known then and for several years after as the "dry tract." It was dry until Mrs. Garrison, by hounding the city fathers of Pasadena, secured water for her garden, and the gardens and lawns of her neighbors. But the third day after she had moved her belongings to the house on West Washington street, she had a garden planted, and had ordered fruit trees.

Now Mrs. Garrison, who was widowed many years ago, has about twenty varieties of fruit trees on her place. The behavior of each tree shows excellent judgment in the selection of varieties. For instance, her winter banana and winter peach trees bring more money than the average trees of the kind, since they fruit in the late fall or early winter, when fresh deciduous fruits are scarce. She has a profusion of figs, pomegranates, persimmons, plums, pears and walnuts in season, three varieties of grapes, all arbor-trained, and a fruiting cactus plant that runs the trees and vines a good race as a revenue producer. All these trees and vines are from twelve to eighteen years old, and their girth and production are immense, due to thoughtful care.

SHE MAKES IT PAY

Does it pay to foot the water bills and raise your own fresh vegetables and fruits? This is the "sticker" which has given pause to many an intended home gardener. Mrs. Garrison's endeavors answer the questi decidedly in the affirmative.

Her garden has provided most of her table fare and helped wonderfully in paying her living expenses and educating her daughter, besides lifting a $500 mortgage on her place, she says.

Of course, the income from a city lot cannot be very large—not so large, for example, as that of a bank president. But she makes the most of everything grown on her place, even some of the weeds, and is economical. She sells around $200 worth of fruit and produce from her place in a year, she says. The water bills are about $4 per month, and her taxes about the same amount.

The best sellers among her garden productions are, first, green corn; second, bush berries. Next comes the chayotes. Will you believe that she counted 757 chayotes, each weighing about a pound each, on one of her vines last year? But folks don't know about chayotes yet, so she has to "educate" 'em to this wonderful Mexican vegetable. She sold over 200 fruits at 5 cents each last year and rooted as many more for twice that amount. The chayotes also furnish ample shade for her bungalow. At night she and her daughter sleep out under the seedling walnut tree. That is, until the first showers of fall drive them indoors.

One is surprised at the "weed salad" diet. But Mrs. Garrison proves that certain weeds taste good, and are good. She learned to know which weeds tasted best in her wanderings among the pines of Northern Michigan. She can fix you up a salad of nasturtiums, alfalfa and carrots that would remind you of the Biltmore Grill's gastronomic creations. She uproots the pigweed about this time of the year, and scatters it about in her garden. Cut down the weeds? No, sir; not some of them. They taste as good, Mrs. Garrison says, as the lettuce which they are trying to crowd out.

But she does leave room for vegetables of many kinds. There are "ground cherries," "earth almonds," okra, Italian spinach, kohlrabi and banana squash and all the ordinary vegetables.

SHE HAS GOOD HELP

Rachel, the 13-year-old daughter, who says she is the "man of all work" about the city lot farm, has the hardened muscles of a tennis champion, wielding the spading fork and milking the goats. She likes a diet of raw vegetables, as does Mrs. Garrison. Also she drinks two quarts of goats' milk every day. The four goats, all Toggenburgs, consume the garden surplus and vegetable tops.

Mrs. Garrison says that the Oregon Evergreen sweet corn requires too much room for a city garden and that the Golden Bantam does not produce large enough ears. The Country Gentleman, she says, is not very well adapted to this climate. So she has been working for three years to successfully cross the two last named varieties. She has one stalk, this year, which gives promise of success in this endeavor. It has five ears, three very well developed, and two coming on nicely. Mrs. Garrison believes that this stalk will furnish her with the seed of a valuable new corn.

Five years ago a neighbor from Mexico gave her the seed of several beans grown in the southern republic. The seed was placed in a box outside. Rains came and the beans sprouted. Then Mrs. Garrison watched for the blossoms. When they came she removed the pollen from Kentucky Wonder beans, and applied it to each of the blossoms of the assorted lot of stalks produced from the Mexican seed. The large "Albino" bean, as she calls it, was the result. This bean grew to a height of nearly twelve feet the first year, and produced pods an inch across and averaging nine inches long. Some of them were eleven inches long. These new beans are delicious cooked various ways.

NO WASTE HERE

Mrs. Garrison makes the most of the winter rains. She is not content with the rain that falls on her own property—she catches that which runs off her neighbor's lots uphill.

When it rains Mrs. Garrison and Rachel draw furrows across the lot, which has a gentle slope towards the south, and catch all the water possible in this manner. They also place gunny sacks and like material on the ground, to hold the moisture after the rains. When they take up the gunny sacks two weeks after the rains, the earth is still moist, and water bills are consequently lessened.

The pride of the Garrison home orchard is the Elkhorn mulberry, which was planted seventeen years ago, and which Mrs. Garrison has carefully trained until a party of 100 persons could have a picnic in the shade of its drooping branches. Each year she prunes the branches to give the tree a drooping habit, and braces outward with two-inch gas pipe the branches which sweep the ground. A space forty feet across, densely shaded, has thus been created under the fragrant mulberry.

Bean Super Giant

Full Rated Pressure at the Nozzle

To get the full-rated capacity of your sprayer and at the same time do effective work you must have the full-rated pressure at the nozzles as well as at the pump.

The Bean Super-Giant holds the pressure at 400 lbs. and better—at the nozzles—even when used with the newer spray guns in which friction has been reduced to the minimum. This insures rapid thorough work, greater economy, and better results all around.

You want capacity. You want pressure. You want dependability. You get them all in a Bean Super-Giant.

And remember we also build high pressure power outfits in various sizes for the grower who wants something smaller than a Super, but who also wants Bean dependability.

Downey Fair Opens the Southland Season

DOWNEY.—The tenth annual Downey Fair opened its hospitable gates to the public August 27, and continued for three days, enjoying a remarkable patronage. This community enterprise has gained a standing by reason of the whole hearted co-operation and public spirit of the people of the city. The total attendance approximated 16,000. The weather was made specially for the occasion.

The displays of fruit, vegetables, flowers and commercial exhibits were of a high standard and most attractively arranged. While there was but little live stock, being confined to Holstein cattle, the individuals were extremely fine. The boys' and girls' club exhibits attracted much interest, Elizabeth Brown of Downey winning again this year. Leslie Edmondson of Compton was second and August Accarias of Montebello third. They were judged on fitting only, but the animals were worthy of attention. Five club members showed, and there were a dozen Holsteins.

At the Downey Fair.
A rich and varied display of fruits, vegetables and grains testified as to the fertility of the soil.

The poultry department was well filled and commanded much interest. While the number of exhibits was not large, the quality in some classes was good enough for any show. First prize awards follow:

New Way to Eradicate Puncture Vine

TULARE.—Eradication of puncture vine by a simple method discovered by himself is easy, according to Hugh Morrison, Tulare rancher. He says his ranch is now free from the pest.

He sprayed the puncture vines with distillate. He says the growth was killed at once and that the seeds were rendered sterile as well. The vines may be fed after spraying if the operator desires. He used a cheap grade of distillate, so the cost of materials was not great. Mr. Morrison regards the common practice of cutting the vines and raking them into piles for burning as useless, as the seeds are thereby scattered and resown.

The Tulare Board of Trade and the city authorities are giving the Morrison method a thorough test in the campaign against the puncture vine. Fresno county officials recently made a trip to the Morrison ranch to investigate.

For the "Power-end" of pumping

It may be an excellent pump, but there's no irrigation until the switch is thrown. Then it's up to the motor to keep doing business.

That's why progressive growers prefer the motor of known dependability. They like its ability to carry sustained overloads. They appreciate the value of ball bearings which reduce friction losses. In the Fairbanks-Morse Motor they have found an unfailing drive that requires a minimum of attention.

Specify a Fairbanks-Morse ball-bearing motor for the power end of your pump.

TRASH Troubles Ended

No more unsightly trash piles—no more untidy back yards—no more waiting for the trash wagon—no more open fires and flying sparks to set fire to the premises.

Here is a trash burner now being enjoyed by hundreds of Los Angeles housewives because it is handy to fill and is SPARK-TIGHT. Move it anywhere you want it. Set it by the garage or on the back lawn. It will not kill the grass around it. Can be moved easily anywhere.

Easy to fill.
No open fire.
No flying sparks.
No doors to come open.
No danger of setting fire to premises.
Light and easy to move any place you want it.

THE MARTIN'S

Exclusive Improvement

The PERFORATED INNER FLUE of the MARTIN is its real WONDER. This flue, found in no other burner, carries a draft right through the burning mass and keeps it burning until the last vestige is turned to ashes—and very little ashes. Fire needs no stirring whatever. The flue is also a spark arrester both inside and at the top. No sparks escape. No doors to come open. No open flame. Safe for children, safe for the premises. Made of heavy tank steel and cast iron. Cannot warp, sag or crack open. You will be delighted with the MARTIN.

Ask your neighborhood hardware man, or mail us the coupon and get circular explaining the MARTIN and giving interesting information.

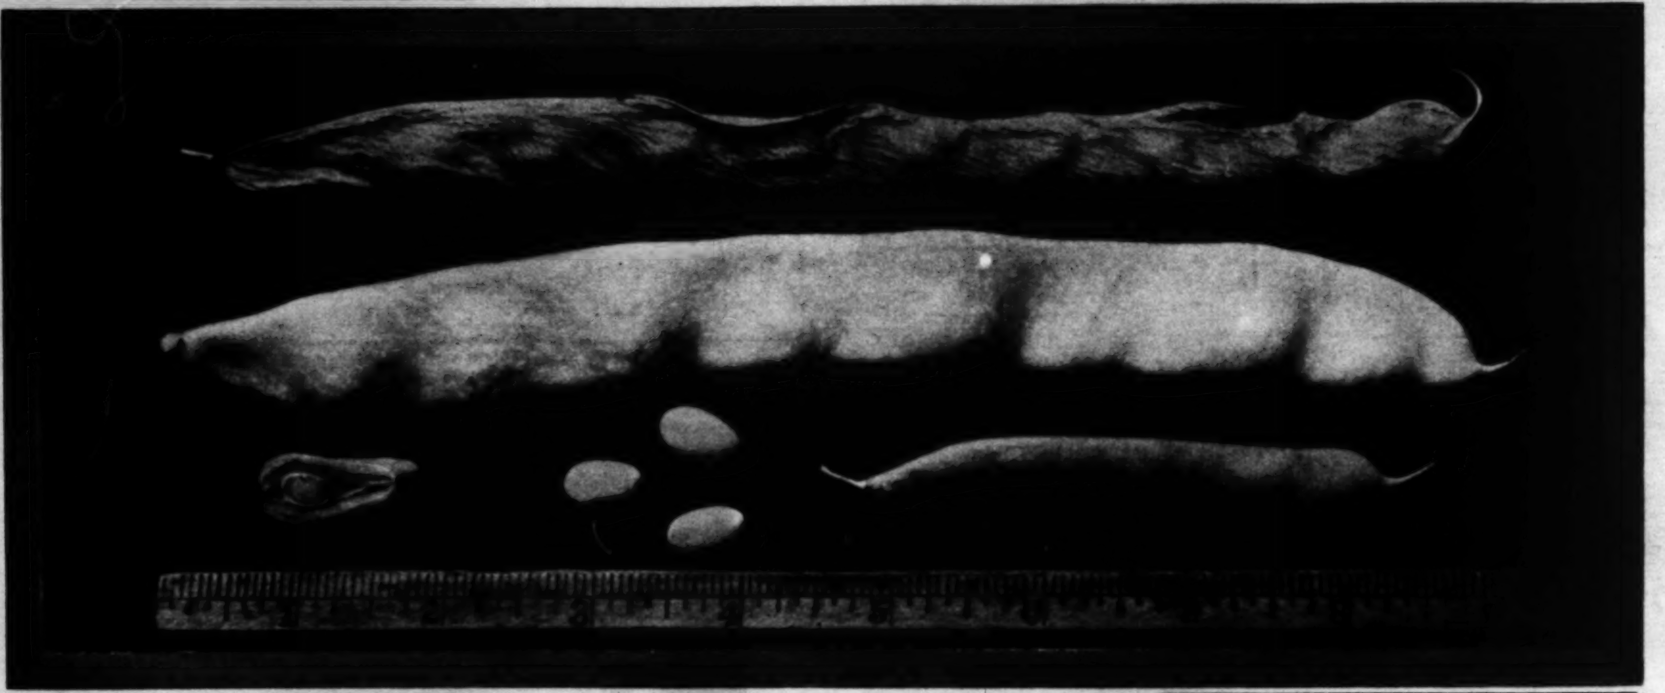
Woman Gardener and Girl Work Wonders on City Lot

(Illustrating article in this issue)

Mrs. Arizona Garrison, Pasadena city lot grower, finds green corn one of her "best sellers."

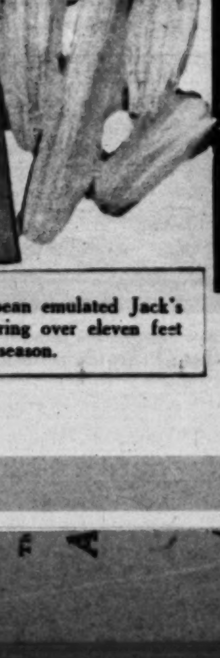
Rachel, the thirteen-year-old daughter, calls herself the "man of all work" about the little place. Here she shows how she dries the surplus corn.

Mrs. Garrison's "Red Fruiting Spineless" cactus, as she calls it, is a good revenue producer.



The "Albino" bean (fresh and dried) produced by the woman gardener through pollination experiments. The pods average nine inches in length. Below, left to right, are seed of parent plant from which pollination work started, seed of "Albino" and a half grown "Albino" bean.

Mrs. Garrison says more Southern Californians should grow chayotes. Fruit from this plant, she says, sold last year for $31.25.



This "Albino" string bean emulated Jack's celebrated stalk by soaring over eleven feet high last season.

Four thirty-foot rows of this Oregon Evergreen corn produced ears that brought Rachel Garrison more than ten dollars last year.

Prune Pudding

- ¼ cup Globe "A1" Flour
- 1 cupful dried prunes
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup cold water
- Grated rind of ½ lemon

Wash the prunes, cover with the water, bring slowly to a boil and cook 5 minutes. Drain, measure liquid and add enough water to make a cupful. Mix the flour, sugar and lemon rind in a double boiler. Add the prune liquid slowly. Stir and cook until mixture begins to thicken. Cover and steam 10 minutes. Add the egg well beaten. Stir and cook 3 minutes, then add the prunes, which have been stoned and chopped. Pour into molds and chill. Serve with cream or whipped cream.

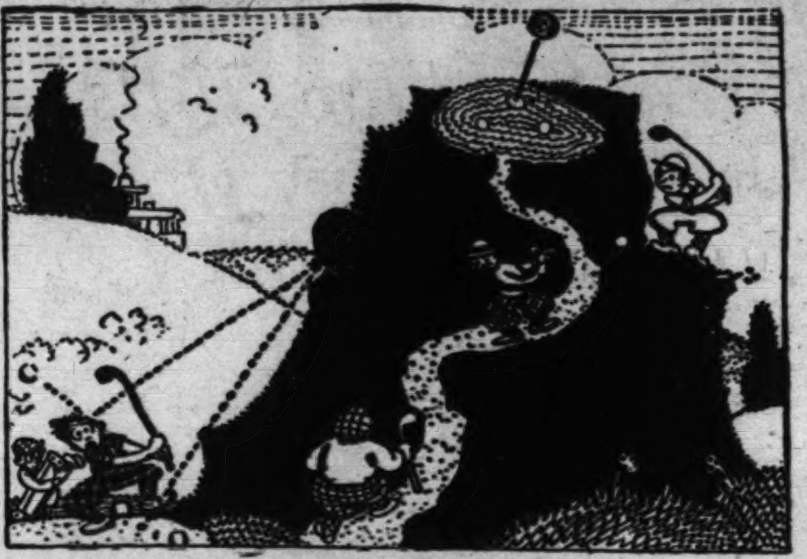
Enemies of The People

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Illustrated by MERLE JOHNSON



It wasn't the tee—but the green that he placed on the top of the hill.

PERHAPS no man in professional life has a greater opportunity for genuine public service than the golf architect. But through some strange perversity in his nature he is not only blind to this opportunity but persists in doing disservice after disservice to people who are his intimates and who have always been kind to him.

The great surgeon, whose success depends on utter freedom from emotion, complete forgetfulness of sentiment and the human equation, will often yield to a kindly impulse and neglect to send a bill to a patient who could not afford to contract the operation habit if he had to pay.

The cold, merciless lawyer occasionally seeks in one way or another to make life a little more pleasant for other occupants of the world.

I have even known dentists who, after rubbing a whirling grindstone against a patient's nerves for an hour, would go to the closet, uncork a new bottle and give him a drink.

But does the golf architect ever relent? He does not. Does he ever, after having sat up nights for weeks that he might foresee all the possible means of plunging honest old gentlemen into a succession of despairs, return to his work and remold it nearer to the heart's desire of the vast majority of the devotees of the game? Not at all; instead, if he builds the course over again he makes it more impossible, if this word can be used in a relative sense.

Some years ago I accompanied a golf architect over a terrain which a number of persons, including myself, had purchased at a figure we could not afford, and hoped, at a figure we could still less afford, to make into a field of recreation.

It was a rocky, hilly countryside, traversed by winding brooks and studded here and there with tangly undergrowth. The architect's face wore an evilly anticipatory smile as he surveyed it.

"Do you think you can make a golf course out of this?" I inquired. "It seems to be pretty well encumbered with obstacles, doesn't it?"

"They will do, for a beginning," he replied. "By bringing in more rocks, digging a few pits here and there, and deepening the course of the stream, it can be made to serve. I will make a sketch of it as it stands and let you know the result in a few days."

In a few days he submitted his plan. It looked beautiful on paper. But to the lay mind a plan is misleading. Its perfectly flat surface can convey no idea of the serrations and excavations and deviosities of the finished work.

For a year workmen toiled on our property, while the architect watched them grimly.

Now and then some tender-hearted laborer would protest at the erection of a huge sand dune over which a ball must be propelled in order to reach a green. Occasionally one of our committee would protest as cruel and unusual the transferring of the course of a deep brook so as to make it cross five times a 600-yard fairway.

But the architect was adamant. He thought of all the obstacles that he had ever heard of, and these being insufficient to satisfy him he took three months off and went to Scotland to study the work that other men in his profession had done.

We had a hill about sixty feet high in the center of the course, and we had often remarked to one another when we were inspecting the property preparatory to buying it that this hill would make a fine tee, as it would be possible to secure the aid of gravitation in driving from it.

When the architect had the height of this eminence increased fifty feet we were loud in our praises of him. But we didn't understand. It wasn't the tee, but the green, that he placed on the top of the hill. And not satisfied with that, he studded the slopes with big granite boulders so that unless a ball was driven clean to the top it would return to the sender, probably landing on his head.

There were originally a few stretches of clear greensward on the location, and it was of these that most of us had thought when we were figuring on reducing our scores.

Where it wasn't possible to break these up with winding brooks, the architect introduced traps in series, each of them defended by a large sand dune so placed that it would just catch and intercept a nice drive or brassie.

We were a little rueful when we surveyed the completed work, carpeted with young grass, and began to play the game.

We found the course about eighteen strokes harder than any other we had played on, but gradually we began to master its intricacies, and by studying the roll of the ground in various places were able to outfox the architect and better our games. Then our resentment against him abated somewhat. After all, we said, he did not design the course as he did out of any spite against us. His purpose was merely to teach us to cope with difficulties, so that if we played on any other links we would have no trouble.

But we didn't know the man.

At the end of the first year he came back and watched us play for a couple of days, and then went into session with the Greens Committee, which was composed of seven or eight men who cared nothing for the troubles other people got into so long as they could avoid them themselves.

The following week new gangs of workmen appeared on the course. Every hole on which the architect had seen anybody make a par was remodelled. Two or three holes were changed about and made into dog's legs which were so cunningly laid out that a good drive would land out of bounds, and a mediocre drive would fall so far short that at least two more would be required to get the ball around the corner.

We are gradually learning to get around the course in eighteen or twenty over par. But we do it evenings when there is nobody on the course, for fear the architect will hear about it and come back to make more trouble for us.

HOW OBSERVANT ARE YOU?

By JULIA HOYT

MRS. HAMILTON of the New York Police Department recently told me how amazingly unobservant most people are with regard to the appearance of those with whom they live. Many, in fact, the majority, if asked the exact color of the eyes, the exact height, will be able to answer only indefinitely. She told me of a case, for instance, of a woman positively identifying as her husband, with four intimate friends agreeing with her, a certain man lying in the morgue. He had been killed in an accident. The body was removed by the wife and buried in the family plot, and four months later the real husband turned up in a hospital, having had a lapse of memory during that time.

Perhaps more surprising was a husband who had lived happily with his wife for twenty years, but was not positive whether her eyes were blue or gray.

It is well known that most of us use our powers of observation very little, if at all. That is why testimony from witnesses is such an unreliable thing. Some day ask two or three people to tell you in detail exactly what a certain person wore at a luncheon, and see not only how they disagree, but how little they have observed that would be of any assistance to a stranger in identifying the person.

Mrs. Hamilton was once asked to apprehend a girl who had run away from home and who was thought to be on a certain ferry. She had been given the supposed description of her looks and dress—the description that is given by the average person of his mother, daughter or sister. As Mrs. Hamilton stood watching the passengers disembark, eight girls appeared who answered to the description perfectly.

Many of us go contentedly and safely through life, nothing untoward happens to us, and we unconsciously feel that nothing ever will. We would all be shocked, however, and brought up with a round turn if we heard the daily statistics of the number of people who are hurt in accidents and unidentified, or reported missing by their friends.

According to Mrs. Hamilton, next to the meager information the family generally is able to give about the appearance, clothes, etc., the request for "no publicity" is the greatest handicap to finding missing people. No matter how sad and unpleasant it may be for the family, if they wish to help in finding the lost relative they should give his or her absence all the publicity at the command of the police department. Many of the most valuable clues in tracing them are received from people who would never have been able to give them had it not been for publicity. In addition, do not delay three or four days before notifying the police department. You are losing valuable time and may be causing discomfort, even suffering to the person.

The First Leader of Style

"There's one thing we can say about Adam," remarks a paragrapher; "he didn't have a stylish wife."

Where did he get that stuff? Eve was the most stylish dresser of her time, her costumes being wholly original and of exclusive design.

CHILD'S PLAY

to present this portrait to his inamorata, nor as I confided to Mr. Clarke, because he was urgently in need of funds and hoped to interest me in his scheme. He came, monsieur, for the purpose of finding some comparatively safe means for my destruction, for my assassination. The fact of my illness speedily suggested such, and he laid his plans accordingly.

"At the first sitting he had observed that I had placed upon a taboret beside the easel an atomizer, some medicine to be taken internally, and my watch and chain. The watch was attached to one end of the platinum chain and at the other my latchkey.

"These three articles, the spray, the medicine in its one hundred cubic centimeter bottle, and the latchkey at the end of my watch chain, were enough to suggest the means toward his end. M. Bogoroff came to his second sitting prepared to avail himself of the expedients which he reasoned would probably be still open to his hands. He had observed on his former visit that I had excused myself and left the room to go to my bathroom at the far end of the corridor and gargle my throat.

"Therefore, on this second sitting, M. Bogoroff came prepared. When I began painting he talked about his affair. At the end of twenty minutes, I went out as before to gargle my throat. M. Bogoroff took advantage of this chance to get up and step to the taboret. He first sprayed his mouth with the atomizer. No doubt he was actually in some fear of catching the flu. Then he leaned down and compressed the latchkey with a piece of locksmith's wax, and almost with the same gesture picked up the medicine bottle, placed it to his lips, drank about half the contents which were getting low, taking what would be the equivalent of a double dose. Then, slipping a vial from his pocket, he replaced this amount with the equivalent in volume of a tasteless, odorless and powerful solution of opiate.

"All of this time he could hear me gargling in the bathroom, so that he had nothing to fear from my unexpected entry. When I returned to the studio, he was seated in the chair smoking his cigarette.

"And that, monsieur, is all that it seems necessary for me to read at this moment from the mind of M. Bogoroff. I have something to add to what I have said and I prefer to do so, not in M. Bogoroff's presence, lest what I have to say suggest to him some line of defense."

He rose. Bogoroff, weak in the knees, pallid and perspiring profusely, was conducted out by two agents. When the door had closed behind him, Jacques turned to the silent policemen.

"For my own credit, messieurs, I shall now request my friend M. Clarke to state just what he witnessed in my studio on Bogoroff's second sitting. I wish to avoid all suspicion of there being any collusion between M. Clarke and myself, at least any co-operation in which the details are not frankly stated. Mr. Clarke will be so kind as to tell you precisely what occurred from the moment of his receiving my pneumatique requesting that he come immediately to the studio."

So I went ahead and told them. I explained that I was telling them no more nor less than what I had told Jacques at the time. Of how I had unwillingly played the part of spy merely as I thought to form an idea of the validity of the Karopolous scheme as unguardedly described to Jacques by Bogoroff.

Then, at the request of the presiding officer, I described my scuffle on the stairs with The Ferret, and exhibited the cuts in my pant leg and the artificial one beneath.

But I didn't tell them one word about my visit to Goransko, for the simple reason that he had requested me for the time being not to mention it at all. It seemed to me also that it was up to the police to unscramble the rest of the omelet and that they would really like it better if permitted to do so. Jacques also would like it better, I thought, There was no effort to detain us when I had finished my deposition, so we went out and got into a taxi that an agent had called for us.

It was then that my pent-up feeling blew off the safety valve.

"You damned old fraud," I said to Jacques. "This is the fakiest fakery that you've faked since you've turned rank fake."

"Don't be cross, Johnny. I couldn't be that with you to save my life—just after you've done that thing yourself."

"I've done nothing of the sort. You were all primed for that Ferret. You were lying there in bed with no more on than I've got and a gun nice and handy to drill him the instant he showed his ratty nose. You suspected Bogoroff from the first throw, and stood him off about his portrait to see how far he'd go in his insistence on your doing it. Then when he wouldn't take no for an answer you went still farther, to the point of what must have been damnably uncomfortable—Bogoroff was on to that just now. You soused that atomizer full of oil of garlic, and gave yourself all the outward and inward workings of one whale of a cold. You planted your latchkey and medicine bottle there for bait, and went out long enough to give him a chance to swallow it. Even if I hadn't been skulking up there behind the tapestries, you'd have got away with it all right. I'll bet I was scarcely across the river before you whipped out of your studio and beat it over to the laboratory to get a little of that medicine bottle contents analyzed."

"Don't stop, Johnny," Jacques said as I paused to light a cigarette. "Say that I was wide awake and listening and heard you rolling down the stairs with that Apache and never took the trouble to come out and lend a hand. That if he'd knifed you in the heart instead of in the store leg I'd have been quite content to get rid of a potential exposer—and made no end of capital out of it."

This calm remark fetched me up all standing, cooled my heat. I was convinced that, impostor or no impostor. Jacques would never have been guilty of serving me a pup like that.

"Well," I said, "it all happened pretty quickly, so I'd say that you probably got up and peeked out the door and saw me coming back up the stairs, then slid into bed again. I waited outside to get back my breath and find out if I was all intact."

"Yes, of course, that's possible," Jacques admitted, "but now that you've rid yor system of the excess righteous wrath, suppose you take another slant on it. What if my reading of this man's mind happened to coincide precisely with what I partly knew and partly suspected, or knew entirely for that matter and merely wanted to check up by the reading of his mind. I couldn't very well falsify books, could I?"

"No," I said, "but I'll tell you what you can do. When we get back to the studio, you can read my mind and tell me what happened last night between eight and twelve."

"All right, Johnny. Your mind presents certain difficulties because, like that of most reporters and most of the things we read in the papers, it is such an artful combination of actuality and deception."

"That's right—stall!" I said.

Jacques leaned back with a sigh. "No, I think I'd better tell you frankly that there hasn't been much need of mind reading in this case. It's all been so obvious. Like children playing 'cops and thieves'—Sherlock Holmes and all that sort of thing. Under the circumstances, I couldn't have found it in my conscience to send you over there to interview Goransko without keeping some sort of tabs on you. I was somewhere 'round when you found that infernal machine, that would probably have wrecked the whole nouse, and carried it acros the street and chucked it in the Seine. So let's call this call this case a dud Johnny, and hope that you can catch me on the next."

I was too utterly confounded, too angry to say more. It didn't seem compatible with my dignity. In fact, I am ashamed to say that in a sudden access of rage I stopped the taxi and got out. Then I called another and went over to see Goransko. He was not at home.

"What sort of man was it?" I demanded of the correct English butler, "who called on Dr. Goransko before I came last night?" night?"

"He was a very presentable party, sir, quite the gentleman in fact, or I'd 'ardly 'ave admitted 'im, sir."

"Would you mind describing him?" I asked.

The butler shook his head. "I'm sorry sir, but I fear you'll 'ave to ask Dr. Goransko. I 'ave my orders, sir."

And that was about all. Bogoroff, of course. I went fumblingly back to my hotel to change my clothes, and there I found two notes just brought by a special messenger, one from Dr. Goransko to say that he had been called suddenly to London and hoped to see me on his return a week later. The other was from Jacques to ask if I was too angry to see another case.

CARE OF THE BODY

baby's increasing bulk and weight. Consequently the bones do not grow in the same ratio or proportion as the rest of the baby's body.

When baby is one year old and the weight of his body has tripled from the time of birth the strength of the bones have not increased threefold. At about this age the primitive impulse to walk is present in baby. He attempts by various processes to stand on his feet, to crawl and in his clumsy fashion to walk. His ankles bend under him, the tendons, ligaments and muscles which are attached to the various bones lack the necessary suppleness, strength and vitality to withstand the strain. Sometimes he walks with ankles inverted, sometimes flat-footed, often knock-kneed and, in very many cases, in order to balance himself properly, in an abnormal posture ultimately productive of spinal curvature.

These precious mineral salts found in the natural foods and in mother's milk are not only the source of adding firmness to baby's bones, tendons and ligaments, but also supply the necessary alkalinity to his blood which makes him strong, firm and resistant. These vital elements of food are the cornerstones, the keynote to baby's healts, strength and vitality.

Summing up, therefore, let us see what factors may be productive of keeping baby's body straight, firm and strong.

First and foremost, there is no substitute for mother's milk. The cow, the goat and the can are foster-mothers of a very poor variety to baby. The mother who fails to nurse her child through willful neglect or because of disinclination to do so is guilty of a monstrous crime against her beloved baby. The first year of baby's nursing establishes him on a firm foundation. If this foundation is lacking he pays the price in the years to come.

Next comes the period after weaning. If mother uses the innate common sense which the motherhood of every living animal possesses and which the human should possess in the highest form, she would know that the countless food adulterations are not proper foods for her precious little one. She will understand that in the realm of the great sun-kissed fruit and vegetables, in the whole grain bread-stuffs, and in the succulent nuts she will find a suitable diet for her babe. She will understand that such products as sugar act as the "white man's curse," the leech of those precious ingredients so necessary and vital for baby's development and growth.

Not only will she understand that the feeding of the simple coarse, unrefined and undenatured foodstuffs are good and wholesome for that tiny growing body, but also that the sun is the great life-giver and protector of health. She will understand that bathing his body in the life-giving rays of the sun will do much toward keeping his blood sweet and clean and toward furnishing that vital spark, the mysterious something that sunlight alone is able to furnish.

All in all, maintenance of baby on a diet, first of his own mother's milk, at least until his incisor or front teeth have fully formed, and second, the use of natural sun-kissed fruits, whole-grain cereal products, the undenatured vegetables, the succulent nuts and milk, will furnish the necessary dietetic ingredients for making baby's bones hard, firm and supple. These, associated with the life-giving power of the sun bathing baby's naked body, will do more than all the much advertised drugs or chemical concoctions to produce straight bones in an undeformed, healthy and virile body.

Foot Troubles Now Out of Date

Away! with bunions, corns and fallen arches. They're as out of date as hoop skirts and powdered wigs. There are too many things to accomplish and enjoy to let yourself be held back and aged by nerve-racking foot pains.

Unnaturally shaped, improperly designed shoes are the cause of tortured feet. Ordinary shoees won't correct these troubles. Only Ground Grippers have the three specific foot helps designed by science to permanently cure foot weaknesses by natural strengthening.

With the aid of the three Ground Gripper foot aids—straight line inner edge, the flexible arch and the rotor heel—weak feet cure themselves.

Come in and have an expert foot specialist examine your feet, free. Put on a pair of "Ground Grippers" and notice the difference right from the start.

SUNDAY MAGAZINE

Los Angeles, Cal. EDITED BY LINTON DAVIES September 6,, 1925.

Seen from the Green Verdugo Hills
JOHN STEVEN McGROARTY

We call upon all who sit in our far-flung synagogue on blessed Sabbath mornings to bear us witness that we have long preached from this high lay pulpit the religion of the trees.

Tax-Saving and Soul-Saving Trees

Which is to say that we have tirelessly bemoaned the appalling destruction of trees in America, and the lack of effort to replace them.

And now comes to us a book entitled "Town Forests," which fully justifies us in every statement and contention that we have ever made. We hope that many people who read these words will write for the book. It will be sent free on request. It is beautifully written and printed, and a fine book to have in a library. Address The American Tree Association, Washington, D. C.

We wish particularly that this book will be sent for and read by the Mayor and City Council of Los Angeles; the Men's City Club and the Women's City Club, the Friday Morning and Ebell clubs of Los Angeles; and, lastly but not leastly, by the Board of Supervisors of the county of Los Angeles. The book cannot fail to put both the love and the fear of the Lord in the hearts of the members of all the organizations we have named. And there are other organizations that can profit as well.

We mention Los Angeles particularly because it is the one community of our country which has the direst need of enlightenment and counsel. It is the one city of America most critically and immediately menaced for the lack of trees. It is the community most ignorant on the subject. It is the one city, above all others known to us, that is jazzing along most criminally and the most thoughtlessly to the fate that overtook Babylon.

Los Angeles and the county in which it is located does not grow trees; it cuts them down. It appears to have a diabolical hatred of trees. As a consequence, it is storing up for itself a most terrible day of wrath.

Within the limits of the city and the county of Los Angeles there can easily be grown the finest forests in the world. Merely calling attention to Griffith Park, alone, we name an area that should be today a vast and splendid forest instead of the bleak and barren waste that it is. There are in Los Angeles county hundreds of acres of waste lands that should be sown to trees and changed from wastes into forests.

Forests in which the wild creatures of the earth would roam protected and happy, a joy to the children and to all men; forests where the wild birds would make their homes, and which migratory birds would make a port of call; forests that would be a source of vast income to the city and county; never-failing forests because for every tree cut down another would be planted in its place; forests that would magically and incredibly increase our water supply; forests that would do more for the spiritual welfare and the souls of the people than all the pulpits (including this one) could, put together, ever hope to do.

This book that we are telling you about in the synagogue this blessed Sabbath morning will tell the city man a thing or two. It will tell him how little he knows when he thinks that skyscrapers and stone sidewalks constitute the whole of presperity and security.

And, also, the book will tell the little town how it can have its own forest, which forest will cut down taxes and go far to create an ideal citizenship that will endure.

Will some member of the Congregation of the Faithful please cut out this little sermon and send it to The American Tree Association, Washington, D. C. with a request for a copy of the book?

What did we do, there awhile back, but go traipsing down to San Diego to rejoice with her in her happy hour.

San Diego Rejoices in Her Happy Hour

And her happy hour is this, that now, after the long years, the city that was the first habitation of civilized white men in our Golden California, has come, at last, to her own.

It is a strange thing, indeed, that the world has been so slow to find its way to San Diego. It has always been a wonder to us—this strange thing. A spot so surpassingly alluring in its beauty, so glamorous with romance, and that was ever so potential in its commercial position of strategic mastery.

If I Could Sing

If I could radiate the joy I know,
If I could but express the love I feel;
If I could understand how to bestow
The raptures that through all my senses steal;
If I could sing the songs my spirit hears,
If I could paint the pictures that I see—
Excess of joy would move the world to tears,
And pain and sorrow would no longer be.

Dear Father, we are babes! We have not learned
To rightly speak the words which Thou hast taught—
Although our hearts have long within us burned
To sing of all the wonders Thou hast wrought!
Oh grant us, when from earth we shall depart
To go and visit heaven's golden halls,
That we may voice the music of the heart—
And hear it echoed from those shining walls!

JAMES M. WARNACK.

But, the world has a way of learning at last. And now it is making a pathway to San Diego's door—to its puerta del sol, the doorway of the sun.

Long was San Diego a sleepy little place. Sleepy, but always happy. Never have we spent an unhappy hour in San Diego. And this latest hour, that we are telling you all about now, was, we think, the happiest of all. They are such kind folk, down there. And several thousand of them were gathered together to hear us make a speech. A speech in which we forgot to say what we intended to say, and in which we said only how much we love them because they are so kind.

Well, San Diego's great day is here. She is rearing her domes and towers about the sunny waters of her wondrous harbor where Cabrillo planted the banner of Castile, and where the sandals of Serra trod, where the first palm and the first olive tree were planted, and where the first martyr died for the faith.

The vision of San Diego taking her place among the great cities of the earth is so clear and vivid now that even the dullest mind cannot fail to see it.

The Part That Music Plays in Life

We had been out traipsing in our faithful little Henry, not caring much which way we went or where the roads might lead. And where did we find ourself, pretty soon, but in Hollywood.

So, while we were there, what did we do but invite ourself into a motion-picture studio to see the movie actors at work.

Well, sir, quite to our surprise, we noticed that there were a couple of fiddlers and two or three bazoo players in the studio, and that they tore loose every time the actors made a move, or a movie, as perhaps we would better say.

We asked the director what the idea of it is, and he said that the music stimulates the actor by its suggestion as to what he is to do; what emotion he is to register on the camera, and everything like that.

So, we watched how it worked, and, by ginger, it worked like a charm. If the actor was to register anger they played Wagner stuff for him. If loneliness, then the tune was "Home, Sweet Home." If tears were wanted, the bazoos and the viols wailed out "La Golondrina." And so on. We never witnessed a more interesting sight in our life.

It is all very logical, said the director. Music can be exalting, it can be holy, sacred; or it can be lascivious, immoral and debauching. Armies have to have drum corps, bagpipers and brass bands; the modern dance has to have jazz; churches have to have organs; the movies have to have orchestras that can play anything any old way.

Certainly the director had the right of it, as the saying is; and we felt no urge to contradict him.

And, as Henry and we wended our way homeward, we were thinking of how when Nebuchadnezzar put Shadrack, Meshach and Abednego in the fiery furnace, he ordered his musicians to strike up the cornets, flutes, harps, sackbuts, psalteries and dulcimers.

You see, even that old scamp had a sense of art.

Putting the Shoe on the Other Foot

By ginger, it was a funny story that Edward Borein, maker of etchings, told us one evening as we were sitting in the cozy fastnesses of the Santa Maria Inn.

And a story with a point to it, for it brings out the fact that if you are a fast thinker you can often take a shoe that pinches you and make the other fellow wear it.

The way it was there was a young fellow who was an actor and who had married a wife. Soon after the wedding they journeyed with a company of mummers to a country town to give a "show." And they went to the little town inn to secure a lodging for the night.

It was somewhat late in the evening. A sour-faced, somewhat elderly lady opened the door to their knock. She held a kerosene lamp in her hand, opening the door only a couple of inches and inquiring as to who the young couple might be and what they might be. They gave their names and said they were actors.

Is that young woman your wife? asked the landlady. And, if so, let me see your marriage certificate, she said. I am very particular about letting actor couples in my tavern unless they are married.

Now, the young wife had not yet grown blase. The thrill of her marriage was still strong within her. And she had the precious and highly-prized marriage certificate in her bag, which she promptly produced.

So, when the couple got to the room to which the landlady had escorted them, a streak of devilment took hold of the actor. He was one of the few actors with a sense of humor. Instead of getting angry with the landlady, he decided to have some fun with her.

So he up and said to the landlady, we are particular about these matters. We want to know who we are staying with. We are decent, respectable people and we must know if this hotel is being conducted under proper management.

Are you married, and, if so, where is your husband and where is your marriage certificate to prove it? said he to the landlady.

My husband is the man down stairs, and I will go get my marriage certificate and show it to you, she answered. All right, said the actor, we will sit up and wait till you bring it. We will not sleep in this house till we know what kind of people run it.

They waited maybe an hour, during which time they heard low, murmuring voices down stairs, and boxes and sofas and things being moved around feverishly. Then the actor went down to see what was doing.

He found two elderly and very much crestfallen people. They said they hadn't found the certificate yet, but that they would pursue their search for it till it was found.

All right, said the actor, but we will not sleep in this house till you prove to us that you are decent married folks. Then he went back to his room and promptly went to bed.

Well, sir, to make a long story short, the certificate never was found. And when the actor and his wife were leaving the house, the landlady wouldn't let him pay a cent of board and begged of him not to mention to anybody about the certificate.

So, in the way of all true mummers, he accepted the remittance of the board bill, but could not resist putting on an air of shocked sensibilities that will haunt the landlady to the day of her death.

There might be many morals to this story. And one of them might be that we should not ask others to do what we are not able to do ourselves.

CARE OF THE BODY

food. In what way? The heavy demands made on the glands that permit intestinal secretion and lubrication are entirely beyond the recuperative power of the organism. Consequently these glands suffer from impaired functional activity. The glands have been overworked and are lacking in the power to secrete sufficient fluid. This power cannot be restored by forcing more work. Rest is the only remedy that can be safely and dependably used to restore vitality in any overworked or worn out organ. More food and more cathartics add more work and make eventual recovery all the more difficult.

A fixed tension superinduced by a sphincter muscle in a state of tonic spasm inhibits normal peristaltic action by mechanical resistance. Long-continued resistance, the result of neglect to obey the call of nature may even result in reversed peristalsis. People suffering in this way are troubled with gas, flatulent colic, and a feeling of unusual distention and fullness. No one questions the statement that there can be mechanical obstruction to the point of complete occlusion of the bowels. Adhesions are most frequently given as a cause for this condition and are blamed for many of the obscure cases of constipation. Spastic contraction of the muscular coat of the intestines is a more frequent cause than adhesions. The latter diagnosis or tentative guess is entierly overworked.

Complete physical and mental relaxation is necessary before chronic constipation can be dependably overcome. People worry too much about their bowels. In fact, with many people, the word constipation becomes a real obsession, especially with the type known as neurasthenics. This kind of obsession aggravates a pre-existing mental quirk or complex and becomes the most important theme for thought or topic for conversation. If people would confine their eating to such foodstuffs as would not cause acid or putrefactive fermentation, they could well afford to forget the word constipation, for there are many other things to think about that are decidedly more worth while.

Food surplus and food waste are carried off through the intestinal tract. The more subtle poisons that are the direct result of tissue activity are eliminated largely through the kidneys, skin and lungs. In healthy people whose meals are frugal and of intelligently selected food, there is very little poison to be reabsorbed into the blood from the intestinal tract. These people, be it understood, do not belong to the great majority who suffer from constipation.

Care of the Baby—Bone Deformitiees

EVERY physician who uses his observation powers has frequently noted, during his examinations of children, the early formation of bone deformities.

Osteopaths and chiropractors have especially observed the frequency with which spinal curvature is seen in children.

It is almost as common to see a child walk with ankles bent inward and bones distorted as it is to see the normal walk.

What is it which causes these marked abnormalities so early in life? Most assuredly they are not present during the earlier months of baby's career. As I have repeatedly stated, most children are born fairly perfect—at least not with any of the marked defects which are apparent as baby climbs into his third, fourth and fifth years.

There must be something which is responsible for the accumulation of these deformities and which makes them a very common clinical picture.

A clearer understanding of what takes place may be secured by an elemental knowledge of bone physiology and development. We may then trace, step by step, the processes which induce the changes from the normal to the abnormal.

In embryonic life, while the child is still unborn, in the strictest sense he has, in reality, no bones. His "bones" are really nothing more than gristle, technically known as hyaline cartilage. The flexible and movable cartilage of the nose is a typical example of this kind of cartilage. The nasal cartilage never hardens, even in old age, and remains true to its embryonic type. However, most of these cartilaginous formations have within them the nucleus for ossification, or hardening. Inside of them there are centers from which ossification or hardening of the bones radiates. By the time the child is born his long bones consist usually of three of these centers.

As we look at the typical bone we see it divided into three portions, a long bony segment in the center and two hard bony portions at the ends separated by an isthmus of gristle or cartilage.

It is this cartilaginous formation, the fact that baby's bones are partly made of gristle for several years after his birth, that makes his bony framework so flexible, elastic and resilient. This is nature's profoundly wise protection against the bumps and falls that baby is constantly subjected to. Were his bones as hard and brittle as the adult's, the history of baby's life would be checkered with fracture after fracture. Fortunately, wise nature has made provision for the time when baby stumblingly learns to walk.

As baby grows older, bone solidification proceeds apace. The older he becomes the less cartilage he possesses and the more bone is formed, both proportionately and quantitatively. Not only are the cartilages slowly changed to bone but they also assume increased brittleness and hardness. Consequently by the time puberty, or approximately the age of thirteen or fourteen, has been reached, the child is almost as prone to fracture as the adult.

Now using this as a background of our knowledge, we may proceed to build up an hypothesis concerning the abnormalities of baby's poor bony development.

What is it which so converts the cartilage into bone? Why is it that in the cases of bony distortions the bones do not form in a normal manner? The answer to the first question is that cartilage is converted into bone by the deposit of the precious mineral salts found during baby's nursing regime in mother's milk and later in life found especially in the fresh and dried fruits, in the vegetables and whole grain products. Calcification requires the deposit of lime salts commonly called calcium salts. A deficiency in these salts means that the cartilage does not have the essential nutrition to be converted into bone.

The answer to the second question ought to be apparent from these deductions. Due to the failue of the deposit of sufficient mineral salts, especially calcium, in the mother's milk, the cartilaginous portions of the bones do not receive sufficient of the mineral nutrition to fortify them against

THE SUPER FOOD

W-H-Y, what we eat and drink is life's great secret of health! If everyone used perfectly balanced food, how little would there be of sickness, weakness, sallow cheeks, wrecked nerves, aches and pains and premature old age!

Perhaps some gland or organ in your body is crying for nourishment. Correct your diet with W-H-Y—the great discovery that scientists for years have dreamed of—pure food containing in perfectly balanced proportions all the vital elements necessary to sustain life and maintain health.

Physicians and dietitians recommend this wonderful food-beverage. Hospitals and sanitariums depend upon it. Thousands of men and women, wasting away on the usual diet, have found in W-H-Y satisfying nourishment that brings them health and strength. Babies reared from birth on W-H-Y are strong and healthy far above the average. Quickly assimilated by the blood stream, W-H-Y not only revives and maintains health, but it relieves fatigue and gives strength, energy and endurance.

W-H-Y has a rich coffee-like flavor, but is so much easier to prepare. Requires no boiling. Fine hot or cold. A refreshing drink for every member of the family every meal. Drink it regularly and see how much better you feel.

Get a bottle of W-H-Y from your Grocer or Druggist.

We Cure Rupture

Abdominal Belts and Elastic Hosiery and all similar appliances made to your measure, also ready made.

Office Hours: Week days 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and by appointment.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc?

Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and deranged ligaments complicate matters still further.

We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flatfoot, broken down arches and other deformities of the feet, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore daintiness of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

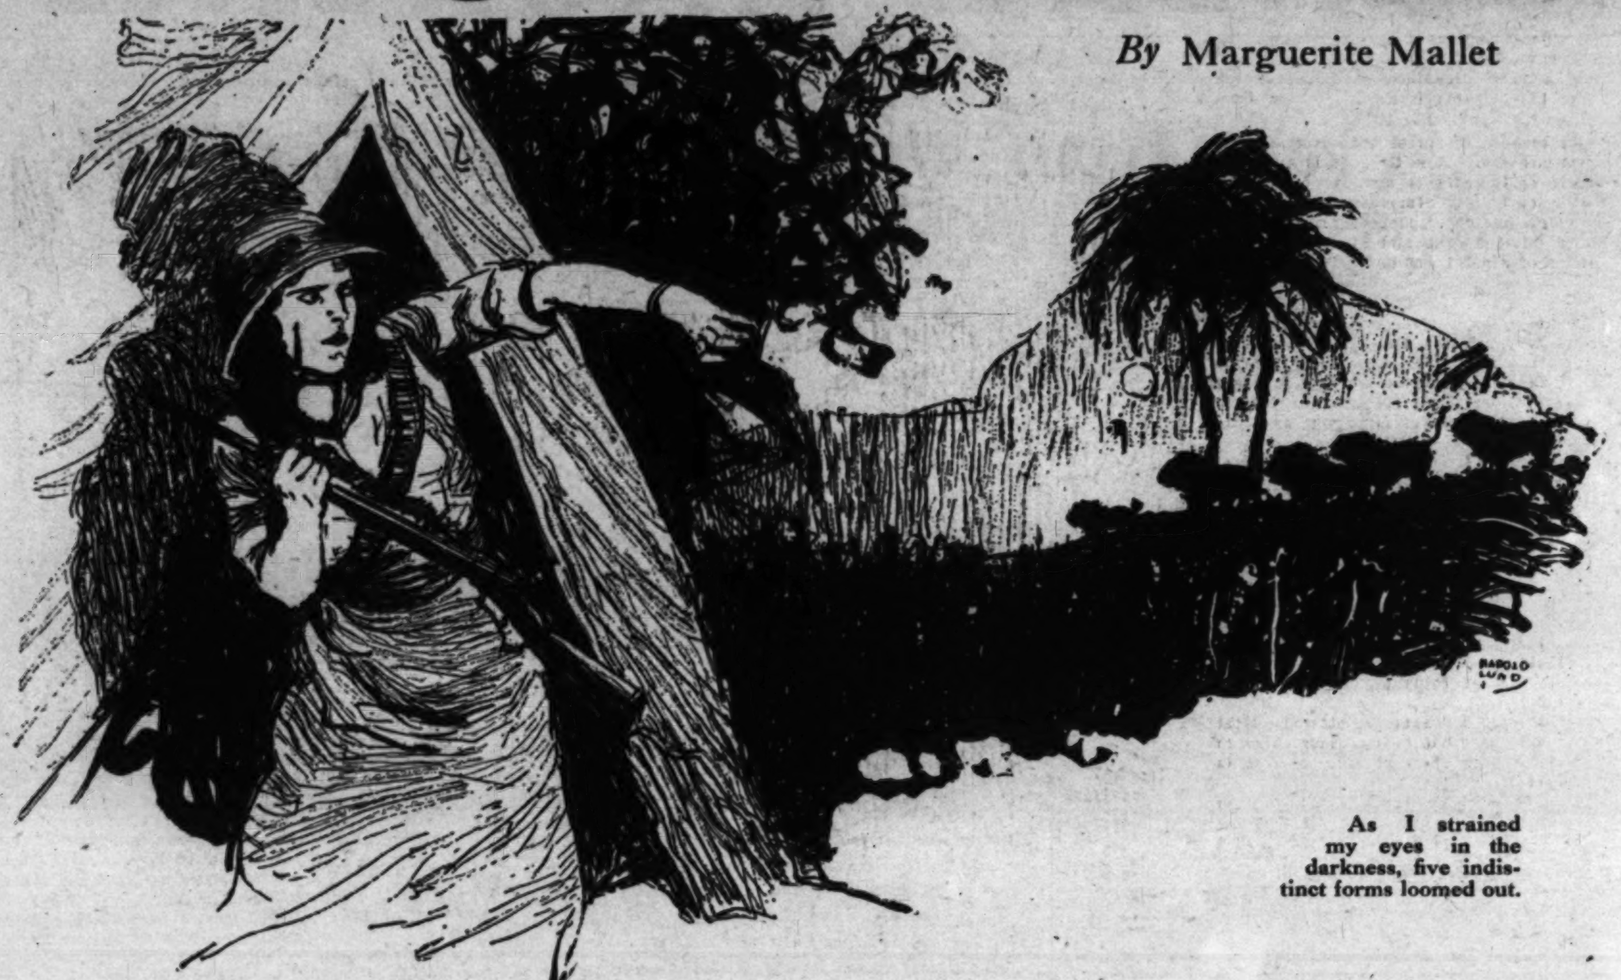
Challenged by Five Lions

By Marguerite Mallet



As I strained my eyes in the darkness, five indistinct forms loomed out.

An English Sportswoman's Vivid Encounter With Perils of an African Night

[NOTE: In preceding articles in this series, the author has told of her initiation into the wild life of British East Africa—with its beasts of prey and savage natives.—Editor.]

A WEEK after my adventure with Cyrus, A. was planning to set out for Garindi. That year we were having more than enough rain, and if the weather did not clear, I should be unable to go. It was very disappointing. He expected to be away a fortnight. I knew I should be rather sick of myself by that time, if I had to remain. However, so it turned out.

"The roads will be a perfect quagmire; you won't enjoy it a bit, Margaret."

So A. started alone in a downpour. As if by magic, the next day the sun shone gloriously. The next, there was a shower in the morning, and then the weather was fine again. After that, it was perfect.

I fretted and fumed, all to no purpose. The next night was a sleepless one. I retired early, after locking up the fowls, counting the sheep and bullocks, giving out the "boys'" meal, seeing the mules and horses rubbed down, walking around the boma to see that lamps were properly hung, chasing and finally cornering the deer, feeding the owl, the leopard, the lion, seeing that the dogs had their supper, giving the cheetahs theirs, and romping with them—all of which took up time; then I shut myself in, and I suppose slept about two hours. Then a gun went off. The traps were set, all around the house and boma, as a protection every night. Out of bed I sprang.

"Where was it?" I inquired.

"Over there."

Already "boys" were coming out of huts, armed with spears. We reached the trap, only to find a nasty hyena.

"All this trouble over a hyena," I thought, as I reset the trap and the boys dragged the carcass away.

Back again to bed. This time no hope of sleeping, so I took a book. After a while the book dropped from my fingers, and once again I slept. I dreamt I heard a gun go off. Then there came a knocking at my door, although it was some time before I realised it.

"What is it?" I asked crossly.

"Chui, Mem-sahib," the voice reiterated.

"Will you go away?"

"Chui (leopard,) Mem-sahib."

"Where?"

"Here; we have brought it."

"Put it inside the door and go," I said; so my door opened, or rather the door of the house. There were heavy footsteps, then my door was pushed open and a big leopard rolled inside.

Another Leopard

SCARCELY had they gone when another gun went off, and a quarter of an hour later a second leopard lay beside the first.

I had lost interest in chui and everything else; I only wanted to sleep, and worn out, I dropped off again.

In the morning those two beasts gave me a fright, as my eyes rested on them for a moment on waking. Then the events of the night slowly recurred to me. Well, they were two beauties anyway. Something to show A. on his return!

Four days had passed since he went, another possible ten, perhaps fourteen, before he would be back—one could never be sure. So much might happen: a horse or mule go lame, accidents to the wagon, difficulty in crossing rivers, and much else had to be taken into consideration.

The next morning was glorious, but I could settle to do nothing. Why should not I follow A., and, if nothing else, go as far as Bardimat, and await him there? True, it would be rather unusual, a woman travelling alone; still, with plenty of boys and plenty of dogs, all should be well. I called Rabsah and one or two of the older ones. What did they think? Would it be possible?

For a moment they stared at me open-mouthed; then they laughed. If Mem-sahib wanted to go, why, she must go. They would take care of her.

So it was settled. The weather was all one could wish it to be. My horse was splendidly fit, the boys full of spirits, and the oxen not too heavily burdened—in fact, they, with their load of hides to be sold, formed the excuse for my journey.

We camped at last, not far from a stream, in as open a space as we could find. What a temptation it was always to see shady trees, and to know that you must not pitch your tent under these, but on the dry sandy soil! To do so would be to invite the attention of leopards and lions; there must be nothing in the shape of cover for them near you.

I had about seven dogs with me, seven being the number that has always brought me luck, and four undisturbed nights we had, quite unusual in these parts. Then, when nearing Bardimat, we suddenly came on a stream.

"Is there no other way to Bardimat?" I asked.

Yes, there was another way across the mountains, perhaps twelve miles. When once you got to the top it was quite easy. That was the cutting, facing me. I decided to take it.

Rabsah declared his ability to get wagon, buckboard, gombes (oxen,) and my horse and mule safely across, but the wagon would have to be unloaded first. That meant time, and I am not patient.

"Who will come with me?" I asked. "I want someone to carry Obadiah." My pet lemur.)

Two or three volunteered.

"No; one will do. Rabsah will want as many as possible to help."

Losing the Way

UP THE cutting, followed by the "boy," I went. I could have my afternoon siesta as usual, and then get in by four o'clock: it was still early. At twelve o'clock we sat down to rest and have some refreshment.

It had taken some time longer than I had anticipated getting to the top. We could rest for one hour; then, doing three and a half miles an hour, we should still be at Bardimat by four o'clock. But in this country one can be sure of nothing until it really happens.

Four o'clock found us wearily looking for someone to show us the way. The "boy," who had protested that he knew it perfectly, having been born near here, now acknowledged that he knew nothing of it. Just what I might have expected! On we trudged; never a soul did we meet until a quarter to six.

Then we met two women and a man with two children. Could they tell me the way to Bardimat? To see the surprise on their faces almost made me laugh. Evidently they had never seen a white woman before. A lengthy conversation took place between them and my boy.

Who was I? Where did I live? Was I married? Was my husband out here? Where was he? Was I traveling alone? Why? What did I want to go to Bardimat for? What was I doing in Masailand? How long was I going to stay? How many children had I? And so on.

It was some time before I could get him away.

"Now," I said, "which way do we go? and how many miles off are we?"

"Three miles," he replied. It seemed to me that we had come thirty already.

How tired I was! I began to wish I had remained with the wagon. My pace got slower and slower; then a sensation of giddiness came over me and I became unconscious.

'Mem-sahib! Mem-sahib!" a voice sounded in my ear, "don't go to sleep; look at the lion's spoor. Mem-sahib, it is getting dark. Wake up."

With an effort I rose and continued my journey. Lions' spoor there certainly was, and leopards' also. Then he began to tell me that this footpath was the one always used by lions to go to the water-hole, about three miles off.

"Look, Mem-sahib," he said again; and I did look, and I was quite prepared to believe his version. The footmarks crossed and recrossed in bewildering succession. Big and little, they seemed to dance before my eyes, and once again I fell senseless, only to be recalled to myself once more with the oft-repeated "Mem-sahib! Mem-sahib! don't go to sleep."

It was no use; I staggered on a few yards and had to give in. I could do no more. I sat down and leaned my head against a tree.

"We cannot be far from Bardimat now." I said. "You walk on quickly, and tell the Indians there that your Mem-sahib is here, and they must come and fetch her. Take Obadiah, and if I am not here when you come back, you are to let him go. Do you understand?"

"But, Mem-sahib, simba (lion,) chui (leopard,)" he remonstrated.

"Go at once; tell the Indians they must come and carry me."

With a quick stride he was off, and I watched his retreating figure with something like regret, resolving that, should I get out of this safely, I would never again the germs, and a new territory is opened to them.

"Nature again steps in and tries to save the situation. Another signal of pain is given due to the inflammation of the pericementum. The tooth becomes painful on touch and feels longer than the rest of the teeth.

"At this point it must be understood that the germs themselves do not produce disease, but the by-products of their metabolism, the toxins, poison the blood and thereby lower the resistance."

From a Nature Lover

LOS ANGELES, Cal.

Dear Doctor:

Sitting out here in this vast playground of God's, I am tempted to set down some of the thoughts I usually repress in due respect to civilization. The sun is shining and little wildflowers at my feet are doing their utmost toward lending beauty and solace to the heart of man. As I lie here on the floor of Mother Earth's dwelling, I wonder why all the strife, all the anxiety, grief, greed and struggle. The city with its tall buildings, noisy motors, rush and screaming bustle of modern life are so far off—far enough off to set me wondering again if we are so far ahead of the savage over whom we hold such superior knowledge.

We are Christians yet we doubt that most which we profess to believe. We have no faith in nature. Natural joy, faith and simplicity are so remote at times. We are so prone to whiz by the grandeur of the sea, the mountains, sky, trees, rocks, birds, rivers and lakes, in our late model motors, giving only a casual glance to the appeal of nature, only to resume our conversations on styles, the newest movie or scandal. We throw up our hands in horror at spending the night on the ground. When we go "camping" we load the poor flivver to the breaking point with beans in tins, with tents boots, guns, beds and what not.

Simple food without a lot of fuss made over it usually delights us not. Rather than a good sound apple and a few nuts, with a drink of cool water, we prefer to have a well-trained waiter in a so-called "first class" cafe, stand over us coaxing us to order this or that "choice" morsel.

To walk miles out in the sun, wind and rain is looked upon as foolishness instead of a natural way of getting nearer to our Maker.

How little we understand that when we learn to dress simply, to eat sparingly, to love outdoor life, to love joy, gladness, peace and simplicity, we will not crave the excitement of movies, radios, unholy food, foolish, trashy literature, heaps of money, and all the hodge-podge of which our modern civilization is composed.

But in a more tolerant mood I can see the dawning of the day when, with the aid of men such as yourself, we will attain the utmost of spirituality, mentality and physical fitness.

A WOMAN.

The above communication is from a nature-lover follower of Care of the Body.

When I feel that my humble work has contributed to the fine and good such as is evidenced in this letter, it gives me a feeling with the poet—"Something accomplished, something done has earned a night's repose."

Significance of Constipation

NINETY-NINE in every hundred people, writes George S. Weger, M.D., consider constipation as a primary cause of ill health. They do not venture further than this to determine the cause of constipation. The only logical deduction that can be made when all factors are taken into consideration is that whatever the underlying condition is that causes illness or discomfort, that is also the cause of constipation.

Failure of the bowel function is due principally to an overcrowded nutrition—a stuffing diet with impairment of quantity and quality of gastric and intestinal secretions. Unless there are decided symptoms of pain or distress following a meal, the patient may not realize that digestion is imperfect or not established at all. But when the bowels fail to move, he does know it and immediately starts to doctor the condition, neglecting entirely the cause of the difficulty.

Constipation is an effect—a condition secondary to something else, and must be so considered before cause can be removed. Some people may have regular daily bowel action and still be more particularly poisoned than others who are troubled with constipation. An excessive intake of food may irritate the mucous membrane of the intestinal canal so profoundly as to excite powerful peristaltic action. The bowel unloads itself in order to get rid of the irritant. In fact all cathartics and even some of the so-called laxative foods act on the bowels because of their irritating properties.

It is safe to ascribe constipation to tired bowels. What makes them tired? Overwork. What causes overwork? Too much

Take Agmel and Keep Fit

HEALTH is wealth. Many a business man would be alive today if he had only kept in mind that homely, old adage.

ARE YOU, yourself, in good shape? Or are you so immersed in business that you neglect your chief asset—that complex and delicate organism, the body? There is a way for you to get quick action if you are physically and mentally played out. Take Agmel, Mexico's supreme gift to mankind.

Agmel is a raw vegetable food

Agmel is concentrated Aguamiel, sap of the mexican Maguey plant. The marvellous curative value of fresh Maguey sap has been known and acted upon for centuries. But this sap sours quickly. Seeking a syrup or solid that could be shipped anywhere, prominent American and European chemists strived for years to concentrate Maguey sap without destroying its remarkable properties. But they failed utterly until, at last, Agmel was produced. Agmel is a triumph of scientific skill and determination.

Vitamins, Yeasts, Mineral Salts

Agmel contains the recently discovered vitamins that scientists all agree are indispensable to health. Agmel contains enzymes or yeasts known to have great corrective value when taken into the human body. Agmel contains an abundance of the various mineral salts needed by the body to maintain its chemical balance and therefore to insure health. And that is not all: Agmel contains agavose, ectacose, and levulose, easily assimilable carbohydrates, compounds from which the body derives heat and energy—driving power.

Agmel acts promptly

Thousands who have been benefited by Agmel consider it a miraculous substance. We make no such claim. But we do believe, sincerely, that Agmel is a wonderful remedial-dietetic fact that will eventually cause medical practitioners to reconsider their present methods of treating internal disorders.

While thousands of men and women take the Agmel treatment in order to be rid of specific disorders such as high blood pressure, Bright's disease, diabetes, stomach trouble, bladder trouble, prostatitis and various forms of neurasthenia, others take Agmel as a tonic. By healing and stimulating to action all vital organs, Agmel brings about the speedy and regular elimination of toxic poisons. Thereafter, by aiding digestion and preventing putrefaction in the alimentary canal, Agmel keeps the body sweet and clean while nature repairs diseased tissue.

Take Agmel and keep fit. Agmel is pleasant to take and results are usually prompt and unmistakable.

Booklets have been written concerning Agmel. They can be had FREE on request. If you cannot come in person use the coupon below.

WHAT USERS SAY

"Agmel cured me of indigestion. I swear by it."

"I have been taking Agmel for nervousness and it has helped me more than anything I have ever taken and as a general tonic it is unexcelled."

"For nine years I have suffered with indigestion. It seemed as if nothing I could take would enable me to be permanently rid of this trouble. But within ten days from the time that I commenced taking Agmel my digestion improved. Apparently I am now rid of indigestion for life."

"My health is steadily improving; headaches which used to bother me a great deal have disappeared; have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Since taking Agmel I have felt much better."

"To say it (Agmel) is a wonder is an injustice—it is a wonder of wonders."

"We have used three cans of Agmel and find it is all your Company claims for it."

"The can of Agmel that I bought from you sometime ago has brought us very good results."

BASEBALL BETTY

By W. O. McGEEHAN
Illustrated by Jefferson Machamer

BASEBALL BETTY joined the Mastodons quite informally early in the season of the hectic pennant drive which had its climax in the Big Battle. Baseball draws more bugs than any bug bait ever invented. Needless to say, Betty was a lady bug and therefore more peculiar than the male indigenous to the Polo Grounds.

She invaded the press box. Not that the press box at the Polo Grounds is at all exclusive or tinged with any particular literary or journalistic atmosphere. Sometimes the actors and other bandarlog of Broadway crowd out the drab and diffident baseball writers of which I was one. It was for this reason that Mr. Charles Dryden called it the pest box.

The Mastodons were going through their preliminary practice, and the Master Mind was batting them out. The Master Mind is one of the polite nicknames for the manager of the Mastodons. If you call him that to his face and smile, you fight your own way out of the park.

"I would like to speak to the official scorer," said Baseball Betty.

They pointed out Mr. William J. Tanner of the "Sun," who was glowering at the green infield.

Baseball Betty tripped up to Mr. Tanner, who rose and uncovered, a truculently defensive expression glinting through his horn-rimmed spectacles. "Why did you give Heinie Slammerman an error on that one in the eighth yesterday? It was a hard one to handle. I don't think anyone could have held it."

Mr. William J. Tanner spluttered. Most of his colleagues had to hold their hands to their mouths or show unusual interest in the baseball practice

"Madam," said Mr. Tanner. "I have been scoring for twenty-five years. It was my opinion that the play was an error, and I scored it as such. My scoring never has been questioned—"

"Of course there may be room for argument, but I thought it was a hit," she said sweetly and passed out of the pest box.

"My whole afternoon is spoiled," complained Mr. Tanner. "I feel like resigning this scoring job. It is a most ungrateful task, anyhow." There was no comment. Mr. Tanner, by virtue of long service, was not to be twitted in the pest box.

In the seventh inning that afternoon Wheat rapped one right at Heinie Slammerman. Heinie should have held it, but the ball got away. It seemed a palpable error, but one of the younger writers shouted to the official scorer, "Hit or error, Mr. Tanner?"

"A hit," said Mr. Tanner, holding up one finger. The sign of an error is the formation of a zero with the thumb and forefinger. There was no comment, but it was seen that the advent of the lady bug had distorted the judgment of the most meticulously correct scorer in either league.

After that the presence of Baseball Betty became noticed not only by the baseball writers attached to the Mastodons, but by the players themselves.

"Do you suppose," asked Merton of the "Globe" one day, "that she is smitten by the charms of Heinie Slammerman? That Brigham Young of the National Pastime already has married at least one wife in all of the boroughs of greater New York and has been in more divorce courts than Casey Stengel has been on ball clubs."

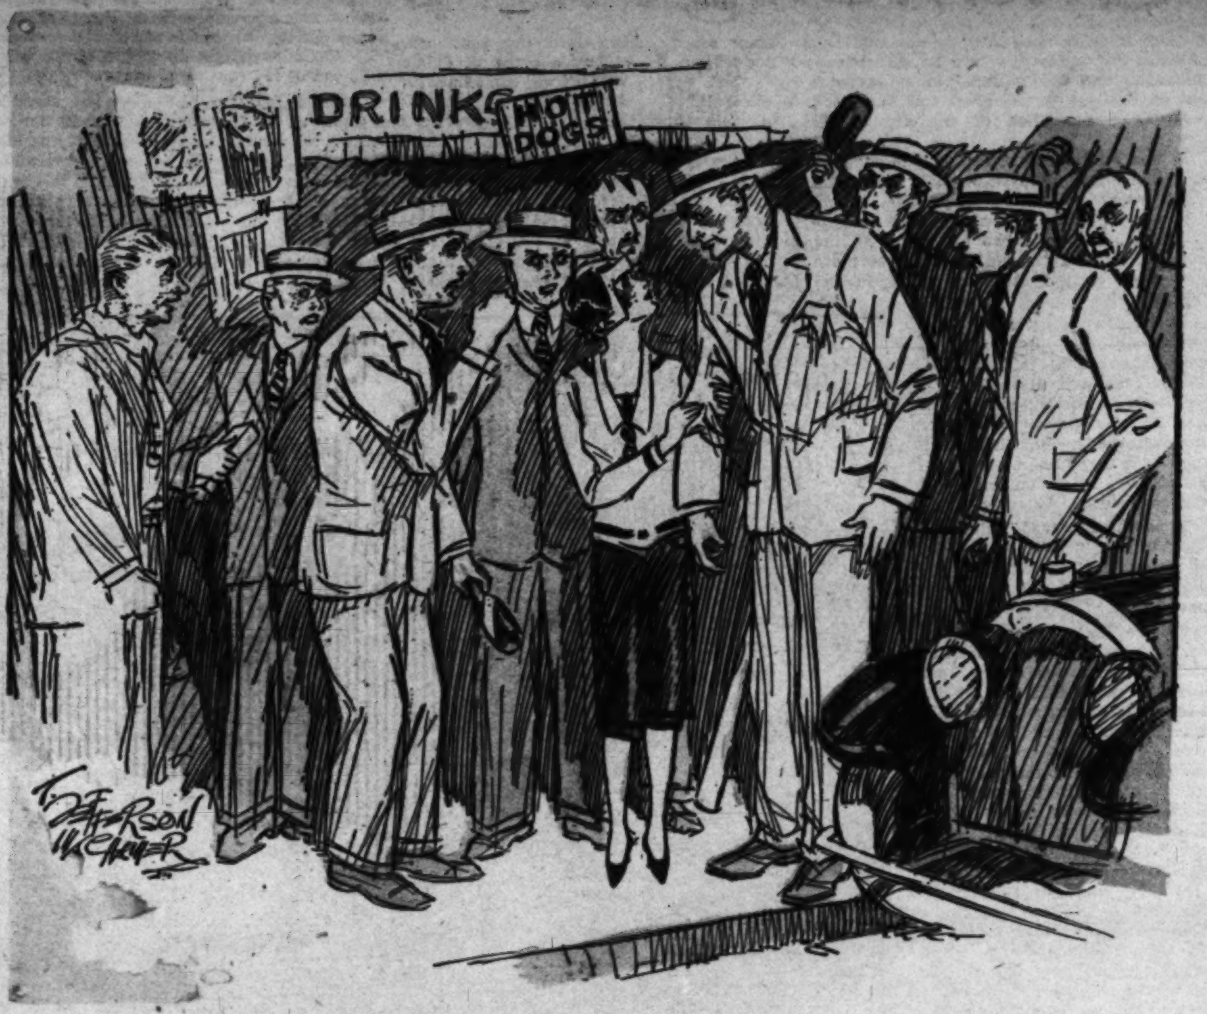
This speculation proved unfounded. On her second invasion of the pest box Baseball Betty demanded to be shown the "Tribune" man. This writer used to handle baseball players without gloves. Some of them used to threaten his life.

"You ought to quit this picking on poor Bennie Kauffman," she said. "It's getting a bit cruel. He's in a slump, and nobody feels worse about it than he does. You're making him worse. That stuff is driving him crazy, and you do not have to do it."

"Well, if you are that much interested in Kauffman—" began the "Tribune" man.

"I'm interested in the Mastodons, that's all," she said. That declaration seemed to be correct. She was interested in no particular baseball player, and she certainly was not interested in any of the camp followers in the pest box.

On the third visit she asked to talk to Mr. Hamilton Cain, the dean of all the baseball writers. In the days of his youth and agility Mr. Cain had been an infielder on the Mastodons and one of the most graceful athletes ever in the game. He claimed the invention of the hook slide and the squeeze play, and few disputed him.



Once out on the sidewalk they started to close in on him. "Kill the thief," they screamed.

A gallant and affable gentleman was Mr. Hamilton Cain, loved by ball players and newspaper men alike. His chief conviction was that all umpires were bad. When the Mastodons were not going so well Mr. Cain would attribute it to the bad umpiring. His pet hate was Jimmy Burkett, the umpire. The players called him Catfish, but not to his face. The price for that would be fifty or a hundred in fines.

"I just wanted thank you, Mr. Cain," said Baseball Betty, "for that splendid denunciation of Umpire Burkett. He seems to have it in for the Mastodons. That was a wonderful epigram of yours. 'The Mastodons can beat any nine-man ball team in America. But they can't beat a ten-man team when one of them is the umpire.' Mr. Cain, that was real baseball literature."

Mr. Cain flushed under his Panama to the roots of his silvery hair. "Lady," he said, "you speak with authority. Player and writer, I never knew an umpire who wouldn't blackjack an infant and steal its candy. But Catfish Burkett is the worst of them all."

When Betty had departed Mr. Cain observed. "Now there is a lady who knows something about baseball. There is only one other who can boast as much, she being Mrs. Wilbert Robinson."

The Mastodons hit the road for the invasion of the west, an invasion that was somewhat disastrous. The Mastodons lost the lead before they left Pittsburg. They were battered about by the Reds in Cincinnati, they left St. Louis with a big hospital list, and the chances for cinching a pennant looking fairly slim.

"Mastodons!" the Master Mind addressed his players. "You're a flock of pink-eyed white rabbits." And that was his mildest comment.

The team rallied for a desperate stand at the Polo Grounds, but things were in bad shape. Beauty Bannon sprung a charley horse and the infield had to be juggled. Even the Master Mind did not seem to be adequate to this task. The Dodgers came over from the other side of East River and took three out of four.

Baseball Betty came into the pest box and addressed Hamilton Cain. "Why don't you tell the Master Mind to try Fitz at short and leave the rest of the infield the way it was? Heinie Slammerman is the best third baseman in the league, but he can't play short, and you know it."

"But Fitz is only a rookie just out of the seminary," objected Mr. Cain.

"But he's a natural shortstop and you know it," persisted Baseball Betty. "The Mastodons have got to do something desperate to break the bad luck."

"Maybe you're right," admitted Mr. Cain.

"I know I'm right," she said firmly. "You can talk to the Master Mind. Talk to him now."

Mr. Cain bearded the Master Mind in the dugout with his suggestion. "Ham," said the Master Mind. "I think you're silly, but it looks as though these rabbits have blown the pennant, anyhow, and I'll take a chance. Oh, if I only had a few of the old Orioles instead of these seminary girls that call themselves Mastodons and ball players."

The Master Mind sent Fitz to second, and the boy started two double plays and wound up with two hits, the last being a double that brought in two runs. He was just nicked trying to make it a triple, but the Master Mind loved him all the more for trying to stretch it. This was according to his own personal policies. He liked his players to take chances—when they made good on them.

The infield held up all right for the time being, but then the pitching staff seemed to collapse all at once like the One-Hoss Shay. Rube Watkins's bunions annoyed him and he got wild. Two right handers developed sore arms. Jess Timmins, the veteran, began to show his age all at once. The young ones were erratic and terrible. The Master Mind assumed all the responsibility and directed the pitching of every ball from the dugout. Not infrequently the Mastodons used five pitchers to a game. The only thing that saved them for fighting it out with the Phillies for the cellar was their hitting.

They still could hit. The Master Mind finally calmed down. "Boys," he said, "the infield is in purgatory and the pitching staff is in hades. But you've still got the pennant in your bats. We've got to bat our way through from here to the Mississippi."

With this dubious cheering resume and prediction the Mastodons started west on their final drive for the pennant. That trip was just one "crucial series" after another and getting more crucial with every game. The pitching was insane, but the bats held out and battered through, mostly in the ninth or tenth inning.

They broke even in Pittsburg. They made it two to one in Chicago after two near-riots. They beat the Reds and increased the number of indigestion patients in Cincinnati.

The Mastodons had become imbued with the same spirit that drove Stallings's Braves through to a pennant and a world's championship when they had nothing visible to the naked eye of the experts. The team just went along with the momentum of its attack. Baseball teams and troops get that way. When they do, barbed wire cannot stop the troops and air-tight pitching cannot stop the ball players.

That was the status of the Mastodons when the train spewed the expedition into the depot at the City of the Big Battle. The populace were there to meet it, and they signified their joy with raspberries, as the saying is.

Normally this city is a kindly and pleasant place. It is hospitable. The residents are fairly repressed excepting at a ball game.. I make allowance now for the state of mind of the Hard Losers at the time. The city had not seen a pennant since Pop Anson was a rookie. The Chamber of Commerce had impressed upon the citizens that the winning of a pennant by the Scarletinas that year meant prosperity, taller buildings, and a million population. The winning of the pennant by the Mastodons meant bank failures, one-story buildings, and the practical depopulation of the city.

That loyal citizens, so the civic organizations hinted through the papers, could help by supporting the team vocally, and it seemed to be intimated that no harm would be done by the razzing of the Mastodons. How chambers of commerce get that way, I do not know, but they do. If some of them are not suppressed by act of Congress, there will be another civil war some day.

The greeters of the place started by making personal remarks about the Mastodons. They called the Master Mind by an ancient nickname that made him turn purple. They passed some insulting comment about the noncombatant, correspondents. Mr. Hamilward the heart, administered two or three times per day for a period of five to ten minutes will be of considerable benefit in increasing the otherwise sluggish circulation.

Regular cold baths should be taken. Each night the feet should be immersed in warm water and then in cold water. The addition of salt sometimes assists in the hardening of the tissues.

Sun baths, to increase the skin circulation, will also be of considerable value. There should be periods of rest and relaxation.

Care of the Teeth

THIS is the second of a series of articles by Dr. Samuel B. Moss, naturopathic dentist of this city. These articles fill a peculiar need.

Much has been written about various phases of health and disease. Problems such as nervousness, blood poisoning, neuritis, rheumatism and others have been discussed from almost every angle excepting their relationship to the teeth.

Most physicians have specialized on every aspect of health except dentistry. It is, therefore, doubly fitting that we can procure a series of articles such as this from a man who is not only thoroughly skilled as a dental specialist, but who also understands the drugless viewpoint of the maintenance of good health.

"We cannot consistently separate the mouth and teeth from the body on which they are dependent and to which they contribute their share of health. Unfortunately the popular conception of the teeth is one tending to minimize their importance, not realizing that they are organs of digestion.

"It is true that we can live with a few or all of the teeth missing, but the body will not be at par unless the masticating apparatus is functioning properly. Food not thoroughly masticated cannot be readily digested and assimilated.

"Proper mastication and insalivation have not only a mechanical and chemical function, but also influence the flow of gastric and intestinal juices by reflex action.

"The mouth being the portal of entrance of all food to the digestive tract, let it be understood that a clean and sound mouth with well-cared-for teeth are positively essential to perfect health. Such teeth, used to masticate the food as intended by nature will go a long way toward inducing and conserving good health.

"Under insanitary conditions, we can readily understand how the mixing of the food with the toxins (poisonous by-products of germ life,) which are so abundant in decaying teeth and in diseased gums, can affect our health.

"Many people who are constantly ill and doctoring for all sorts of troubles are simply the victims of blood poisoning, due to neglected mouths and teeth. Nervous diseases are largely due to these causes.

"At this time, however, we shall not consider the pathogenic (disease producing) influence of decayed teeth, but confine ourselves only to the ravages of decay upon the teeth.

"To fully understand the subject it is necessary to know the different structures comprising the teeth. I shall give a short description of the tissues involved, so that we may understand the terms or names when they are mentioned.

"The enamel or visible portion of the tooth is the hardest substance in the body. Its function is to resist wear and tear in mastication and to protect the softer tissues underlying it.

"Dentin is the substance which forms the bulk of the tooth and roots and is very similar to bone, only much denser.

"The pulp (popularly known as the nerve) occupies the hollowed center of the tooth and consists of a nerve and blood supply, and emerges at the points of the roots known as apices. The function of the pulp is to develop the teeth and to supply them with nutrition and sensation.

"The cementum or outer covering of the roots is also of bony character and is enveloped by the pericementum, which intervenes between the tooth and its bony socket, called the alveolus.

"The pericementum serves as a cushion or shock absorber and also connects the tooth with the alveolus, holding and retaining it.

"Caries of the teeth is a germ disease, but do not draw the wrong conclusion that the germs which are present in our mouths at all times, to a greater degree in unhygienically kept mouths, can produce decay or any other disease for that matter, unless they are encouraged. Germs in order to thrive require food, and decaying food at that, for they are nothing more than scavengers, placed by nature in the mouth to dispose of decayed material. Healthy living tissue, the resistance of which is high, is never attacked by germs. However, the germs present multiply rapidly under unhygienic conditions and very often overcome our natural inherent resistance.

"Caries of the teeth can start only from the outside and so long as the enamel is intact it cannot develop. The greatest predisposing factors to caries are: First, a diet deficient in mineral salts; second, a diet of mushy food that does not require vigorous mastication; third, a diet consisting of easily fermenting foods, such as white-flour products and commercial demineralized cereals with sugar; and last, but not least, improper hygiene of the mouth and the consequent failure to remove every particle of food.

"Aside from the inherent faults in the enamel, due to faulty deposition of the lime and other salts during formation, fermentation is the greatest factor for the entrance of caries.

"Food left in the mouth ferments easily and produces an acid (lactic acid) which in time corrodes the enamel and caries sets in.

"The germs, finding an abundance of food in the organic degenerated tissue of the dentin, and in the foods packed in the tiny cavity, multiply rapidly.

"Here nature, in her wisdom, gives us the first signal of warning that all is not well. The acid produced, after penetrating a short distance, brings about an irritation of the filaments of the pulp nearest the surface and we feel pain; at first, occasionally only, due to extreme changes of temperature (ice water, ice cream,) and eventually, if the signal be not heeded, constant excruciating pain.

The usual popular procedure in this case is to use some toothache drops which may soothe the nerve for the time being. With the pain thus allayed, decay is tolerated to continue its insiduous work. Eventually by this constant irritation, the pulp is devitalized (popularly known as killed.)

"The next step in the train of events is a decomposing pulp and an immense amount of foul irritating gases, the by-products of decomposition of organic substance. As long as these gases can escape through the cavity, conditions remain dormant, but if, for any reason, any of these gases escape through the apices of the roots, they irritate the tissues beyond, by breaking down their resistance through inflammation. They then become easy prey to the invasion of

Poor Circulation at Fifty Is the Underlying Cause of Many Ills

The wonderful curative powers of Radium have been known for many years. However, the benefits of this precious substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth. Since the invention of our Radio-Active Solar Pad, any man or woman, poor or rich, can afford this treatment that offers so much relief from suffering and disease. The Radio-Active Pad is worn next to the body day and night. It throws a constant stream of radio-active energy into the system while you work, play or sleep, helping to build up weakened nerves and tissues to a strong, healthy condition. It creates a vigorous circulation of the blood, thus removing congestion, which is the cause of most diseases. To prove to you what this remarkable treatment can do for you, test one on our liberal trial plan. You are to be the judge, as you have ample time in which to test this appliance to your own satisfaction. No trouble or extra expense, as all you have to do is to wear the Pad and the first thing you know you are getting well. This offer is open to anyone that has pain of any kind, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, stomach, kidney or liver complaint, bladder trouble, rheumatism, asthma, or diseases of the lungs or heart, etc. Do not be discouraged, for no matter how bad your ailment, or of how long standing, we will be pleased to have you try it on the guarantee plan. ton Cain flared at some especially personal criticism.

Finally the demonstration became slightly physical. Mr. William J. Tanner's face was obliterated momentarily by a lemon-meringue pie which had been aimed at the Master Mind. But the Master Mind had ducked in truly masterful fashion and Mr. William J. Tanner was covered with lemon meringue and indignation. They dug him out on the way to the hotel and he sent a scathing denunciation of the city to his paper.

It was quite evident that the Mastodons and their camp followers were in for the most crucial of all their crucial series. There were three games to be played. If the Mastodons took two out of three, the pennant was theirs, and—what was more important to the athletes—a cut in the world series.

Ordinarily the correspondents were only mildly interested in this phase of it. Most of the New York baseball writers are from other cities and never quite get that hometown feeling for the metropolis. But that greeting at the depot had made out of all of them Mastodon rooters to the bitter end.

Even the reserved William J. Tanner said "We'll beat them. We must beat them," with sincere emphasis on the plural pronoun.

"We're in for a stormy series," mused Hamilton Cain. "It will be like the brotherhood days, when we had to fight our way out of Boston with our bats. The police here are no protection. They hand up fresh pop bottles and direct the fire."

Every seat in the park had been sold for the series. They jammed some of the noisiest of the loyal rooters down close to the pest box. During the practice they eyed the visiting correspondents with hostile glances. One of the lady fans remarked in very audible tones. "And they are just as bad as the Mastodon players. Probably they are in their pay. The Mastodons would do anything to buy a pennant. That old reprobate with the white hair ought to be ashamed of himself."

The open and uncomplimentary remark about Mr. Hamilton Cain caused the death of the baseball writers no little annoyance. But he had the polish of a John Drew and continued to dictate his "lead" to the telegrapher without even glancing around.

"Look up to the left," said William J. Tanner. "There's Baseball Betty."

Simultaneously the ten-odd correspondents turned. She was sitting just a few yards back of the pest box, a slim and jaunty-looking figure in that hostile background.

"And that's the face that launched a thousand hits," said the "Tribune" man poetically.

"It's as good as a breeze off the Harlem River with the sun shining on Coogan's Bluff," said the "Globe" man.

"It's a sign," declared Hamilton Cain, superstitious like all ball players, or ex-ball players, "we'll win sure."

The first skirmish started with the Mastodon pitching staff wobbling according to form. But the Mastodon batting order got busy in the first inning and piled up a lead of three runs. In the third they made it four more.

When the Scarletinas are winning in a crucial series the Hard Losers go wild. But when their team is losing there is an ominous and brooding silence.

The Master Mind had to use four of the pitchers, but the Mastodons held that lead. It wound up seven to four. The crowd filtered out in funeral silence. There was repressed homicide in that still, muggy air. A silent mob is a fearsome thing.

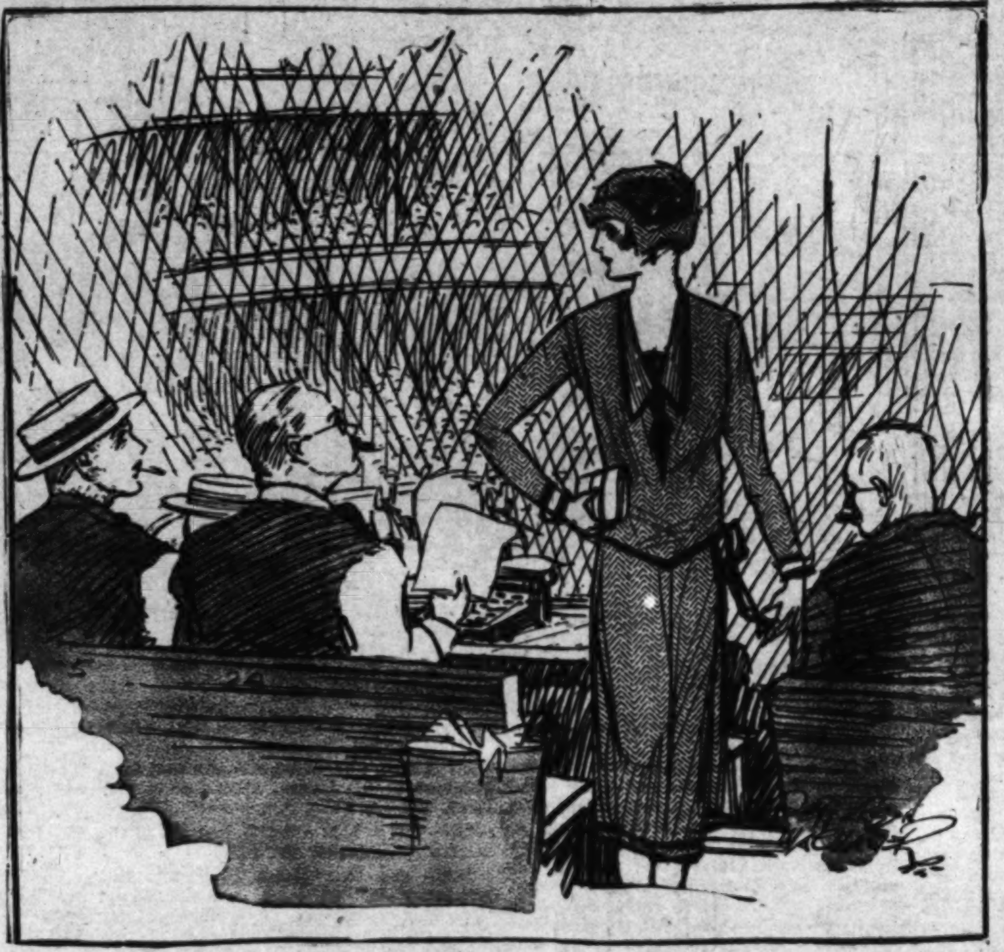
There was nothing for the Master Mind to do on Saturday but to put in "Rosey" O'Doul, the collegian, and take his chance. It turned into an utter rout for the Mastodons. The Scarletinas got to "Rosey" early. They pounded him all over the field and into the roped-off spaces where the overflow of Hard Losers squatted.

The noise in the stands was not unlike what might be made by a menagerie of thirty thousand assorted carnivorous animals being simultaneously fed raw meat. While the Hard Losers take their sorrows with the silence of the tomb, they go to the other extreme when receiving their joys. Only one familiar with the human race indigenous to those parts can appreciate this scene.

They roared down into the pest box. "Thought you could buy a pennant, didn't you? Yah. Well, Wall Street can't butt into baseball."

All this time the portable typewriters were clicking. On Saturdays they must have "early copy." The Hard Losers lingered. There was no screen behind the pest box. They leaned on the shoulders of the correspondents, reading aloud and commenting caustically.

The Master Mind was haggard that night. He went to his room early and had the Ace up with him for half an hour. It all depended on the weary soup bone of Arthur Nast. He would face Reb Harris and it would be a pitchers' duel.



"I would like to speak to the official scorer," said Baseball Betty.

The local papers had stirred those fans to the border of hysteria for that final game. They felt that their city would slide off into the river if they lost. Their homes and their hearths and their civic honor—all were at stake. Suspense and suffering had seamed even the faces of the women and children. Figuratively the city was in the state of a lady who did not know whether to scream, wail or faint or to do all three simultaneously.

The scream came first and it was a scream of triumph. Nast started badly. He walked the first one, who got to second on the conventional sacrifice. Schmitz drove one through short and the Scarletinas had a run. With Reb Harris in the box it looked as large as six. The Master Mind came out of the dugout during the tumult.

The Ace steadied down and the pitchers' duel materialized. Up to the eighth the Mastodons twice had a man as far as third, but that steaming day was made to order for Reb Harris. There were two out in the eighth when Ryder, the Mastodon catcher, came to bat. Of all of the Mastodons, he was the most hated, for once he had been a member of the Scarletinas. He had been sold to New York. This could be nothing else but treason.

"Yah, Jumper. Yah, Double Crosser," they were screaming. Ryder was the most placid ball player in any league. He chewed a wad of tobacco in a manner that suggested a calm-faced cow chewing her cud. He swung at the second one and drove it into the left-field bleachers for a home run. He trotted slowly and ponderously around the bases, and as he crossed the plate he lifted his cap derisively.

Tied in the eighth, it looked as though the game would last into the twilight. They did no shouting in the stands. They were hoarse and they were in an agony of suspense. They began to show the tension. The Mastodons came up in the ninth, with the head of the batting order.

Henessey rapped one down to second. It took a queer bound and went for a scratch hit as Mr. Hamilton Cain, plying his trade, dictated to the telegraph operator. Smith bunted toward third, and the Scarletina third baseman, in his eagerness to gather it up, fumbled. Smith was safe on first. Reb Harris became irritable and wild. Dugan got a base on balls. The bases were filled.

"Look," said the Tribune man—"look at Baseball Betty!"

She was perched there above the pest box, smiling eagerly, a wingless, well-tailored Victory.

"We win," said Hamilton Cain. "I see it in her face."

The Scarletinas' catcher went down to talk to Harris, who had begun to stir the dirt on the pitcher's mound irritably with his spike. In the deathlike silence the calling of Jimmy Burkett—Catfish, the hated umpire—behind the plate could be heard all over the field.

Harris was showing signs of wildness. He was heaving them wide, but up in the stands they began to scream "Robber!" Burkett did not even look around.

"Strike two."

It was as though the stands were packed with dead people as Harris held that fateful ball a minute.

As he threw it there were some stifled moans. Allen at the plate stood motionless as the ball whizzed by. It was wide by an inch.

"Ball four," said Burkett without an instant's hesitation. Allen trotted toward first. Henessey trotted toward the plate with the run forced in.

Then the wrath of a baffled community broke loose. Some of the fans leaped out of the boxes. The crowd in the outfield tried to surge forward. One pop bottle hurtled into the field close to Burkett. His mask was off and he held it as a defensive weapon. Scarletinas flocked around him. The Mastodons in their dugout were waiting with bats in their hands for the melee to become general.

Squads of police mobilized around the plate. The only calm and unruffled figure was that of Catfish Burkett. The bottles descended in a shower. "Robber—thief!" The fans shouted. "He's been bought by Wall Street! Kill him!"

The Scarletinas went back to their positions, growling. The police lined up against the wall. Burkett stood there with his back to the bottle throwers.

"Umpire or no umpire," said old Hamilton Cain, "he's a game guy. Give me a bat. Oh, somebody give me a bat."

One of the bottles struck Burkett a glancing blow on the head. He staggered, but pulled himself together and took out his watch. He did not look around. The police in the stands became active. The bottle shower subsided. Burkett rubbed his head and blood showed on his hands.

The field was cleared and the game went on. Harris had settled back into his pitching, and the next three Mastodons were out in order. The Scarletinas came to bat for the last time. Two pop flies for the first men up. The third struck out.

The science in the stands was oppressive. The clicking of the portable typewriters sounded like the rattle of musketry. Then the screams again. "Get that umpire! He robbed the team. He stole the pennant."

The contents of the stands sped into the field and surged like a tidal wave toward the dressing-rooms.

"There'll be murder sure," said Hamilton Cain. "Come on."

The police were guarding the room. Some of the Mastodons who had hurried through their showers had mobilized—and all of them were carrying bats.

"A game guy," said Henessey. "We'll stand by him."

Jimmy Burkett came out of the dressing-room. He was pale but composed despite the fact that a little blood was trickling down his cheek. "What are all the bats for?" he demanded. "Are you guys going to make some more squawks about my decisions? If you used those bats for what they're made for, we wouldn't have any troubles."

"We thought you might need some help," stammered Henessey.

"Not a bit," snapped Burkett.

He walked toward the players gate a little dizzy, but with his head high, while that mob growled savagely. Once out on the sidewalk they started to close in on him.

"Kill him, the thief?" they screamed. His path was blocked. In another second he would be struck down and trampled under foot. A brick hurtled by, but the aim was wild, and it struck one of Burkett's persecutors on the chest.

Burkett took one step forward. As he did, a slim, well-tailored figure glided to his side. A girl put her hand lightly on his arm. It was Baseball Betty, as unruffled as when she saw the Mastodons through the crisis.

Burkett looked at her in utter bewilderment. The turmoil had not excited him. The snarling of the wolf pack did not seem to have quickened his pulse a beat. But now he looked puzzled.

"Why, you're late," said Baseball Betty. "We'll have to take a taxi."

From the astonishment of Burkett it was plain that she never had even talked to the Catfish before.

"I—I," he stammered.

"Hurry, dear," she said sweetly. "We'll be late for dinner."

The crowd made way. The dazed umpire found himself in a cab. Hamilton Cain slammed the door on them.

"Well, I'll be hanged," said Mr. Cain. "If that wasn't magnificent inside baseball, I haven't been anywhere, and I haven't seen anything."

But from that moment Betty was no longer a member of the Mastodons. She became eventually Mrs. Catfish Burkett, the wife of an umpire, and, as such, the consort of a natural enemy of ball players. It was her social ruin; but if she ever realized this, none of the Mastodons or their camp followers ever heard about it.

As the nursery song says, "The lady bug flew away home."

CARE OF THE BODY

be given to these same factors of physical up-building.

Of them all, diet probably plays the principal part. All standard authorities on its ailment agree that in practically every case digestive disturbances of one kind or other are the forerunners of this ailment. Various theories have been advanced, but the most plausible of the group is that this ailment is due to the toxic accumulations of the effects of faulty diet on the organs which manufacture blood.

It is estimated by physiologists that the life of an ordinary red cell is approximately fourteen days. When we consider that about one-thirteenth of the body weight is blood, we can easily understand the huge quantity of blood that must be constantly manufactured by the blood-forming organs, the marrow of the bones and the lymph node tissues distributed throughout the body.

When the foul by-products of faulty digestion and inadequate elimination are permitted to circulate through the blood stream, it is inevitable that a certain quantity of them will ultimately retard or diminish the power of the blood-forming organs to reproduce blood.

The blood receives all of its physical nutrition from the digestive system. Hence it would not be illogical to state that the quality and texture of the blood is determined by the kind and quality of food that ultimately makes blood. Hence all efforts directed toward the treatment of this disease as a firm foundation is the correction and maintenance of normal digestive functions.

While we are on the subject of diet, I want to take issue with the common belief that anemic persons must be fed "plenty of good, nourishing food," notwithstanding that many eminent medical authorities state that the patient should be fed up. The experience of keen observers have been that the degree of recovery is in proportion to the quantity of food that the body is capable of assimilating and utilizing.

This is vastly different from the huge messes of food commonly served anemic patients. Many of us are laboring under the belief that the more food we eat, the stronger we become. Nothing can be more erroneous. The digestive system has but a limited capacity. All beyond this maximum becomes toxic, unassimilated and unavailable to the body.

Consequently, do not make the mistake of trying to force the maximum quantity of food into the digestive system of the anemic patient. His food should be of the simplest variety consisting in the main of fruits and vegetables of virtually every kind and type.

Do not for a moment think that the anemic patient should be given concentrated foods or mixtures such as rich creams, gravies, meats, chocolate and others. If he is anemic, remember his digestive system is equally anemic and concentrated foods such as I have mentioned require strong digestive systems to properly utilize them.

The objective to be striven for in the feeding of an anemic patient is the establishment of normal function rather than stimulation. It is much more to be desired that the eliminative organs function several times per day than it is to furnish food which will temporarily invigorate the patient, and later produce exhaustion through its reaction.

Internal purification of the blood is far more to be desired than loading the blood with more accumulated wastes.

Do not give drugs. There is no drug which can replace or even substitute for the natural ingredients of the body, even though chemical investigation reveals that the blood of anemic persons is deficient in iron. This deficiency cannot be replaced through a bottle or a pill or a hypodermic injection. The human body cannot assimilate or properly utilize dead, inorganic mineral substances. Even though millions of dollars are spent annually in the purchase of these so-called tonics, it has never yet been conclusively shown that they are of the slightest use in the treatment of anemic diseases.

The only form in which the much-needed iron is available or usable is in the form found in the natural fruits and the varied kinds of vegetables. For instance, such vegetables as spinach, lettuce, celery, radishes, watercress and other similar greens are very rich in the life-giving mineral substances. The difference is that one form can be taken by the blood, the other form, after acting as a temporary stimulant and invigorator, becomes toxic waste, making it necessary for the much weakened blood to diischarge it as a foreign body.

Seek not health via the route of the drug store, nor by way of the hypodermic injection of the mysterious tonic which usually consists of iron, arsenic and strychnine.

The customary medical treatment is the liberal use of iron and arsenic, two of the deadliest drugs used by modern medicine—strong stimulants, but still stronger poisons.

A far more sensible regime for the anemic patient to follow is one that incorporates the sound principles of a sensible diet, complete rest and quiet, outdoor sleeping and, if possible, a twenty-four hour per day outdoor life; complete freedom from worry or all other deterrent negative mental influences, and the liberal use of the great life-giving force of nature—sunlight.

An anemic person needs sunshine even as much as the person afflicted with tuberculosis. Sunlight has greater stimulatory and strength-giving powers than all the iron and arsenic ever compounded. It is Nature's supreme weapon and should be applied in exceedingly liberal doses. Starting with a few minutes per day, the anemic patient should be exposed to its life-giving rays for hours and hours, of course, after he has been thoroughly adapted, and sunburn not likely.

These measures, properly applied, should go a long way in robbing this dread disease of its terrors.

Enlarged Veins

SANTA MONICA, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

Could you please help me with a very important problem? My daughter, sixteen, has started to develop a network of very fine, highly colored veins on either side of her knees. Please tell me, through your column, if there is a cure for this. It means a lot to me to get right information as my daughter is very much interested in her work, which is dancing.

The girl is strong and healthy, and has never had any illness. She weighs 120, eats well and sleeps well. I do not mind how much I have to spend to cure this condition if I know I shall get results, but so many women tell me there is absolutely no cure, and I am very much troubled. The veins are very fine and bright red and purple, and have appeared in large clusters at either side of both knees. This condition was noticeable about a year ago, but very faint, but they are gradually getting larger and brighter in color.

I shall await your answer with much interest and go entirely by your advice. Thanking you in anticipation of an early reply, I am A READER.

Several weeks ago I wrote on the subject of enlarged veins. I would refer this writer to that article.

Usually enlarged veins are concurrent with pregnancy or uterine diseases occurring after marriage. Not that they are caused by pathological conditions present after marriage, but rather that they are coincidental with it.

It is somewhat unusual for a girl of this age to have this condition present. However, to furnish some practical solution is the major problem.

The causes may vary with different individuals. In her case it may be excessive dancing, perhaps associated with a marked carelessness of diet. I would recommend that there be a change in occupation, inducing a varied kind of physical activity.

Unfortunately, most dancing, especially the ballroom type, involves very little activity of the abdominal and pelvic muscles. It is in the organs contained in the abdomen and pelvis that we usually find the source of toxic conditions resulting in enlarged veins.

The diet should be changed so as to eliminate all concentrated proteins and refined starches. Sugar, in all its forms, and white flour, in its many disguises, should be rigidly eliminated from the diet.

All spinal nerve pressure should be corrected by a series of osteopathic or chiropractic manipulations. Flexibility of joints and muscles should be striven for, rather than muscular strength.

"You are lovely, Celeste, in your new Fall outfit—hat, coat, shoes, I hardly know which is best looking!"

Celeste stuck out her oxford-clad foot and eyed it approvingly as she answered brightly, "Yes, everything Aunt Belle got me is just right, I think—specially these Princess Pats.

"I told her—when it came time to select shoes—how tired my feet had been this summer, that they had practically ruined my vacation. At that she smiled and said, 'You come with me, young woman; I know what you need—and what you'll like!'

"Next thing I knew we were in the Walk-Over Shop and Aunt Belle was saying that she wanted me fitted to their marvelous Princess Pats—her very words. We selected these brown ones and also some black satins for festive occasions—could have had others equally as smart in all the new Fall combinations and colors—and my feet have been made over ever since!"

"How made over, Celeste?"

"Well, Princess Pats are very scientific in shape and construction. They quite gently force your feet into the proper alignment and position and keep them there through the most strenuous exercise—there's a resillient Main-Spring Arch and everything. I can't begin to tell you all about them, but I'll take you down to see them. Come along!"

Avoid Gas
After Eating

Bloating and distention of the abdomen, drowsiness after eating, pressure and pain around the heart, hands and feet cold and numb, nervousness, are the more common symptoms of this torment—gas.

All is due to the fermenting of food in the stomach.

Physicians state that the best absorbent they have found for this foul gas is Hylands No. 10 Gastritis. These little tablets also quickly relieve the pain and distress that come after eating.

If people would only give some attention to their diet and carry these wonderful tablets for emergency use, they would quickly find that many of these ailments and symptoms would permanently disappear. some of the vital lubricating secretion know as synovial fluid.

What the other two doctors advise is even worse. Merely because there is no free movement of the cartilage due to the drainage is no justification for its surgical removal. The knee cartilege directly affects the action of an entire series of muscles whose tendons join at the same point. The removal of the cartilage very frequently produces permanent stiffness in the knee. From that time on, there is a great possibility that walking will be "stiff-legged" exclusively.

The Drug Habit

Everyone knows someone that is always taking medicine. If they hear of something new they always want to try it. But you will find that the most intelligent physicians will tell you they use fewer drugs than they did ten years ago. Why? Because there are methods of treating disease that are far more effectual.

Operations

Luckily the loss of an appendix is now considered a calamity instead of being correct if one would keep up to date. Too many people found they felt worse after their appendix was out than they did before. Some operations are necessary, but before you lose an important part of your body be sure it has to go, as it can never be replaced.

Now

people are realizing that a sane, rational and scientific use of perfectly controlled natural forces produces far greater and more lasting results than using a drug to temporarily relieve a symptom of an illness.

X-Ray Diagnosis

Has repeatedly demonstrated that an operation would not be of benefit, and as the X-Ray will show the cause of many obscure diseases, why not have such an examination made by a trained diagnostician instead of going on for years treating symptoms.

Anemia

THE following talk was given by the editor over KHJ.:

It is a very common expression for people in describing some one to say that he is "sickly and anemic."

The popular understanding of the word anemia is usually associated with the picture of a pallid countenance, listlessness, tiredness, dullness and other symptoms of low vitality.

In the strictest sense, this general description is, to a large extent, true of the disease known as anemia. There are, however, many individuals who are pale, listless and of low vital strength who are not necessarily anemic.

From the technical standpoint, anemia merely implies a lessened quantity of red corpuscles or that a less than normal amount of red color substance is found in the blood. We call this substance "hemoglobin."

Before enlarging on the general theme of this subject, an understanding of the various types of anemia should be given. For instance, we have one type in which there is a reduction in the total quantity of blood; another type in which the total volume of blood is satisfactory but there is a diminution of definite kinds of corpuscles. There is a third type where the corpuscles or cells of blood are sufficient in number but deficient in quality. Then we have local anemia, the kind that is confined to one organ or area, and general anemia which is present throughout the entire body. Finally we have acute anemia, such as is present when a blood vessel is ruptured and the chronic disease of pernicious anemia which is, perhaps, the commonest of all the forms of this ailment.

The ramifications of this disease are not necessarily related to their causes. Since pernicious anemia is the type that is most frequently encountered, I shall confine myself largely to this disease.

A knowledge of the blood and its functions is necessary before we can fully grasp the problems involved in this disease. Hence a brief description of the blood constituents and their functions will be necessary.

The blood is made of two main constituents; The solid portion which we call cells, and the liquid portion which we call plasma. In anemia it is the cells which are usually affected. These cells are of two principal varieties.

The white cells present are about five thousand per cubic millimeter, and the red cells number between four and one-half to five million per cubic millimeter. It is these red cells which give the red color to the blood.

Were we to analyze these red cells we would find that their principal constituent is a substance which is called in medical terms hemoglobin. The redness of each cell is determined by the quantity of hemoglobin that is present in each cell. When the doctor tells you that your hemoglobin index is 80 per cent, what he really means is that you have 80 per cent normal coloring substance to your blood cells.

When he tells you that your blood count is three million instead of about five million, he really means that to the extent of two million corpuscles you are deficient in blood cells.

Anemia is a disease more frequently found in older people than in the young. It is always twice as common in men as in women. Why this should be so I do not know excepting, perhaps because men as a rule, are more indifferent to their health welfare and abuse the laws of good living much more frequently than do women.

Sometimes anemia comes after extreme nervous depression or after an acute nervous shock, but most of the time the onset is very insidious. It is more than likely cumulative in effect. The result is the by-product of many years of the most haphazard and indifferent obedience to the laws of good living.

It is a relatively painless disease and because of this it has few symptoms to warn us. It is usually upon the individual before he is aware of it. A slight paleness, a gradual increasing lassitude, an indisposition to any kind of exertion, an uncomfortable sensation of lack of fitness a difficulty to breathe deeply and rhythmically, frequent and excessive heart palpitation, the discoloration of the eyes, and above all, that general smooth, blanched and sickly appearance, not only of the face, but of the mucous membrane—these are the main symptoms.

These general signs of debility and decreasing vitality are the principal external symptoms which will manifest themselves to the patient.

It is not until a blood count is made that the diagnosis is confirmed. As we consider this disease we cannot get away from the very definite relations between those elements which lessen the vitality and the inception of this ailment.

When we know how to build the body resistance and to develop the physical strength, we shall not be so subject to this disease. Consequently, in either its prevention or treatment the primary causes must

Dr. Lovell to Give Free Lecture

The well-known editor of the "Care of Body" section Los Angeles Times will lecture at Ehret Hall, Friday, Sept. 11th, at 8 p. m. Subject: "Natural Method of Overcoming Disease." Everybody is welcome. This will be well worth hearing.

ALSO

Prof. Paul C. Bragg will give a free lecture at Ehret Hall, Tuesday, Sept. 8, at 8 p.m. Subject: "The Super Diet."

Many Families Improve Health

The health of numerous families in Los Angeles is being immensely benefited by the demonstration the Corrective Eating Cafeteria at the Health Center, 1000 W. 7th St., affords.

Men and women who eat their noon-day luncheons here tell their families of the delicious, health-building foods served at this cafeteria. Quite naturally they become interested in the many delightful ways of preparing vegetables and desserts and it is not very long before the entire household is won over to healthful meals.

The bakery goods, cereals, unsugared canned fruits, Battle Creek Sanitarium Health Foods and numerous other staples served by the cafeteria may be purchased at the Health Food Store of the Health Center, for home consumption. Both store and cafeteria are open from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Music Adds Pleasure to Benefits of Exercise

Prof. Paul C. Bragg, Physical Director of the Health Center, 1000 W. 7th St., exclaims, "Imagine dancing without music!"

Exercise, to be a hundred per cent beneficial, should be made as enjoyable as possible. That is why one of the best pianists procurable, Mr. Lee Davidson, was engaged to emphasize the swing and rhythm of Prof. Bragg's scientific system of body-building exercises.

To the lure of music, the lesson proceeds, and the exercises seem to become easier to perform.

By the time the exercise hour is over, one feels so good, so energetic, so happy that it is difficult to realize that the time has so quickly elapsed.

The real benefit is shown in the daily life of the student. The vital organs begin to function properly. The muscles develop and produce more strength. The body generates more resistance to illness. And a more magnetic personality and keener mentality are noticeable.

Classes on physical exercises and diet are conducted weekly as follows:

Men—every Monday evening, 7:30 to 8:30.

Women—every Thursday evening, 7:30 to 8:30.

In his famous book, "MUCUSLESS DIET HEALING SYSTEM," Prof. Arnold Ehret sheds new light on the important subjects of health and disease. Twenty-five valuable lessons are included in this remarkable volume. Postpaid, anywhere in the U. S. A., $1.20 per copy.

Innerclean Health Secrets

The secret of health is not in merely getting clean inside once in a while, but in continuously keeping the internal organs clean.

Unless you keep habitually clean inside you do not realize the full measure of happiness which comes through inestimably improved health.

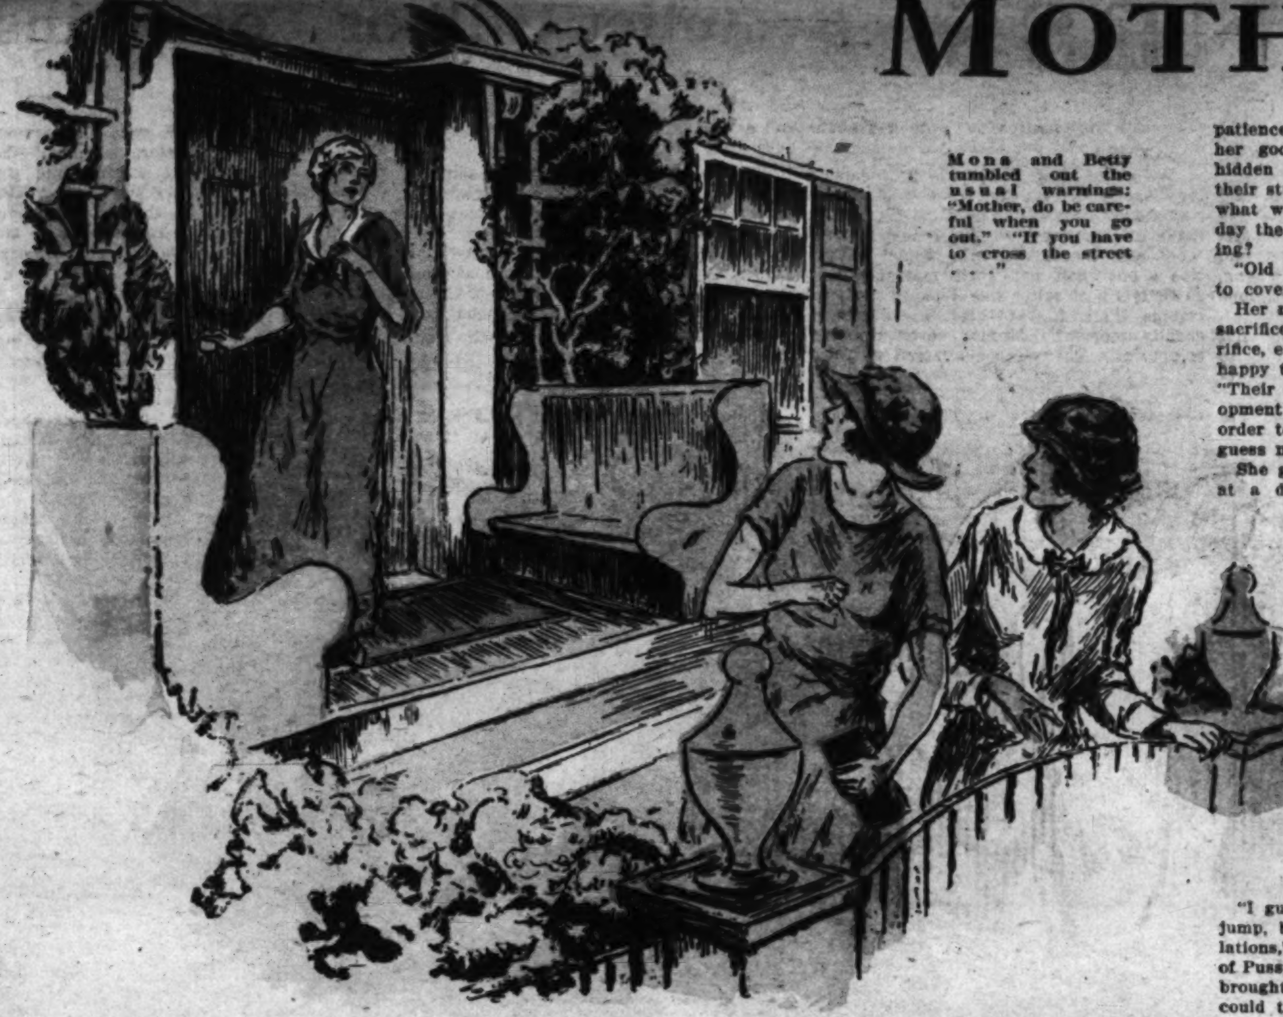
MOTHER'S



Mona and Betty tumbled out the usual warnings: "Mother, do be careful when you go out." "If you have to cross the street . . ."

THE girls were late this morning, and mother was in the hall when they flew off. She never offered good-by or greeting embraces herself; she simply was there, casually, if any one happened to feel like it. Mona and Betty always felt like it, being generous of embraces. They tumbled out the usual warnings:

"Mother, do be careful when you go out!"

"And don't try to read, muddie! Pussy Meadows adores to read to you."

"If you do have to cross the street——"

"Oh, go along with you!" Good-humored common sense scoffed in mother's voice. "You'll miss your train."

She opened the door and they flew out like birds from a cage. How pretty and how dear they were with their robin brightness, their quick squabbles and their little murmurs and grunts of pure love! Flying daily from the old cage to the vast sky of the city, into the glorious sun of success, yet faithfully flying home at night lest the cage should feel itself deserted, reading aloud somebody's "Life and Letters" with little consciousness of what the words said. They were leading life themselves and writing letters—what did those dead histories matter to Mona and Betty! But mother mattered. Not for their own sakes just then —no one needs a mother very much at twenty-one and twenty-two—but they wanted her to be happy, wanted it with passion. A reasonable mother will accept that as success.

Their fervor for work was her success, too. All their lives she had planted for just this—enthusiasm, ambition, anything that would glorify hard work and keep them from trying to do it on charm, like her poor Lawrence.

And it was mother who had suggested that they leave the old home for the city. The girls had been concerned about roots.

"You'll miss your church, mother!"

"My church," said mother strongly, "has bored me for thirty-five years. I go because, if I don't, Dr. Gracie comes and calls, and that bores me even worse."

They loved her for that; but—

"You'll miss your old friends," they warned.

"Some of them," she admitted. "But I can do without Flora Willey's gossip and Mrs. Van Dyke's symptoms, and it will be a relief not to have to shriek at Pussy Meadows. She says I am the only person who takes the trouble to speak distinctly to her, but she means who's willing to yell the skin off her lungs."

They loved her for that, too. Queer why the average mother will go on being so moral when it is her immoral impulses that bring her children closest. But—

"You've lived in this house for thirty-five years," they reminded her.

Mother looked about the living-room with a judging candor. She had come there as a tall wisp of a bride with drooping blond tendrils and a fine, high nose to give her an air of romance, and a mind as fresh and pungent and homely as the radishes she grew behid the barn. Dr. Tudor had always found roars of laughter in the contrast between how his wife looked and what she said. If he could have laughed over Lawrence, too, they might have saved their first-born; but he had fallen under the child's spell and could only worship, like every one else. No one but his mother ever criticized Lawrence, ever held him up in a clear light for his own inspection; and so he had built a wall on the side toward her. There was no possible way for her to have his love and yet keep her truth. When the smash came and in that very room Lawrence had had to face the cold daylight of judgment, he had known how to make his father break down and forgive him and his employer offer him another chance, but he had no way past his mother's tragic silence. He could not forgive them for having seen him stripped of his splendor, so he had walked out of his home never to return. His father presently died of it all, and his funeral was one more scene stamped on the old room.

"Well, if we'd had any money to spare, I guess we'd have tried a few other homes," mother said. "Now, with you girls getting raised every Christmas, it won't hurt us to pay a little rent."

So it had been joyously settled. And then mother's eyes had begun to blur and falsify distances and change an approaching horse into some vague, vast terror, and the idea of her alone in the city streets was inconceivable, so the move was put off until she should be cured. One of the old family friends was an oculist—getting a little vague about the eyes himself, but full of encouragements and pattings. A good rest—that was what she needed. "All she needed," they made it.

Mother stood in the doorway, watching the two fade into the general brightness and beauty of the spring morning, and it seemed to her they vanished sooner than they had even yesterday—certainly sooner than last week, when she had seen them as far off as the corner. She tried herself out in various tests, and they gave a startling certainty of lost ground. Her chill of fright took itself out in indignation against Dr. Bowen.

"Patting and blatting—I don't believe he knows much about eyes or anything else," she scolded. Her first thought was that she would go to town tomorrow with the girls and consult some big man, like Dr. Oscar Stein. The second thought, characteristically hers, was to dress in haste and take the next train. There was no sense in making the girls go to work wondering what the oculist would say.

Patients usually had to wait for appointments with Dr. Stein, but as she had come from a distance she was sympathetically crowded in. Dr. Stein saw a tall, wispy woman, her face delicately lined and hollowed between gray tendrils, but still lifted into romance by the fine, high nose; what he heard was the martial ring of common sense.

"I've been ordered to rest my eyes, and I've been patted and cheered and told not to worry, and I've had enough of all that. I want the truth. I sha'n't faint—I daresay I sha'n't even cry. Anyway, you needn't care if I do. Am I going blind?"

He gave her what she asked for. "Yes, I am afraid you are."

She did not cry, she did not even seem shocked.

"How soon?"

He thought in about two months. He knew of no operation, nothing that would help.

"Well, after all, I'm not so surprised," she said in a surprised tone. "I guess I knew it, more or less, down underneath."

He tried to say something kind about her courage, but she was wholly outside of herself, as impersonal as a mechanician with a broken machine.

"The thing is, how not to be a nuisance," she told him, and went out more strongly than she had come in.

There it was: The eager little girls tearing off to their work, believing in the righteous splendor of careers as young soldiers believe in the cause, going headlong in the good direction where her hand had always pointed. Must one of them be jerked back to potter about with a blind woman? Either would do it, readily, pitifully, with her impatience very seldom bursting up through her goodness and her desolation usually hidden in her own room. They would do their sturdy best, her Mona and Betty; but what would life be to her, knowing every day the full measure of what she was taking?

"Old nuisance," she said aloud, and had to cover it with a cough.

Her mother would have pointed out that sacrifice made character. "But they do sacrifice, every day, only they're so sweet and happy they don't call it that," she argued. "Their characters are getting all the development they need. Spoil a girl's life in order to make a fine character of her?—I guess not!" But how to help it!

She got her tea and a pretense of lunch at a dairy next door, vaguely surprised that she could see to help herself, for it seemed as though at least two months had gone by since she had received her sentence. The waitress was friendly, and the words nearly uttered themselves: "The doctor says I'm going blind." She wanted to tell the gateman at the ferry, and when the conductor, standing by his train, recognized her by name, she stopped short, the news at her lips, and had to substitute some foolish question. With the awful need to tell went a sharp reluctance to having it known.

"I guess I want the fun of seeing them jump, but don't want to be offered consolations," she told herself. Then the sight of Pussy Meadows bearing down on her seat brought a flicker of forlorn humor. She could tell Pussy in perfect safety!

Pussy Meadows went to town a good deal, and in the streets she was a delightful young woman going about her important affairs; then the clock on the ferry struck and she went home, poor Pussy Meadows, who was getting deafer all the time. The sweet animation of her face, the smiling depths of womanhood that made strangers wish they knew her, were lost in a strident gayety that oppressed and exhausted. Tired neighbors would resort to strategy or even miss a train in order not to share a seat with Pussy Meadows.

Today her mood seemed abnormally strained; she chattered as though to keep out some sound, and her averted eyes were fever-bright. Mother watched her with a smiling fixity that held something in suspense, and Pussy presently became aware of it.

"I'm talking your head off," she admitted with a laugh that sounded breathless. "What have you been doing?"

Mother launched it in her usual quiet voice: "Pussy, I'm going blind. I shall be quite blind in two months."

Pussy might have caught the words, for she heard better on the train, but her attention had not really left her own inner state.

"Oh, that's fine," she said.

"I've heard how it sounds, anyhow," mother reflected, turning away. They were passing the outskirts of Newark, and to her thought, "I sha'n't see that after two months," came a brisk answer: "Well, I can't say it's much loss!"

Pussy was talking again, but disjointedly, inattentively. Suddenly she flung out an arresting sentence: "It's my birthday today. I'm twenty-five."

Mother went straight for what lay back of the words. "Pretty dull for you," she said.

People did not speak of Pussy's deafness, for she was said to be abnormally sensitive. Perhaps they were too delicate about it, for she met this direct approach with a gasp of relief.

"Oh, Mrs. Tudor, no one knows!" burst from her. "It has been four years now. I've done my best—truly. And everybody has been kind; the girls ask me to play tennis and auction and all that. But I've known—I've always known—it is so terrible to feel yourself a nuisance!"

Mother's lips were closely folded, but her eyes said, "I know."

Tears rained down Pussy's face. "I want to tell you," she whispered. "No one else.

CARE OF THE BODY

constantly read flaring advertisements claiming a cure. The victim is usually taken in, for in his desperation he is ready to "try anything."

Epilepsy is a disease of the nervous system. Its symptoms are manifested by a periodic spasm which in turn induces the contraction of a series of muscles. When this contraction is systemic, that is, encases the entire body, it generally produces unconsciousness and the typical convulsions which characterize the epileptic. When but a few muscles are involved, such as for instance a convulsion of an arm, or a limb or facial muscles, it is called "petite mal" as contradistinct from "grande mal," which is the convulsion of the entire body.

In both types one thing is evident, namely, the irritation to the nervous system which in turn produces the spasm.

Epileptics have frequently noted that when digestive disorders are prominent their epileptic seizures are usually worse. When the by-products of an irritating diet penetrate the blood stream and through it irritate the highly sensitized nervous mechanism, the revolt of the nerves is accomplished by the epileptic seizures. Tersely toxemia or the charging of the blood stream and nervous system of toxic wastes have been frequently held responsible for the epilepsy.

Last year at the osteopathic convention a great deal of prominence was given to a purported cure for epilepsy. Papers were read in which a number of case histories were discussed. One of them particularly emphasized the immense value of the fasting treatment in overcoming epilepsy. The author cited statistics showing the huge successes attendant on properly governed fasting. He cited case after case of chronic, persistent, deep-rooted epilepsy in which the spells disappeared to return no more after the body had been thoroughly cleansed and purified by the fast.

In the case of the girl mentioned by this correspondent we probably have an example of toxic congestion which becomes extremely irritant during the critical period of the menses. At this time, or rather a few days before, the body is thoroughly charged with toxic wastes. The actual menstrual discharge in such cases serves as an outlet for internal purification. The congestion is then relieved and the symptoms usually lessened to some degree.

A program of periodic short fasts associated with a diet that contains relatively little starch and no animal protein ought to be of tremendous assistance in overcoming or at least alleviating the epileptic seizures.

Irrespective of the ultimate results such a procedure can do naught but good, for when the body is permitted to function at its highest capacity there is usually little or no environment capable of producing the epileptic spasm.

Signposts on the Road to Health

DR. CHARLES D. FINLEY of Pasadena, one of the leaders in the profession of natural therapeutics, makes the following contribution to this department:

"The common understanding of health is based entirely on the outward or visible signs of the body, which indicate that every part of the human mechanism is functioning normally.

"These outward signs—vim! vigor! vitality!—may be summed up briefly: Vim—if you are always hunting for new things to do, more problems to solve, and difficulties to conquer; if you run upstairs instead of walking; if you sleep sound, enjoy everything and eat hearty. Vigor—if the things you undertake are easy to finish; if everything seems possible and nothing impossible. Vitality—it is health to the 'nth degree, if, when the day's work is done you still have ample reserve for any task should the emergency arise.

"Health also has its negative signs which indicate its absence in more or less degree—as if every molehill appears a mountain; if it is impossible to get up in the morning; if nothing tastes good; if the day's work is drudgery and never finished.

"These are the ways a disease manifests itself; and the degree to which these conditions affect one indicates the state of ill health.

"The remedy for bodily ills is to show the way to right living and to make the body function normally.

"If you will make a business of getting well, it will be easy to regain health, provided disease has not gone so far as to undermine the foundations upon which we must build.

"Every side and every angle of disease must be attacked under an intensified plan of treatment.

"And the buoyance of youth may again be felt by men or women who have been sick for years."

Arthritis and Knee Drainage

LOS ANGELES, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

For several years I have been an interested reader of the Care of the Body. Feeling confident of your ability to give me a sincere answer I would like to ask you what, to me, is a vital question. Briefly, I am nearly twenty-nine years old and for the last sixteen years have been a victim of arthritis. However, I've managed to keep going and haven't been troubled much with aches or pains the last few years. My joints are all deformed and both knees and one hip are very stiff. Have had orthopedic manipulations in the last two years, and a year ago my "best" knee was drained. Ever since it has been stiff or locked by the cartilage slipping out of place. Two doctors advise removing the cartilage surgically, while a third doctor says that if the cartilege is removed the knee will never move again.

Won't you please tell me what you would do were you in my place. Is there anything that I can have done or do myself to restore the motion? A READER.

I have written repeatedly on the general subject of arthritis. However, a different aspect is given by this correspondent.

Arthritis is essentially due to the accumulation of certain waste substances which have been deposited in the place of lubricating secretions of the joints.

The draining of the knee where this infiltration of morbid substances has occurred is not only foolish but vicious. The mere fact of a definite accumulation having taken place in a definite area justifies the only procedure known to medical reasoning—that is, the treatment of the symptoms.

The cause lies elsewhere. Instead of attempting to remove the cause, namely, the internal purification of the blood by restricted diet first, the recovery from the symptoms is always the only objective of treatment.

When the knee is drained in arthritis, it is impossible to do it without also draining

O-M TABLETS

Weakness Means That the System Is Low in Alkaloids

If you suffer from weakness or disease, the acids of the system are in excess of the alkaloids. THE ALKALOIDS SHOULD ALWAYS PREDOMINATE OVER THE ACIDS.

O-M Tablets contain the alkaloids of herbs and wild fruit. They are readily assimilated by the system and produce quick and lasting results. Often you can see the benefits in 12 to 24 hours. The tablets offer in concentrated form the alkaloids best suited to the building up and strengthening of the system. They offer quick help where the system has been run down and there is suffering from neuritic troubles, rheumatism, stomach and kidney weakness. All of these troubles are due to an over-acid condition of the blood. If the alkaloids predominate over the acids you will not suffer with these troubles; if at all, the attack will be mild.

We are sending out samples. The samples are more than sufficient to prove the value of the tablets in quickly overcoming the troubles due to over-acidity. Getting up nights comes from acid, inflamed condition of the kidneys. This condition is often completely stopped with one or two of the tablets. If you catch cold easily or there is stomach or kidney weakness—low vitality—take the tablets regularly for at least a week. You will be able to see the real benefits of the tablets in that time.

You get the same laxative effect from one or two of these tablets as you get from a whole vegetable and fruit diet. This alone is a natural help to the system.

O-M Tablets are for sale by druggists everywhere in 65c and $1 sizes.

THE BARRETT HARMONIC SYSTEM FOR PERFECT EYESIGHT

(Without Glasses)

Perfect vision is possible only with the use of your eyes unaided by artificial means.

Glasses are not only a poor substitute for natural vision, but lead you to ignore the cause of your defective eyesight and allow the eye to progressively fail, interfering with the natural function of the eyes and causing them to weaken and deteriorate in the majority of cases. This is proven by the fact that stronger glasses have to be fitted from time to time.

The most common eye defects—Nearsightedness, Farsightedness, Astigmatism, Muscle Imbalance, Old-Age Eyes, Undeveloped Eyes—are not corrected by glasses, as proven by the fact that the individuals continue to have these conditions in a more marked degree after having worn glasses for years.

The fact that ninety-three people out of every one hundred in this country have defective vision is sufficient evidence to condemn the universal practice of fitting glasses. While glasses are necessary in some cases, yet at best they are only a palliative, making no claim to remove the cause of the condition and constituting a handicap to mental and physical efficiency.

DR. WESLEY M. BARRETT, the founder of THE BARRETT HARMONIC SYSTEM FOR PERFECT EYESIGHT, has taught thousands TO SEE WITHOUT GLASSES and he can teach you also. His system offers a POSITIVE, CONSTRUCTIVE and EFFECTIVE method of dealing with this great physical and mental handicap. It enables the average person who has adopted glasses to discard them. To those who have not worn glasses this system enables them to avoid the necessity of adopting them. Those adopting the Barrett System demonstrate a progressive improvement in both the shape and function of the eyes toward the normal. Many obtain complete recovery and are enabled to retain normal vision.

Do not accept false conclusions regarding your eyes, which are your most valuable possession, but investigate THE BARRETT HARMONIC SYSTEM FOR PERFECT EYESIGHT.

BUSINESS

By Juliet Wilbor Tompkins

ILLUSTRATED BY WILLIAM FISHER

But with a secret as big as this, you have to tell some one!"

Mother understood that, too.

"The first year I was treated a lot, and hurt and hurt, and I only got worse," Pussy rushed on, "so I wouldn't stand any more. But today I have been to a new man, and he says the old treatment was all wrong, and that there is hope, there is good hope —oh, he thinks I can be cured!"

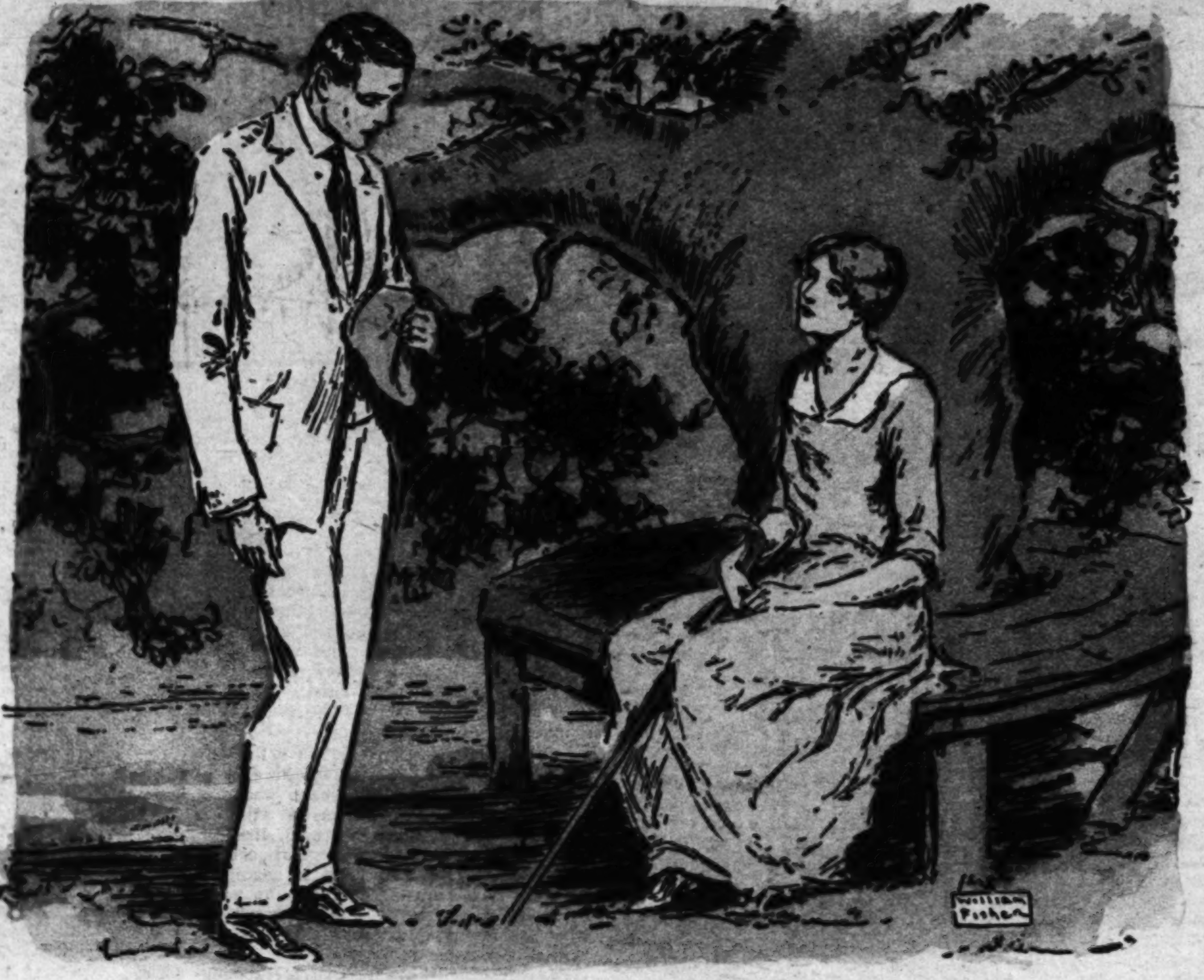
The eager young hands, burning hot through their gloves, were clinging to mother's. She made no bodily response and her words were, as always, calmly sensible: "Well, that's real nice for you, Pussy. I'm glad to know it." But no one ever found her unsatisfactory.

"It is only a hope," Pussy warned herself. "I won't breathe it to the family until we are sure—but I love your knowing it. You have been so kind. And you never told me about afflicted people who took to geology or bug or electricity, and they were so happy when they found a beetle with a new stripe that they didn't mind if they were deaf. Beetles! Who cares how many stripes a beetle's got!"

"Men can care about things like that," mother said dubiously. "I don't know as we can. Though I do like to raise flowers."

Pussy heard only the last word. "I've hated flowers," she said. "They smelled like all the things I couldn't have. But now—oh, do you suppose it's true?"

"Good things can happen," Mrs. Tudor admitted and went home refreshed and steadied. "It's the young that matter. Old folks can get along," she told herself.



His answer hesitated. "Yes; I've come to help you," he said at last.

The house was as she had left it. Unmade beds and unwashed dishes gave a shocked air of bad news, and she hurriedly produced order. The girls must be told gradually, and after they had eaten a good hot dinner. As she worked she experimented in going without eyes, with poor success.

"The kitchen table's been on that spot for thirty-five years; you'd think I could walk around it in my sleep," she scolded, holding a bruised hip. "I guess I'm too tired to learn my business tonight. But you wait! I'm going to be the smartest blind woman in the country."

The prospect of telling the girls grew worse as their hour came. Mother trembled so that she could scarcely go about her work. They were so happy, the little girls! And so kind. The experience would enrich a thin nature, but they didn't need enriching. They were darlings just as they were. In her mourning over them she quite forgot that the hurt was, after all, to her.

They made it harder by coming home in tearing spirits. Both had had promotions in responsibility, and on the train they had conceived a scheme of going into business together half a dozen years later.

"I'll know the business from A to Z by that time and Mona'll know the decorating," Betty explained, drying her face at her mother's door because she could not wait to talk. Mona was behind her, comb in hand.

"Tudor is a gorgeous name for a decorating firm," she added.

"You may have changed that name in six years," mother pointed out. She had busied herself at her bureau so as not to face them.

Their nods admitted it. Both had abundant suitors.

"We could keep it for the firm name," they said. Betty added that if she married a man with an ugly name she would make him change it to Tudor anyway, and Mona said that a man who would do that was a poor fish, not worth marrying, and as Betty's best suitor was abjectly ready to change Funk for anything, there was a squally moment. Mother never troubled to pour oil. Thirty seconds later they were trying over Funk-Tudor & Tudor-Funk with gurgles of laughter, Betty's cheek squeezed against Mona's. They had always done that—squeezed their joyous faces together with a murmured "Um-um!" They would do it to her when she told them.

She had not often in her life said "I can't," but the words were saying themselves now: "I can't tell them." It was like asking her to cut into their flesh. What if she simply waited until they saw for themselves? But they were planning, planning. They were sure her eyes would be well enough for town in the autumn.

"Commutation is vexation," Betty chanted, and was secretly kicked by Mona, who declared that it was half the fun. Betty instantly agreed. The good children! Why must she, who had lived to further their lives, be now the dead weight that dragged them back?

She had meant to tell them when they finished the dishes. She had her casual beginning all arranged: "Oh, children, I went to town today and saw Dr. Oscar Stein—" But they were called to the telephone, and then a neighbor came in, and then it was ten o'clock and bedtime.

"I'll tell them in the morning," she declared, and lay all night staring into the dark; but in the morning there was no time. After all, Sunday morning would be better; they would have all day to get used to the idea and make their plans. Reprieved for five days, mother went briskly about her new business of becoming the smartest blind woman in the country. She learned the rooms and the garden paths by heart; she invented pricked labels for kitchen condiments; she spent hours mastering Betty's old typewriter; she simplified her clothes and did up her hair in the dark. She was busy from morning till night.

"I'm kind of enjoying it," she admitted to herself. "I always did like being smarter than other people!" The girls found her in her usual even spirits that week and told her that she was getting better all the time. They noticed that she moved more securely. She let them rejoice in it without comment. Sunday morning would be time enough.

Friday night they came in with the shout of good news. Mother, gathering "Europe" and "four months," sat down as though her knees had melted.

"She'll take you with her? For four months?" she repeated mechanically, and then, hating to kill their joy in its first splendor, she added a temporizing, "She must think you girls are pretty promising!"

"She thinks we're wonders," Mona declared, and Betty added, "Tudors," and they laughed richly over the old joke.

"But, of course, mother, we will find some one nice to stay with you," they said, and fell upon her with comforting arms and cheeks, then went into a rhapsody of what four months among Old-World treasures would do for them professionally. "I'll bet she means to hand on the business to us when she retires," Betty declared.

They must be told; the moment had come. If they had looked into mother's face then they would have known her news without words. But they were hauling out their clothes for inspection. Betty thought Mona's serge looked shabby and Mona retorted that it was a good deal fresher than Betty's crepe, and there was a sharp spatter of "You always——" and "The trouble with you——" Then a gust of laughter cleared away wrath and the warm "dearest" and "ducky" were back in their speech.

"You know, muddie, we're sailing next Wednesday," they threw out.

Mother went to her room and closed the door. For a moment it almost seemed to her that she needed some outside help. One must stay home, one must go burdened with the other's loss as well as with the family sorrow.

"Old spoil-sport," she muttered, and even thought of death, but was too sensible to encourage the idea. "That wouldn't help much. But I might just wait till morning. They can't do much before morning," she decided, and again lay staring into the dark all night. What she saw there finally brought peace. She let the girls race happily off after breakfast, and as soon as her house was in order she telephoned for Pussy Meadows.

Pussy came with a lonely eagerness.

"It is too soon to tell yet, but he believes he can cure me," she began, her face lovely with its new light. "The family doesn't know a word about it—they think I'm gadding to town all the time. Oh, I am so happy!" Mother let her talk about it until Pussy herself remembered. "You wanted to see me," she broke off.

"Yes, I did." Mother meditated her beginning. "How would you like a job?"

Pussy sighed her desire. "Oh, if there were only something I could do!"

"There is. My girls are going to Europe for four months with their boss. If you want to move over here for that time, I'll call you a companion and manage a little salary. They don't just like leaving me alone."

Pussy was delighted and would not hear of a salary. She had a dozen reasons why it was just what she wanted most to do, but under them all lay the warm glow of being needed.

"And we can watch me get better, then spring it on the family," she exulted. "Oh, what good things are happening!"

"You know, I don't see very well," mother warned her. "You might call me half-blind. That will sort of tie you down."

"Well, I don't hear very well; you might call me half-deaf." Pussy returned with happy flippancy. "That will be a bore for you."

"I might go stone-blind," mother insisted. "But I'm making it my business to get ready for that. It won't be much harder on you."

"If I go stone-deaf, I'll drown myself, so that won't be any harder on you," Pussy said, and burst into a song about the owl and the pussy-cat.

Mona and Betty demurred a little at the idea of Pussy Meadows, but were too rushed not to accept any solution that satisfied mother. They were counting the days, yet they ran home with a new eagerness.

"We'll miss you horribly, mother!" they kept telling her. When the last evening came, something unknown laid a cold hand on their spirits; they began to mean it so poignantly that it could not be said. They cried at good-night.

Mother had no tears. She only looked at them, looked and looked into their faces as though she learned them by heart. When they were asleep, she stole in with a candle and stood looking down until they began to sigh and stir.

"I won't see them again, but that doesn't mean I won't feel them and have them," she scolded herself. "There's no sense in making such a fuss."

Her last sight of them was a blur of waving hands and laughing, tearful faces.

"Do be careful, mother!" they implored.

"Go along with you. You'll miss your train," she said, as always.

Pussy was not to come until the next day. Mother allowed herself twenty-four hours of stark desolation, of great sighs bursting up from a sick heart; then she

CARE OF THE BODY

Health is something that can not be passed from one individual to another. It lies inherent within every living being.

By PHILIP M. LOVELL, N.D.

High Collars

RECENTLY the newspapers have been playing up sundry groups who have organized against the wearing of collars. Andy Gump's famous slogan "I wear no man's collar" may possibly become a reality. If such is bound to be the case, it is high time that it occurred.

I understand in San Francisco and in cities of the East and Mid-West, various groups have organized with the object of eliminating the collar from men's standard wearing apparel. This is a splendid move in the right direction.

The collar is a monstrosity created by the fervid imagination of designers who are probably descendants of the Spanish inquisitors.

The why of the collar—the reason for it—its place in dress—its function in appearance are beyond me. It is neither ornamental nor useful. Like an accumulated habit, it has fastened itself around the neck of man until it cannot be unfastened.

May good luck and success follow the efforts of those who are daring enough to organize into an anticollar brigade. The editor of Care of the Body is with them 100 per cent. It will mean to thousands of individuals less suffering, decreasing pains and aches, fewer baldheads and an increased stamina and vitality that can hardly be reckoned.

Down with the collar. Men of "Gump"-tion, wear no man's collar!

Nephritis

IN THESE health talks a word as to the meaning of technical words used by the healing profession may be of use.

The word nephritis is from nephros (kidney) and itis (inflammation.) Therefore, nephritis is inflammation of the kidneys.

Thousands of people are having analyses of body secretions made. Urinalysis is one of the most popular. Largely on the strength of these laboratory reports the diagnosis of nephritis is usually given; that is, when albumin is found in the kidney excreta we usually suspect the presence of nephritis or kidney inflammation.

Thus far you know that nephritis is an inflammation of the kidneys. However, what takes place when the kidneys are inflamed? What is the pathology and abnormal function when this true condition of disease exists?

In our scientific classification of foods we enumerate various food principles, such as protein, carbohydrates, mineral salts, water and fats. All of these principles are necessary for the maintenance of body health and vigor. One of the types of protein we call albumin is somewhat similar to the albuminous substance or white of an egg. Albumin is necessary toward vital function. In the disease of nephritis the leading diagnostic symptom is the loss of the precious and necessary albumin.

It is necessary for one to understand the function of the kidneys in order to comprehend the relationship between them and the discharge of albumin.

The kidneys are the great filters of the blood. It is estimated that four times their own weight in blood passes through the kidney filters every minute, that portion of the blood being discharged through the eliminative organs which the blood seeks to give up. In other words, the kidneys separate the good ingredients of the blood from those ingredients which should be discharged as waste. Consequently you can see that the kidneys act as the great internal purifiers of the blood stream.

From this viewpoint we can divide the constituents of the blood into two classifications, namely, essential materials toward the maintenance of life and morbid toxic wastes seeking elimination.

Unfortunately albumin does not come in this second classification. It is not a toxic waste. It is a necessary ingredient of the blood, and it is only during the conditions of kidney inflammation that this precious albumin is discharged. Therefore in our consideration of this disease the first objective is to see that the blood becomes capable of retaining its precious albumin.

Nephritis, however, has still another important phase to its pathology. If it were merely the loss of an ingredient necessary to the blood the problem would be quite simplified. The loss might be compensated for in another direction. The disease, however, presents a feature that is considerably more disturbing.

One of the elements which makes nephritis a dangerous disease is the retention of waste products of the blood, which, under conditions of good health, are discharged almost as fast as they are formed. Even though the individual might be able to withstand the drainage of albumin from his blood, the retention of the toxic wastes becomes a great deal more difficult to overcome.

It is this retention which in many cases leads to those symptoms commonly understood as uraemic poisoning and the infiltration of watery fluids into the tissues commonly known as dropsy. Both uraemic poisoning and dropsy are nothing more than the morbid wastes of the blood stream which should have been discharged, but which, under the condition of kidney inflammation, have been retained in the blood circulation.

In any discussion such as this one should understand the factors responsible for the kidney inflammation.

It is a definite rule of pathology that all inflammation must be preceded by some form of irritation. When the irritation continues long enough it becomes chronic, deep-rooted and of sufficient intensity to destroy the tissue involved. Nephritis undoubtedly obeys these same general principles. Without doubt the irritation exists and since the function of the kidney is to act as a blood filter and discharger of its wastes, the sensible deduction would be that the irritant substances are in the blood stream.

Since the blood stream secures its ingredients for its nutrition and self-maintenance from the digestive system, in its ultimate analysis we can truthfully state that disorders of the digestive apparatus will generally precede inflammations of the kidney.

Sometimes this toxic state may be sufficient to permit of the development of colonies of germs. When this takes place we usually have a chronic or acute germ disease preceding the kidney inflammation. Sometimes this germ disease is tuberculosis, sometimes malaria, sometimes scarlatina—in fact it may take almost any form of bacterial invasion of the body. One of the most fertile of all causes for the creation of nephritis is alcoholism. Most assuredly one afflicted with this ailment ought not to indulge his alcoholic appetite.

One should understand some of the symptoms and signs evidencing this disease.

Although the symptoms will be somewhat altered with each case, yet there are many points in common that frequently present themselves. Usually after a siege of chronic or acute dyspepsia, the patient will evidence a marked loss of vitality and a general failing health. He becomes pale, his eyelids puffy and oftentimes he will note puffiness and swelling of the feet. Dropsy helps further to complicate the picture. Sometimes the tension of the pulse becomes markedly increased and often the blood vessels and heart undergo hardening. The digestion is usually very poor and violent symptoms such as vomiting and diarrheal discharges may be present.

Analysis of the urine will reveal it at first as being cloudy and loaded with urate crystals and albumin. The patient can make a very simple test of this condition for himself. All that he need do is to gently heat a test tube or beaker containing the fluid, and a heavy sediment resembling the coagulated white of an egg will appear at the bottom of the vessel. Frequently the albumin is quite high and may be as much as 6 per cent of the total content. These are, in general, the main factors of diagnosis which is not at all difficult in the medium or advanced stages of the disease.

Now we come to the most important phase of this discussion. Most patients are fairly well familiar with the signs and symptoms. "What is to be done?"—that is uppermost in the minds of those who have this ailment.

If dropsy is present the objective should be toward the elimination of as much of the fluid as is consistently possible. The pores of the skin should be kept open by all means. For this purpose various hydrotherapy or water treatment measures have been devised. Baths, packs and compresses, sprays and other water measures have been found very efficient. Nude sun baths, taken under proper conditions, help immensely in keeping the skin in good condition. It is the skin which must be largely depended upon to dispose of the accumulating fluids.

Next, and perhaps most important, are the dietetic measures. Under no condition should salt or other irritant condiments be used. A diet consisting essentially of the simplest kinds of fruits and vegetables will do more than anything else to correct the disorders of digestion. Intestinal elimination must be fostered to the utmost by means of natural diet. The use of liberal quantities of meats, fish, eggs and other concentrated proteins is most assuredly not desired for this disease. The objective should be the correction of digestion and through it the internal cleansing of the blood stream so that all kidney irritant substances are removed.

In advance stages complete rest and quiet are necessary. In the initial stages there is no reason why the average individual could not be at least partially engaged in his normal activities.

In this disease, as in most others, the use of drugs is neither necessary nor beneficial. The best they do is to treat the symptoms. When pallor and anemia are present it is still no justification for the use of the iron and arsenic compounds. Even the use of such drugs as acetate of potash, digitalis and diuretin, although their intention is to increase the flow of kidney wastes, ultimately fail of accomplishing their purpose. A healthy kidney must be free from the complication of drugs. A healthy body must be a clean body, clean of wastes and clean of drugs.

Notwithstanding the seriousness of this disease, there is no reason why one should despair of overcoming it by the same natural methods advocated by this department. The healing powers of nature have never been tapped to their ultimate resources. If we but use sane judgment, this disease may be overcome oftentimes even in very advanced stages.

WARREN BUYS AN ORIENTAL RUG

Another Entertaining Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

"A RUG," dismayed Helen, viewing the bulky bundle Warren had brought home. "Why, dear, we don't need a rug!"

"Can always use a good rug," opening his pocket knife. "This's a peach! Wait till you see it."

With dread misgivings of his impromptu purchases, she watched him slash the cord.

"But why—where—how did you happen to get a rug?"

"DePuy sale," snipping the last knot. "He had some good rugs—so I dropped in at Anderson's to see how they were going."

"The DePuy sale? Why, I thought that was next week?"

'Selling his books next week. Rugs and furniture went today."

As he unwrapped the heavy brown paper, Helen tried to recall the rugs in the DePuy home. A few fine old Bokharas—but the others new and highly colored.

And this was one of them! Even the wrong side showed vivid reds and blues.

"There, isn't that a corker?" triumphantly. "Had that in the library, didn't they? Eh? What's the matter? Don't like is?"

"It's too bright! It won't go with anything we have!"

"Why not?" belligerantly. "That'll tone down. Just been cleaned. Be all right when it gets a little dirt in it."

"Those colors never tone down. Oh, dear, what made you get a rug without me seeing it? How much?"

"Guess!" dangling the string for Pussy Purr•Mew's eager paws.

"It's not so very fine," examining the back. "And at auction—certainly not more than sixty."

"Sixty!" dersively. "That shows how much you know 'bout rugs! Here's the catalog." Drawing it from his pocket, he opened at a turned-down leaf.

186 SARABEND RUG
Northwestern Persia
Center field with all-over design of "Cashmere Palmettes" on magenta red. Three borders, rosette and vine patterns, on royal blue.

"That's not the price?" at his penciled figures in the margin. "You never paid a hundred and thirty for that?"

"Yes, and dirt cheap, too."

"Warren, that's an awful price!"

"Is, eh? All you know about it. Less than four dollars a foot. Eight feet four by four feet seven," figuring on the catalog. "Just three sixty-eight a square foot. Go into any rug store and see what you get for that."

"But we don't want it at any price. Where'll we put it?"

"Oh, we'll make room for it. Shift around those rugs in the library."

"Put this with that antique Kashmir and that lovely old Kabistan prayer rug? This strong coloring would kill them!"

"See here, you clutter the place with your dingy old junk and I don't say a word. But whenever I get anything I like, you set up a howl. Now we keep this rug—and no chuckin' it out of sight!"

"Put the dinner on now, m'am?" Anna was at the door.

"Right away. And take this out," Warren tossed her the paper and string.

"Fold up that paper, Anna, and keep it," cautioned Helen. "We may need it."

"Not for this rug! That's here to stay!" banging in to wash up.

A silent hostility gloomed their dinner. The intruding rug absorbed Helen's thoughts and appetite.

Where would they put it? A hundred and thirty for a rug they didn't need—and that clashed with everything in their apartment!

"These sweetbreads not bad. Why don't you have 'em often?" replenishing his plate. "How 'bout you?" peering around the centerpiece. "Don't like 'em?"

"I'm not very hungry. They had some fine old Bokharas—what'd they bring?"

"Still stewin' over that rug, eh? Sold the Bokharas 'fore I got there. Only got in for the last few lots. Shove over that relish!"

Helen's resentment deepened. He had only dropped in at the end of the sale—probably bought the first rug offered. And she must live with it!

His careless slap-dash way of buying things for the house always made her wild!

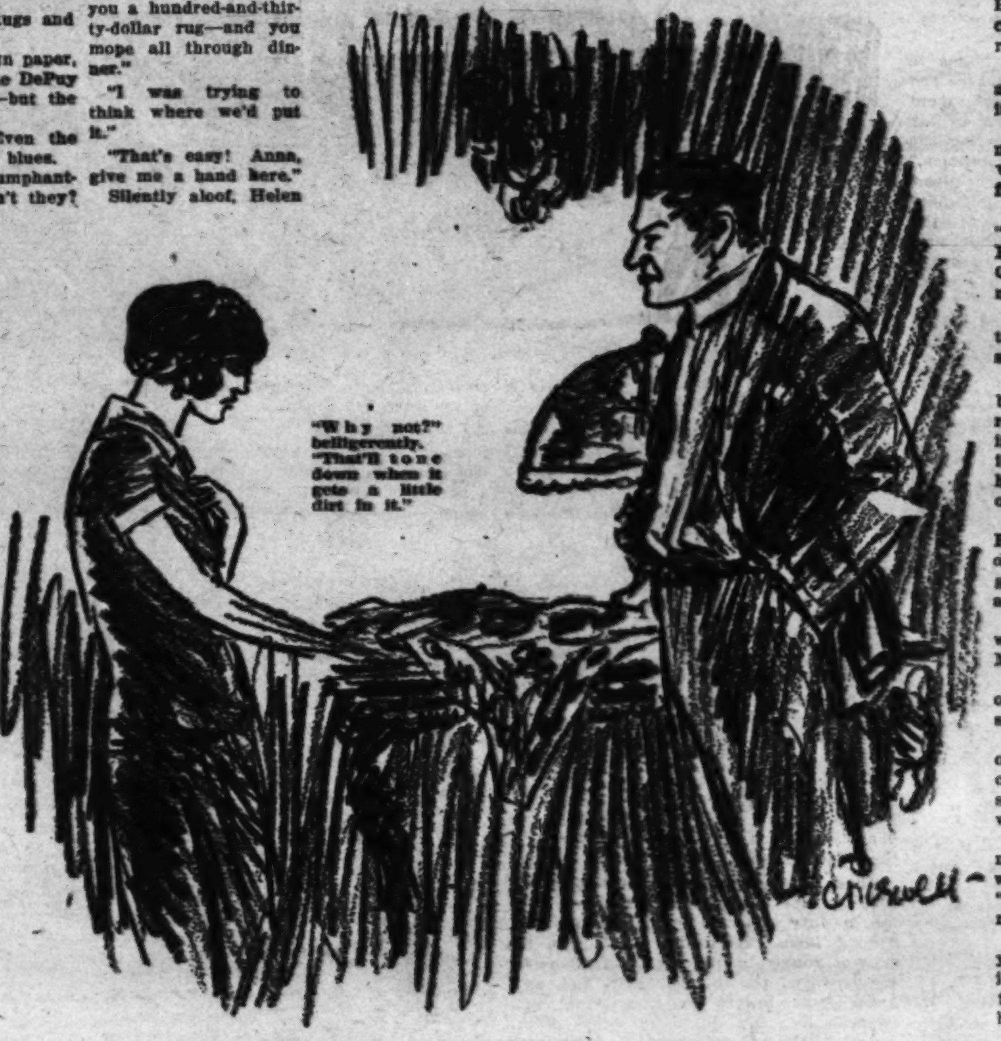
She had spent days on the selection of each rug. Tone, design, weave, size—everything had to be considered.

"You're a fine gloom-purveyor!" growled Warren, when they left the table. "Bring you a hundred-and-thirty-dollar rug—and you mope all through dinner."

"I was trying to think where we'd put it."

"That's easy! Anna, give me a hand here."

Silently aloof, Helen watched them carry the rug into the library. Shifting the other three rugs, Warren fitted it in by the bookcase.



"Why not?" belligerently. "That'll tone down when it gets a little dirt in it."

"How 'bout that? Looks all right there, don't it?"

"That strong red! You see it doesn't go with anything! How faded it makes the others look. And they're too crowded—rugs never look well so close."

"Then where d'you want it put?" irascibly.

"The only possible place is in your room. On the other side of the bed—where that little Beluchistan is. There's room in the hall for that."

"This'll never go there—much too big."

"Not if we let it go under the bed. Let's try," taking up one end.

Grumblingly he helped carry it in.

"Huh, one of DePuy's best rugs and you want to bury it way back here! You're dippy on these washed-out anaemic rugs. Know where this came from don't you? Bought all his rugs in Persia himself—lived there a year. This's the real thing," pinching the close lustrous pile. "Never been chemically faded or monkeyed with."

"But I like rugs that stay on the floor, that don't—"

"Stay on the floor? What's wrong with the way that lies?"

"I mean the color and design. This's all so strong—it comes up and shouts at you. Oh, if that's the Gordons," startled by the bell, "we don't want to play bridge tonight! They play so late—and we were out last night."

It was the Reynolds from the ninth floor, who were moving next week.

"Just dropped in to say good-by," announced Mr. Reynolds.

"Oh, don't ever move!" Mrs. Reynolds sank into an easy chair. "Thirty-eight windows in that apartment! I've been buying curtains. Just plain net at a dollar ten a yard. With seven yards to a window that's—"

"Now, Myra, don't go measuring those curtains again! We had that all through dinner—don't bore Mrs. Curtis with it now."

"No, I love to hear about it. We need new curtains for our bedroom, I thought of getting dotted Swiss."

"Yes, that's lovely for a bedroom— but this is a corner apartment and I want all the windows the same."

"How many rooms?" demanded Warren, opening a box of cigars.

"Ten rooms and four baths!" flaunted Mrs. Reynolds.

"Whole-lot more'n we need," grumbled her husband. "No, I'll smoke a cigarette."

"What's the rent? Soak you plenty, don't they?"

"Seventy-five hundred!"

"Whew!" whistled Warren. "Pretty steep."

"We only live once and no children to leave it to. And we're getting all the latest kinks—wall radio, running ice water, roof garden, and swimming pool."

"Do your ankles ever hurt when you walk much?" Mrs. Reynolds rubbed a black satin foot. "Shopping almost kills me! And tomorrow—it's rugs! We'll need at least five more."

"Rugs? Too bad you didn't know 'bout this sale," Warren handed her the catalog from the table. "Lot of fine rugs—went for a song."

"Oh, if we'd only known! Look, Bob," pausing at an illustration. "One of those camel's hair runners. Just what I want for the hall. How much did that bring?"

"Only dropped in for the last few lots—but I guess it didn't bring much. Raining—slim crowd. Some of 'em belonged to the DePuy estate—friends of ours. Bought 'em in Persia himself."

"Did you get any?" eagered Mrs. Reynold's. "Oh, did you? Do let us see it."

Ushering them into the bedroom, Warren jubilantly exhibited his purchase.

"This lovely rug hid way back here?" amazed Mrs. Reynolds.

"We haven't any place else to put it just now," defended Helen.

"Do you mind telling me what you paid?" now on her knees. "Is that all? Why, it's twice as fine as the one I was looking at today for two hundred seventy!"

"Yes, I thought it was a darn good buy. But Helen's sore over it—says the color're too strong—makes the rest of our stuff look sick."

"Then why not let us have it?" avidly. "We'll gladly pay a profit."

"Not much you won't! We're not in the rug business. If you want it—you're welcome to it for what I paid."

"You mean it?" excitedly. "You're willing to let us have it? Bob, get out your check book. Quick—before they change their minds!"

"Hold on, I'll drag it out. Better see what you're buying," restrained Warren.

"I can see it here. And it hasn't been artificially faded. Did you read that article by Dr. Riefstahl in 'House Beautiful'? He says it's so hard to get rugs that haven't been 'antiqued'—washed or chemically treated."

"We're in luck tonight!" Mr. Reynolds was joyial as he made out the check. "Curtis, you're a good picker. Why didn't you buy a few more?"

"Our walls are plain ivory, so we want colorful rugs," explained Mrs. Reynolds.

"Come, Myra, now we've got our loot, we'd better beat it. I'll send the elevator boy for this."

"Talk about your quick turnovers," grinned Warren, when he closed the door after them. "Not such a bum chooser after all. The way they fell for it!"

"But you might've consulted me before you sold it," Helen was straightening back the chairs. "You just said 'take it'! You never asked me or anything—"

"Eh? What in blazes? Thought you were so keen to get rid of it? You knocked it, roasted me for buyin' it, parked it under the bed, and now—"

"But, dear, I hardly had time to look at it. It might've toned down after awhile. And if we ever take a larger apartment we'll need more rugs—"

"Well, talk about consistency! Here I blow you to a rug—and you kick like a steer. Can't hammer it enough. Then I get rid of it—and you start chewin' the rag 'cause I didn't consult you! Now the next time I get anything for the house—it STAYS! You don't park it out of sight—and the less you have to say about it, the better. I'm fed up with your pannin' everything I buy!"

Evolution

Out of the vast deep yesterday,
The years their tale unfold,
And forward moves from first to last
The purpose that they hold.

Out of the vast and into the vast,
Something is incomplete,
Till the stature of man and worm unfold,
And seer and vision meet.

Till the measure of fullness due is met
In the age-old master plan,
And the story of life is fully told,
And the savage breathes the man.

Out of the vast and into the vast
Comes the transient, and goes
As the germ of life and the germ of soul
To the vision liker grows.

Each fronded leaf from mesh of green,
Each nation strong from clan
Proclaims alike the rising hope
Of creature and of man.

Out of the vast and into the vast,
The years their tale unfold,
And forward moves from first to last
The purpose that they hold.

CHALLENGED BY FIVE LIONS

in this country undertake a journey alone.

Twelve miles I must have walked—

"I cannot walk any further," I said. Then once more all became blurred, and I knew nothing. When I came to, it was quite dark. Myriads of grasshoppers were chirping; it sounded almost like the whirr of machinery in the distance.

A hyena uttered its complaining note. Nearer there was a short, sharp yelp of a jackal; and a night-hawk swooped down on noiseless wings a stone's throw away.

Alone—and a Lion's Roar

WHAT was that? I strained my ears to catch the sound. I had not long to wait. The roar of a lion, unmistakable as it was inspiring. Hardly had it died away, when an answering challenge rang out on my right, quickly followed by another and yet another.

I found myself conjecturing the distance the sound had traveled. A lion's roar can be heard a distance of five miles, A. had said only the other day. Was that five miles off? I wondered. I thought not. If so, how long did it take a lion to cover that distance? Again roar upon roar as if calling each other to mortal combat. No, certainly it was not five miles; perhaps three, perhaps less.

The next roar left me no longer in doubt. One mile at the most. I tried to rise; my legs refused to support me. Of what use, I thought, when I had not the faintest idea which way to go. How close it sounded! Involuntarily I shuddered. What would A. say? Well, I had had my wish; I had seen Masailand and Masai, seen more than millions of other women would ever see.

I shivered from head to foot as the hideous roars reverberated and died away, only to be taken up and hurled back again. Then the hyenas yelled in hideous chorus. Why did I not become insensible again? If only I could! Instead, every nerve seemed strung taut, every sense wide awake.

I wished I had not seated myself so close to the path, not more than ten yards away, in fact. If only I had my gun! Then common sense asserted itself. Of what use was a gun? How near!—that was surely not two hundred yards away, and that! . . . I grew icy cold, as a gleam penetrated the darkness and visions of our journey from Siana appeared before me. Again I seemed to hear A. saying, "That is not a hut; it is a lion."

Nearer it came, nearer still. Thank heaven! I heard voices. It was a lantern, not eyes. The Indians had come at last, and brought a mule. Hastily they helped me up, and with two lanterns leading the way, two bringing up the rear, and one Indian leading my mule, at last we were at Bardimat. They brought me food—I could not eat; but a cup of tea I drank greedily, then another; finally they took me to a tent, where I was afraid I deprived someone of a bed, on which I lay down just as I was, boots and all, and slept heavily till morning.

Here let me pay a tribute of gratitude to those Indians, men whom I had never seen before, whose names I did not know. They were kindness itself. Never shall I forget it.

In the morning I was myself again. They brought curry and rice and tea in abundance; then, as no tidings had come of A., my "boy" was sent off to the house of the District Commissioner, Captain L., about ten miles off. Captain L. was away from home, but Mrs. L. kindly sent a mule and escort to fetch me to Garindi. There for three days I stayed as Mrs. L.'s guest—three very happy days, doing nothing but rest. How good it was to see a white face again and that a woman's, a refined, educated, traveled woman, who could talk on many subjects and yet with such a quiet, restful manner, and so homely!

At the end of the three days A. arrived. It was as I had expected. Four of his oxen had become sick, and finally died; he was fearful for the rest. More had to be purchased, all of which took time. He was glad I had brought the buckboard. Now we could return without the oxen, which he proposed leaving behind, with two boys to look after them, as he was much afraid the four he had lost died of rinderpest, so many carcasses of wildbeeste had he passed on the road. "They lay there in hundreds," he said. In any case, it would be well that these should not return for a time.

When I told him of the fearful time I had spent coming over the mountains, he said a good deal that I would rather not repeat, the least being that women were such mad-brained creatures, one could never be certain what their next move would be. In my own case, I'm afraid he was right!

We left Garindi soon after luncheon, so did not get far that day. We camped about half-past four near an old manyatta (collection of huts.) Manyattas are never far from streams of some description, and this one was no exception to the rule.

"I'm afraid we shall be disturbed," A. said as we were discussing dinner.

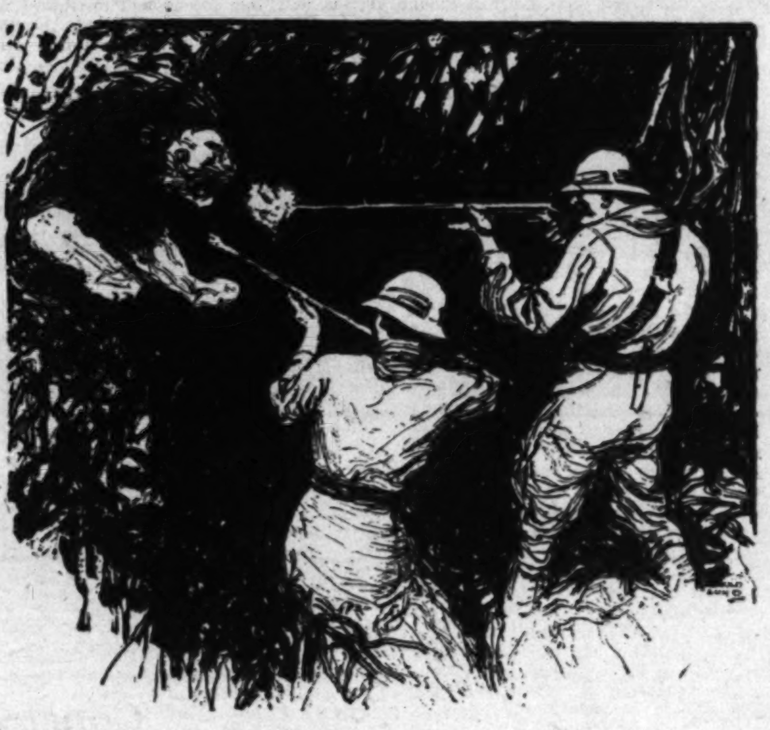
"Lions?" I queried.

"Yes," A. replied. "They are pretty bad here."

I thought of what I had gone through a few nights before, but said nothing. At that moment there was a noise outside; on investigation, it proved to be my boy, who had now overtaken us.

Rabsah also had met with adventures, his wagon had broken down, and he had had to repair it. Without A.'s assistance, I was surprised that he had not remained in the bed of the stream. It said something for Rabsah's ingenuity.

Now there seemed no help for it, A.'s gombes (oxen) and those I had brought were fraternizing. The whole lot would probably have to remain behind. However, tonight a boma (cattle inclosure) must be built to contain all the bullocks, as well as mules and horses. Quickly the thorn-bush surrounding the manyatta was pulled down and a temporary boma constructed. A kongoni which A. had shot was given to the "boys" and a "Tommy" got ready for the dogs.



A rush of air, a swirl of dust.

Big fires were soon alight, and the boys compared notes on the journey. My gun was taken out of the buckboard and inspected.

"We must have it ready tonight, in case we want it, remarked A.

Lamps were filled and placed all around the boma, one hung on each of our tents, just over the entrance.

Dinner over, we prepared for bed, giving the boys final instructions to keep the fires up before we retired. Oh! what a night that was! We were both tired out and soon fell asleep.

All at once we were startled by shrieks from the boys. We rushed out, in time to see a great beast vanish with what appeared to be one of the boys in his mouth. We both fired. The lion turned and faced us, crouching to spring. Again we fired. It had dropped the blanket (for so it turned out to be) which it had seized, and came toward us, mane bristling, jaws distended, fangs glistening. I can see it now, as it advanced straight toward A.

"Fire Margaret!"

I pulled myself together, and my shot and A.'s rang out simultaneously. A rush of air, a swirl of dust, and a huge form lay almost at A.'s feet. We exchanged glances.

"A near shave, that," A. said quietly.

"I thought it was all up with you," I said.

"Yes, I thought I had got to hand in my checks," replied A.

Then we turned to the boys who were huddling frightened behind a tree.

"That is my blanket," a voice quavered, and the owner stepped gingerly out to retrieve his property.

"You may thank your lucky star you were not in it," retorted A.

"But I was."

It was said so earnestly that we had to laugh. The boy had fallen asleep by the fire, his blanket in a heap at his back, keeping the wind off, and the lion had snatched at the blanket, thinking the boy was inside.

"Well," said A. "You can take his skin off now, seeing he took yours." The boy thought it was a huge joke.

We turned in again, but I could not sleep. The sight of those gleaming fangs, those fiery eyes, had got on my nerves. I pulled the lamp closer and tried to read. An hour went by. I glanced at my watch; another half-hour and I would try to sleep. At the end of that time I lay down, leaving the lamp beside me.

A noise in the boma. Instantly I sat up and listened, gun in hand. I next went to the door of the tent, only to see the fires almost out, the boys sound asleep. They had finished skinning the lion, and, think out, had fallen asleep, while they talked around the fire. Would they never learn wisdom?

I shouted and shouted with all my might, but did not succeed in waking either them or A. Now the oxen were getting restless; a horse neighed; there must be something about. How I would have liked to go out and shake them all! But that would have been unwise. At that moment there was a mad rush in the boma and, unable to restrain myself, I fired in that direction. This woke the boys, who jumped up and seized their spears, just in time to see a leopard vault over the boma and disappear.

"Put wood on the fires—put wood on the fires."

"N'dio, Mem-sahib."

How many times that night I reiterated that command, really I do not know. Suffice it to say that every boy slept within a quarter of an hour of taking his turn on guard, and it was I who had to do the watching. How thankful I was when my watch said five o'clock, and I knew it would soon be daylight.

As I settled down, a roar broke on my ear, not so far off either—then another, and another, followed in quick succession. Were they coming here? I had not got over my fright of a few hours before, and felt another visit from those wretches would be more than I could stand. Nearer they came. Surely they would wake A. Still he slept on, and so did the "boys," every one. Then there seemed a veritable pandemonium, roar succeeding roar, and, as I strained my eyes in the darkness, one, two, three, four—yes—five indistinct forms loomed out.

Was I losing my senses? Again I counted. Five! There was no mistake about it. They had come to within two hundred yards when, as nearly as I could make out, they sat down and low growls took the place of the previous roars. Would nothing on earth wake A.? Would the boys wait until eaten up alive?

It sounds too absurd to be true, I know but being accustomed to the roars of lions every night, I myself slept through it all when at home and safely fastened up indoors. Here it was a different matter. Nothing but sheer exhaustion could account for this lethargy. I opened my tent at the back, looked out, and crept about six yards to A.'s

"Will nothing wake you?" I shouted. "Do you want to be eaten?"

"Hallo! What is it?" was A.'s somewhat senseless answer.

"Lions," I replied—"dozens of lions." Then as A. prepared to go outside, "Go easy," I said; "there are five."

"Five?" A. gave an expressive whistle. "Boys!" he shouted, giving his voice full play.

"N'dio, Bwana." Instantly they were stirring.

The lions got up and, still growling, moved toward the boma. Instantly a circle of fires were kicked into life, and wood piled on, until it was blazing all around. The boys were keenly alive to their danger now; so were the bullocks and horses. We could hear them running round the boma. The wounded one had been removed and fastened close to A's tent, the smell of blood appearing to terrify the remainder; backward and forward paced the lions.

Every minute seemed an hour.

"They won't dare to rush the fires," said A. reassuringly.

"What had we better do?" I asked.

"Well! five to two is rather thick; we had better try firing into the air," said A. "If that does not do, and they will have it, why then they must."

"Keep your head, Margaret! Now!"

A report from both guns, quickly followed by another, and two lions began walking away; the remaining three seemed undecided. Meat in plenty—it was worth trying for.

"Ready!" said A.

Two more bullets whizzed through the air, just over the lions' heads. Instantaneously the three made off, without waiting for more. A. sent a last shot after them; two more to accelerate their speed, and that was the last we saw of them.

"Make haste and get some coffee ready," A. said to the boys, and by the time we were dressed, it was all prepared.

"I want to get home," was all I said.

A. laughed. "You would come," he reminded. "Don't you wish you were back in Nairobi?"

Even then I could truthfully say I did not.

The American Flapper

By Shaw Desmond

The father and mother in the American city of today so often resent, without understanding, the ways and manners of the new generation of daughters.

[Note: This is the second article of a series giving the observations of the Irish novelist, Shaw Desmond, upon the American woman during visits to America.—Editor.]

IN THE following I want to set down certain impressions of the American young girl of today. I want to ask her some questions. I want to answer some questions of her own. For the benefit of her mother and father I want to write down some of the things she does not tell them and the reason why she does not tell them.

We are not only going, like "Alice in Wonderland," to speak about "cabbages and kings," but we are going to speak about stranger things still. We are going to talk about such queer things as "painting the face," "brandy flasks and ballrooms," "dressing for beauty and dressing for pleasure," about American fairies and university girls (not the same thing always,) and about the three types of American girl now developing. And we are going to speak about the strangest thing in the world—love.

My little daughter, aged two and a half, comes to sit upon my knee as I am writing this, eager to try my typewriter. When I bend down to kiss her neck she, concentrated on her task, pushes me away. That is how the American girl strikes me.

Concentrated on her task in life, eager for the future, she pushes away her father, her mother, or, indeed, any of her elders who come between her and her "vision," that entrancing vision of a new world which her elders never knew.

So I am going to begin my questions to "the dearest girl in the world—the American flapper."

I AM going to ask you, the American girl, to whom I am speaking directly in these columns, what it is you expect of life?

Instantly, I feel your answer: "I expect, I want, I am determined to have romance out of life. I want a chance to realize what is in me, whether that be little or much. And, above all, I want to be myself, and not a mere appendage to a brother or even a husband."

That, at least, is the answer that you are giving to me, you who are the girl I believe you to be. But two other sorts of girl are also answering me.

The first of these says: "I scarcely know what you mean, when you ask me what I expect of life. Life, I reckon, is always pretty much the same sort of thing. I suppose I hope to marry and 'settle down' like mother did."

The other shall answer for herself, using her own words as she used them to me in a certain girls' college in New England.

"I mean to get all I can out of life before I am too old to enjoy it. I mean to dance, and flirt, and have a good time, and at last marry a rich man who will give me an auto and sables and theaters and a box at the Metropolitan. And I don't mean to have any nonsense about 'living in a glass case,' either, but I'm not going to tell him that until after I have married him!" (A little throaty laugh of amusement.) "Girls nowadays don't tell their fiances or their husbands too much, any more than they tell their fathers and mothers."

Those three types represent roughly the three groups of American flappers I have met in fifty thousand miles of traveling. Taking them backwards, the last is the type of young American girl who lives for pleasure and the moment only, and, as I know from letters and occasional confidences, not only singes her wings at the flame of life, but sometimes burns herself up, body, blood and soul.

The girl who "reckons that life is always pretty much the same sort of thing," and only looks forward to "marrying and settling down like mother," is a type fast disappearing, simply because of the girl who expects nothing of the future, the future has nothing to expect—and so discards her. She is standing still, and the world, which is never still, has no use for the static girl.

The first girl above, who is "determined to have romance and a chance to realize herself," is the girl of the future. She is the girl for whom I care—the girl who is going to make America.

Here is an extract from a letter from a young girl of this last type, who writes to me from a girls' school in New York State:

WE DON'T tell our parents much about what we think, because they don't understand us when we do tell them. Only some of them—a very few—understand. They don't seem to remember how they thought when they were young. But perhaps they didn't!"

That little ironic "but perhaps they didn't" tells the whole story of certain parents and some children in America. Within a generation the child of today has leaped away from her father and mother. She rarely tells them her love troubles—seldom, in fact, shows to them "the secret places of her heart," because they "don't understand." She is really, though she does not know it, the pioneer of a new age—"the age of woman." The parents scarcely ever know it. That is one reason why the father and mother in the American city of today so often resent, without understanding, the ways and manners of the new generation of daughters.

A beautiful girl of not more than fourteen, who came to me privately, after I had met some of her companions and herself in a school not far from New York, threw a white light upon the present-day relationship of the flapper and her "pastors and masters."

She showed me some fairy stories she had written (they were really extraordinarily good for a girl of her age,) and then said, her eyes blazing with anger in her white, tense face: "My teacher tried to stop my writing fairy stories. Said they were silly. How I hate her!" There was something terrible about that child's passionate anger with life. Months afterwards she sent her elder sister to me in New York to express her gratitude for the few words of advice and encouragement I had given her.

No girl on this earth was ever more grateful and responsive than the American young girl. If some of the parents and teachers could only learn that!

SHE is very beautiful is the American flapper. And she is "different."

Let it here be said that the American girl, as a whole, is more "independent" and more frank than her European sister.

It was at a school of some five hundred girls that a shy, dark-eyed girl approached me after I had spoken on Irish fairies, to tell me that she "wanted to know how to see fairies," and that she knew somebody who had seen a "real American fairy." Whether she had or not is here beside the question, but it is sheer fact that at many places where I spoke to the American flapper I found her desperately interested in what we call "the little people" in Ireland.

It was that romantic side of the young American girl—and very harmless romance at that—which carries its own reply to the European superstition that she is "matter-of-fact" and "unimaginative."

Dozens of Americans at different times have shown me that whilst they flirt with the decollete girl, they don't want to marry her—or only marry her, as the French say, faute de mieux. Or, as a young Yale graduate expressed it with a certain brutal frankness: "She may marry us, but she doesn't hold us!"

Paint is ugly because it obliterates all that individuality and "character" which makes the individual attractive and "different." Between the painted girl and the girl who substitutes for paint clean water, clean air and exercise, there is a great gulf fixed. Between the girl who looks upon "a good match" as the one thing in life and the girl who, awaiting her romance in its own good time, with dignity and "consciousness" learns a profession and refuses to accept "romance" in which there is neither love nor respect, there is a chasm that nothing can bridge.

BUT the finest type of American girl now evolving, a type that I have met throughout the continent from New York to Los Angeles and San Francisco, knows all this. From one such girl I received the following letter whilst I was in the Middle West:

> "A few of us wish you to know that a circle of us have decided to form a little society which we are calling 'The League of Professional Women.'
> "Most of us are not women yet, but we are going to be women some day, and because we want to fit ourselves for life by each learning some definite profession, as you suggested and as you said the Danish girls always did, we have begun by calling ourselves 'professionals.'
> "If romance cannot go with a profession, then we have no use for romance, but we believe it can, and we believe that the men who matter believe it, too.
> "Ours is the future."

Yes, "theirs is the future." The future in America does not lie with the girl who has no hope beyond fulfilling the destiny that was her mother's, nor does it lie with the girl of pleasure. It lies with the girl who demands romance and self-realization and individual existence.

to turn and look up. It was Wally Knight. He was waiting for her answer.

I had been standing near. But I withdrew. It was Adora's and Wally's moment. But Wally had forgotten the crowd, the fire. He saw only the woman he wanted.

"Adora . . . you asked me how you could thank me. Please give me the life I have saved. I love you. I want you. Will you?"

The fire blazed as fires do with redoubled fury. The light shone on Adora's face. A twinge of pain flitted over her beautiful features. Her eyes closed as if in communion with another soul, opened slowly, with a smile. "Yes," she murmured.

"Soon?" asked Knight, his arm about her.

She nodded.

"Wednesday—at the little church?"

Another twinge as of pain and another smile. "Yes!"

Wally lifted her to her feet gently and kissed her. At the moment motherly Mrs. Porter claimed Adora.

Came at last the afternoon of the wedding.

The usher led us to seats. Soon the little church was overflowing its capacity. The ribbon and flower-decked aisle was cleared for the bride and her party.

From the side of the church, back near a door reading out to the pulpit, came the groom and his best man. Wallace Knight was not the sort of man to be eclipsed even by a bride. He was handsome, proud of himself, proud of having won Adora.

The music played on softly. There was a ripple of conversation, an animated moving of heads, a whisper, "Here comes the bride!"

She was beautiful. Adora was a symphony in gray, shimmering gray satin, with rare old lace sleeves and lace panel, ending in a slight train, a large gray velvet picture hat softened with its graceful, fluttering plumes, and a flower muff of purple pansies. She was wonderful, queenly.

The rector began the service. I could see Adora's lashes fluttering nervously over her beautiful eyes. The excitement of the moment had darkened them. They seemed black, so intense were her glances.

"If any man knows any reason why this couple should not be joined in holy wedlock, let him stand forth and speak—or forever hold his peace!"

My heart almost missed a beat. Kennedy stood forth in the aisle, hand raised.

"Just a moment—please!"

All heads turned. A murmur ran over the startled throng. I think some in the gathering would have liked to have had Craig put out immediately.

The rector stood very quiet—listening. He had asked the question, invited it, even though it was a form. He must listen.

Dazed, I watched them all. Everyone was agitated and waiting. What did Craig know? Something he must have found out this forenoon, when he had seemed to me so dilatory about leaving the city, starting for Wesbury. Now I recalled how he had told me he was waiting for someone to get back from a trip. It must be. He knew something—and was forced to tell it.

I saw Adora's mother turn white-faced from the pew nearest the wedding party. Her hands were outstretched toward Adora and there was a beseeching look in her glance toward Craig as if she would say: "Spare my little girl! She has had enough to bear!"

Craig saw it. He paused only a fraction of a second as if sweeping away a last scruple. Craig had a message to deliver and he was going to the bitter end.

Impressively he stretched forth his right hand. At first I did not appreciate the direction in which his forefinger pointed.

"A year ago on yonder flying field that was not an accident! . . . That was murder!"

It seemed that a wild light leaped in Adora's eyes. She stiffened, listening tensely for the rest. Every murmur in that edifice ceased. The ticking of a clock could have been heard. Her mother paused suddenly, too, about to speak.

"Be careful!" the rector found voice to interrupt. "This is an awful accusation at such a time, in such a place!"

Craig was resolute. Adora's face now wore a ghastly pallor. But she was quiet. I saw she was not going to collapse. The nerves of this frail girl were of steel. Her eyes seemed to say, "Go on! Let me hear the worst! I can stand it!"

The smile had long since died on the face of Wallace Knight. At the first interruption he had turned on Craig, taken a step forward. Their eyes had met. He had seen not a flinch in the the cold steel-gray of Craig's. Wallace Knight had seemed to freeze. The half-formed words, "Fling him out!" had died on his lips.

Craig turned toward Adora. "I'm sorry, Adora," was all he said.

She started to speak, then changed her mind. It was as if she would have said, "Craig, why didn't you let me know before? This is not the place to tell such a thing." She had checked it because intuitively she must have felt that there was some reason why it was necessary, why it must be done then, before it was too late.

"I know . . . This is a frightful thing I am doing." Craig paused, speaking slowly as if answering the question he read in her face. "But it would be a far more frightful thing if I did not do it. How can I face myself through life, how can I face my God—knowing what I now know—and having remained silent?"

He paused again.

"It was only this forenoon, late, that the medical man in the Great Western returned from the insurance convention on the coast. It was only this forenoon, late, that I received from his files and from his lips the true story of what it was he told Henry Gaines. And it was only this forenoon that I learned from him what I suspected, that you, Wallace Knight, within a few days after the examination of Henry Gaines, applied for insurance in the same company, for examination by the same doctor, and guardedly questioned him, a flying man yourself, as to what would happen to you, granted that the test showed you had certain physical and physiological deficiencies—which you already knew Henry Gaines had!"

Craig caught the eye of Doctor Nesmith, seemed speaking through him to us.

"A normal heart would have adjusted itself up to the fifteen thousand feet, whatever it was, or higher, with the apparatus used in that altitude flight. There is, in high altitudes, more and more rapid respiration because there is less and less oxygen to the cubic foot of air. It puts an added strain on the heart. All the apparatus, the oxygen, and so on will not overcome that.

"Henry Gaines's heart could not pump fast enough. And in such a case much would have depended on the length of time taken and the rapidity of the ascent, for adjustment of heart and lungs. That ascent, as I remember it, was rapid, very rapid. His heart was not able to adjust itself.

"Doctor Macgregor, the insurance doctor, had told Henry Gaines that his heart was all right—but not able to stand sudden strains. He might live to his threescore and ten and beyond. But there were some things of which he must be careful. . . . Doubtless he never considered sitting still in an airplane among the violent exercises—"

"It's all a lie!" Now Wally Knight found words to sneer. "He wants her himself. . . . Let me get at him!"

Two ushers, friends of both Wally Knight and Adora, held him back.

Kennedy resumed slowly. "It was Henry Gaines himself—Adora—with the report of the insurance doctor—who unwittingly gave you the idea, Knight," pursued Craig relentlessly. "There was just one thing that Henry Gaines could not stand—rarefied air, lack of air, less than or more than normal sea level air pressure."

Kennedy turned to Adora. "Wallace Knight knew it, knew it when he set to work, as his dearest friend, to persuade Henry Gaines to agree to fly with him as passenger in the contest in which he said he hoped for the altitude honors of the flying world against the expert Harper."

Craig swung about, towering. "Like men of your class, Knight, you can be fearless, play the hero—as you did at the fire—to gain and to keep that for which you had murdered. That does not excuse; that merely explains. And I know, too, the reason for and source of Harper's appointment. It came as your work in the international banking firm with which you are connected. You removed one possible, one powerful rival, one who might have surmised your dastardly trick.

"Clever criminals today resort to the refinements of modern scientific poisons—synthetic murder, as it were. By their very refinements they leave circumstantial evidence against themselves. The successful murderer is still one who strikes in the dark—and flees, unseen—elemental murder. You, Knight, are elemental. You wanted this woman with an elemental passion. And you took an elemental way to get her—with an element—air.

"You took Henry Gaines up, with murder in your heart . . . Knight, you did not swoop down for a doctor. You swooped down for the widow!"

said, "Now, that's enough!" as she might have to a crying child, and went about her business. Pussy found her digging in the garden.

"We've always had pansies here, but I want something that smells sweet," she said. "Stocks, maybe."

"We ought to have a bonga tree," said Pussy.

The busy weeks flew past. Pussy helped in the garden, in the house, everywhere, and she looked like an ideal sweetheart—any man's ideal—in the bloom of her growing hope. Their two cases seemed to keep a mysterious balance; with every leap forward for Pussy there was a leap backward for mother. People were soon only shapes to her, a face was a pale blur. She had to hurry with her preparations, and became so deft at managing that Pussy still did not guess all her secret. The letters from the girls came tumbling in, three or four by every boat, loving, rapturous, full of sights and wonders.

It was two months to a day, a soft gray morning, and the world was little more than light and shadow. Pussy having gone to town, mother allowed herself rather more cane and fumbling than usual. There were days when she felt a great weariness, a longing to sit with hands folded, like any blind woman. It had taken scolding to get herself out into the garden, and even scolding could not keep her trowel going. She presently let it fall and felt her way to the seat under the old maple, sitting there with the lifted face of the blind.

"Well, I didn't suppose it would be any too easy," she said aloud. "I've had fun out of it, all the same." And then something made her aware of a presence. "Who is it?" she asked.

A husky little cough seemed to indicate a shy youth standing before her on the lawn.

"Oh, are you the young man who is coming to help me?" She spoke with new briskness.

His answer hesitated. "Yes; I've come to help you," he said at last. He did not sound like the lad she expected.

"Did Dr. Gracie send you?"

Again she had to wait for an answer: "I was sent to you." They were walking toward the vegetable garden and she could hear that he limped. She peered to see him, but could make out only a wavering shape. "You equal to the work?" she asked kindly.

"Oh, yes." He evidently wanted it very much, poor fellow. "I'm all right," he insisted.

He seemed to know by instinct where the tools were kept, and he worked so steadily and silently that mother decided to call it a full day, even though he had come so late. She sat within sound of him and her dark mood passed, leaving a new and rich content. The sun, coming through the grayness, seemed to warm her to the soul.

"I guess I was lonesome," she decided. "Funny—he doesn't open his head, yet he's real good company."

She started to move her chair into the shade, and it was done for her. She dropped her cane and as she felt for it it was placed in her hand. He was very thoughtful.

"I always did like a nice young fellow," she explained the growing anthem in her heart.

Toward noon she left him and went in to prepare lunch. Her ear had placed him as older than a boy, a gentleman, perhaps down and out and needing a good meal. She made her lunch of the things Lawrence had loved, hot muffins and bacon and cool salad and her own perfect coffee, and spread it on the veranda, then called him, sending him upstairs to wash his hands.

"The end of the hall," she directed him.

"I'll find it." His voice was a mere thread, and she could hear the drag of his lameness as he went.

She told him about her dear girls and the trip and the young neighbor who was staying with her. Suddenly, not knowing how it happened, she was telling him of her coming blindness.

"There wasn't any sense in spoiling their fun," she explained. "I can get about the house just about as well as I used to, so long as no one moves the furniture. Being blind isn't so bad—it makes other people kind. The way you are. Now, being deaf makes them cross. Queer, isn't it? I guess they like to put out a hand, but they hate to holler. Still, you could make a business of being deaf, just like I'm making a business of being blind. It's real interesting. I declare, I don't know when I've gabbled so," she broke off. "There's something about you— Are you eating your lunch?"

His answer was a sharp sigh. She knew that kind of sigh.

"You're in trouble," she said with her kindly directness. "You been sick?"

"Oh, yes—six months in a hospital." He spoke as though that were nothing.

"And I suppose you've come out without a cent?"

"No. I have—money enough." His voice trailed off as though speech were almost too difficult.

So the trouble was not health or money. There was loss, and there was also sin. She bent toward him, her eyes straining to see. "You want to tell me?" she urged.

"I want to tell you everything." He pushed back from the table, turning sidewise that he might rest his head on his hand, and at last she heard his full voice. "I don't know if I can. I've been broken to bits—body and soul."

She was listening rigidly, but as though to some far-off sound rather than to the words. "Go on—go on," she whispered.

"They patched up my body for me, but my soul had to find its own way." There was the sigh of sharp pain in every breath. "Back. Back through twelve years. Through layers and layers of rotten selfishness. Back to the good stock from which I had come. Back to——" He stopped.

Her hands, which had been checked in midair, fluttered toward him.

"Who are you?" she cried.

He came and knelt beside her, letting her fingers touch his face. They found it wet with tears.

"I am no more worthy to be called your son," he said against her breast.

They sat together hand in hand all that afternoon. Lawrence told her everything, without flinching—not as he had seen it at the time, but as he had found it written on the hospital wall. But her heart was busy with its great feast of love and welcome. Her transfigured face was never turned away.

"Well, I'm real glad you came home," she said when he stopped, and for the first time Lawrence smiled.

"Blessed mother!" he said.

A joyous "Whoo-oo!" sounded through the house, and then Pussy Meadows stood in the doorway, lovely with happiness, a living sweetheart for any man's dream. Lawrence started up.

"Pussy, here's my son, Lawrence," mother began. "He's come home!" Then she broke off with a cry. Over the sunset glow had come darkness, rolling down like a curtain. She turned her head in every direction, but could find only the soft dark.

"Has the sun set?" she asked loudly.

"Not yet," Lawrence's voice answered, and Pussy added: "Why, it's glorious!" Their hands were on her arms, they were questioning her lifted face.

"Glorious?" she repeated, then spoke on a deep breath. "Glorious. Well, so it is!"

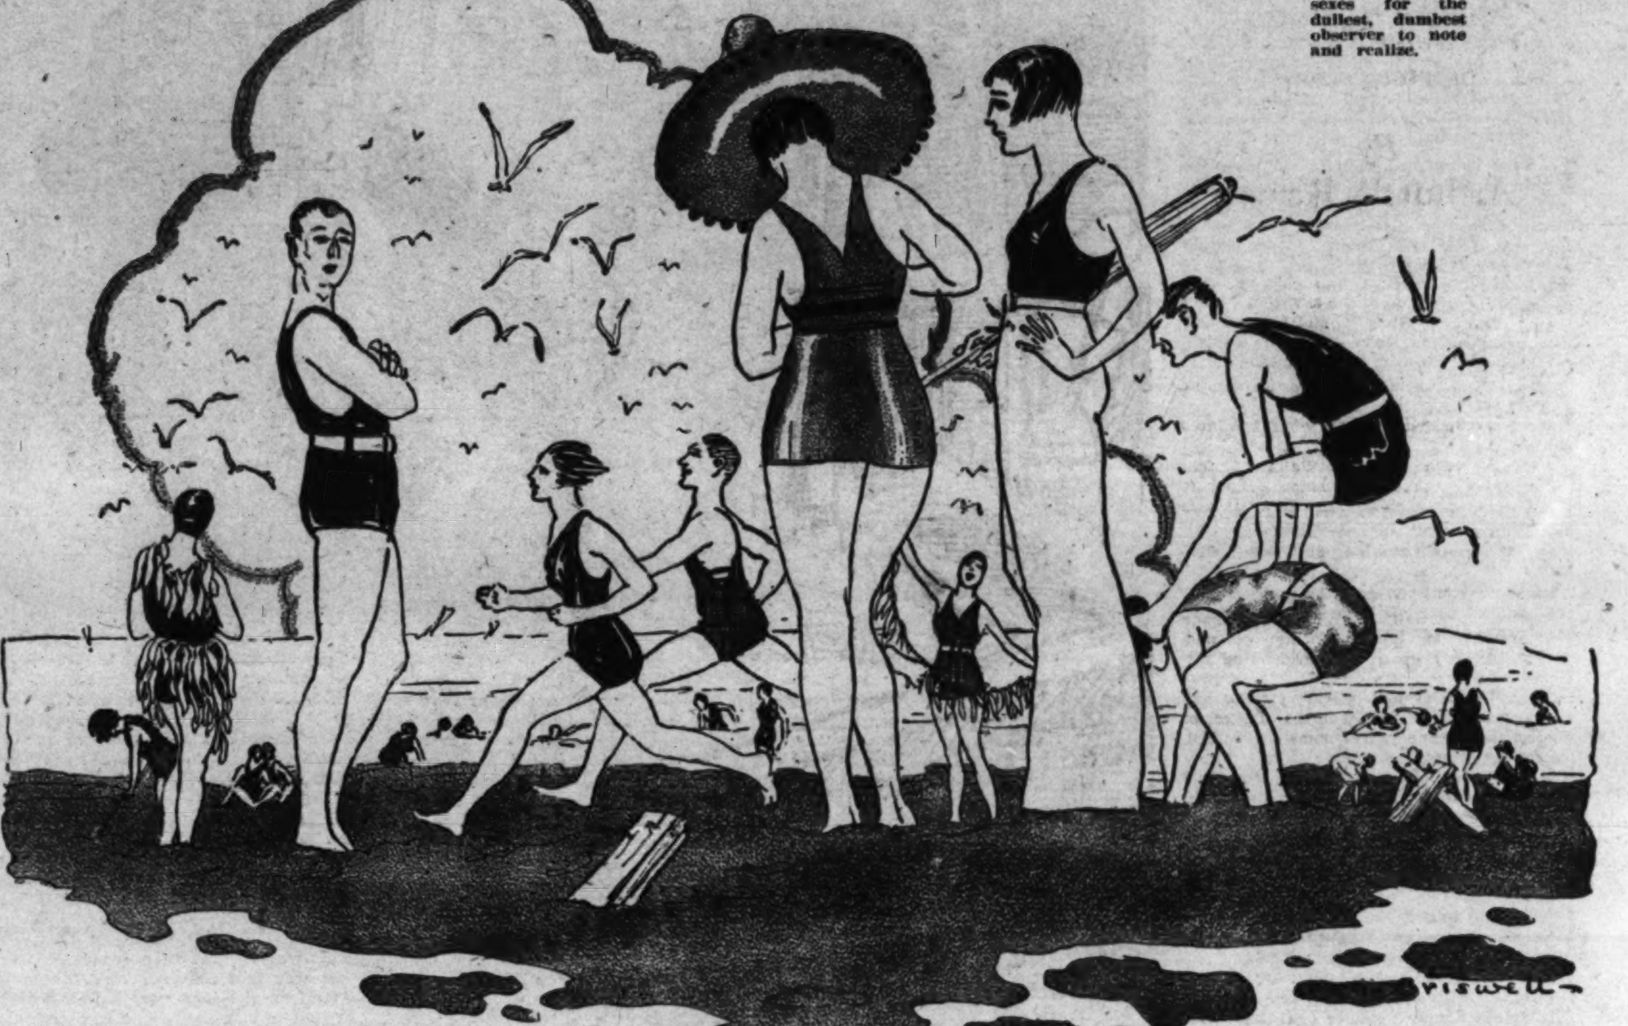
Male and Female Created He Them



Two distinct sexes for the dullest, dumbest observer to note and realize.

By Alma Whitaker

MIGHTY hard to tell which are boys and which are girls," grouched the man from Gopher Prairie as he sat upon the beach at Catalina Island. "What with their boyish bobs and their boyish figures and their boyish bathing suits and their white duck pants and their reefer coats, there ain't nothing girlish left about them girls. What's the matter out here anyway? Up to Los Angeles, blest if the girls what shows us to our seats in one of them big picture houses ain't dressed in pants . . ."

"But you knew they were girls—dressed in trousers, didn't you?" we countered. "You weren't really deceived for half a second. And you know very well which are girls right there on the beach, although you couldn't exactly explain why. You wouldn't make a mistake if you had to pick 'em out."

"I guess that's so," grinned the critic. "It don't matter what they do, they can't get away from it. And now I come to think of it, I never saw a female impersonator either that could deceive anyone close up. Julian Eltinge gets away with it in the distance, with the lights all fixed for him, but even he couldn't fool anyone at close quarters—not if they were sober."

We had a great time watching those girls and boys on the beach. Apparently they looked all alike, acted all alike, even talked alike. The girls were just as daring, just as athletic as the boys. After their swims, they dragged their white duck trousers on over their bathing suits, just like the boys did. They could turn somersaults, play leap frog, run, jump, walk on their hands and smoke cigarettes—just like the boys.

But "male and female created He them." Something subtle, indefinable, yet curiously tangible was there to mark the difference. It didn't matter how they dressed, how they behaved, how identical their thoughts and speech and actions and appearance, they were two distinct sexes for the dullest, dumbest observer to note and realize.

I remember a mother up in South Africa raising her three girls and her four boys on exactly the same plan. She never intended them to know that they were not all the same sex for years to come. Having no neighbors nearer than forty miles, she assumed her scheme would be easy.

She dressed them all alike, treated them all alike, taught them identical behavior, and, called them all "boys." She herself dressed in male attire, so that she seemed to have an exclusively masculine household. Her husband concurred in all that she did.

When our family arrived on the scene, they ranged in ages from three to twelve years—a couple of pairs of twins amongst them. I was nine and my brother was six. And to all intents and purposes I was the only girl amongst them.

And I can still recall the amazement of that family when that first evening, I piped up, "Mamma, why are all the little girls dressed like little boys?"

You see, until then, the little girls themselves did not know they were girls—or anyway their parents did not think they did. But it transpired later that the boys and the girls even in their brotherly and sisterly friendships had subconsciously divided themselves into two cliques—male and female.

And another interesting denouement was that the girls soon began to get restless and wanted clothes like mine. They put me into a boy's suit, too, on the second day—but my clothes had made an astonishing impression, aroused a curious covetousness, in the girls. Not in the boys. The boys had been peculiarly interested in me as a new specimen, but they didn't want my clothes.

I can remember our parents talking this curious incident over and over and finally settling it with "Well, there you are, girls will be girls and boys will be boys, no matter what happens."

We recently had a woman in jail who had successfully masqueraded as a man, working in building trades jobs. She said she could support her three children in better style with men's work on men's pay.

"Were you never suspected?" I asked her, for, seeing her in women's clothes, she seemed conventionally feminine to me.

"Oh, sure. But I kept to myself. They maybe didn't know I was a woman but they sensed I was different. They considered me queer. But I was always leaving my job and going somewhere else—generally because I caught some man looking at me kind of suspicious. But I did my work well—what did it matter to them? Ain't it queer? So far as I know I never did a thing different from a man and even my voice is kind of mannish through long practice. My skin has got coarse, too, and my feet ain't small. If I had really been a man, acting like I did, they wouldn't have noticed me. But as it was they always got a hunch somehow that I was different from them. It sure ain't my hands—look at them!" And she held out two large strong, bony calloused hands that might have done good service on any man.

"Don't you like being a woman? You, who had three children and obviously have all a mother's instincts toward them?" I asked.

"Oh, sure—in that way. But I hate woman's work—and besides, in the things I could do, I could earn more money for the kids at men's work. Besides, I am kind of homely—didn't cut much ice as a woman. Nothing about me to show off a woman's clothes. I feel better in men's things. Seem to act better somehow. I dunno. Funny, ain't it?"

"But don't you like women, don't you want women friends? Were you able to make men-friendships?" I wanted to know.

"Yes, I like women all right—about as good as other women like 'em, I guess," she said with a smile. "But no, I never made what you would call a real man's friendship with a man. I guess we both sensed something queer. Not but what I cut out all the woman-stuff, you understand. But men always seemed kind o' puzzled about me. And maybe I'd get feeling womanish, no matter how hard I'd try to be all man."

Well now, is all that a comfort or isn't it? Those professors and publicists and male writers who have deplored woman's tendency toward masculinity, men's clothes, men's sports, men's professions, men's habits, manners, deportment—does it matter very much? Aren't we destined—or condemned—or safely equipped for womanhood forever?

If it is terribly important that we remain feminine, hasn't Nature arranged the thing pretty conclusively and permanently, no matter what our tastes and assumptions?

And if it really is a superior blessing to be a man, is it such a very bad thing for the world if women endeavor to imitate the more interesting traits of the masculine sex? Should not men approve our good taste, a la that once popular comic song . . .

"Although we can never be like them,
"We mean to be as like them as we can . . ."

I rather hope they do approve. They are going to be so perpetually and persistently annoyed if they don't. Annoyed—but never deceived.

Rally the Husbands

It seems pretty evident, if women are to rise to greater pride of place, that a generous supply of good husbands is quite important. Perhaps the rising generation of young men should be impressed with their responsibility in this respect.

In the old days a young girl's training was all designed to prepare her to be a good wife for some ambitious man. But no one ever dreamed of training a boy to be a good husband for some ambitious woman.

Nature and luck had to take care of that for us. But in these days of specialized occupational training . . . well, you get my drift, don't you?

Both Miss Rankin and Miss Robertson might have proved more successful at Washington, for instance, had they been thus equipped. Without a good husband at home, look what happened. In fact, when one sees a successful woman today, "Cherchez l'Homme."

CHILD'S PLAY

came at me the way a ferret or weasel whisks at the throat of a startled rabbit.

But the simile is not entirely exact, for while he may have been the stoat, I was not the rabbit. I caught the flash of his knife in the dim flare of the night light on the landing, and as he pitched into me I dived under his blade—a good old-fashioned football low tackle that took him round the knees. He went right over me, over my back, and thus fastened end to end we went over and over down the stairs, landing on the landing. Mindful of his knife and the upward slashing stroke I might expect, I loosed my grip of him with the intention of squirming round to grab his arms. As I did so he struck twice, plunging his knife into my leg—once at the calf and again at what would have been the tendon Achilles, in most cases a hamstring cut.

But by the grace of the gods resting on me that night, he got my store leg. I heard his hissing "Sacre," whether of ferocity or astonishment I don't know which. Perhaps in the scuffle he thought he had crippled me enough to stop pursuit and so did not wait to finish it.

Down the stairs he went, skidding round the quick turns in slithering fashion, and from far beneath I heard the front door slam as he went out.

It would have been useless, of course, for me to try to chase him, and, besides, I was anxious about Jacques, not being sure whether this prowler had been just going in or just going out of the studio when I arrived.

So I picked myself up, entirely unhurt, and found the studio door ajar. Going in, I went to Jacques's bedroom and entered softly.

The gentle snoring from the bed was the first time that I've ever enjoyed that sort of chamber music. I listened for a moment, then switched on the light in the corridor. This failing to rouse the sleeper, I switched on the one in his room, desiring to make sure that all was well with him.

He woke up with a start. "Who's that?"

"It's Johnny, Jacques. Sorry to disturb you, but I got worried about your being here alone and ill."

"Oh—thanks, Johnny, but you oughtn't to have bothered."

"How do you feel?" I asked.

"Bully—the darned thing's broken, I think."

"Then go to sleep again. I'm going to camp on the divan in the studio. If there's anything you want, sing out."

"Oh, but I say, Johnny—"

"You go to sleep, Jacques, we'll talk it over in the morning."

I turned off the lights, and went into the studio. Jacques apparently fell off to sleep again, and presently I followed his example.

The midsummer daylight streaming through the big window that was half skylight awakened me at about four; I got up, pulled the green baize curtain, and went to sleep again, when the next thing to rouse me was the doorbell ringing somewhere in the rear. I got up, and in one of Jacques's spotless painting blouses that I had slipped on for a nightgown, went to see who it was that presumed to interrupt our beauty sleep.

It was Pervier, that registering machine of the facts preceding criminal episodes, and he was filled with apologies for his matinal call, although it was then eight o'clock.

I put my finger on my lips, and showed him into the studio.

"Monsieur Hughes is sick with the flu, and his valet is out of town, so I came to spend the night with him," I said.

Before Pervier could answer, Jacques's gentle voice quite free of its hoarseness said from the doorway, "Monsieur Hughes is a lot better. Quite cured, in fact!" and we looked around to see Jacques in pajamas and pantoufles and embroidered silk kimono, his yellow hair tousled and his eyes sleepy but much clearer than the day before. "What's up now, Pervier?"

The police agent renewed his apologies, but Jacques cut them short. "It's all right," he said, "I dimly remember your coming in last night, Johnny. I was fairly loaded up with bromides and tisane the concierge brought up. You're a real friend in need, old boy."

I suddenly resolved not to tell him just yet how much of a friend in need I actually had been. Here now, I thought might be the not altogether friendly opportunity for which I had lingered in Paris, that of discovering Jacques to be a marvelously clever fraud.

Pervier came then to the point of his visit.

"It is necessary to tell you, Monsieur 'U-ges, that early this morning we arrested an Apache known as Le Fueret. We have reason to think he has been lurking about the premises of an English gentleman who is resident of Paris with the idea of doing some mischief. He is locked up in the Sante and for some reason of which I am myself in ignorance, Monsieur Le Prefet himself desires that you be so amiable as to make an examination of him without delay. All that I can tell you is that it must be a matter of considerable importance, as otherwise M. le Prefet would not have instructed that you be disturbed at this hour."

I looked at Jacques, expecting him to protest this demand that he examine the suspect with what must have been for him absolutely nothing to go on. But he merely nodded.

"Very well, Previer. I'll go as soon as the concierge brings up my coffee, which ought to be right now."

We went over presently to the Sante, where Jacques had examined Robert Delmas in the Vibart case. I had, of course, a pretty good idea of what was afoot. The prefecture, knowing of Dr. Goransko's position toward the Karopolous crowd and perhaps not entertaining high regard for the method of those financiers, had quietly taken measures to protect Goransko. Possibly Sir Peter had requested a guard for his premises.

This Apache Le Fueret (a good name for him, "The Ferret,") had been seen skulking about, possibly entering with his bomb. Then he had given them the slip to try to get Jacques, at about the same time that the bomb might be expected to blow Goransko to eternity, and the reason for this measure was not hard to guess. The bomb outrage might be considered a political coup after the time-honored fashion of Balkan statesmanship, but the vigilant French police had reason to think that the espionage of Goransko's movements was not from a political motive but a financial one, and they desired to lose no time in getting an index from the mind of this Apache to those higher up, if Jacques had actually the power he professed. Perhaps they entertained the same doubts of him as I did, but in their case secret ones—wondered how much was actually clairvoyance and how much close deduction.

Well, here at last was the crucial test, I thought. Dr. Goransko had assured me that he was not going to report what had happened, and I believed him. At any rate, it was certain that he had not reported it to Jacques. So that now, thus requisitioned to examine the mind of the Ferret with no more to go on than that the Apache had been seen slinking about Sir Peter's premises, Jacques would either have to deliver the goods or stall, plead his psychic cloudiness as the result of his acute attack of flu, or that he had not enough information of the case to pose his mental questions in sharp focus, or some such bunk.

Just as before, in the Vibart case, we were shown into the dingy room, where there immediately convened a group of police, this time with no outsiders, no psychologists, or other scientific observers.

The Ferret was brought in, but if he recognized me he gave no sign of it. As a matter of fact, I don't think he did recognize me, because the night light had been very dim, and I had ducked under him when he sprang at me. Besides, I doubt that in our scuffle, flopping over and over down the stairs, he realized that he had struck his knife into an artificial leg and not a hard muscular one.

One thing was certain, that he dreaded the examination, and rallied all of his resistance to oppose it. He didn't resist physically, having had a taste perhaps of French police methods with recalcitrants—these more refined than ours, but no less unpleasant. He was placed in the shabby chair, and Jacques, seating himself opposite, adopted quickly his technique of taking the head lightly between his hands, and with the evil face with its shifting eyes glowing first into his, then away like those of the ferocious little beast from which he had his sobriquet, delivered a finding that held me breathless with astonishment.

"The oblique mind of this creature is a maze of murderous impulses," he said in his gentle voice, now perfectly clear. "It is true, as M. Pervier has told me, that this man has been spying on Dr. Goransko, with the motive of discovering the best means for his assassination. That was arranged for last night, but failed because of an interruption of which this man is ignorant, and which, therefore I am unable to describe.

"But The Ferret, counting on its accomplishment, proceeded then in an effort to remove the one person whom both he and those by whom he was employed felt they had most reason to dread. That is myself."

A subdued ripple ran through the spectators. Jacques, with a slight shake of his head, continued: "The Ferret came to my studio and entered. Pausing at the concierge's loge, he muttered, 'The doctor to see M. 'U-ges.' The elevator was out of order, so he mounted the stairs, and on reaching the door of my studio unlocked it with a key that had been furnished him. It did not fit precisely, because the lock is an American one of fine adjustment. The Ferret does not know how this key was procured, so that also I cannot say with certainty. At any rate, as a souris d'hotel, a sneak thief of some ability, he managed with a file to correct the slight misfit of the key so that it would turn the bolt.

"But just as he had accomplished this there arrived upon the scene my friend, or perhaps I had better say my suspicious acquaintance, Mr. Clarke of New York, who has come here with the prime object of exposing me as a fraud, and who, having failed to do so in the Vibart, Do Costello and Tineo cases, has remained.

"Mr. Clarke returned to the studio a little after midnight, through a motive of really devoted friendship, which was his solicitude about my health, and the fact that he knew me to be alone in the studio, having sent my manservant on a business effort to Hendaye. Mr. Clarke surprised The Ferret as he was about to enter with intent to kill me. The Ferret drew his knife and sprang at Mr. Clarke, who, although a mutile de guerra, is a strong and active man. They grappled and rolled down the stairs. The Ferret struck twice with his knife, then broke free and escaped down the stairs and out, but the loss of a leg suffered in the trenches by Mr. Clarke was fortunately his salvation, as The Ferret's knife had struck against the artificial leg."

Jacques rose, gave me a warm look that was charged also with amusement, then glanced around at the others.

"Considering the nature of M. Clarke's errand to France, I can scarcely blame him for not mentioning to me what happened. No doubt he desired to put my powers to a crucial test, but it is certain that he desired also to spare a man as ill as I appeared to be from the shock and excitement of knowing that this attack on my life had just been made. If you will look at M. Clarke's right trouser leg you will see two rents in the material, carefully pinned together, and you will probably find some unhealed scars on the artificial leg beneath."

In a buzz of excitement I submitted to a physical examination, very red of face, I am afraid. The Ferret appeared, like Jacques's other subjects, to be in a state of dejected collapse. His narrow face had a sort of "Oh, what's the use?" expression.

Jacques turned then as if to leave. He never lingered after an examination to discuss the details. The police had learned that his findings were not to be questioned.

But now the presiding officer said apologetically. "We have still another subject for examination, monsieur, if that will not too greatly tax your strength. An admission made by this "miserable" after Pervier was sent to request your presence has led to another arrest."

Jacques made a Gallic gesture of compliance, then said briefly, "So you have arrested Bogoroff? Well, bring him in."

Bogoroff was led into the room. And Bogoroff, while attempting a sneering and defiant attitude, was evidently in a pitiable state of funk. But, like all of Jacques' subjects or victims, he betrayed the same curiously passive submission to the ordeal that I had noticed in the others, whether guilty or not, and which I had been at some loss to account for. It was as if men who had no lack of resistance when confronted with hostile influences they understood admitted themselves beaten at the start when opposed to a subtle force against which they were at a loss to know what sort of defense might be arrayed.

"Well, monsieur," said Jacques pleasantly and with no trace of irony or triumph in his voice, "it appears that you are to keep your promise a little sooner than you had anticipated. You told me yesterday that you would consent to my examination of your mind as soon as there should be no longer any danger of your catching the flu. Today I can assure you you run no risk at all."

Bogoroff shot a look at him that was part wondering, part resigned. He voiced then a suspicion that had in the last hour been forming vaguely in my own mind.

"I do not believe, monsieur, that there was ever any danger of that at all. Garlic in a spray may serve a double purpose. To cure a cold or to produce all the symptoms of one."

Bogoroff, as we could all see, braced himself as might a man who, although verbally protesting his disbelief, yet dreads the gaze of the hypnotic eye.

But there was nothing of this quality in the serenity of Jacques's regard. On the contrary, he merely glanced at Bogoroff's tormented eyes, then looked up at the discolored ceiling of the room.

"The mind of this man is in such a turmoil, messieurs, that it is a little difficult to filter the essential from the nonessential facts. Of the latter, I may say merely that his business manipulations are as honest as most of their sort, though plundering the countries he claims to benefit.

"I shall, therefore, confine myself strictly to the recent relations between Monsieur Bogoroff and myself. He came to my studio and insisted that I postpone other orders in his favor, not because he was so anxious

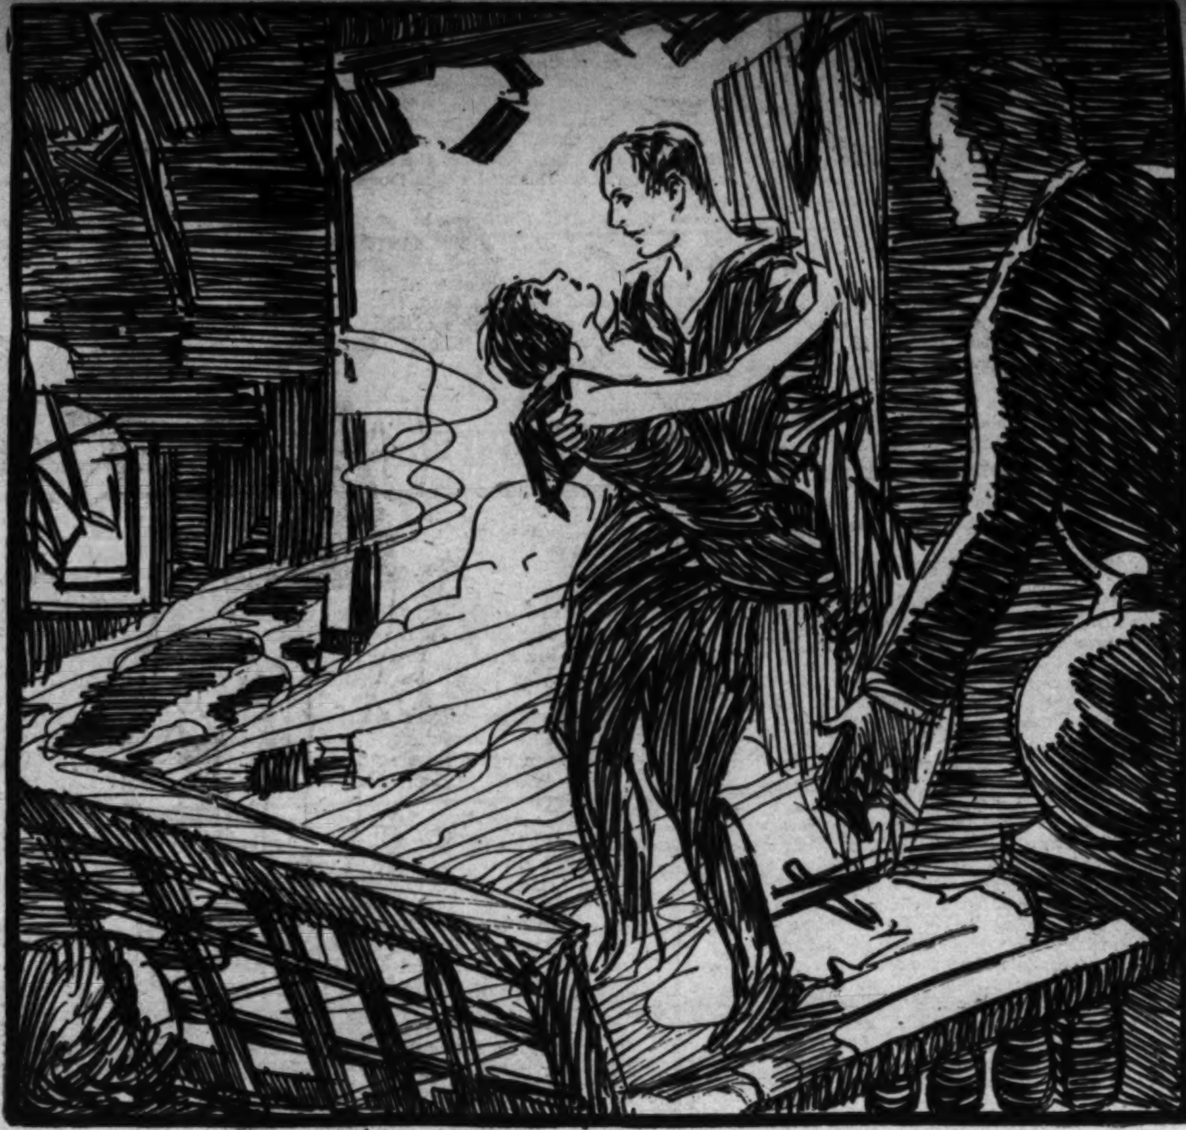
Craig Kennedy and The Fourteen Points

By Arthur B. Reeve



Wally Knight staggered out with Adora—almost overcome in his arms.

KENNEDY handed the powerful field-glasses to me. I focused them on a little speck up in the sky, that I knew must be Wallace Knight flying a Curtiss plane in the New York Star contest for altitude while carrying a passenger.

"Craig!" I exclaimed, "he is coming down!"

Kennedy nodded. "That's what I wanted to see."

I thought of the cheer for Wallace Knight when he had taken off against Harper in the DeHaviland, a cheer quite as much also for Henry Gaines, his passenger.

A few moments and the speck was visible to the naked eye.

"Mr. Jameson! What's the matter?"

It was Adora Gaines, with us, who made the exclamation, hands tensely clasped, peering eagerly up at the descending airplane.

Our college classmate, Henry Gaines, had married a splendid girl, Adora Hollister, of Westbury. Kennedy had known the Hollisters for years.

Gaines loved with an intensity of feeling. Solidity, a sense of security, prevailed when he was around. It was that that had first attracted Adora Hollister.

Wally Knight was a singularly handsome fellow, of a long, rangy type, one of the born birdmen.

Henry Gaines was of a quite different type, quiet, reserved in nature. Wally had been among the unsuccessful suitors for the beautiful Adora Hollister. He had taken it like the sportsman his friends found him.

He was sweeping down now in long spirals as he had climbed, now volplaning to earth. Knight rounded one of the pylons, swerved his machine dangerously toward a section, where about ten thousand people had gathered, then out over the field.

His propellers droned to a quick silence and we could see Wally rise, waving his arms frantically. He cupped his hands and shouted,

"Is there a doctor on the field?"

Kennedy broke from the crowd, over the fence, and ran toward him. I followed with Adora.

As I came nearer I could make out Henry Gaines, pale with an exaggerated pallor, sprawled in his seat in the machine. A thin trickle of blood from his nose had already begun to coagulate.

Doctor Nesmith pushed ahead of us.

"How high did you get?" he asked, speaking rapidly as he made a hurried, thorough examination.

"Only about fifteen thousand feet."

"Traces of pulmonary hemorrhage," muttered the doctor to himself. "Rapid breathing because of lack of oxygen in the rarefied air. . . . Heart didn't keep pace. . . ."

As he turned he did not need to say anything. I knew that Henry Gaines was dead.

For several moments Adora Gaines stood stunned. White and shocked, she looked helplessly at her husband.

Doctor Nesmith and Craig lifted him on a stretcher that had been hurriedly brought forward.

Wallace could not stand her grief as she bent over her husband. He left our party and looked over the airplane without seeing.

Adora raised her eyes, startled, to Craig. "I can't believe he left me alone here. . . . It is all too sudden. Where is Wallace?"

I called him.

"Adora," he cried huskily, "I wish I had gone in his place. I feel—terrible. . . . I—I shall never fly again!"

"How did you know, Wallace? What did he say last?" Adora leaned forward tensely in utter tearless grief.

"I heard a cough. I knew then he must be in trouble. I couldn't leave the controls. I started back, down. I looked. I know as I watched his lips that he was saying, 'Adora!'"

"While I was laughing, gay, down here with you," she exclaimed, looking solemnly at us, "Henry was dying and calling me up there—and I didn't know it . . . I want to go home, Craig—to mother's."

It was the day after the funeral.

"Walter, we ought to go around to see Adora," remarked Kennedy thoughtfully. "She needs help."

We motored around to the Gaines house. As we entered the big hall, a maid handed Adora a huge bunch of white chrysanthemums. Adora looked at the card hastily and laid it down. As we followed her into the living-room, I saw that the card was from Wally Knight. Adora Gaines was still not much more than a child. She was only nineteen when she was married.

"It's awful—today—Craig?" she half whispered.

"I know," he answered, his voice lowering. "That is why we have come to see you."

Suddenly she betrayed great agitation. She had been leaning against a big chair when a pitiful moan escaped her. She gripped the chair.

"Henry's chair! Oh, Craig, I can't bear it. The flowers are beautiful; my friends are so kind; you have been just what I would expect of one of my oldest friends. But none—compensates for the loss. . . . Oh, help me, Craig. You are so dependable. I think that is one reason why Henry cared so much for you." Somehow the girl could not cry.

She wanted to be alone. We knew it. We left the room quietly. But before we had closed the hall door we heard sobs—the blessing of tears.

It must have been several weeks later, when the clicking of steam in the radiators impelled Kennedy to gather southern hotel literature.

"Good heavens, Craig, those pictures of open verandas, sunshades, bathing suits! Br-r! How can you look at them?"

Kennedy looked at me. "What you need is a ticket to the sunny South. I'm going to get the tickets. I leave it to you to arrange with the Star Syndicate to cover that aviation meet down at Fort Myers and take a little vacation at the same time. Be ready to leave tonight."

"Palm Beach first," nodded Craig as we boarded the train, "and no cases or copy to think about for a week."

I was skimming over some stuff about the aviation to be held in Florida when an item caught my attention. "Harper is going to fly the DeHaviland again, Craig," I informed.

"So? I don't suppose you read the society notes." He put his finger on an item. "The list of guests at the Royal Poinciana includes Adora Gaines and her mother."

When we called on Adora the morning after we arrived, we found that she had gone to the bathing beach with some friends. Craig and I strolled around by the beach to see her.

What was my suprrise to find Reggie Harper among the party. It was easy to see that Harper was doing his best to attract Adora and make her forget.

We strolled along the white sand while Adora took a dip. Out on the float we could see Harper with her again. Craig paused to watch as Adora stood up on the float, slim and straight in her plain black bathing suit. Some one was counting, "One! Two! Three!" They dove off together. There was scarcely a splash as Adora's body slipped into the water. A few seconds and she rose to the surface. They were off to the buoy.

Like a water creature herself she made her course direct for the mark. I could almost see the easy smile on her face. Harper reached the buoy about the same time. But returning to the float Adora was several strokes ahead.

Harper seemed to enjoy his defeat, too. But I wondered at Adora. The excitement of the contest over, she almost seemed to forget him. He was no more than any of the others.

Even back on the sand Harper did not take this indifference as well as he had taken the defeat. He was inclined to frown and sulk.

I had been telling Adora how suddenly Craig and I had decided on our trip. Harper interrupted, sitting down on the beach with us. "You'll let me take you out on my yacht this afternoon, Adora?" he asked. "A number of your friends will be aboard."

"Not today, Reggie, thank you. I can't."

"May I ask why?" he asked, smothering vexation.

Adora herself seemed puzzled for a minute, then finally explained with a little nervous laugh, "I can't tell you. You wouldn't understand."

Harper was silent and perplexed. A party down the beach called to him. He excused himself to Adora, nodded coldly to us.

I fancied I saw a look of relief flit over her face as he went down the beach. She caught me watching her. "Walter," she confessed, "his attentions annoy me. When we are alone he has talked about Henry to me, oh, so sympathetically. But somehow I feel the sympathy doesn't ring true. I don't know. He's so infernally chesty, too, about holding the world's record for altitude—35,525 feet, wasn't it?"

Kennedy nodded but neither of us said anything. Finally Adora looked up at Kennedy. "Craig," she said slowly, in half a whisper with a far away look in her eyes, "do you suppose Reggie Harper had anything against Henry and Wally? He won't let me talk of that meet at all . . ."

Craig shrugged. "Who was his passenger that time?" I asked. "I've forgotten."

"Steele Porter," she replied.

"Oh, yes, that electrical engineer."

"They're having some kind of meet or test or something in a few days at Fort Myers," she continued. "I don't know much about it, didn't want to know. But I hear there is something they believe the Germans have discovered, a mystery ray, some invention or other, about bringing down airplanes. Reggie is to fly, they tell me, and Steele Porter will be there. Do you know anything about it?"

Kennedy disclaimed any knowledge and I saw that it was my cue also to change the subject.

Harper left the following day, Adora toward the end of the week to visit some friends at Pinehurst. That left us free to journey over to Fort Myers where I could write my story.

There was one incident that leaked out which impressed me, though why, or what its implications might be, I did not venture to guess. It had not so much to do with

Good Short Stories from Everywhere

COMPILED FOR THE TIMES SUNDAY MAGAZINE

Of Course

The Reverend William Ralph Inge, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, is considered by some to be a very human fellow and not quite so gloomy as he is said to be. On occasion he has been known to relate some very amusing anecdotes.

"An English clergyman was telling his flock about the terrible effects and disastrous results of strong drink and concluded with the words:

"I hope the day will soon come when every bottle of this accursed liquor will be taken away and emptied in the nearest river. . . . We will now sing hymn number 204. 'Shall we gather at the river?'"

She Knew

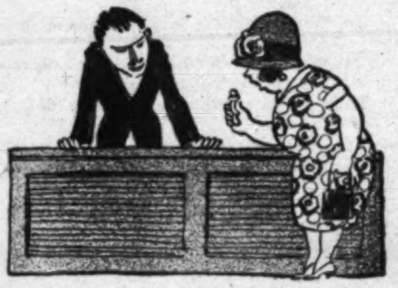
While her husband was away, signing up on a big contract, Mrs. Brady took Lorraine and Valie and the rest of the children for a trolley ride.

"Are those all yours?" demanded the conductor, "or is it a picnic?"

"They're all mine," said Mrs Brady icily, "and it's no picnic."

On the Job

An assistant in the library department of one of the Broadway stores had been transfered temporarily to the perfumery department. Shortly afterward a lady came up to the counter and asked: "Can you recommend this brand of perfume?" holding up a bottle.



"Certainly, madam," was the reply. "It is one of our best smellers."

Still Panting

A few minutes after the alarm was given in the fire at Hotel Del Monte last year, one of the guests joined a group of friends who were watching the spectacle and chaffed them on their aparent excitement.

"There was nothing to be excited about," he said. "When the alarm sounded I jumped out of bed, lighted a cigarette, brushed my hair, and took my time about dressing. I didn't like the knot in my necktie, so I tied it over again—that's how cool I was."

"Fine," one of his friends remarked, "but why didn't you put on your trousers?"

Wasting Time

David Janowski, who represented France in the international chess tournament in New York, said:

"I admire the American girl for her horse sense. She means business. With her the European philanderer has no chance.

"A European philanderer tried to monopolize an American girl at Monte Carlo.

"'What is the meaning of platonic affection?' he asked her tenderly one night on the moonlit terrace of the Casino.

"'It's usual meaning,' she answered, 'is that the chap who talks to you about it is usually too poor or too stingy to get married.'"

Her Verdict

A liquor case was being tried in a Justice Court, says William W. Hurley of Artesia. The selection of jurors had taken place and two women who had been rejected were discussing the case. The officer who had made the arrest, and signed the complaint, was a large flashy man of portly build. The defendant was a man of short stature and slight build.

One of the women, apparently somewhat offended because she had been rejected, said to her companion as the discussion waxed warm, "It's a good thing for him that they didn't keep me on the jury, for I would have convicted the big, fat, old devil, sure."

Extra Dividend

The late Thomas W. Lawson once said to a Boston reporter: "Business honesty was a joke till I exposed it in my 'Frenzied Finance.' What improvements that book brought about!

"In the old bad days a boy once asked his father for a definition of business honesty. The father answered:

"'Business honesty? Humph. Opinions differ vastly on this question. However, suppose you were cashing a $500 check at the bank, and the paying teller gave you $600 by mistake. Well if you gave half of the extra hundred to your partner that would be business honesty.'"

Force of Habit

"Is he an experienced poker player?"

"Well, I'll tell you something about him, and you can judge for yourself. He was a member of a Saturday night poker club. He was invariably present at the club meetings, and his luck was invariably the same.

"One night he got to the club rooms a little late, to find that the club had been raided, and looking through the keyhole of the locked door he saw chairs overturned and the whole room in a turmoil. Unable to get in he slipped his pay envelope under the door and came away."

Cheap for Cash

Booth Tarkington, at a farewell dinner that was given him in New York before his departure on his long European tour, said of a well-known novelist:

"He began by writing well. He now writes trash. I suppose he got discouraged with the moderate sale of his good works, and hopes to sell his bad work in abundance."

Mr. Tarkington smiled.

"The road to fame," he said, "is overcrowded with men who, discouraged, are hurrying back."

Don't Touch the Baby

Four-year-old Miss O'Neil, says W. D. Coombs, had been taught, in answer to her questions, that little babies were brought in beautiful flowers. It was noticed she watched closely all the flowers in the garden, and upon being asked what she was so intently watching, she said, "I am looking for a baby flower."

A few days after she came from the garden very much excited, and led her mother to a large rose, where a large bumble bee was busy gathering honey.

"Oh, look, mama," she said, "the rose has brought us a colored baby."

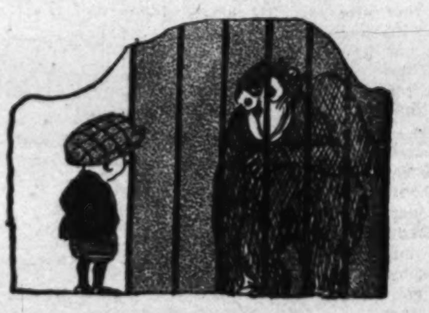
Real Pedigree

When Harold Burress was a little fellow, his mother took him to the Zoo, where he was much interested in a large ape.

"What is that, mother?" asked Harold.

"That is one of our ancestors, so some people say," replied his mother.

"Gee!" pipes up Harold, "I wish I could just show that to Billy Bradford who is always blowing about how his came over in the Mayflower."



De Luxe Model

Lew Lipton was wandering around aimlessly in one of the Seventh-street department stores when the floorwalker approached him.

"Looking for something?" he asked.

"Yes, my wife," replied Lew.

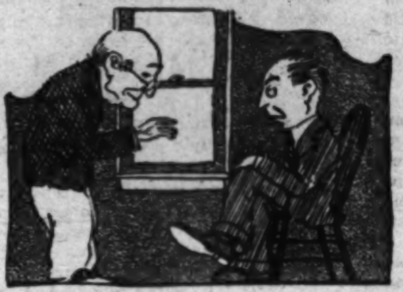
"Would you mind describing her, please?"

"Well, she's sort of a limousine body, great on the curves, and usually runs in low."

No Orangeade Here

Old Scrooge was entertaining a caller at his Miami villa. After a couple of hours of dry talk the old fellow said genially:

"Would you like something refreshing—a cooling draught, George?"



"Why yes, I don't care if I do," said George.

"Good!" said old Scrooge, "I'll just open this window. There's a grand sea breeze a-blowin'."

Last Warning

"The grafting aircraft patriots, the men who grafted a billion and never gave our boys a single fighting plane—well, these fellows hold their heads high and say they have never been exposed."

Eddie Rickenbacker, the flying ace, was talking to a Washington correspondent.

"Oh, no," he went on ironically, "our grafting aircraft patriots have never been exposed. They are like Jimmy Higgins.

"The Rev. Dr. Steenthly stopped short in his sermon one spring morning and pointed his finger at Jim Higgins and roared:

"'James Higgins, this is the third time I've had to interrupt my discourse to wake you up. It is happens again, sir, I'll expose you to the whole congregation by name.'"

Road to Heaven

Novelist Upton Sinclair was talking in Pasadena about a rich man who, having gained his millions in very devious ways, was now giving them away to universities, hospitals and churches.

"The old boy reminds me of little Jimmy," he said.

"'Well, what are you going to be when you grow up?' I asked little Jimmy.

"'I'm goin' to be a pirate,' said he, 'till I get old and infirm and then I'm goin' to turn to the Lord.'"

Motion Overruled

R. Goodrich tells this one:

When Lenin died, the Bolsheviks, for the benefit of some foreign correspondents, announced that the Russian people would be "consulted" about a possible successor to Lenin. The majority of the peasants were afraid, however, to name anybody.

There was one very old patriotic peasant who dared to express his thoughts. When the commissars came to him and asked him whom he would like to have in Leinn's place, he answered curtly: "The whole d— bunch of you."

His body was found on the outskirts of the city the following morning.

Worse and Worse

"How's yo' feelin' now, Sam?"

"Liza, I'se a sick man. De doctor says I'se got berkolosis."

"Dat's all right, Sam; we'll take keer of yo' an' get rid of dat berkolosis."

The following day Sam was more dejected than ever.

"'Tain't no use, Liza, no use. I ain't never gwine to get well. De doctor say dis mornin' I got two berkolosis.'" this [illegible] as with the thoughts that now were surging through my superheated brain as if some force were projecting them. Steele Porter, flying in a small airboat, fell in the waters of the Gulf. Porter also, to me, stuck absolutely to the explanation that it had been an accident.

Back again in New York after the quiet winter in the Carolinas and Florida, Adora Gaines, now that the first bitter shock was over, sought desperately, often despairingly, to find again some part of the happiness she had lost.

"Craig," I reported one night, "guess whom I saw today?"

"Who was it?" he asked.

"Steele Porter. You know he lives in Westbury. He gave me the low down on most of the Wheatley Hills folks."

"Well, what am I supposed to ask? About Adora Gaines?"

I nodded. "Adora seems to be taking her place in society again—about as well as anyone could hope after her loss."

"Has she any particular friend?" asked Craig quickly.

"Many would like to be, according to Porter. Wally Knight is one of the most attentive, he says."

Kennedy went into a brown study. "Nothing very strange in all that . . . Everybody knew that Wally Knight could hardly wait to get home from college that June two years ago. It seems quite natural for him to try to win her again." Craig paused. "Only he doesn't come up to Henry Gaines."

"All I know is what Porter told me. Knight gets the choicest flowers, the latest books, almost before the ink is dry."

Kennedy looked away reflectively.

"Dreaming over her, too, Craig?" I rallied.

"Yes. I am dreaming of her—because I want that little girl to be happy—because I loved Henry Gaines—and because I have known her since she was almost a baby."

I felt an intense sorrow for Adora. I sympathized with her, but I believed that she would be misguided if she ever sought happiness with either Reggie Harper or Wallace Knight. They were not the type of Henry Gaines, not her type.

The next thing I observed, as the spring advanced into summer, was a conflict between Wally Knight and Harper. Up to the time of the altitude meet in October they had been very good friends. In fact, I had heard that they had even gone into perfecting an invention together. Now, with Adora, there had been noticeable a growing coolness between them which finally broke into open hostility. I knew it was over Adora. Outwardly it was over the ownership of a patent taken out on their joint invention, a claim on the part of each as to work done and hence for a greater proportionate share in the invention.

It did not come to the actual point of court action, but there was considerable gossip about it.

The dispute between the inventors had begun to wax hot at the close of the summer, as their suit for Adora's favor grew keener.

It was a situation fraught with discomfort if not with danger, at least to Adora, still gloriously oblivious to it, and I was delighted when, early in September, I heard that Harper had been given a most flattering commission in the air service at the great new British Singapore station. I was pleased, the more so when I also heard that an attorney, a mutual friend of the two, had brought the rivals together on one point at least and that Wally Knight, now engrossed in some financing which his banking house handled for the British government, had agreed to relinquish any claim to the supercharger in favor of Harper. I felt that it was fortunate. It was magnanimous, I felt, on Wally's part, too. Yet when I thought of the heat of the contest for Adora, I could not help having a feeling that Singapore was a long way off, that it looked as if Harper were running away from a fight.

Thus it came about that before I realized it, a year had passed from the tragedy of the flying field. Without a thought of it, with Craig I accepted a week-end invitation to visit the Ingrahams out in Westbury.

Our ride out took us through Wheatley Hills.

"I never go through this part of the country, Craig, without thinking of the airplane tragedy," I remarked.

We peered through a white-pine hedge as we rolled past the Gaines estate on the country road.

"Here's the driveway. Let's turn in and see her."

A quick twist of the wheel and we nosed up the white shell road to the charming place set in a locust grove.

Sitting on the lower step of the wide porch, in the warmth of the sunshine, bending over the face of a little boy asleep, Adora smiled up at us as we approached, with a quick move of her finger toward her lips.

She waved toward some chairs on the porch. "Do you mind waiting? He was so tired and I took him on my lap. I sang a little song to him and he fell asleep. I don't like to disturb him." She looked down at the child, then raised a pair of the saddest eyes I ever saw. Her soul was in those eyes.

"Whose child is it?" I whispered.

"My housekeeper's. Isn't he a wonderful little chap?"

The boy stirred restlessly even at the whispers and Adora was quiet again.

It was then that I noticed Craig looking at another car just around the turn in the driveway. It was a snappy roadster.

TO THE CONDUCTOR

Lines to John Steven McGroarty

By K. V. BENNIS

Verdugo Hills! Tonight the moon
  Hangs low above your altar stair;
Your altar, where a far flung voice
  Has asked the world to say a prayer.

A congregation's whispered prayer
  That comes from near and distant lands;
From Synagogue whose rafters spread
  Above "A house not made by hands."

The moon's pale image floats above
  These hills and distant Monterey;
A halo on the edge of night
  Along the Padres' winding way

The Padres' winding way that leads
  Among the hills and by the sea;
The monumental hills of faith
  The sea of God's tranquility.

Serra! Sleep—your work goes on
  Along the way your footsteps lie,
For here, on the Verdugo Hills
  Another holds the cross on high.

"Were you going for a ride?" asked Craig. "We just stopped for a moment to see how you were and—"

The door from the living-room of the house opened. Wallace Knight paused for a moment and I rather imagined our presence did not fit in with his plans, for I caught a shade of annoyance which quickly gave place to his usual easy debonair manner as he strode forward to greet us.

"How are you, Kennedy? Jameson, mighty good to see you! What do you think of Adora? I promised to take her for a ride. Just before I arrive, this kid falls asleep on her lap and he must not be disturbed. Can't you give him a pinch—just a little one?"

We laughed at his impatience. Adora smiled gently, too. "Wally's so kind—but this baby has privileges. I think that is the trouble. He's envious." She leaned over and kissed the child lightly, then smiled at Knight, teasingly.

"I should say he had privileges! Adora, you have the advantage. This boy gets for nothing what I am afraid to take."

A big St. Bernard bounded around the corner of the house and before she could stop him poked his cold wet muzzle between her and the child's face.

The boy was wide awake, ready for a romp with the dog. He wriggled off her lap and she followed him with a wistful glance.

Wally Knight was uncomfortable. I knew that he was very much in love. He hated to see her in this mood. He knew she was unhappy and this particular unhappiness pained him. He had been quietly urging Adora to marry him at the end of the year. He loved her and wanted all of her—even her memories.

"Well," he exclaimed to Craig, "that's the first time that dog ever did anything to please me."

Adora smiled quietly. "Wally, you shouldn't say that. You are just a big selfish boy."

"The baby is just a little selfish boy, too!"

"Besides," she went on, "I love that dog. He was nothing but a pup, all legs and head, when Henry brought him home to me."

Knight again by an effort suppressed his annoyance.

"Well, Walter, we must be going, or we'll be late at the Ingrahams'," put in Craig "Knight has had enough interruptions."

"Oh, are you staying with the Ingrahams?"

"Yes, we'll see you again, Adora. Good by. Good-by, Knight."

We bowed our way back to the car.

Sunday morning at the Ingrahams' found the other guests headed for the links. Kennedy preferred a ride in the glorious country and I agreed with Craig.

It was a perfect day for a canter and Craig and I were enjoying ours to the utmost, when we noticed a couple on horseback approaching us.

As we rode up, Adora dismounted lightly, holding the reins in her hand.

"Don't you love these country roads?" she asked.

"We were going by your place to make a call," nodded Kennedy. "This is better, however."

"It's wonderful," I put in, meaning her.

"Yes," she agreed, thinking only of the circumstances. "It's exhilarating. I used to ride a lot with Henry. He loved horses—and rode well, too; sat his saddle like an Arab."

Again I saw that slight frown on Knight's face. If Adora would only stop those reminiscences! They made him ill at ease.

"Wally, you have much to be thankful for. You are physically fit. You can do everything."

"Shall we ride on?" Knight urged, changing the subject.

Adora had been watching him earnestly. "Everything," she repeated, her eyes far away. Her voice fell into wistful cadences. "Do you remember, Wallace, the time he went to be examined by the insurance doctor? . . . Henry just laughed. He said he didn't believe anything he heard and only half of what he saw. Don't you remember? Weren't you at the house that night when he came home and told me?"

Knight was about to reply when his horse shied at some falling leaves and started down the road.

"Good-by, Craig and Walter! I'm off, too! Come around soon. I must catch Wally, now. His horse is faster than mine!"

A light leap into the saddle and she was off, galloping down the quiet lane in the direction in which we had just come.

I often asked myself why it was that I felt that intense dislike for Wallace Knight. I had nothing personally against him. If I had asked myself frankly, I am afraid I would have had to admit it was merely that he rubbed me the wrong way.

The day had been a busy day. After a few hands of bridge Craig and I decided to retire.

My room had been darkened some time when I waked suddenly to the realization that I was hearing something quite unusual. It was the siren blowing weirdly in the night. I could hear the roar of the motors of the fire apparatus. In the direction of the turnpike I could see a glare in the sky, getting more vivid by the minute. I called Craig.

He jumped up, peered out of the window. "Get dressed," he decided. "Let's go."

There was a general exodus of cars from Rolls-Royces to flivvers. We were first to swing past the lodge. "It's the Gaines house," shouted the lodgekeeper. "Central just told me."

The way Craig covered that road would have done credit to the advertisements of the stock car he was driving.

Turning up the private road we had a clear view of the fire. The flames were now licking up through the roof, it seemed from every side. Nothing could possibly save it.

"I hope everybody is out." Craig let the car roll off the road on the lawn, jumped out among the growing crowd of firemen and residents. "Where's Adora Gaines?" he shouted.

"No one's seen her. Wally Knight was among the first to get here," answered one. "He's gone in to find her. Neither has come out!"

Craig strode amid the smoke and stifle and falling embers, up on the porch. He flung open the door. Just as he did Wally Knight staggered out with Adora almost overcome in his arms. His own strength was nearly gone as he choked and panted.

"Take her, Craig; I'm all in."

Kennedy lifted her as Knight almost fell in my own arms. Adora's life had been saved.

Wally Knight came over to Adora and stood silently by her. He was splendid, I must admit, standing there, his dark eyes shining with excitement, his hair hanging damp over his forehead, his clothes scorched. The crowd regarded him with a certain awe. Adora heard him and looked up.

"Wally, how can I thank you? But for you I would still be in there." She shuddered and hid her face in her hands. "It was awful when I thought no one could come to help me."

He waited until she was quiet. Somehow, to me, he seemed too self-controlled, too deliberate. But I considered. That very quality of his was what made him such a successful aviator.

Adora was facing a sudden emotional crisis. She knew just as well as if Wally had spoken what was the manner in which he expected her to thank him. She read the question in his ardent eyes. She looked from his eyes to the burning house. Everything that belonged to Henry was being destroyed—everything but her thoughts. The world did not expect her to stop living. Evidently God had not intended it. Had she not been rescued by the very man who was urging her to mate with him?

A light touch on her shoulder caused her

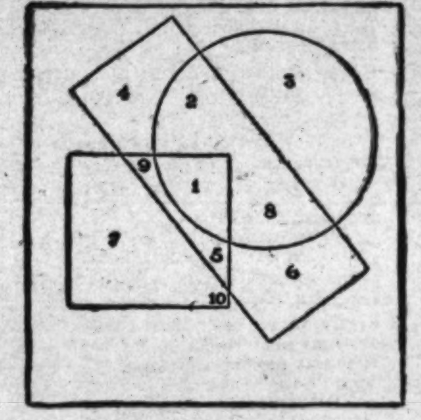
Geometric Figures

By BRAIN TESTER

Here is a simple test which combines powers of observation and concentration together with ability to record your answers speedily. It is really easy but it is surprising how many people become confused.

In the drawing there is an oblong, a square and a circle. In two minutes see if you can answer these seven questions.



1. What numbers are in the square but not in the oblong or circle? ....
2. What numbers are in the oblong but not in the square or circle?....
3. What numbers are in the circle but not in the oblong or square? ....
4. What numbers are in the square as well as oblong but not in the circle? ....
5. What numbers are in the square as well as circle but not in the oblong? ....
6. What numbers are in the oblong as well as circle but not in the square? ....
7. What numbers are in the oblong, square and circle? ....

SYNONYM TEST

If the two words in each line mean the same, underscore "same." If the meaning is opposite, underscore "opposite."

Example:

love....hate....same....opposite

Time allowed: five minutes.

Answers will be given next week.

1. alive....dead ....same....opposite 1
2. genuine....real ....same....opposite 2
3. chasm....abyss ....same....opposite 3
4. bitter....sweet ....same....opposite 4

DISPUTED CLAIMS

By SAM LOYD

A group of miners decided that a pooling of their claims would be advantageous to all concerned. Then came a dispute as to their individual holdings in the consolidated properties, for they were calculating their proportionate rights on the basis of how much fencing each of the three claims required to inclose it. Then the engineer, who arbitrated the matter, pointed out the surprising coincidence that the three right-angled triangles were of exactly the same area, and thus the three owners were entitled to similar shares in the new company.

It makes an interesting problem to discover three right-angled triangles, of different dimensions, each containing an area of 3360 square feet, with the further condition that all dimensions (base, perpendicular and hypothenuse) shall be whole numbers.

CONCEALED GEOGRAPHY

THE EXTRA WORD TEST

This test is a very unusual one and has not been used to any great extent. It is a good measure of the capacity to perceive similarities existing in several words or objects. Five words are given. Four of the five words are related in some way to one another, i.e., the same relationship exists between any two of the four words. The fifth word is an outsider. It is your job to pick this outsider and underline it. For example.

Example: Cat, wolf, lion, horse, bass.

Bass is underlined as it is the outsider. The other four words are related in that they are all names of quadrupeds.

Try your intelligence out on the following.

1. Newspaper, magazine, pamphlet, novel, pen.
2. Hammer, saw, plane, gimlet, nail.
3. Sugar, salt, flour, bran, vinegar.
4. Kipling, Bryant, Poe, Shelley, Schopenhauer.
5. Go, come, jump, run, noise.
6. Ten, twenty, fourteen, thirty, forty.
7. Lively, boisterous, downcast, frivolous, gay.
8. German, Latin, English, French, Italian.
9. Twilight, noonday, evening, night, midnight.
10. Taciturn, noisy, silent, reticent, uncommunicative.
11. Essential, fundamental, unnecessary, needful, indispensable.
12. Apathetic, eager, anxious, ardent, desirous.
13. Eccentric, odd, normal, queer, irregular.
14. Honesty, integrity, truthful, upright, duplicity.
15. Privacy, retreat, secrecy, retirement, publicity.

There is a dim trail out over the Rocky Mountains—a dim trail that apparently leads to nowhere. Yet it was over this trail that Andrus DeVol traveled, first to health, and then to happiness. And after him followed Mary Grayhart—first to health and then to such happiness as she had never dreamed to find. Curious and beautiful destiny that sent these two so surely and so straightly into each other's ken. There never ceased to be in their eyes, as they regarded one another down through the years, a certain wonder, a marveling that life had found them out.

THE TRAIL

By Fannie Hurst

THERE is a dim trail that leads up over the enormous shoulder of one of a pack of Rocky Mountains that marches through Colorado.

A dim trail that apparently leads to nowhere.

A dim trail that loses itself finally in a sparse, flat wilderness of rock and sagebrush. Near the end of this trail surrounded by miles of sharp-cornered quarry rocks that sit on their haunches like chipmunks, there lived and had his solitary being one Andrus DeVol. There was nothing much about Andrus DeVol to distinguish him except his solitude.

Except for his monthly excursion to this or that supply store within a radius of thirty or forty miles, weeks could lengthen into months before Andrus heard any except the sound of his own voice, conversing, most probably, with the handful of sheep which nibbled for their little existence on the hillsides of the scanty DeVol Ranch.

DeVol, from the looks of him, might have been a school-teacher. A thin, scholastic little man, with eyes that watered readily, probably from too much reading, and a stoop to his shoulders and a scoop to his chest.

DeVol was a school-master and his eyes were weakened from too much reading, but the scoop to his chest was for a reason all its own. The occasional passer-by and the few of his friends back East who kept in touch with him wondered why any human being could seek out the solitary, sapless life DeVol had elected for himself.

DeVol knew. Grimly. Five years of secret fighting for health out there in the vastnesses of the Rocky Mountains had won him his battle. At the end of that period he had won it back, but no matter how secretly he may have yearned—and by nature Andrus DeVol was gregarious—he knew better than to risk the fruits of five years' struggle with the grim enemy within his chest, than to venture back to old climate conditions that were not friendly to him.

And so the years marched on and Andrus DeVol, who loved the haunts of men; who loved easy access to books, lived on in his solitude, and the rocky silences in their way came to have almost a terror for him; and the heroic bigness of mountains and the terrific silence of canyon to breed within him a bitterness and a loneliness and a burning nostalgia for human companionship.

By nature DeVol was not of the stuff the congenital recluse is made of, and so in the vastness and in the silence and in the terrific beauty of the grandeur of mountains the man was spiritually starving.

There was not much element of coincidence in the fact that Mary Grayhart came one winter from Springfield, Massachusetts, to live with a family on the nearest ranch to DeVol's, some nineteen miles away.

No great element of coincidence, because the identical reason that had driven DeVol from his place on the faculty of a boys' preparatory school in Vermont to these fastnesses of Rockies had sent Mary Grayhart, whose breath was short and staccato, into parts that were foreign and lonely and a little terrifying to her.

Mary Grayhart, because she had been reared in a countryside of not such heroic magnitude, loved greenness and the bridal finery of fruit trees in spring, and unpretentious hilly countryside and nature in intimate mood.

The pachyderm mountains, like fabled rhinoceroses standing in herds against the horizon, terrified her, swept her into a sense of loneliness and insignificance that sapped her vitality.

So that in the first year that Mary Grayhart dwelt in the ponderous shadows of the Rockies, even while her health improved, her heart grew fainter. Mary Grayhart was like some tiny traveler winding along a dim trail that led nowhere for her except into solitude and vastness and silence.

And it was on this dim trail that seemed to lead out from the hearts and haunts of men into the terrifying unknown of some infinitude that Mary Grayhart and Andrus DeVol, frightened travelers that had somehow by force of circumstance had to wander outside the human fold, met one another; found one another; and caused for one another the wilderness to bloom, as it were, into the kind of garden that love can generate even out of the pachyderm aridity of mountainside and rocky scape.

Curious and beautiful destiny that sent these two so surely and so straightly into each other's ken.

Out of DeVol's isolation there was to spring for him, in its stead, the richness and the beauty and the vitality of his love for Mary Grayhart.

And here was this little school-teacher, frightened by circumstance, beaten in health, laid low in spirit, sore in heart, who was to flee from all that was near and dear to her out into strange and alien places, only to find there all that was to be even nearer and dearer to her.

Curious and brooding destiny. Nothing much was to matter to these two; neither the aridity, nor the isolation, nor the desolation. There was within them a supernal power to transcend with the spirit even God's awful vastnesses.

When Andrus DeVol and Mary Grayhart found one another, these two little, puny little, travelers along the trail that led out to the horizon had the power within themselves to create out of barrenness a garden and out of aridity a beauty that passeth understanding.

In later years, when their children were to spring up about them and the handful of sheep on the hillside had grown into flocks of thousands and the wistful little face of Mary Grayhart had matured into rotundity and the scoop in Andrus DeVol's chest had swelled itself out into hardy convexity, they used to regard each other, these two, from opposite ends of their well-laden table.

Children intervened between them—sturdy children who loved them—and for miles around out of the erstwhile barrenness there billowed fruitful acreage that was the result of their labor.

And yet, regarding one another, in all of their well-being, there never ceased to be in the eyes of Mary and Andrus a certain tender wonder. A marvelling that life had found them out, each for the other, a marvelling that out on the dim trail that might have led so easily into solitude, Mary and Andrus, by the glory of their love, had turned the barrenness into a garden.

ways and journals, have been overworked in politics and are getting played out. That stuff has lost its punch, been flattened out by modern ideas, except in remote places."

"Does this Doctor Goransko oppose Bogoroff's crowd?" I asked.

"He did at first all he was worth, and that's a lot. He threatened even to start a general ruction if they tried to carry on their wholesale plunder schemes. He must be all right, because Sir Peter MacIlvaine, who was chief of a unit of the B. R. C. doing relief work at Sofia after the war, has put his little house on the Cours La Reine at Goransko's disposition while he's in Paris. He's here to oppose that concession scheme on the ground that it is a big steal."

I nodded. "What is Goransko, anyhow?"

"Nobody seems to know much about his origin. I've heard it said that he's a Jesuit apostate, who for some reason was expelled from the order. Others claim he's a reformed Albanian bandit, a ci-devant roi des montagnes, and still others that he's the left-handed son of a former European monarch. I should say, though, that he's just one of those occasional free lance social workers who's trying to do good in his own way, and has chosen about the roughest field in the whole wide world to do it in."

All of this sounded so interesting that I decided then and there to try to interview this Dr. Goransko that same evening, and to ask him point blank for his opinion of the Karopolous scheme. He might tell me or he might not, but at any rate I would be making some effort to be of service to Jacques.

I had some other foreign news items of a fiscal sort to finish and get off that day, so I spent the afternoon writing, and at about half past seven I dined chez Fouquet and afterward walked down the Avenue de l'Alma to the Cours La Reine, where my friend had told me that Dr. Goransko was stopping in Sir Peter MacIlvaine's private house. This proved to be quaint and charming, set well back in the thick foliage of a garden. I was admitted by a sedate English butler, who took my card, glanced at the name and that of the New York paper which I had the honor to represent, then asked me to step in the reception-room off the antechamber. A few minutes later he returned to say that Doctor Goransko would be pleased to see me, and ushered me into a little study, almost an office, in the rear of the house. Here he drew me a chair, saying that Doctor Goransko would come in presently.

Several minutes passed. The room described itself as the small library and home office of just such a welfare worker as I imagined Sir Peter MacIlvaine to be, a handsome empire desk and bookshelves filled with works of reference and travel and maps and a number of bound reports of the British Red Cross. The comfortable chair in which I sat was at the corner of the writing desk in front of a fireplace with fluted marble plasters and a marble mantel with the usual mirror reaching to the ceiling. On the wide mantel was the old-fashioned garniture de cheminee—a big porphyry clock in the center and heavy candlesticks of the same decorative stone on either end.

On the walls were some framed photographic enlargements of groups of Red Cross workers and headquarters in the Near East.

As I sat there waiting in a silence that was rather heavy and broken only by the ticking of the clock I became alive to first one, then another of two impressions. There was an odor in the room that stirred a recent unpleasant memory, and I discovered this presently to be that of the pungent Turkish or other sort of cigarette that Bogoroff had lighted that morning when Jacques was out of the room.

Either Bogoroff had been there not long before or else Doctor Goransko had the same taste for a Balkan smoke—Turkish and Perique, perhaps. Then as the clock ticked away the lagging seconds it struck me in a subconscious way, then with that curiosity in trifles that one experiences when waiting idly in so silent a place, that it ticked with a sort of double punctuation, of which the beats were not in accord. More as if two clocks, a big one and a little one, were ticking side by side. It was like the impression that every one has noticed when lying sleeplessly in bed and listening to a team of horses trotting on the pavement of the street, when the gait of one a little longer than its mate is for a few seconds in step, then gradually beats half time.

Now why should the clock tick like that I wonder? A piece of mechanism ought not to vary. Glancing at the clock, I could dimly distinguish its pendulum swinging back and forth with the rhythm to account for one tick, the slower and more distinct. But there was a finer tick that would have been imperceptible to ears less acute than mine, running at moments in between.

Well, nothing extraordinary about that, except that I never hapened to have noticed it in a clock before. After all, a timepiece must be full of different size cogs, some revolving faster than others. If Doctor Goransko had come in just then, I would have thought no more about it, but he still delayed, and perhaps I was nervous, a little ill at ease for that rhythmic ticking began to irritate me.

I got up, stepped to the mantel, and opened the door of the clock. There was nothing to be seen. Turning my head to listen, it struck me that the sound seemed to come not from inside the works that were higher up but almost from under the clock. I examined it from one side, and from this angle caught the reflexion of something in the mirror behind the clock.

Then for a moment my heart stood still. In that space of about six inches there was a metallic object that somewhat resembled in shape and size the sort of hand grenade we used in the trenches.

As Jacques had remarked in his examination of Captain Guardo, in the Tineo case, one-half of a man's mind receives a complete impression instantaneously, when it may take a few seconds longer for the other half to interpret it. I knew immediately that here was an infernal machine placed there to destroy Goransko as he sat at the desk, which the potential assassin might expect him to do a little later in the evening. I realized that aside from the concussion of the explosion in that small room with its heavy walls, the fragments of the ligneous rock of that big porphry clock would be fatal to a man so placed. But even more poignantly I appreciated the fact that something ought to be done about that bomb, and quickly.

We Americans, especially those of us who have caught and lobbed back hand grenades into enemy trenches, have a prejudice against precipitately bolting from danger. I reached for that devilish thing, took it up carefully, and was staring wildly about for some disposition that might be comparatively safe to make of it when a stern but tranquil voice in the doorway said in English, "Better not throw it, my friend. You might kill me but I would surely kill you first."

Holding the bomb at arm's length, I looked up to see a tall man in dinner costume standing in the doorway covering me with a big automatic pistol. Even in the stress of the moment, I was impressed by a sort of majesty in his wide forehead, steady piercing eyes, and such deep lines as showed in his finely featured face above the square graying beard.

My answer was in its wording absurd, "It's not mine. I just found it behind the clock. What shall I do with it?"

"I think," said Dr. Goransko calmly, "that we had better go out and toss it in the Seine."

I did not wait to argue the matter—to suggest that we had better send for an officer of the Bureau of Explosives to take the thing in charge. Oblivious to his pistol, I started for the door. Dr. Goransko, as if he had recommended the drowning of a sick pup, fell in beside me. We went out across the street, dodging a car or two, came to the stone parapet where with an inward prayer that the accursed thing might not go off, I hurled it far out into the river. It struck the water, and that was the end of it so far as mischief was concerned.

Dr. Goransko turned and looked at me. He had shoved the pistol into his pocket. "I have the honor, Mr. Clarke," said he, "to thank you for having saved my life."

He held out his hand, and I clasped it with my clammy one.

"Then you no longer think I came to kill you, sir."

"Of course not. My first impression was from your attitude and the way in which you were holding that thing, but I reflected as we crossed the street that you'd have scarcely cared to hoist yourself on your own petard. Also, that if you had come to deposit the bomb where it would destroy me, you had already ample time to do so. Besides, your statement was convincing. Let us go back to the house. No doubt you could do with a drink."

All of his statements were correct. I was a bit shaky, as I would not have been in the trenches.

As we entered the gate he asked: "Had you reason to suspect that it was there?"

"Not in the least," I answered, and explained how the ticking aroused my curiosity sitting there in the oppressive silence.

We went back into the study when he touched a bell and the butler served me with some ripe old Peat Rick from Sir Peter's native heath. At least, it tasted like that.

I explained then my errand, saying that it was less in search of journalistic news than because a friend of mine was by way of being lured into taking an interest in the Karopolous concessions that I had presumed to call.

"Has Bogoroff been here?" I asked.

"Not under that name, but there was a man here who professed to be a reporter from a Paris paper. I didn't care to talk to him. It seemed unnecessary to say that my mission has been successful. The Karopolous affair cannot be incorporated nor subscriptions for stock solicited in France. My host, Sir Peter MacIlvaine, has returned to London to see that it will be blocked there. So that for the time at least there is the end of it. I do not believe it would interest you people in America."

"Bogoroff told my friend that it had practically gone through," I said.

Dr. Goransko smiled. "I encouraged them to think that, Mr. Clarke. Partly, I'll admit, to prevent some such an attempt as this until they would consider it too late to make it worth their while. It was an ingenious idea to put it behind the clock where nobody but so close an observer as yourself would have noticed the ticking. Evidently some study of my habits here has been made for the last several nights. A spy lurking in the shrbbery outside could look through a chink in the persiennes and see that it was in the habit of sitting in that chair and reading from nine o'clock until midnight."

"I should have thought they'd have potted you through the window," I said.

"No, because these volets are iron and bolted on the inside so that while a man might peer up at me through a thin crack, or hear me perhaps, one could not get the barrel of a pistol properly aligned. If this had been done yesterday, their effort might have been successful both in respect to my removal and the carrying on of their affair. There was also the matter of an alibi."

"What are you going to do about it?" I asked.

"Nothing," he answered calmly. "For one thing, I doubt if we could fasten the attempt on anybody. I have many different political enemies. The object here was not revenge but a great deal of money. They will find out tomorrow that their game is blocked. My representations today to the ministers of finance and foreign affairs have killed it. But it was close work. They had money enough to carry on and all they really needed was official permission to proceed. I'm afraid I have done your friend rather a bad turn in a financial way, because if this thing had gone through, those in on the ground floor, as you say in the States, would have been sure to make a tremendous pot of dirty money. So much that they would have overlooked the dirt, strained it out, made bargains with their consciences, such at least as possess such inconvenient things."

"But it seems to me, doctor," I objected, "that somebody ought to be made to pay for this attempt."

"So they should, my dear fellow, but how the deuce are we to go about it? The rascal that put it there is probably some low Apache, of which at this moment, there are unfortunately a good many. And the evidence is gone. You just threw it in the river. A diver couldn't find it. The thing would be swept along by the current or sunk into the ooze. But the service you have rendered me is a sort difficult to express my appreciation of."

"It was sporting of you to stick close to me till I'd got rid of it," I said.

"Well, I could scarcely have done less, could I?"

We talked then until nearly midnight, and I do not think I have been so fascinated or felt the same veneration for any living man. As my British correspondent friend has said, it seems as if ever so often, when human affairs are in a dreadful state, some such inspired men or man as this are detailed by divine headquarters to walk about and straighten out our mess, sometimes recognized vaguely for what they are, sometimes not.

I had not told him the identity of Jacques, just why I couldn't say. Perhaps it was because I shrank from describing the part of the spy I had played in the studio. Besides, I was too enthralled in listening.

But about midnight I thought it time to be getting over to the studio. So I said good night, making a rendesvous for dinner with Dr. Goransko two days later.

I went back on the Metro, of which there was a station on the Boulevard Raspail a few doors from Jacques's studio.

The door of the building was on the latch, somebody having failed to close it and the concierge too sleepy to get up and close it himself. Coming to the noisy little automatic lift, I found on the iron grilled door the sign, "Arrete a cause de reparations." About half the time the silly things are halted for repairs, usually when there is danger of their sticking between floors after the concierge had gone to bed, and this tyrant too slothful to get up and turn on a little more water pressure.

So I went up the six flights, wondering if Jacques would appreciate my solicitude or curse me for having roused him out to let me in. I went quietly, because I wear shoes with sponge rubber soles to lessen the junction of my store leg with the stump and to give added security on greasy Paris pavements.

Cursing the elevator service of Paris buildings, I got nearly to the top and stopped to breathe. Then for the second time that night a keenness of hearing that high explosives had not impaired reported something out of the ordinary. This was a faint rubbing, slithering sound up overhead, the slightest of scufflings on the floor of the couloir.

As in the case of the clock, I would not ordinarily have noticed it. But one's nerves are naturally on edge after such an experience as my recent one, so I stood listening on the landing between Jacques's top floor and the one beneath. Somebody was just outside Jacques's door, moving stealthily about.

At the same moment I heard the faintest of jars, that fine sound made even by a solid door in good working condition when it is softly and stealthily unlatched and opened. I waited no longer then, but went up with a rush, as quickly and quietly as I could manage.

But I was heard. A ratty looking scoundrel of the Apache order turned with his hand on the knob of Jacques's studio door, and then without the slightest hesitation

WHEN I MET YOU

By MARY GRAY NEWBURN

My heart so long had known the winter's bleak,
I thought its fires all smothered in the snow;
But when you came, the light of your dear eyes
Kindled the embers to a living glow.

And now before the high white flame of Love,
Winter has fled, with winter's cold and smart,
And to the music of your low replies,
A banished Spring comes knocking at my heart.

CHILD'S PLAY

ANOTHER ADVENTURE OF THE "CRIME SEARCHLIGHT"

By Henry C. ROWLAND

AS THE days wore on, my position in regard to Jacques Hughes grew, to me at least, not only trying but at moments painful.

It was impossible to ignore the fact that in my capacity as correspondent of a big New York daily I had come to Paris not to publish and to extol the wonders wrought by Jacques as a clairvoyant detector of crime, but if possible to expose his claims as fraudulent. Although I had frankly stated as much to him, he nevertheless received me as a former friend and schoolmate, this association going back to when he was about ten or eleven and I twelve in the little district school near Wiscasset, Maine. He had given me every opportunity to observe his technique, smilingly inviting me to find and publish any flaw I might discover, made me free of his studio at all hours, and treated me as a Frenchman ends his letter, "with every assurance of the most distinguished consideration."

As I was the only newspaper man who had ever been admitted to his seances, my position of spy had its drawbacks. Like Antony, I had come to bury Caesar, not to praise him. It was, therefore, with a fresh stab of remorse that I read his pneumatique to say that he had picked up a bad attack of flu and would I run over to see him, if I was not afraid of catching it.

Reporters, like doctors and undertakers and cameramen, had better chuck their jobs if dismayed by danger. I went down to Hediard's behind the Madeleine, and bought a basket of big hothouse grapes and avocados and fresh figs and things, then passed by Brentano's and collected some literature, and went to Jacques' studio on the Boulevard Raspail.

I found him red of nose and rheumy as to the odd burnt umber eyes that with his combination of yellow hair usually denote soft fiber in a man, or sometimes genius, and a strong odor of garlic in the place.

"Why the garlic, Jacques?" I asked, "and besides, Martians ought to be immune from colds."

"According to Wells, they all died of flu when invading the earth in the form of highly intelligent octopuses—or is it octopi?—Johnny. But the garlic is strongly medicinal in all inflammatory conditions, if you don't find it the greater of two evils. There's an epidemic of this thing going round, and summer colds are always the worst. Hope you don't catch it."

"I'm a fatalist about some things. But I should think you would feel too rotten to paint—" for he was in working blouse immaculate as the white robe of a high priest, and squeezing out some colors on a palette that looked like a section of polished piano.

"Well, I've got a new client who insists on having his portrait done by me and says he's on his way to Bulgaria and here only a fortnight. My flu doesn't dismay him any more than it does you, and the garlic even less. As a matter of fact, I seem to paint better when I'm feverish, and he's an interesting type. He wants the portrait to give to his girl, a Russian dancer."

"Any cases in sight?" I asked.

"No, there seems to be a lull. Let's hope my increasing fame is discouraging capital crime."

"When do you start your sittings?" I asked.

"Already started." Jacques wheeled his chevalet about from where it had stood with the canvas toward the wall, and exposed for my inspection the incipient portrait of what promised to be a type of individual who looked like a Balkan diplomat. "I need his money because I've started a creche for fresh air kids down by Hendaye-Plage."

"Good for you, Jacques."

"Well, it struck me that since I seem destined to send bad citizens to the guillotine from time to time, I might at least put a little weight on the other arm of the scales and help to make some good ones." He glanced at a Vernis-Martin clock that was striking the hour of ten. "My man is due in fifteen minutes. Do you mind ambushing yourself for half an hour, Johnny? I'll be fatigued by then—and so will you."

"Why the ambush?" I asked.

"Well, this man, whose name is Bogoroff, has got it into his head that I can be of some service to his crowd in a big Balkan promotion scheme they are getting ready to launch. He seems to think I am an American millionaire and might be willing to contribute right now for the current expenses of the moment. It appears that there's a Dalmatian named Karopolous, a Greek probably, who has grabbed off a lot of concessions from different Balkan states, and Bogoroff assures me there are billions of francs in it. I've got a hunch that he insisted on my painting his portrait in the hope of getting me interested enough to interest some of my rich friends. He probably dopes it out that I'm in the spotlight just now and that my notoriety as a mind reader would be worth a lot.

"You see, Johnny, Bogoroff has got me quite excited over the scheme, but I know as much about high finance as a yellow cat does of relativity. Even if he were to let me read his mind, I doubt if it would say more to me than if I were to read my income tax return. Now you tell me that you've been something of an expert along these lines, so I'm going to ask you to listen in and tell me what you think about it, Bogoroff promises a turnover of several thousand per cent in three years' time if the deal goes through."

"What's the obstacle to its going through?" I asked.

"He doesn't seem to think there is any that need worry them just now, barring their immediate need of funds."

"Like all the rest of them," I said. "Better go slow, Jacques."

"I'm not going at all, until you tell me what you think."

"Has he paid anything on his portrait?"

"A couple of thousand francs. Just to prove he's not entirely a bum. He'll probably try to borrow it back before I get through with him. He's pestering me now to introduce him to De Gunzille, the banker, whose daughter I painted not long ago."

"Why not let me talk to him?" I said. "I don't like this listening-in business even for copy."

"You can do that later," said Jacques. "But I want you first to hear his patter as he puts it up to a visionary like me. What difference does it make, anyhow? He'd spot you for a hard-boiled Yankee financier, and play close to his chest. I've rigged you a listening post in a nice comfy chair up there on the balcony at the end of the studio. The acoustics are good, and you can get a good slant at him in this north light. I've hung those tapestries so you can look through the slit between. You see, Johnny, I've got an ambition to pose as a philanthropist, and that's going to run into money if I do it right. This may be a really big get-rich-quick scheme and I'd rather like to be in on it. Besides, I'll take a little shot for you."

"Get thee behind me—" I began, when the noisy lift whirred off with its flushed partridge sound.

"Get thee behind the portieres," Jacques spluttered in his hoarse flu voice, and began to cough and sneeze in a fashion that would have emptied a theater.

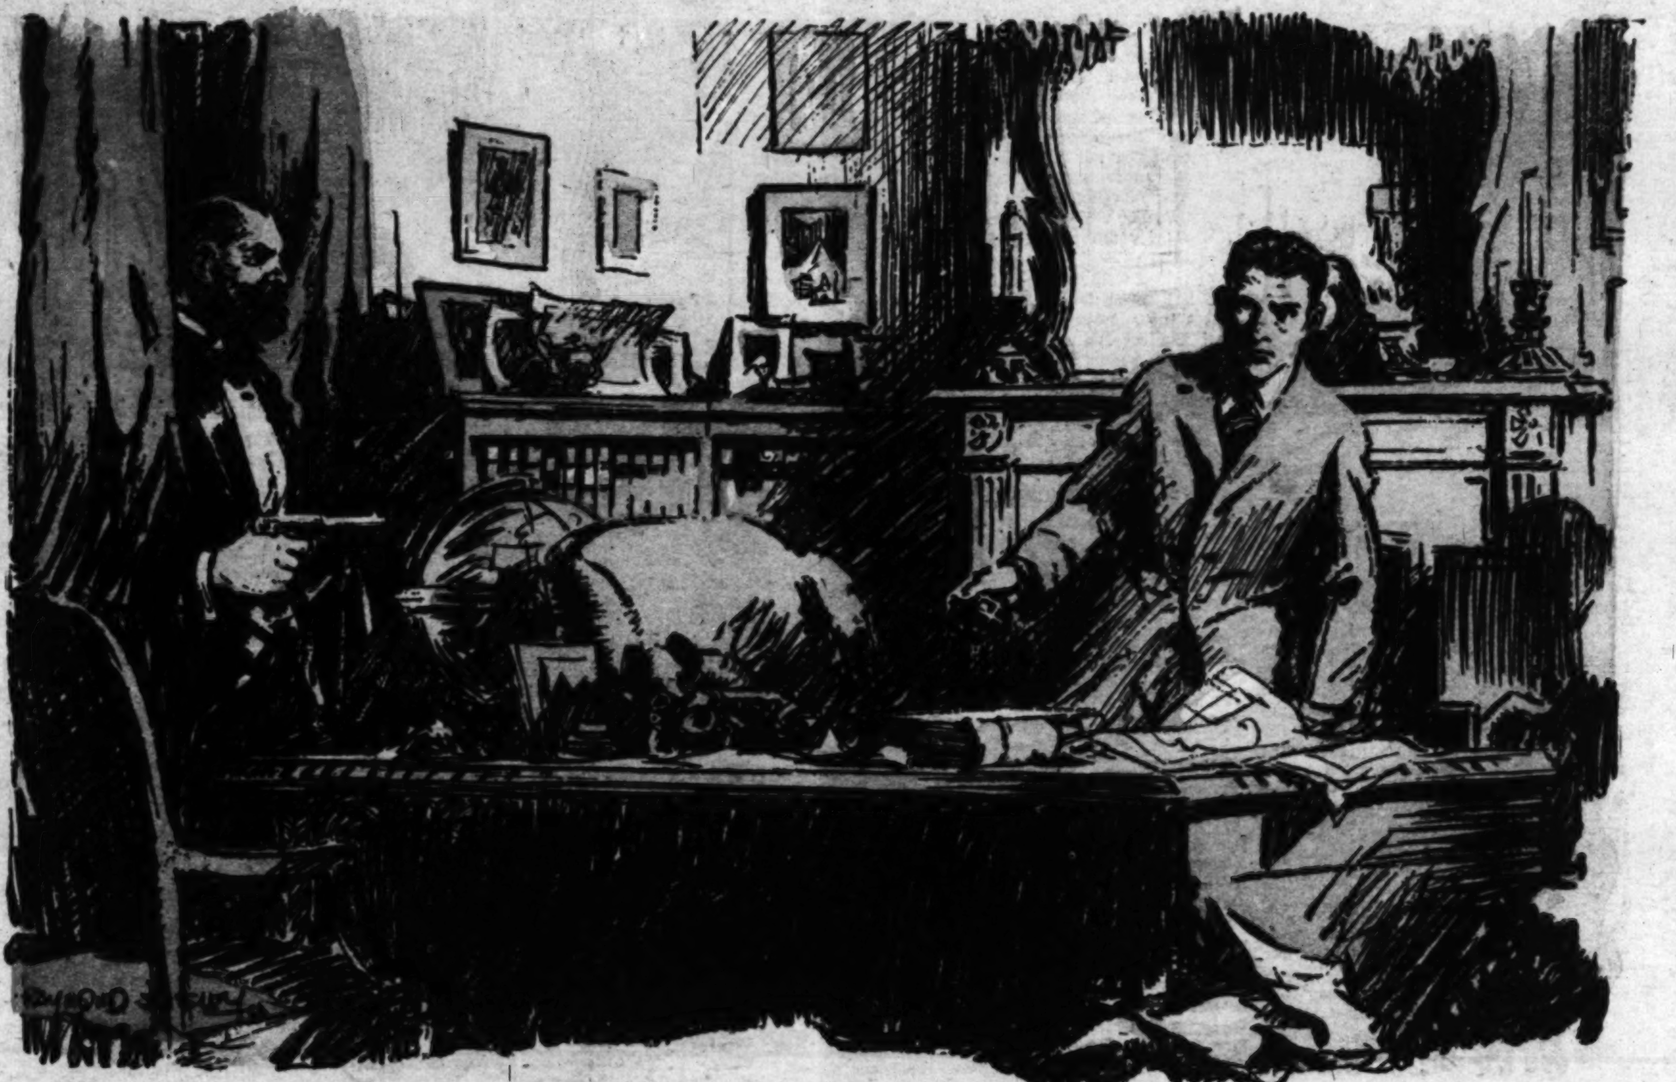
A moment later Jacques's sitter was shown in. Bogoroff was a well-dressed and good-looking man of about forty, I thought, of medium build and powerful, though as light on his feet as the Russian dancer for the sake of whose fidelity during his absences from Paris he professed to be having his portrait painted. It was not bad psychology, when one stops to think. Such a woman would consider tres chic as a present to have a portrait of her lover by one so much in the spotlight of current events as the great Jacques 'U-ges, the terror of criminals.

As Bogoroff entered, Jacques was in such a paroxysm of sneezing that he could not welcome his guest, do more than bow with his face buried in a yard of gauze. I noticed also that Bogoroff, for all of his disregard of infection, did not attempt to approach him closely. He began immediately profuse apologies in choppy French for obliging Jacques to work in such a state.

Jacques's paroxysm passing, he shrugged with a Gallic gesture, and said in his hoarse, grippy voice that after all it would distract his mind from his affliction. He had arranged the sitter's chair, a handsome painted leather one, and he started directly to work in his singularly neat, meticulous fashion, dainty as a cat with strokes that were broad and sure, from a palette like a section of polished piano.

On a taborét beside him there was a bottle of medicine and an atomizer with which at the end of about ten minutes he paused to spray his nose and throat. His watch was also lying there.

But now I found myself up against an unanticipated obstacle. Jacques on starting to work had asked how Bogoroff's affair was progressing, then said: "If you would be so kind, monsieur, I should like a recapitulation of what you told me the last time. I was then just starting this infernal attack, full of aspirin and other drugs, and with such a head that I could scarcely follow what you said. But that phase has passed, and I seem now to be rapidly throwing off the microbes."



"Better not throw it, my friend. You might kill me, but I would surely kill you first."

Thus encouraged, Bogoroff seemed nothing loth to comply, But here the difficulty arose. Although my knowledge of French is quite sufficient for me to follow the discourse of a Frenchman, especially a trained speaker, actor or lecturer, or even the excited debates in the Chamber or Senate, where the accent while often provincial is yet apt to be good French and spoken with the effort to be intelligible by all, confreres, spectators and the press, I now found myself at a loss to follow Bogoroff, except in sketchy fashion. There were, in fact, passages that I could scarcely recognize as French at all, what with his choppy, throaty diction and a sort of swallowing of his words.

It made me angry. It was bad enough to be stuck up there to eavesdrop, peering through a slit in the tapestries like a spying servant, without being unable to get any good from it. I was incensed with Jacques that he should not have thought of this. He had always spoken French himself, his mother being French Canadian and, of course, his long association with art students and painters of all nationalities in the Latin Quarter had got his ear accustomed to all sorts of jargon. But for me it was hopeless.

Reflecting, then, on his pretensions of mind reader, I tried to project into him the suggestion that he lead the confounded fellow to speak English, which I was convinced Bogoroff could do from his pronunciation of frequent English business expressions, such as "stock exchange," "pound sterling," "overhead," and "turnover." The man would be a polyglot, of course, like all his sort, so I did my best to tell Jacques mentally that I couldn't understand a word and that if I were to be of any use up there, he had best tell Bogoroff that he couldn't follow him either and ask him to speak English.

But my effort was vain, and as my doubts of him returned I found myself anticipating his clever tricky answer when later I should tax him with his lack of active mental radio. He would say that his mind was like an electro or other magnet, powerful but short of range or requiring physical contact with his hands or some such rot.

At the end of about twenty minutes, Bogoroff meanwhile pattering along like a gramaphone, Jacques excused himself for a moment, saying he must gargle his throat. He went into the bathroom at the far end of the corridor. Scarcely had he left the room, when Bogoroff got up in his light-footed way, stretched his arms, then stepping in front of the easel looked at the canvas. Then he picked up the atomizer, wiped off the metallic nozzle with a paint cloth on which he poured a litle turpentine, and sprayed his muzzle. It struck me with a little amusement that he was not so contemptuous of catching flu as he professed, and took this opportunity for a little prophylaxis, and it also occurred to me that I might not do badly to follow his example, as Jacques must have pretty well infused the atmosphere with microbes. Then standing with his back to me Bogoroff evidently decided to do the job thoroughly—take the whole treatment—for he picked up the medicine bottle, uncorked and smelled the contents, tilted a little down his throat, then appeared to be copying the number of the prescription. A forehanded chap who might save himself a doctor's fee if he felt the preliminary symptoms, provided, of course, the druggist would fill the order without a fresh prescription. All this time we could hear Jacques gargling and spitting in the bathroom. He certainly had the devil of a cold. All the same, I disapproved of his client's act. It would have struck me better if Bogoroff had done it in Jacques's presence, with a word of apology and permission.

Besides, his taking a swig directly from the bottle disgusted me, and his getting the prescription with his back turned so that even if taken by surprise he might have covered the act, bumming Jacques's treatment, so to speak, if he should require it. He might at least have asked for a clean spoon, since he naturally would not want to use the one beside the bottle used by Jacques. But that had not prevented his contamination of the bottle itself by his own dirty mouth. It put me off the man. A rotten Balkan trick. Bogoroff then leaned over and examined Jacques's watch so closely that I wondered for a moment if he was going to steal it.

Jacques came back, and painted for another ten or fifteen minutes in rapid concentrated fashion, then laid aside his brush with a gesture of fatigue. Nothing much more was said about the business during that time. But as Jacques now signified the sitting was over, Bogoroff arose and, stepping in front of the canvas, expressed his pleasure and admiration for what had been acomplished. Speaking now less rapidly I was able to follow what he said.

"The interpretation of the mind is not the greatest of your distinguished gifts. I would say that you interpreted even a banal physiognomy with equal skill."

Jacques murmured an acknowledgment; then said in a semi-bantering voice that had yet an edge of the serious, "Speaking of my other gift, monsieur, why not submit to my reading of your mind in regard to this affair? I could then assure my friends with perfect honesty that I had read your inmost thought in the matter and found your intention to be as frank as I now believe it to be."

It seemed to me that a startled look appeared in Bogoroff's face at this suggestion. The strong light from the big north window of the studio made it easier for me in my ambush to observe closely the least change in his expression. Then he laughed as if to cover his embarrassment. But his answer was quite worthy of Jacques himself.

"If it were only my intentions in this affair, past, present or future, monsieur, I would gladly put myself at your disposal, but the trouble is that the mind even of a business man is not entirely filled with business, and I am afraid that you might find something to bias the good opinion of me you are so complimentary as to express." He laughed again. "I must admit to being in some respects what an American gentleman like yourself might consider a bit of a wild fellow. Your point of view is not in all respects sympathetic to our Central European one. You might be shocked."

Jacques smiled indulgently. "I am an artist, monsieur, and no vestal. My ivory tower was unfortunately knocked down under me long, long ago, and as a person who has looked into many minds, I am like a doctor in making allowances for frail human nature."

"Nevertheless, monsieur," said Bogoroff almost gaily, "I must beg you to excuse me. I confess to absolute faith in your marvelous gift, and I shrink from the thought of baring my soul before you. When it comes to that, I will tell you frankly that you might even find something about the conduct of this scheme of ours that you would perhaps disapprove and that might serve to discredit me in your esteem. I can only assure you that such dealings do not in any way apply to our shareholders or to our subsequent handling of the affair."

"But that is all to which I should like to be able to attest, monsieur," insisted Jacques in a voice that was gentle if hoarse. "You must see for yourself the value of my being able to say—well, to such a man as the banker, De Gunzville, for instance, who professes absolute belief in my singular gift, "Monsieur Bogoroff consented readily to an examination of his mind, and I discovered his intention about this scheme to be absolutely straightforward from now on."

Bogoroff looked decidedly embarrassed, also it seemed to me a little scared. Indeed, he seemed to shrink back as Jacques moved toward him in a fashion that was coercive, as if he dreaded his close proximity, and his fixed scrutiny. He turned his face away; stepped to where he had laid down his hat and stick.

He turned with an apologetic gesture. "What you say is absolutely true, monsieur. It had not struck me before in just that light. But at the risk of your thinking me a coward, I may as well make another confession. I am not so unafraid of catching your grippe as I have pretended. I have always been susceptible. It is only my urgent desire to present my inamorata with so distinguished a gift as a specimen of your work that I have had the courage to risk infection. But I shrink from closer contact than what is necessary for your painting—as no doubt you have observed—" he added with a smile. "I shall go back now to my hotel and spray myself and take some aspirin and cognac."

Jacques nodded. "That would be prudent, monsieur. I was about to suggest it myself. If you would like this prescription, which seems to be doing me good—"

"If I feel any premonitory symptoms, I'll ask you for it. And another thing, monsieur, I am more and more struck by the excellence of the suggestion that you read my mind in order that you may report upon me with conviction—to Monsieur de Gunzville—and others. So as soon as the period of contagion of your cold is over, I will not merely submit but even request that you look into my mind even at the risk of your reading something there that as an American gentleman you may find, well—shocking."

He laughed again, and with all my disgust of him I could not but admire his nimbleness of wit. Either he would stall along to find eventualy some good pretext to avoid an examination that he most obviously dreaded and felt must surely show him up, or else he might actually consent, bringing all his mental control to bear on the thought depiction of honesty. He might repeat over and over to himself "We will be honest, we will give a square deal"—trusting that the searching mind opposed to his would be deceived by his mental declaration.

Jacques smilingly agreed to this arrangement, telling Bogoroff that he did not blame him, considering the virulence of the epidemic that was going its rounds.

Bogoroff bowed himself out almost as if taking conge of royalty—and I came down from my good-for-nothing listening post, mad clear through at the impotency of my humiliating position. Before Jacques had time to ask me what I thought, I pitched into him, asked him if he thought I was a mind reader, too, and unlike himself, a long distance one, demanded to know how he expected a Yankee reporter whose knowledge of French was principally acquired in French Blighty to follow the staccato monkey jabber of some Balkan Bolshevik. "Not that there was any need," I ended. "I didn't have to be told his number. He's got all the earmarks of a pickpocket. In fact, I thought for a minute that he was going to steal your watch."

Jacques listened to my tirade with a look of mild amusement; then began to munch thoughtfully some of the big Tuscany grapes that I had brought him. Then he went to the icebox and produced whisky and Perier water and cracked ice.

"One thing I'll tell you, though," I said, after blowing off my safety valve, "this fellow's a yellow dog—a cochon, chameau, Apache, voyau, salle type—and all the rest of those things Corentine called yourself. He was scared blue of catching your flu. That's probably the only honest thing he said, because when you were out there gargling he sneaked over to the taboret and turned his back to me and the door and sprayed his ugly mug with your atomizer and took a swig out of your medicine bottle, then copied the prescription or something. That's all the line on him I need. Why couldn't he have done it openly? I wouldn't trust a man that does a trick like that around the corner with two sous. He must have wanted that portrait mighty badly to take the chance he did in catching flu."

"Well, all that's worth a lot, Johnny," Jacques said. "Especially what you say about his casting covetous looks at my watch. It's platinum, and so is the chain. Everything platinum but the latchkey on the other end. This all confirms my opinion that what he really came for was not to get his portrait painted to give to his dancer, but to get me interested in his big deal. And we've got to hand it to him that he's promised to let me read his mind as soon as I get over my grip. I'd say that he's got all the faith in me you ought to have but haven't."

"Oh, he'll find some way to sidestep that," I answered disgustedly.

"Not if I know it, Johnny. I could follow him easily enough if you couldn't. And it looks to me as if he really had a big thing by the tail."

"Well, anyhow, my advice is to keep out of it, Jacques," I said. "You don't need to trade with birds like that."

I left Jacques then and went out into the soft June air, glad to escape the aroma of garlic, which I like better mixed in sausage than with disinfectant. It seemed odd that one of Jacques's special senses could stand it, but perhaps it was his French blood. Besides, the oil of garlic has really powerful curative properties. French housewives found that out generations ago, and have used it ever since for sore throats and gatherings in ears. A French army surgeon had told me after the amputation of my leg that a very little garlic circulating in the blood would often arrest a process of infection.

I hoped it would do as much for Jacques, who seemed to me more ill than he admitted. I remembered then on opening the door for me that he had mentioned having sent his manservant down to Hendaye on some business about the creche, so that Jacques would be alone that night in his apartment. He had not even a telephone, hating to be disturbed and claiming that while he never wanted to call up anybody himself, everybody seemed always to be calling him. As he said, a telephone for a man of retiring tastes was a sort of posten gate for an assault on his privacy.

It seemed to me that ill as he was Jacques ought not to be there alone. So I decided to go later to his apartment and sleep on the divan.

I had an appointment to lunch that day chez Henri with the Paris correspondent of a London daily whom I had met, and in the course of the meal I asked him if he knew anything about the Karopolous Balkan concession scheme.

"Not much," he said. "Do you?"

"No, but a friend of mine has been approached by a man named Bogoroff, who is trying to interest him."

He nodded. "Bogoroff's a sort of advance agent. Plausible Johnny. He used to make a clean-up every once in a while in a wheat pit at Braila, the Danube port of Bucharest, you know, where the Rumanian wheat is shipped—then come to Paris to blow the money."

"Do you think there is anything in this scheme?"

"The scheme would have gone through already if it hadn't been for the opposition of one comparatively unknown man," said my acquaintance. "That's a sort of inspired prophet, kind of a red Lama of a fellow, one Dr. Goransko."

"I shouldn't think that any one man would have much influence over all the Balkan peninsula with the different breeds and factions and religious sects," I said.

"He has, though. Doctor Goransko is revered as a hakim, a sort of inspired healer, even in the Mohammedan sections. Even in the thick of things he's always had sauf conduit wherever he goes. He doesn't profess any particular religion nor does he accept any pay for his services. These religious jealousies, with their jehads and holy
